CHANNELS OF TRADE.

Minister Tarte, of Public Works, Believes in Many Routes.

OUR WATER AND RAIL AVENUES.

Another Discussion in the House on Transportation—The Votes Asked for for Various Services—Works at Port Colborne and in the St. Lawrence—Iron and Steel Bounties.

Ottawa, March 9.—The St. Lawrence route was again the subject of discussion in the House yesterday on public works estimates. Mr. Tarte fully explained the improvements that are being pushed forward, displaying determination to have the Canadian highways of commerce placed in the very best condition to compete with the American lines of commerce. In the evening Toronto harbor and the Toronto-Collingwood air line were discussed at some length. The House adjourned at 11 p. m.

Liquor Permits in Yukon.

A return brought down by the Minister of the Interior yesterday contains the order-in-council passed on Feb. 25, making new regulations for the issue of permits to take liquor into the Yukon. It provides that hereafter permits shall be issued by the Commissioner of the Yukon instead of by the Minister of the Interior as formerly.

Private Bills.

The following private bills were introduced and read a first time:

Respecting the Edmonton, Yukon and Pacific Railway Company—Mr. Oliver.

Respecting the Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto Railway Company—Mr. Calvert.

Respecting the Canadian Mutual Aid Society—Mr. Guthrie.

To incorporate the Clergue Iron and Nickel Steel Company of Canada—Mr. Dyment.

Respecting the Vancouver and Lulu Island Railway Company—Mr. Maxwell.

Respecting the Manitoba and Northwest Loan Company, Limited—Mr. Britton.

To incorporate the Arnprior and Pontiac Railway Company—Mr. Lemieux.

To incorporate the Fort Qu'Appelle Railway Company—Mr. Douglas.

Bounties to Iron Industry.

Mr. Morrison (New Westminster, B. C.) called the attention of the House to the Bounties Act, encouraging the iron and steel industry of the Dominion. The Dominion Iron and Steel Company of Sydney had issued a prospectus estimating that under the bounty system they would receive in five years the sum of $8,095,000 from the Dominion of Canada. The Cramp-Ontario Steel Company had also issued a prospectus giving an idea of their expectations. Other industries would also come under the Act. He would like to know whether it was too late for the Government to take such steps that, while not invading vested rights, would prevent further vested interests accruing under this system. None of these industries were struggling concerns that needed the assistance of the people to the amount of anywhere from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 in five years.

Hon. Mr. Fielding replied that whatever vested rights had been created was a debatable question, but such as had arisen under the Bounty Acts would be respected. It was a comfort that, although a very large sum of money would have to be paid, the acts would disappear from the statute books in a period of five years, beginning on July 1 next.

TRANSPORTATION.

Water and Rail Routes Discussed in House Committee.

The motion to go into supply having been carried, the item of $419,000 for the St. Lawrence ship channel was taken up. Mr. Tarte said the improvement of the channel had been going on for years. Since he came into office the department had built three new dredges, and would have another in June next. They were first-class, and a credit to Canadian workmen. The channel was now being dredged to 30 feet in depth, with 50 miles to dredge. A contract had been signed with the Polson Iron Works for a suction dredge with a capacity of from 30,000 to 40,000 cubic yards per day. The whole channel would be dredged within three seasons. Ten miles were now completed. There are 19,000,000 cubic yards in Lake St. Peter, which would be done with the new dredge in a season and a half. The aim is to make the channel navigable night and day. Unless the trade from the west could be got to Montreal it would go by American ports.

The distance from Port Colborne to Montreal is 375 miles. Ships could not anchor at Port Colborne, while Buffalo has a 22½ foot harbor. The works at Port Colborne were made necessary by the demands of trade. When completed, big ships could come in there. With 14 feet of water in the Canadian channels, Montreal could compete with Buffalo.

When the breakwater and new elevator were built at Parry Sound, that would be a first-class port. Mr. Booth had made a success of his system and could get the western trade.

The House had heard speeches deprecating the French River route from the Georgian Bay to North Bay, 50 miles, but he had reason to believe that with an expenditure of $2,000,000 a depth of 20 feet could be secured. From North Bay to Montreal by rail is 330 miles. His colleagues had not authorized him to go on with this work, but he had had surveys made.

In reply to Col. Hughes, he said the Government was not responsible for what he was now saying. Parry Sound is 384 miles and Port Colborne 375 miles from Montreal. Toronto wanted an air line from Collingwood, and all roads lead to Montreal.

Answering Dr. Sproule as to Midland, the Minister said a large part of the trade which flows through there is not carried to Montreal, but to Portland, and if he had his way with the G. T. R. he would make it go to Montreal.

Then he continued: Money knows no law. The G. T. R. have located at Portland, and the harbor facilities at Montreal were so inadequate that I cannot blame them too much for having done what they have done. I deeply regret that they have located themselves in Portland, but the shareholders of the G. T. R. have a right to expect and to get dividends. We have neglected our waterways, we must admit that. There is no reflection on anybody, but it is a fact that we have neglected our waterways. That cannot be disputed. Now if we apply our minds and our attention to the St. Lawrence route, within a few years we will have redeemed the ground that we have lost.

The C. P. R. between Montreal and North Bay could be made as good a road as the New York Central. That, with the Welland Canal and Parry Sound routes, would make three great feeders at the disposal of Montreal. He did not despair of seeing half a million more population in Montreal than to-day. But it was necessary to spend money on the St. Lawrence route. Two million dollars would widen and deepen the route to the sea, which would have to be lighted with electric or gas buoys; $5,500,000 had so far been spent on the St. Lawrence, a small sum of money. There was still the port of Montreal, which he would deal with when his estimates were before the House.

In reply to Mr. Clarke, he said Mr. Booth had handled a large amount of return freight, and, with accommodation, could handle double the quantity. Mr. Booth had spent $1,000,000 at Parry Sound.

To Mr. Haggart he said: "I think I may say that, with the suction dredge, we will be able to dredge at a cost of one-half cent per yard. In the past the cost has varied from three to seven cents."

Mr. Haggart—This information confirms the statement I made last year as to the cost of dredging. He congratulated the Minister upon getting the suction dredge for the St. Lawrence. The drift of the speech just delivered was in the right direction. He predicted that one day or another the Georgian Bay Canal would be built. Canada could never make a port at Port Colborne that would do the business of Buffalo. In his opinion, $4,000,000 would have to be spent on the contemplated works there. More enterprise was needed in the transport trade in the port of Montreal. That trade is behind the age, and in the condition of the St. Lawrence insurance the most alarming evidence of the fact was seen. He urged the Minister of Public Works to do all in his power to develop the port of Montreal, and bring the St. Lawrence navigation up to the hopes of the country in that great highway.

Hon. Mr. Tarte said a great improvement is now going on in the port of Montreal, and the young men there are asserting themselves. Speaking for himself, Mr. Tarte said the motto of Canada should be Canada first, an independent nation from a commercial standpoint. No one knew what might happen to-morrow.

Mr. Calvin (Frontenac) urged that the Welland Canal should be made a link, not in lake, but in ocean navigation. He suggested that the tolls should be taken off the Welland Canal. They amounted last year to over $100,000. There are no tolls on the Soo Canals, and the tolls on the Welland are a restriction.

Dr. Sproule said there was some uncertainty in the public mind as to whether there is a depth of 14 feet in the river above Montreal. That uncertainty should be removed.

Mr. Tarte replied that a survey is being made of the whole route, which would determine the depth and volume of water. Next year, when this survey was complete, charts would be published.

Col. Hughes and Mr. Bennett continued the debate.

In the evening the item of $419,000 was passed, $100,000 was voted for Red River improvements, and $10,000 for Kaministiquia River.

In recommending the item of $150,000 for Port Colborne harbor improvements, Mr. Tarte said Port Colborne is the first link between the east and west and ranks with Montreal in importance. To carry grain from Buffalo to New York costs 8c a bushel. It could be carried from Port Colborne to Montreal at 2c a bushel.

Mr. B. M. Britton recommended the Government to take over the Niagara Railway.

Mr. E. F. Clarke discussed the reference in Mr. Tarte's speech to the Toronto-Collingwood route, and asked him to make a statement of his intentions in regard to the matter.

Mr. Leighton McCarthy made a lengthy reference to the same matter. He declared it the best route, and all it needed was fair play.

Mr. Tarte said the Government is improving the harbor at Collingwood. Nor had Toronto been treated too badly. The two jetties there had been built on quicksand, and it would be difficult to give adequate depth without a large expenditure of money. The whole thing would practically have to be rebuilt. He begged of the advocates of the Collingwood-Toronto route not to depreciate any other route. All the ports on the Georgian Bay could be made considerable places for trade. He felt a little sore about Midland, because the grain went from there to the United States. But when the port of Montreal was equipped he did not believe there was any railway company strong enough to stand against Canada.

The House adjourned at 10 minutes to 11 o'clock.

A LEAGUE OF POWERS

May Be Formed to Force Russia Out of Manchuria.

ANGLO-AMERICAN COMBINATION

Secret Negotiations Going on Between Great Britain and the United States—Germany Regards Russia as Insincere, and Count Lamsdorf's Explanation as Intended to Blind the World.

London, March 9.—A crisis has arisen in the far eastern affairs, which, in the opinion of the British Government, is graver almost than the troubles which originally turned the eyes of the world toward the Orient. In this crisis secret negotiations are going on between the United States and Great Britain, with a view to thwarting what both Governments appear to consider a determined attempt on the part of Russia to plant herself permanently in one of the richest tracts of the Chinese Empire.

The conference held yesterday between United States Ambassador Choate and Lord Lansdowne, the Foreign Secretary, had nothing to do with the Nicaraguan Canal affair.

To quote from a British official, "The Nicaragua controversy is a minor matter compared with the present eastern situation. What Mr. Choate did was to receive from Lord Lansdowne an important message, declaring that England was not satisfied with Russia's declaration regarding Manchuria as delivered to Sir Charles Stewart Scott, British Ambassador at St. Petersburg, by Count Lansdorf, and asking the United States if they were prepared to take joint action of such a decisive nature that Russia would have no alternative but to recede from her position."

Almost simultaneously, it is stated, the United States Government instructed the various ambassadors to take similar steps. The answer of Secretary Hay has apparently not yet been received in London, although the fact that almost concurrent instructions were issued from Washington is taken here to be a sufficient guarantee that Russia's action in Manchuria will not be tolerated in the United States. Japan is relied upon to take a line in harmony with the United States and Great Britain.

A feeling pervades inner circles here that, if Count Lamsdorf's explanation is accepted by the powers, Russia will be accorded a free hand to take all she pleases, and the door will be opened to any other power aggressive enough to step in and annex Chinese provinces under the pretext of temporary occupation.

Germany Is Skeptical.

Berlin, March 9.—The German press believes that Russia's assurances regarding Manchuria to Sir Charles Stewart Scott, British Ambassador in St. Petersburg, are insincere and intended to blind the world.

The National Zeitung frankly asserts that this is their object.

Japan Is Active.

London, March 9.—There is much activity in Japanese naval, military and political circles regarding Russia's action in Manchuria, says a despatch to The Daily Mail from Kobe, dated March 8. "It is reported that six hundred Russian marines, with ten guns, have landed at Masaparo, Korea."

Ex-President Harrison of Indianapolis has grip, but will recover.

The Spanish Cabinet Council has decided to re-establish constitutional guaranteed.

Lieut.-Col. Steele of Strathcona's Horse has been appointed to the fourth class of the Victorian Order.

AMNESTY FOR BOERS

Offered All Who Surrender Except Cape Dutch Traitors.

LIKEWISE, DEWET AND STEYN.

Mrs. Botha Is the Good Angel of the Boers, and Their Hopeless Plight Induced Her to Urge Her Husband to Accept the British Terms—Dewet Wants Revenge.

London, March 9.—The Daily Chronicle, referring to the armistice at Pretoria, says: "We learn that the untiring agent in bringing about the negotiations was Mrs. Botha, who was deeply affected by the hopeless plight of the Boers and did her utmost to induce her husband to accept the British terms.

"Unfortunately the meeting of Feb. 27, was limited to General Botha's request to know Lord Kitchener's terms. Lord Kitchener replied that a general amnesty would be granted to all who surrendered, as well as to all prisoners except those Cape Dutch who, being British subjects, had actively fomented Boer resistance. Gen. Dewet and Mr. Steyn, were, however, expressly excluded from the amnesty.

"Lord Kitchener further promised that, if peace were concluded, the Government would assist in rebuilding the farmhouses and other buildings destroyed under military exigencies; would reinstate the lawful owners, and would help them stock their farms. Those guilty of acts of treachery would be excluded from the benefits.

"General Botha appeared satisfied with the conditions, and the armistice being arranged, he proceeded to consult his officers, a vast majority of whom accepted the terms.

"Dewet and Steyn both remained irreconcilable. They declined any terms, Dewet adding that on his part the war had become one of revenge, and he intended to do all the mischief he could.

"It is probable that the original armistice of a week has been extended. It is believed that the remainder of General Botha's officers have now been won round, and that he is likely formally to submit to Lord Kitchener when his force will surrender to General French.

"According to our information Lord Kitchener's dispositions made the speedy capture of Gen. Botha's forces quite certain. Gen. Botha frankly accepted the situation and was treated by Lord Kitchener at both interviews with the greatest consideration."

"The negotiations between Lord Kitchener and General Botha are in abeyance," says the Pretoria correspondent of The Times, wiring Wednesday, "pending an answer from the British Government."

AN ARMISTICE GRANTED.

Lord Kitchener Gave Gen. Botha Seven Days in Which to Confer With Other Generals.

Lorenzo Marquez, March 8.—General Kitchener has granted General Botha a seven days' armistice to enable him to confer with the other generals.

Alone on Gun Hill.

London, March 9.—A special despatch from Pretoria, dated yesterday, says Gen. Kitchener and Gen. Botha had a lengthy conference on Gun Hill this morning. Gen. Botha was alone and Gen. Kitchener was accompanied by his secretary.

KITCHENER AND BOTHA.

Censored Despatches Say They Met Feb. 27—Favorable Expectations.

London, March 9.—A despatch from Pretoria dated Tuesday, March 5, evidently held up by the censor, has just arrived here. It says General Kitchener met Gen. Botha and other Boer leaders at Middleburg on Feb. 27, and the question of the possibility of the termination of hostilities was discussed.

Another despatch from Pretoria dated Wednesday, March 6, which met with similar treatment, says the meeting between Gen. Kitchener and Gen. Botha has awakened deep interest, and that there are favorable expectations as to the probable outcome.

According to The Sun, the surrender of Gen. Botha would have been accomplished before now had Gen. Kitchener been in a position to conclude the terms of surrender. When the surrender occurs, The Sun adds, it will include the surrender or entire suppression of Gen. Dewet, and will involve the termination of the war.

DELAREY'S ATTACK FAILED.

And French Has Been Making Captures With Regularity.

London, March 9.—Lord Kitchener, under date of March 7, says:

"The Boers failed in their determined attack upon Lichtenburg. Our losses, besides the two officers previously reported, were fourteen men killed and twenty wounded. The Boer general, Colliers, was killed.

"Dewet's position is variously reported, as his men are scattering through the Orange Colony. Our troops marching north, reached Petrusburg to-day.

"French reports further captures of a fourteen-pounder Creusot, with carriage and limber complete, and one Hotchkiss, making a total of seven guns. The total number of Boers known to have been placed hors de combat since the eastern operations began is nine hundred and seventy-nine."

Lord Kitchener states that 169 rifles 24,970 rounds of ammunition, 184 horses, 1,240 trek oxen, 3,920 cattle, 13,580 sheep, 100 wagons and carts, and large quantities of forage have been captured without casualties in Cape Colony.

He further reports: "Parsons found a small commando north of Aberdeen and attacked them. Kritzinger's commando yesterday entered Pearston, but Gorringe from the west turned them out, and Delisle headed them off on the road to Somerset east."

Guns, 7; rifles, 784; rounds of ammunition, 204,970; horses, 4,071; trek oxen, 5,530; cattle, 38,220; sheep, 178,780; and wagons and carts, 1,457.

Boers Marched in Unopposed.

Cradock, Cape Colony, Thursday, March 7.—A force of 300 Boers occupied Maraisburg, 40 miles northeast of here, yesterday evening, without opposition. There were no British troops there.

Boers Captured.

Cape Town, March 8.—Three hundred Boers surrounded 50 of Driscoll's Scouts March 2 at a kraal near Doonberg. The scouts held out for a day and a night before relief reached them. The Boers captured 17.

BRITISH ARMY REFORM.

South African Trouble Brought to Light Many Faults—Army to Be Increased by 136,000 Men.

London, March 9.—In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. Brodrick, the Secretary of War, prefaced his introduction of the army estimates for 1901-1902, by saying that the war in South Africa had brought to light many faults, even in those portions of the army system which were believed to be best. He complained of the scanty and reluctant support that the Government's proposals for strengthening had received in the House of Commons.

Mr. Brodrick then proceeded to divulge the War Office proposals, which contemplate the ability to send abroad three army corps, with a division of cavalry, in all 160,000 men vision of cavalry, in all 160,000 men, and at the same time to have a sufficient force for home defences.

The War Office proposals further contemplate that the country be divided into six districts, each district representing an army corps, and each commanded by an officer who had commanded troops in time of war and, the field artillery must be supplemented by heavier guns. The army must be provided with a much larger body of mounted men and transport, and the musketry drill needed improving. It was a question between the voluntary and compulsory system. He adhered to the former, under which 140,000 men had offered themselves for the war. Compulsion would therefore be like applying the spur to a willing horse, and would be disastrous. The Government could not hope to get rid of European entanglements. It could not shut out the possibility of having to despatch forces to defend the British possessions abroad.

STR. NUMIDIAN IN.

Strathcona Reached Halifax Friday Morning and Departed For the West—Steamer Had a Rough Voyage.

Halifax, March 9.—The Numidian arrived here at 8 o'clock yesterday morning with 269 Strathcona's Horse and 160 steerage passengers. The following were cabin passengers: Officers of Lord Strathcona's Horse, Lieut.-Col. Steele, Major Belcher, Major Jarvis, Major Howard, Major Cameron, Capt. Courtenay, Capt. Macdonald, Capt. Keenan, Lieut. Christie, Capt. E. T. Mackie, Lieut. Leckie, Lieut. Kirkpatrick, Lieut. Laidlaw, Lieut. Tobin, Lieut. Parker, Lieut. Stevenson, Lieut. Sinden, Lieut. Steele.

The Numidian docked about 1 o'clock in the afternoon, when the men went on board train and proceeded westward. The ship experienced heavy weather. Private Robertson took sick the day after leaving Liverpool, with pneumonia. He is seriously ill, and will go into hospital here. Otherwise the voyage was an uneventful one. The men express great pleasure at being home again.

Besides members of the corps, the following are on board: Lieut.-Col. Biggar, Capt. Boyd, Capt. Mackie, R. C. R.; Lieut. Straubenzie, R. C. D.; Lieut. Leach, R. C. D.; Sergt. Ward, R. C. R.; Pte. Hamilton, R. C. A.; Pte. Myra, R. C. A.; Pte. Fox, R. C. R.; Pte. Rose, Kitchener's Horse; Pte. Johnston, Roberts' Horse; Pte. Graham, Roberts' Horse; Pte. Inglish, R. C. D., and J. A. Sampson, Department of Militia and Defence, Ottawa.

F. H. Dixon, an old Toronto boy, who had been in the Fifth Dragoons and was wounded in Natal, was also on board, having been discharged from an English hospital, to which he had been invalided.

Corps and attaches number 18 officers and 262 men, and orders are that they shall be forwarded to Ottawa without loss of a single moment. The Intercolonial Railway has a special train ready.

Expected in Montreal To-Night.

Montreal, March 9.—The Strathcona Horse will arrive in this city this midnight if there are no unexpected delays. The train will not remain over in Montreal for any length of time.

The B.-P. Recruits.

Ottawa, March 9.—There are now here 880 of the Baden-Powell Police, which, with 25 to arrive and those mobilizing at Halifax, will make the complement of 1,200 men, which will entitle Canadians to 30 commissions in the force.

THE ONTARIO HOUSE.

Committee Appointed to Consider Questions and Answers Hansard for the Legislature.

Toronto, March 9.—In the Legislative Assembly yesterday, on motion of the Premier, the matter of printing the answers to questions asked by members was referred for consideration to a committee composed of Messrs. Gibson, McKay, Charlton, Carscallen and Whitney.

Mr. Allen moved for a return, showing the amount of timber and sawlogs cut by license holders on road allowances in Grimsthorpe Township during 1899 and 1900. He said that no returns had been made of the amount cut by three large camps which took out 9,000,000 feet of lumber.

Hon. Mr. Davis had not had time to look into the matter, but there could be no objection to the return, which was accordingly granted.

Mr. Wardell secured an order for a return of correspondence with reference to the employment of aliens on the construction work of any railway.

Mr. Carscallen moved that the inspector of insurance and registrar of friendly societies shall publish in his annual report the names of residences of the president, vice-president, directors and general manager or managing director of all insurance companies.

Hon. J. M. Gibson thought there would be no difficulty in publishing this information. He suggested a modification of the resolution so as to make it somewhat less in the nature of a peremptory direction and more of a recommendation, which was agreed to by Mr. Carscallen and the resolution adopted.

The following private bills were then rushed through a second reading as quickly as the Speaker could read off the titles:

To authorize the rector and church wardens of Christ Church Cathedral, Hamilton, to sell a portion of the land adjoining the church, formerly used as a cemetery.—Mr. Carscallen.

Respecting the town of Petrolea.—Mr. Pardee.

Respecting the Supreme Court of the Independent Order of Foresters.—Mr. Barber.

To enable the incorporated synod of the Diocese of Huron to provide for the election of select vestries of boards of management.—Mr. Leys.

To amend the act incorporating Les Reverends Peres Oblats de L'Immaculee Conception de Marie, commonly known as the Oblates of Mary Immaculate.—Mr. Latchford.

The Kaiser's Condition.

Berlin, March 9.—The following bulletin regarding Emperor William's condition was issued yesterday morning:

"The Kaiser's condition yesterday was satisfactory. His Majesty slept well last night, and when the bandage was changed his wound presented no inflammatory symptoms. There is some swelling of the right eyelid and cheek. He has no fever.

"(Sgd.) Leuthold, Bergmann, Ilberg."

Emperor William wired to-day to Prince Henry of Prussia: "I look as if I had just come from China."

Canada at Buffalo.

Buffalo, N. Y., March 9.—Foundation work for the Canadian building at the Exposition grounds was started yesterday. The Dominion Government will expend $13,000 on the structure.

The Manitoba Railway Bill.

Winnipeg, Man., March 9.—Mr. Myers, Opposition, moved the six months' hoist to the Railway Contract bill last night. He spoke at length, as did Attorney-General Campbell, the latter in support of the deal. The debate was adjourned near midnight until Monday afternoon.

All on Board Lost.

Bilbao, Spain, March 9.—The British steamer Axlona, 1,240 tons, Capt. Lennox, has been wrecked at the Bilbao breakwater. All on board were lost.

THE CLUBS AND LOVE

CHICAGO CLUBWOMEN DENY CHARGE MADE BY HALLIE RIVES.

Keep Affection For Husbands While Picking Up Intellectuality Along the Way—Miss Rives Mistakes Sentimentality For Love.

Chicago clubwomen vehemently refute the assertion of Hallie Erminie Rives, the novelist, that Chicago women's interest in club life is destroying their domestic love and filling the divorce courts. In answer to her charge the women want to know what Miss Rives knows about love. Dr. Julia Holmes Smith says Miss Rives' views are "the expressions of immaturity" and questions the authoress' right to pass upon the emotional side of clubwomen. Moreover, Chicago women say the demands of club life prevent "idle marriages." "As for real love," says Mrs. Caroline K. Sherman, "no influence on earth can swerve it."

Expressions from Miss Rives which received the heartiest denunciation from the women were based on her exclamation, "Imagine the sensations of a Chicago clubwoman who happens to be kissed!"

"I don't think Miss Rives knows what she is talking about. Most clubwomen of Chicago are already married, and as love and kissing are essential to marriage she is evidently on the wrong tack," said Dr. Frances Dickinson, head of the Harvey Medical college. "I was in club life from 1886 to 1894, and in all that time no one ever asked me to indorse her application who was not already a married woman, and I don't know of a divorce among clubwomen of Chicago.

"If the statement be true that woman insists upon surpassing man and leading him, whose is the fault? Doesn't he tell her when he proposes that he will be her slave? Doesn't he say he is willing to devote his whole life to her happiness? If he is not in earnest, what is woman to believe, and what is she to do about it? That is the time of all others a woman expects a man to be truthful, earnest and honest. It is the man's fault if the woman is not contented. He should not make such promises if he does not expect his life companion to hold him to them. Show me the women's club that is a retreat for divorced women. If it were not for the women's clubs, the probabilities are that many women wouldn't have the cultivated wit to withstand some of the unexpected occurrences of married life so as to make it even tolerable."

Dr. Julia Holmes Smith had the following to say: "The young woman must be extremely young to talk in this way. I think it is the expression of immaturity. It seems to me, in the first place, the young person knows very little of life, less about women and nothing at all about men. An estimate given by a tyro of any institution is necessarily brimful of ignorance, and certainly in this case of some conceit, because the young person sits in judgment, not upon her peers, but upon those who have had long experience of life, for the clubwoman of Chicago, as of other cities, is no immature girl, but in 99 cases out of 100 is a woman rich in experience of life in all its phases—the experience which goes to make up a perfect woman, that of sweetheart, wife and mother. In my judgment the number of divorced women would be found to be much fewer among clubwomen than among those whose ideals of life are bounded by desire for charming environment, extravagant living and sentimental devotion.

"It is an impertinence to assume that Chicago clubwomen are so intelligent they are beyond love, and also a grave insult to a pure woman that she goes through a cataclysm of love in her teens and before she has reached the age of 20 experiences of the heart that men do not know until they are much older. My experience with young women goes to show that before 20 their experience is with books and with music. While they may be good chums with the boys, genuine passion is the exception. That women's clubs are the means of eliminating love from the feminine temperament is absolutely unworthy of discussion. I would like to see this young woman when she has really grown up and attained the measure of the perfect woman, nobly planned, 'to warn, to comfort and command,' and not to analyze her sensations when being kissed."

Mrs. Lucy Flower, former member of the board of education, said: "You don't hear of as many scandals as you used to. Women's clubs have helped to prevent them. The right sort of a club is making the woman broader. This talk of the club alienating the woman's affections from her husband is all tommyrot. Modern conveniences give the woman more time than she used to have. It is not indolence that makes her idle. When I was young, we used to have to make our own yeast, soap and bluing. A woman would be a fool to spend her time doing these things now. I believe clubs increase marriages. They prevent some loveless marriages perhaps. If a woman had nothing to do, she might be tempted to marry to provide herself with occupation."

"Before the women's clubs came into existence the tendency of women was to be more spiritual and emotional than intellectual," said Mrs. Caroline K. Sherman, member of the board of education. "The mission of club life should be to equalize these qualities. Perhaps the effort of some clubwomen to change their social life all at once has caused them to appear more masculine than they should be. When the clubs induce women to become less womanly than they were, then they are a dangerous institution. It is nonsense to say that the interests of club life are likely to deprive women of the power of loving. Love is a quality which no influence can swerve."

Miss Margaret A. Haley, actuary of the Teachers' Federation, said: "What's good for the gander is good for the goose. If clubs are good for men, they are also good for women. As far as the effect of clubs on love is concerned, it is my belief that women have too much sentiment already. Love does not do any harm in the world, but sentiment does, and if the woman's club results in extricating soft heartedness from women it is doing a good thing. Clubs have a wholesome effect, but no woman should belong to more than seven clubs."

Miss Catherine Goggin, president of the Teachers' Federation, said: "The mistake of most people is that they think sentimentality is love. Many times women marry on sentimentality instead of love. If the clubs can teach women what is right, they will be doing a good thing. It's a good thing, too, that all women do not get married. There aren't enough good men to go around."—Chicago News.

ANNAMESE STUDENTS.

Thousands of Them Come Together Every Three Years—How They Live During Examinations.

Every third year the curious sights shown in the illustrations are to be seen at some important city of Annam. It is the camp of the candidates for government positions. The examination, which is very severe, lasts for no less than 50 days. At the last examination, which was held toward the close of 1900, there were 13,000 selected candidates, who had already passed preliminary examinations. From the 13,000 the high mandarins, who were the examiners, selected 360, 90 of whom were placed on the honor list, while the remaining 270 had to be satisfied with the simple degree of bachelor.

Those who are chosen spend three years at a college, where they are taught French and civilization according to French ideas. On leaving the college they have to face another examination. The first three or four are made sub-prefects; the five or six following are dubbed master professors, the remainder are assistant professors.

The first examination referred to was held at Nam-Dink, the third city of Tonquin, and commenced on November 22 of last year, therefore, was not completed until well into January of this year. The candidates live in little tents of bamboo, in which they have to crouch.

No great Annamese gathering is complete without dancers and singers, and these do not fail on the occasion of an examination.

But for the weeding examinations held in the province, instead of the 13,000 who present themselves there would have been 50,000.

THE ORIGINAL KRUPP PLANT.

Right in the midst of the great Krupp works at Essen, the busiest spot in the world, there stands a little building, shown in the accompanying cut, from the Engineering Magazine, which is held as sacred by the members of the great firm and the thousands of workmen there.

On the building is a tablet inscribed as follows:

"Fifty years ago, this dwelling, originally a laborer's, was the refuge of my parents. May all our workmen be spared the care and anxiety which the founding of our establishment cost. For twenty-five years the outcome was in doubt, and only after much effort and perseverance have the labors of the past been so wonderfully rewarded.

"May this example encourage others in affliction; may it increase respect for small abodes and sympathy for the great cares so often felt therein. The end of labor should be the common weal; then labor brings blessing, then is labor a prayer.' "—Alfred Krupp, Essen, 1873.

Frederick Krupp, the grandfather of the present proprietor, descended from a prominent Essen family, established a small forge there in the year 1810. In 1812, the same year in which his son Alfred was born, he offered to the public some cast steel which he had himself made. The manufacture of this material had up to that time been understood only by the English, particularly by Huntsman, of Sheffield, but they were unable to send their product to Germany on account of the closure of the continental ports by Napoleon's decrees.

With the profits derived from his forge Frederick Krupp was enabled, in 1818, to build a small plant, consisting of eight melting furnaces, with one crucible apiece, on the spot where the great, world-famed establishment now stands. Although the good quality of his product was recognized, he had not attained complete success at the time of his death in 1826.

MATRON AND MAID.

Edna Lyall is the pen name of Miss Ada Ellen Bayly.

The Duchess of Newcastle is a lover of dogs and has taken many prizes with her wire haired fox terriers.

Mrs. Lizzie Sargent of Ellsworth, Me., recently saved a lumber camp and all in it from burning by holding a fire in check, fighting the flames for nearly two hours with an old fashioned mop dipped in water until help arrived.

Fraulein Isolde von Bulow, daughter of Dr. Hans von Bulow, the celebrated pianist and conductor, has married an instrumentalist in the Baireuth orchestra. Some of her friends were displeased, but it was a love match, and in such cases it is of little use for friends to protest.

It is said the recognition of Lady Frances Hope, known on the professional stage as May Yohe, by the members of her husband's family is to be made complete as soon as the actress-lady can get abroad to be received by her aristocratic sister-in-law, Princess Doria, at her Italian home.

Mrs. U. S. Grant has been writing a book of personal reminiscences for her children. Mrs. Grant also has just put the finishing touch to a journal which she kept in California in 1894 while spending a year with her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Ulysses Grant, which is designed as a gift for her.

Lady de Rothschild is one of the best known and most practical women farmers of today. She has a model farm at Aston Clinton, Hertfordshire, which is kept in a most businesslike way, a strict system of accounts being carried out. The dairy at the farm is quite a sight, the cattle and poultry are admirably housed, and the sheep are of prize breeds.

Mrs. Langtry's new house in Tedworth square, London, promises to be a very beautiful one when the decorations are completed. The dining room will be finished in the Gothic fashion, with rough oak beams on a scarlet ceiling. There will be a great open fireplace with an oak beam. The drawing room is decorated in pure Italian fashion, with a marble floor, and the walls are hung with green velvet.

YOUNG GARRETT'S MISDEED.

Jury Found That the Blow He Gave Mr. Banks Caused Death.

Kemptville, Ont., March 9.—At the inquest into the cause of death of Mr. Lancelot J. Banks here yesterday, five witnesses were called. At 5.20 p.m. the jury returned the following verdict, after being out an hour and 25 minutes:

That we find James Gannon, William Dell, John Garrett and Thomas Newman wrongfully entered the office of Banks Bros. on Wednesday night or Thursday morning, March 6 and 7, and that, when Dell and James Gannon created a disturbance, and during the affray Lancelot J. Banks received a blow on the left side of the head above the temple, from the wagon stake in the hands of John Garrett, which caused his death in a few hours, and that James Gannon and William Dell were accessories, and altho Thomas Newman was present, there is no evidence to show that he was a party to the disturbance.

WEST POINT'S PLEDGE.

The West Point cadets should be given credit for honest intention to keep their promise to abolish hazing, but a law against the practice will harm no one.—Indianapolis Press.

The pledge by West Point cadets to stop hazing and not introduce similar practices in place of those abandoned gives satisfaction. We have no doubt that they will keep their word and that a clearer conception of honor at the Military academy will date from this agreeable incident.—New York Tribune.

The recognition by the cadets that their "code of honor" is a false one and their pledge to mend their ways in the future will do much to rehabilitate West Point in popular estimation, but there will be keen watchfulness hereafter that the promise is faithfully kept.

WONDERFUL GROWTH.

Christian Endeavor Movement Organized in 1881, Without an Equal in Religious History.

Twenty years ago the first Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor was formed in Portland, Me. Its constitution was printed by hand on a hectograph pad for local distribution. From the Williston Church the idea soon spread to neighboring churches in Portland and elsewhere. Since then 20,000,000 copies of the constitution and 100,000,000 copies of the pledge have been printed in at least 60 different languages. They have been translated into all the languages of Europe, into the chief languages of India, Burmah and China, into the barbarous tongues of the South Seas and into the tribal speech of the North American Islands. The movement has girdled the earth and become one of the potent forces for good in the world.

Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, founder

and president of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, briefly tells the story of this remarkable movement in the latest number of the Independent. He says the active membership of the society the world around at the present moment is nearly 4,000,000, and the organization is growing steadily at the rate of 2,000 societies and 100,000 members every year. He estimates that fully 10,000,000 young people have belonged to the Christian Endeavor society in the last 20 years, most of whom, of course, have been graduated into other forms of church work. The society has proved a powerful stimulus to religious life, and the churches that have large Christian Endeavor groups to draw from are most certain of healthful growth.

The Christian Endeavor movement is doing—in a more enlightened grade of society—the same kind of practical work that the Salvation Army is doing in its sphere. Its spirit of democracy is one of its best features. Its meetings provide a place where rich and poor can meet in the common cause and where the college graduate and the unlettered apprentice can and do unite in the same high aim. Another important work it is accomplishing is that of drawing all the evangelical denominations more closely together. No more powerful influence for church unity is at work to-day than this creedless and undenominational society, which links together all the evangelical denominations in English-speaking lands.

DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE.

He May Soon Succeed Lord Salisbury as British Prime Minister.

The Duke of Devonshire, who is mentioned as the probable successor of Lord Salisbury as Conservative leader and Premier of the British Government, has been prominent as a statesman in England since 1857, when he was first elected to Parliament. Many years ago he was conspicuous as a member of the Liberal party and was leader of that party during Mr. Gladstone's temporary withdrawal in 1875. In 1886 he joined the Unionist Liberals and has since that time closely identified himself with Lord Salisbury. The Duke is the eldest surviving son of the late seventh duke. His mother was a daughter of the sixth earl of Carlisle. He succeeded to the title and estates of the duchy in 1891, and he is 68 years old.

The Duke is on terms of great intimacy with King Edward, who, since his accession, has been consulting the Duke about everything, and the Duke is to take charge of all His Majesty's race horses for the ensuing season.

The appointment of the Duke as Premier will meet with general approval. There is no statesman who enjoys to a higher degree the confidence and good will of his country. True, he is a Whig and a Liberal-Unionist. But his Liberalism is so strongly imbued with conservatism that not even the most rabid Tory would refuse to serve under his orders.

Must Pay Their Church Dues.

Several members of a church in Kutztown, Pa., having fallen far behind with their fair dues, the board of trustees has decided that in future the bell shall not be tolled for a funeral in any family which has not paid up its indebtedness and a year in advance besides.

RULES THE COMMONS.

THE SPEAKER ONE OF THE MOST POWERFUL ENGLISH OFFICIALS.

His Authority in the British Parliament and How It May Be Exerted. The Manner in Which He Is Elected—Taking the Chair.

The speaker of the house of commons is one of the most powerful personages of the British empire. For the latter is governed by parliament, representing the will of the people, and by ministers of state, representing the majority of votes in the national legislature, and it is the speaker who is the authority over parliament—that is to say, over the most important part thereof—namely, the house of commons. He can suspend a member, he can stop the prime minister on a point of procedure, he can close a debate, he can decide the most momentous constitutional questions by a few words spoken in private conference behind the chair, he can overrule the cabinet on points which may be vital to its policy and which may either enhance or discredit the authority in the house, and it is he alone who decides who is to speak and who is to remain silent. No secretary of state, not even the first lord of the treasury, who holds the title of "leader of the house," is able to speak in parliament without having obtained the permission of "the first commoner in the land" by means of the peculiar process known as "catching the speaker's eye."

There is no optic in the world that has played so important a part in history as the "eye" of the speaker. Its power and rights are not based on any written law, but on long established custom and tradition. Often several members rise in their places at once, endeavoring to arrest the wandering optic of the speaker, and it is then free to that august functionary to make his selection and to indicate the member who has his permission to speak. While he generally concedes priority to newcomers who are about to address the house for the first time, yet he is so impartial in the performance of this particular duty that, within the memory of the present generation at any rate, no speaker of the house of commons has been taxed with unfairness.

The manner in which the speaker is elected at the opening of a new parliament is as follows: On the day appointed by royal proclamation for the meeting of the newly elected legislature the members assemble in the house of commons, the speaker's chair remaining empty and the mace of office being under instead of on the table. A few minutes after 2 o'clock—that is the usual hour for the ceremony—the doorkeeper announces "Black Rod," and the latter, who is the principal executive official of the house of lords, enters and with a number of bows to the speaker's empty chair invites "this honorable house" to repair "to another place" to hear the reading of the royal commission by means of which parliament is opened. He then retires, bowing thrice, and is followed by the chief clerk of the house of commons, a queen's counsel, wearing the wig, the silk robes, the queer fashioned coat, black knee breeches and silk stockings of his office, and by most of the members of parliament, who take up their position at the bar of the house of lords and listen to the reading of the commission opening the new parliament. The royal commissioners, consisting of the lord high chancellor and four other peers, arrayed in the scarlet and ermine barred robes of their rank, are seated in a line on the woolsack in front of the throne. At the conclusion of the reading of the sovereign's message the commons flock back to the lower chamber. After they have taken their places the clerk of the house, sitting at the table below the speaker's empty chair, rises and silently points three fingers at the chief representative of the administration, known as the leader of the house. The latter thereupon rises and proposes the election to the speakership of some candidate whose name has usually been already agreed upon jointly by the leaders of the administration party and of the opposition, the chief of the latter, in accordance with time honored usage, seconding the nomination.

Seldom—certainly not within the memory of the present generation—has there been a full fledged contest for the office of speaker. For the government party, conscious of its numerical superiority, always endeavors to secure a candidate who will be acceptable to the minority, so that there may be no question as to the impartiality of the chair. It has often happened that the speaker, by the wish and consent of the party in power, has been selected from the ranks of the opposition. If there is no objection raised to the candidate thus nominated, the clerk of the house, after the lapse of two minutes as indicated by the sandglass on the table before him, arises from his seat at the table and, without uttering a word, points three fingers at the nominee. The latter then rises from his seat and, addressing the clerk of the house by name, expresses his appreciation of the honor conferred upon him, requesting that he may have the support of every member, "without which the speaker can do nothing, but having which there is little he cannot do."

As soon as he has concluded his little address the leader of the government smiles across the body of the house to the leader of the opposition, whereupon both arise from their places and conduct the speaker elect to the speaker's chair. Standing before the latter under its canopy and facing the chair, he beckons to the sergeant-at-arms, who, taking the mace of office from beneath the table, places it on the latter, the members on both sides of the house having risen to their feet. As soon as the mace has been placed on the table the speaker, no longer "elect," but duly inducted, gives a signal to the members to reseat themselves. Then the leader of the government party delivers a brief speech of congratulation, in response to which the speaker "unreservedly places himself in the hands of the house." Then as people are just beginning to wonder what will happen next the speaker rises again and in his official voice—a distinctly different and more authoritative organ than that employed during the earlier proceedings—exclaims, "The question is that this house will now adjourn." No objection being taken, the speaker leaves the chair, and when he next resumes it does so no longer in plain street dress.

MR. HARRY DWIGHT.

SKETCH OF THE CAREER OF THE FATHER OF CANADIAN TELEGRAPHY.

Mr. Dwight Began in the Service of the Montreal Telegraph Company in 1847, and Has Grown to Be the President and General Manager of the Great Northwestern Telegraph Company—Has Served the Country.

Mr. H. P. Dwight was born of New England parentage at Belleville, Jefferson County, New York, Dec. 23, 1828. He entered the service of the Montreal Telegraph Company in the year of its inception—1847—and was first stationed at Belleville, and afterwards at Montreal, where he remained until 1850. He was then removed to Toronto, and a few years later was appointed General Western Superintendent of the company, in which capacity extensions were projected and carried out under his direction throughout the whole of Western Ontario.

In the year 1881 an amalgamation of telegraph interests in the Dominion was brought about, and the lines of the Montreal and Dominion Companies merged under the charter of the Great Northwestern Telegraph Company. Mr. Dwight received the appointment of General Manager of the combined system, and a few years later was also appointed Vice-President of the company. In the year 1893 he was elected President of the company, since which time he has filled the dual office of President and General Manager. The Great Northwestern Telegraph Company operates 40,000 miles of wire, and maintains in the neighborhood of 2,000 offices, extending throughout the Provinces of Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Manitoba, as well as a portion of the northern part of New York State. The efficiency and extent of the Canadian Telegraph service to-day is largely attributed to Mr. Dwight's energy and enterprise, and he has long enjoyed the sobriquet of "the Father of Canadian Telegraphy."

On many occasions Mr. Dwight has rendered services of the utmost importance to the Government of the country. During the Fenian raid the distribution of operators along the various frontiers where trouble existed or was threatened was placed in his hands, and by this means the Government were in a position to act with a knowledge and promptitude which would otherwise have been totally lacking. During the Northwest rebellion in 1885 he also rendered signal service to the Government along similar lines, his services in this connection having been publicly acknowledged in Parliament by the Minister of Militia.

Aside from his connection with the telegraph service, Mr. Dwight at the present time is Vice-President of the Canadian General Electric Company, President of the Birkbeck Investment, Security and Savings Company, and a director of the Toronto and London Electric Light Companies. Mr. Dwight has always taken an active interest in civic government, and has identified himself with every progressive movement in this direction. He was one of the pioneer promoters of electric lighting in Toronto. The telephone also, in its early and experimental days, had the benefit of his wide electrical knowledge, and the first telephonic wire ever used in that city was constructed between his private residence and the testing station.

Socially, there are few men who stand higher in the community than Mr. Dwight. He has been an enthusiastic sportsman all his life, and from the time of its creation up to within a recent date was a member of the Ontario Fish and Game Commission. He is at present chairman of the investigating governors of the Royal Canadian Humane Association, in which he has taken an active interest for a number of years past.

Mr. Dwight is a member of the Church of England, and has been twice married, his present wife being the daughter of the late William Helliwell, the well-known York pioneer, who died a few years since.

People of Note.

Among the 670 members of the new house of commons two are above 80 years of age.

Lord Brougham commonly spent three or four weeks in study before writing a great speech.

Mr. Andrew D. White, the United States ambassador at Berlin, has been elected a member of the Berlin Academy of Science.

The Czar of Russia makes it a rule to spend at least three hours every day with his children, to whom he is deeply attached.

Lord Salisbury is a collector of historic relics, and his house at Hatfield is full of the results of his researches. He owns among these the cradle in which Queen Elizabeth was rocked as a baby.

MRS. GALLUP'S WOES.

A LONG EXPECTED SUMMONS COMES AT LAST.

She Awakens Her Husband at Midnight to Break the Sad News and Give Him a Number of Pointers About the Funeral Arrangements.

[Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Lewis.]

It had been a very quiet evening with the Gallups. He had read his newspaper, while she patched a pair of his trousers and put a new band on a very old shirt. At 9 o'clock he had just got out of his chair with a grunt, wound up the clock, fastened the kitchen door, turned out the lamp and said they had better go to bed, and she had followed him without a word. They had slept and snored, and midnight had come. Of a sudden she sat up in bed and listened, and after a minute she gave him a poke with her elbow and exclaimed:

"Samuel Gallup, wake up and bid your wife goodby forever, for she hasn't an hour to live!"

Mr. Gallup ceased to snore and opened one eye, and Mrs. Gallup continued:

"I've bin expectin the summons fur the last 20 years, and now they've finally come. I was sound asleep and dreamin of whitewashin the kitchen ceilin, when one of our hens uttered a crow and woke me up. You know what it means, Samuel, when a hen crows in the night. It has never failed yet and never will. I hev bin commanded to lay down my airthly burden and become an angel, and if you'll git up I'll say a last few words to you."

Mr. Gallup didn't get up. He had closed his eye and fallen asleep again, and it took three digs of the elbow to arouse him again. He sat up without asking any questions. He had been there about 2,000 times before, and there was no occasion for excitement.

"Yes, Samuel; I shall perish between this and daylight," said Mrs. Gallup, with considerable satisfaction in her tones, "and I want to talk to you a little about the funeral. I've had rheumatism, neuralgia, back ache, buzzin in the head, fever, chills, measles, sore eyes and bunions, and I think I deserve a tolerably long funeral purcession and considerable fuss made over me. Mrs. Gaines, who never had half the ailments I have, had 36 buggies and wagons in her purcession, and you orter do as well by me. I believe you could skeer up 40 if you humped around. Will you hump, Samuel—will you hump to send me to my last restin place in good shape?"

For answer Mr. Gallup fell back upon his pillow with a great thud and snored away to make up for lost time. Mrs. Gallup didn't arouse him again. Having got a good start on her favorite subject, it made no difference to her whether he was awake or asleep. She went on:

"I was lookin at coffins at Brown's the other day. You kin git 'em at all prices, but seein it was me he said he'd give me a $40 one fur $32. Jist remind him of it, Samuel, and don't let him squeak out of his promise. The funeral will take place day after tomorrow at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and you'll hev to borry about 25 chairs. I want Mrs. Phillips, Mrs. Carter and Mrs. Bebee to hev front seats along of you. They allus do more weepin at a funeral than any other women I know of, and weepin helps things to git off all right. I don't expect you to do much weepin yourself, but you'd better shed a few tears fur the looks of things. It may be hard work, but you'll try, won't you, Samuel?"

Mr. Gallup was noncommittal. Being sound asleep and dreaming of being tossed over a fence by a bull, he couldn't well be otherwise. Mrs. Gallup worked up an imaginary picture of him in the "front row" with tears raining down his cheeks and then said:

"As to the preachin, it won't amount to much. It will be by Elder Tompkins, of course, and he'll say that another flower has faded, another leaf fallen by the wayside, another human being laid down the cares of airth and sailed away to become an angel. Let the women folks do most of the weepin, and you kin come in at the last end, while they are waitin to sing. You may feel like singin, Samuel, but I wouldn't do it if I was you. You've got such a roarin sort of voice that it might put the rest of 'em out. I want 'em to sing 'Rock of Ages,' 'The Home Over There' and 'The Sweet Bimeby,' and I don't keer which tune comes first. While they are singin it would look better for you to sit up straight with your handkerchief held in your right hand. Kin you remember all this, Samuel?"

Owing to circumstances over which he had no control Mr. Gallup made no reply. Such a trifle as that didn't disturb Mrs. Gallup, however, and she went right on to say:

"You'll ride in the carriage with the elder to the graveyard, and if I was you I wouldn't say much nor let him draw me into no argument about the whale swalleria Joner. Squeeze out a few more tears at the grave if you can as well as not, and don't look too happy as you ride home. You kin return all the borried chairs before dark, hev some puddin and milk fur supper and go to bed and sleep as sound as you ever did in your life. You hear me, don't you, Samuel?"

Owing to circumstances as above mentioned he didn't, but having had her say about things she dropped back on her pillow with a feeling that they were off her mind and whispered:

"That's all, Samuel; that's all. When I have perished—Mrs. Carter—25 chairs—weep a few tears—flower by the wayside—puddin and milk for supper—and—and"—

And Mrs. Gallup was snoring in unison with him, and the crowing hen was heard no more. M. QUAD.

MEN AS THEY PASS.

The Duke of Norfolk, as chief butler of England, is entitled to a gold cup at the new Edward's coronation.

The oldest member of the present electoral college is John R. Bennett of Michigan, aged 83, and the youngest Robert T. Offutt of Kentucky, aged 34.

John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers, is to be given a home by the anthracite miners in recognition of his work for them during the recent strike.

Clarence Mackay has ordered in Paris a $17,000 automobile "to beat anything in America." American inventors and manufacturers may have something to say about this.

Edward Pase Allinson, who died in Philadelphia recently, was the author of various legal works, founder of the Pennsylvania Bar association and state editor of The Legal Intelligencer.

"The day after congress adjourns," said Senator Marion Butler of North Carolina a few days ago, "I will be found in my office in Raleigh practicing law. I expect to devote my time to that and to looking after my newspaper in Raleigh."

Judge A. J. Harlan of Savannah, Andrew county, Mo., is the last survivor of the Thirty-fifth congress. He has been a member of the legislative bodies of three states and served two terms in congress. It was he who, as clerk, introduced Kossuth to congress.

Professor Silvanus Thompson of England recently delivered an address in fluent Italian at the Volta centenary celebration and a little later delivered a lecture in German before the Urania, a scientific society in Berlin, on "Faraday and the English School of Electricians."

Professor Paul J. Robert of Mobile has received official notification of his election as a member of the Societe Astronomique de France. He was nominated by Camille Flammarion and M. Touchet, after writing several lunar and meteorological reports for the monthly review of the society. There are only 23 members in the United States, four of whom are women.

Captain James L. Church, who is thought to be the last of the old line of whaling captains, died recently at his home in Providence in his eighty-third year. He was in the whale fishing business 42 years and had visited all the whaling seas. Only once was he shipwrecked, and that was 18 years ago and within 100 miles of Montauk Point. After that experience he gave up seafaring life.

George H. Stevens was elected city clerk of Newburyport, Mass., recently for the thirty-second consecutive time. He is now 72 years old, but is still in the enjoyment of good health and all his mental vigor. He is a beautiful penman, and his records are said to be models of transcribing. As clerk of the board of registry for 31 years he is personally acquainted with nearly every voter in the city.

Louis George Graff, the oldest member of the Philadelphia Commercial Exchange, says that he was a playmate in his boyhood of Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg, who by his marriage became the prince consort of the British throne. Mr. Graff is the nephew of the keeper of the country estate of Duke Ernest of Coburg, the father of the prince consort, and younger brother of Prince Leopold, who became the king of the Belgians. Albert had an older brother, Ernest, who is now dead.

THE PEDAGOGUE.

Poultney Bigelow has been engaged to give a course of lectures at Yale in March on colonization and its problems. Mr. Bigelow, who is now in London, will sail for America about March 1.

President Prichett of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology will make a tour of the principal western cities as far as Kansas City some time in March in behalf of the institute and the Walker memorial.

F. L. Reed, one of the founders of Olivet college, celebrated his golden wedding at Olivet, Mich., the other day. The occasion was observed by the entire college, and the faculty gave a dinner in the evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Reed.

In the Howard College library there was recently found a copy of Tasso's "Jerusalem Delivered" that had belonged to Napoleon and bears the imperial eagles on the cover. The emperor carried it with him from Fontainebleau to Elba.

HIVE AND BEE.

Stirring honey unnecessarily causes it to candy sooner.

Chaff hives are the best outdoor protection during the winter.

Arrange the apiary so that it may be kept exclusively to itself in winter.

Bees will endure very cold and severe winter weather if not confined too long at a time, but long confinement, coupled with cold weather and heavy snows, often proves disastrous.

If for any reason bees become short of stores in midwinter and no combs of natural stores are on hand, they must be fed candy. This may be made in large cakes from granulated sugar, Beeswax is a valuable product, and every particle of comb should be saved and rendered into wax. Foundation makers are always willing to pay a good price for good beeswax.

THE CYNIC.

If you act as they think you should, your friends are your friends.

When a man finds at home all the comforts of a hotel, he will be satisfied.

When you put a nickel in the baby's bank, you are really giving to its mother.

Don't talk. There is no truth in the world so apparent that some one will not disagree with you.

When a rich man dies, it is remarked that enough money was spent on the coffin to have clothed some of the poor kin that showed up at the funeral.—Atchison Globe.

Too Much Club Life.

It would be hard to tell which is worse, a dun or a crying baby. One of the latter on a crowded street car raised sheol. A poor, dispirited, sad faced man held it with its red face wabbling over his shoulder and its feet occasionally beating the air as it renewed its pathetic screams. The women glared at him. "No wonder it cries," said one. "See how that idiot is holding it." The old married man longed to give him a word or two about carrying a child on the public cars. The bachelor swore under his breath and said something about nuisances on street cars and forcing people to quit after paying their fares. Meanwhile the baby screamed louder than ever, and the poor father was wild. He saw the looks on the faces around him. He knew exactly what those folks were thinking. Finally he said, with a tremble in his voice, "Ladies and gentlemen, you must excuse this baby, but its mother"— Tears stole down his haggard face. "Oh, the poor little thing," interrupted the old maid in the corner sweetly. "Let me hold the little angel."

The old bachelor turned hastily aside and wiped a tear which had given his eye a surprise party, and the married man coughed and felt a strange lump in his throat. "It's mother," continued the baby holder, "is attending the business meetings of 16 of her clubs today."

Father Time's Old Clock.

"The transmitting clock at the Naval observatory, Washington, is the absolute monarch of American timekeepers," writes Evander McIver Sweet in The Ladies' Home Journal. "Every day in the year except Sunday by one pendulum stroke it speaks directly and instantaneously to every city and considerable town between the peaks of the Rockies and the pines of Maine, saying to them that on the seventy-fifth meridian it is now high noon to the fraction of a second. A duplicate mechanism stationed at the branch naval observatory on Mare Island performs a similar service for the people of the Pacific slope. And by this one clock at the national capital, together with its duplicate on the Pacific, is set nearly every timepiece in the United States and Cuba, most of those in Mexico and many on the border of Canada.

"A number of clocks—from 3 to 3,000—in nearly every city and large town are wired together into a local family and by means of a switch key at the telegraph office are put into direct contact with the parent clock at the national capital. So that the instant the electric touch is given from Washington every clock in the circuit, whether it be at Boston, Minneapolis or New Orleans, begins a new day in perfect accord with its mechanical deity."

Dry Goods Coopers.

"This is a strange place for a cooper shop," said a stranger in New York, pointing to a sign over a basement in the wholesale dry goods district.

"Yes; it would be a queer place," was the answer, "if the product was like that of nearly all cooper shops. But there was never a barrel made in the place, and probably not one of the 15 men who work there could head a barrel, to say nothing of making one. This cooperage does business only with big wholesale houses."

There are several similar shops in the district. They make a business of strapping cases of merchandise after they have been packed. The large concerns have the cases put in the street after they have been packed, and then the cooper is sent for to nail the wooden straps around them. He receives about 25 cents an hour for his labor and from 15 to 25 cents a pair for the straps. The shops are the storehouses for the hoop poles, and there the men split and shave the hickory saplings which finally become the case straps. There are some houses in the district where the porter does this work, but the large concerns turn it over to the coopers who never make a barrel.

Hotels and Trained Nurses.

Trained nurses are not welcome guests in New York hotels, and in fact in many they are expressly forbidden to appear in the dining rooms in their uniforms. The hotel keepers object to their presence in their working dresses because any indication of the existence of disease in a hotel is disadvantageous. Under these circumstances they are compelled to go through as much preliminary labor before they go to meals as if they had been invited under formal circumstances. Yet the wisdom of the rule on the part of the hotel proprietors is admitted, as in some of the large hotels up town occupied chiefly by families there are frequently 10 or 12 trained nurses employed. The sight of so many would not be reassuring to guests.

Do Not Drink While Eating.

Liquids at meals if taken too often or too carelessly are liable to dilute the gastric juices. Take no liquid of any kind when food is in the mouth. Take as little as possible till the close of the meal. The digestive agents themselves being fluids, it is reasonable to suppose that an excess of liquids taken with the food will have a tendency to dilute and thereby weaken the digestive juices.

Regular Course.

"What course will you take?" inquired the senior.

The new freshman from Boston spoke timidly. "I'll take bean soup, sir," he said, imagining for the moment that he was at the dinner table.—Philadelphia [illegible]

THE C. O. D. MAN.

AN INTERESTING CHAPTER IN WEARY WILLIE'S LIFE.

Taken For a Noble In Disguise, He Was Making Rapid Progress With the Romantic Old Maid When an Unsentimental Father Appeared Upon the Scene.

[Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Lewis.]

"It was in the state of Ohio and two years ago," said the C. O. D. man as he puffed away at his clay pipe. "I had entered a village to be turned down by half a dozen householders and started on for the next when I saw some fine apples on a tree just over the fence. Over I went for some fruit, and I'd no sooner struck ground than a woman uttered a little shriek. Lying in a hammock under that same tree was an old maid who had seen 40 years or more. She wore her hair in ringlets and had a simper about the mouth, and, though I may have surprised her a bit, I took it that the little shriek was all put on. I am a dilapidated gentleman, as I have observed, but nothing could be more courteous and graceful and apropos than the way I swung around on my heel and said:

"'A thousand pardons, mam'selle, and I pray you to forgive the intrusion. I saw the fruit above the fence—and—and'—

"'And didn't you see me?' she asked.

"'Could I be so blind, mam'selle? May I take it that the intrusion is forgiven?'

"'Oh, dear, of course, but you gave me a terrible shock. Some girls would have fainted away—quite fainted. May I ask if you are a Frenchman?'

"'Pate de foie gras, mam'selle,' said I.

"'Oh, how nice! Oh, how charming! The rest of the girls won't believe it. I come out here to lie down in my hammock and think, and a real hero suddenly scales the wall and stands before me. You are a hero, of course?'

"YOU GAVE ME A DREADFUL SHOCK."

"'My modesty, mam'selle,' with a sweeping bow.

"'Oh, how charming! Not one of the girls will believe it. I've always told everybody that some day my chevalier would come along and wish to bear me off to his turreted castle, and here he is. You are a chevalier, aren't you?'

"'The Chevalier d'Orman, mam'selle.'

"'How splendid! And you must be a troubadour too.'

"'Yes, I touch the sad, sweet lyre.'

"'Isn't that sweet? I wish the rest of the girls were here. And you are a knight also, and your horse and squire are down in the village waiting for you?'

"'As you say, mam'selle.'

"'Dear me, but isn't it so very strange?' she went on, getting more girly every minute. 'Sir knight, hast thou a castle?'

"'I hath four castles, fair ladye.'

"'What a romantic adventure! When I tell the other girls, they'll say it was all a dream. All day yesterday I somehow felt that my knight was coming, and now he's here. Why ain't you in armor D'Orman?'

"'Because mine enemies have fled.'

"'Of course. How beautiful! You are not only out of your armor, but you seem to be in disguise.'

"'Yes, I put on this faded raiment that I might not be recognized.'

"'How grand and mysterious! Wasn't I right in sticking to it that you would come? Mam'selle is French for girl, isn't it?'

"'I'ar sigue de mepris,' says I, with a bow.

"'Oh, how exquisite!' she exclaimed as she rolled up her eyes. 'Of course I'm a girl, and you do quite right to call me mam'selle. Sir knight, thou hast come here to—to'—

"'To bear thee to one of my castles.'

"'How lovely! The girls won't believe it. Forgive my coyness, but you know how a young girl feels when first asked for her love. I ought to be borne away on your saddlebow, of course, but hadn't you as lief see papa about it?'

"I told her that I waited with throbbing heart to see her old man," smiled the tramp, "but of course I lied about it. I was scraping and bowing and trying to find a way out of it when she suddenly cried out:

"'Ha, D'Orman, but my sire approacheth!'

"It was true. The old man was coming down from the house, and he had ginger in his looks and a club in his hand.

"'O sire, but let me introduce Sir Knight d'Orman,' said the girly old girl.

"The 'sire' didn't take the introduction. He shifted the club to his left hand and spat on the palm of his right and then shifted it back and quietly said:

"'Weary Willie, I'll give you just 15 seconds to git on the other side of that fence.'

"A chevalier hates to take a bluff before the damsel he loves, but I estimated that the old man would want to club every square inch of me if he once opened the circus, and without wasting any more bows or scrapes I took a climb. I think I heard girly call my name in a voice betraying emotion, but shall never be sure about it. While I was playing monkey on the fence the 'sire' was dropping that old girl in her hammock with a dull thud, and there was a sound of somebody getting a box on the ear. As I stood in the road I looked around for my steed and esquire, but while I was yet gazing that same old man came down to the gate and shook that club at me, and I journeyed on afoot and unattended.

Competent, but Ominous.

A. A. Gallagher, district passenger agent of the Missouri Pacific railroad, while en route south was taken quite ill and was compelled to stop at Montgomery, Ala. He went to a hotel and sent for a physician.

The medical man said:

"You have a case of pneumonia and must have a nurse."

"All right," said Gallagher. "Do you know a good nurse you can send to look after me?"

The doctor said he did and would have the nurse at the hotel within an hour. In about an hour a colored woman who measured about nine feet in girth put in an appearance, and Gallagher asked her if she had ever nursed sick people.

"Yes, indeed," she replied. "I'se had considerable sperience with ailing pussons. I nussed Marster John, and he died; then I nussed Mistress Lucy, and she died; then I nussed Mistress Lucy's sister. The doctor didn't think she was so very poorly, but she done died."

"Have you had any other experience in nursing?" asked Gallagher.

"Yes, indeed. Only last week I left Colonel Carter's house, where I nussed the colonel for five days."

"Well, did the colonel get well?" asked Gallagher.

"No. The colonel he died, too, but Dr. Jones, who 'tended him, run a big knife into the colonel and opened him up. The doctor had been out late the night before and was a little nervous. The knife sort of slipped and just about cut the colonel's heart out. Then the doctor said all h— couldn't save him."

"You seem to be a good nurse," said Gallagher, "and you're engaged."

Not So Far Gone.

The last letter he received from wifey conveyed the intelligence that she was quite sick, and of course he was considerably worried. But he was comforted by the fact that she was with her mother. He wrote her an affectionate letter and told her to be sure and let him know if she grew worse. The next letter conveyed the intelligence that she was a little worse, though the doctor said it was nothing serious. But he worried a great deal.

The next afternoon a telegraph boy sauntered into his office with the usual nonchalance of a messenger boy conveying a "rush" message and shoved the book under hubby's nose.

"Is dis Mr. Blank?" asked the boy.

"Yes," gasped hubby, cold chills chasing up and down his spine.

"Message fer you. Sign here. De charges is 60 cents."

Hubby grabbed the fateful manila envelope and hastily tore it open. What he suffered while tremblingly unfolding the bit of yellow paper can be imagined, but not described. He was almost afraid to read it, but finally he nerved himself for the worst. This is what he read:

"Turn off the water and don't forget to give the bird plenty of seed."

The Coroner's Two Verdicts.

"Inquests are sometimes very funny affairs," remarked a western man. "I remember one in the early days of my county in Kansas. A man was found dead by the side of a small stream out on the prairie. No mark was found on his well dressed body. His gun was fully loaded in his hip pocket, and $25 was found in his pocketbook. Of course the coroner took charge of the money. A jury was impaneled and after finishing its deliberations found that the man clearly died of heart failure.

The coroner promptly paid from the dead man's pile the $12 due for expenses and discharged the jury. The $13 remaining bothered him. He argued that to turn that $13 over to the county, to be held in trust for the man's possible relatives, would be the same as throwing it away. The man was a stranger in those parts. Possibly he had no friends.

The coroner was equal to the occasion, however. He declared himself dissatisfied with the verdict and called the jury together again. They sat on the body a second time and found exactly the same verdict, but the coroner's mind was at ease. The $25 was exhausted."

ARABI PASHA'S PARDON.

Famous Egyptian Revolutionist Said to Hesitate About Returning After His Long Exile.

After 18 years of exile in Ceylon, Arabi Pasha, the famous Egyptian revolutionist, is said to hesitate about accepting the pardon which has been granted him, although it is known that about a year ago he was anxious to return to Egypt. Arabi Pasha was sent to Ceylon January 18, 1883, under sentence of exile for leading a revolt against the Khedive's government. He was accompanied by several adherents and by his wife, son and servant. He has seen some of the men who accompanied him into exile buried and others released, until only he and Ali Fehmy remain. His spirit is said to have been completely broken. Arabi Pasha was born near the borders of the desert and became an officer in the Egyptian army at the time when Said Pasha replaced many foreign officers by native Egyptians. He appeared at the head of a revolt in 1881 and became dictator. Then England interferred, Alexandria was bombarded and Arabi and his army were defeated at Tel-el-Kebir. Arabi fled to Cairo and surrendered to Gen. Drury-Low. He was tried, pleaded guilty to rebellion and was condemned to death. His sentence was commuted by the Khedive to perpetual exile from Egypt, and he and his fellow-conspirators were sent to Ceylon.

CANADA'S BEST.

Arrangements Completed for Exhibiting at the Glasgow Show—Unique Display for the Canadian Building.

All arrangements for the Canadian exhibit at the Galsgow Exposition are now practically completed. One hundred and fifty manufacturers of the Dominion will display their wares at Glasgow and the representation of the natural resources, food products and industries of this country will be one of the most varied and comprehensive ever brought together. Canada has 9,000 feet of space in the main building, which will be devoted to musical instruments, furniture, food products and flour and leather products, textiles, etc.

The Canadian building will be a handsome structure costing $10,000, and will give 12,000 feet of space. It will have three entrances, facing to the south, east and west. The main entrance will face south on Kelvin Grove street, and will be flanked by ornamental towers rising to a height of 65 feet. In the centre of the building will stand an octagonal Canadian trophy to be built of cereals and grasses. This will be of handsome design and 32 feet in height. Space in the Canadian building will be devoted to agricultural implements and agricultural products, horticultural display, carriages, canoes, forestry and fisheries exhibits.

A cold storage plant is being constructed by the Linde British Refrigerator Company, and this will permit the dairy products to be kept in first-class shape. The exhibition of fruit, especially of apples, will be the finest that Canada can produce.

Possession of the Canadian building is promised for the first week in March. Mr. W. D. Scott, Canadian Commissioner, left for Scotland on the 22nd Feb., to assume the personal direction of affairs in Glasgow in connection with the Dominion exhibit. A staff of six men will assist him.

Daily Examiner.

SATURDAY, MARCH 9, 1901.

OUR BAPTISM OF FIRE.

This morning, between four and seven o'clock, by misfortune or rather by misdeed—for there is no doubt of the incendiary character of the disaster—the Examiner printing establishment was utterly destroyed by fire. All that is left within the blackened walls of the building are twisted wrecks of machinery and blackened masses of water-soaked debris. Through the fraternal kindness of our contemporary REVIEW, we are favored with facilities for the issue of the present edition of the DAILY EXAMINER, and this timely aid in time of trouble materially helps us to maintain the continuity of issue of the paper. There will be as little interruption as possible of our business. Temporary business quarters have been located at the shop next south of Lech & Son's fur store, George street. Orders have been placed for type, type-setting machines and other printing plant. The restoration of the old premises will be be begun at once, and in the course of two or three weeks it is hoped that the DAILY AND WEEKLY EXAMINER and the associated branches of industry will, in the language of the vernacular, be "doing business at the old stand." Under the circumstances we must ask the indulgence of our patrons; our gratitude for their past favours will lead us to employ all possible energy to minimise the inconvenience which they in common with ourselves are subjected to by the fiery happening of this morning.

In connection with the fire of this morning, and the results that followed, we have thanks to express—to our contemporary, the Review, which promptly and kindly placed at our disposal such of its premises and plant as were necessary to permit the issue of this (as it succeeding) editions, and also to the Times, which offered its services in the straits in which we found ourselves. We have also to very heartily thank the fire brigade, who worked so heroically. The inflammable nature of the contents of the building, and its internal construction neutralized their efforts. The combined efforts of the firemen and our excellent water service, which poured water on the blaze in floods could not arrest the fierce sweep of the flames. But it was a great achievement to confine the fire to the place of origin.

St. Luke's Church.

The fourth of the course of sermons on the Bible will be preached in St. Luke's Church tomorrow evening by Rev. H. Symonds. Subject—"Objections to the Bible."

George Street Church.

Missionary Anniversary Services will be held in connection with George Street Methodist Church tomorrow. Rev. Thomas Manning, B.A., of Lindsay, will preach at 11 a.m. and at 7 p.m. Collections at both services will be towards the missionary fund of the church. Both reverend gentlemen are known as able preachers.

Y.M.C.A. Active Members' Rally.

There will be a rally this evening of all Full or Active members at the regular evening Bible Class in the building, when Mr. R. J. Farrell, General Secretary of the Ottawa Association, will address them. Every Christian worker is especially invited to be present as Mr. Farrell is anxious to meet all Association men. The class starts at 8.00 o'clock sharp. Mr. Farrell will also address the Men's Meeting to-morrow afternoon as announced in another column.

Mr. Bert Morrison, son of Mr. Alexander Morrison, of Bridgenorth, has enlisted with the South African constabulary. Bert was very popular out in Smith and will be much missed.

Mr. Harry Rush, ledger keeper of the Ontario Bank, had the misfortune to get struck in the eye while playing hockey last night. As a result he is nursing an injured optic.

EXAMINER BLDG. GUTTED BY FIRE!

The Plant and Stock Entirely Destroyed --Estimated Damage, $35,000 to $40,000.

THE INSURANCE IS $16,000.

A. H. Stratton's Loss—The Stock of the Peterborough Bookstore Ruined by Water, With Which the Premises Had to be Flooded to Prevent the Fire From Spreading.

As the result of a most disastrous conflagration, which broke out at about four o'clock, this morning, THE EXAMINER building was completely gutted by fire, the stock and plant being a total loss.

Police Constable Adams and Nightwatchman Finney passed down Chambers street at a quarter to four o'clock and tried the door in the rear of the building. At this time nothing unusual was noticed about the premises, and no sign of fire was perceptible. It was not fifteen minutes later, however, before Mr. Joseph Begley, who resides in Chambers street, noticed flames breaking out of the windows and alarmed the nightwatch.

The members of the fire brigade were quickly on the scene, but the flames had of such impetuosity that it appeared almost impossible to check their advance.

The suddeness with which the fire broke out, combined with the fact that when the flames first attracted attention, there were windows broken on the ground floor, seems to point out that the fire was the work of an incendiary. No other cause can be assigned.

When first noticed the fire appeared to be centred around the foot of the stair case on the ground floor, in the rear of the premises. Fanned by the draft caused by the stairway and elevator shaft, the flames rapidly ascended to the top storey and quickly spread through the several flats of the building, centreing largely in the rear and burning with a fierceness which the streams of water seemed to augment rather than diminish.

In a very few minutes the floor in the third flat gave away, as well as the roof, and both came crashing down to the second story, where the heat became so intense as to melt the type in the cases and cause it to form into solid blocks.

The five presses and the folder on the ground floor were completely ruined, as were the office fixtures and light stock in the front. On the floor above of job stock was ruined, and the type in the job composing department was, as stated, melted in the cases.

On the top flat the tools and machinery in the bindery were all destroyed, and the expensive type-setting machines damaged beyond repair, together with all the type in the composing room, including the forms, galleys, etc.

A number of books belonging to customers were also lost and unfortunately some of them were in rare editions that cannot be replaced.

While the floors in the front part of the premises remained intact, those in the rear went down and through, the burning debris being precipitated into the cellar, where a quantity of stock was spoiled which might otherwise have escaped.

An estimate of the

may be gathered from the fact that it penetrated the brick walls and tin lined doors separating the EXAMINER premises from those of the Peterborough Bookstore on the top flat, as well as in the cellar, and the whole three flats in the latter building had to be flooded with water to prevent fire from breaking out in a dozen places at once. The heavy deluge of course, under the circumstances, was a necessity, but the large stock was damaged thereby to an almost incalculable extent and the loss is placed at about $30,000.

The reserve stock in the second and third storeys was ruined and on the ground floor the water leaked through on the goods, as through a sieve. It even penetrated to the cellar and soaked about 40,000 rolls of wall paper.

The firemen and merchants occupying the adjoining premises fought the fire with most commendable zeal and in many cases risked their lives in endeavouring to save the contents and to prevent the fire from spreading.

ate its way through the skylight and the frame fell in, the flames shot fully forty feet into the air and the heat drove the fireman from the neighbouring roofs for the time being.

By about eight o'clock the fire was well under control although it was some time later before the hose ceased playing on the interior of the building which presents a sadly wrecked appearance to-day.

Royal	$1,500
Guardian	$1,500
Sun Fire	$1,500
Phœnix of Brooklyn	$1,500
Perth	$1,500
Ottawa	$1,500
Connecticut	$1,000
Equity	$1,000
Queen	$1,500

The loss is placed at about $3,000.

The insurance on the stock and plant of the Examiner is distributed amongst the following companies:

Lancashire	$3,000
British American	$2,000
Western	$2,500
London Mutual	$5,500
Royal	$1,000
Hand-in-Hand	$2,000

The loss is estimated at $35,000.

The buildings occupied by the Examiner and the Peterborough Bookstore are owned by the Toronto Savings and Loan Co. They are insured in the British American for $3,000 each, with $600 additional on the fixtures of the Bookstore and $400 on those in the Examiner Office.

REMINISCENCES OF THE WAR.

Captain Barker Will Address The Fortnightly Club.

Capt Barker, of "C" Company; First Canadian Contingent, will give an address at the special meeting of the Fortnightly Club, at the Y.M.C.A. Hall, next Monday evening. Captain Barker will be remembered in Peterborough on the occasion of the returning contingent being entertained here last fall. He was through the most stirring scenes of the South African campaign, and at the great event of Paardeberg, where he and the gallant Canadians specially distinguished themselves He can say of these scenes, with old Æneas, "Et quorum pars magna fui," and, therefore, his address will, in addition to the intrinsic interest of the subject dealt with, receive additional interest from the personal association of the lecturer with the stirring events dealt with. A warm welcome will be extended to all the friends of the members of the Club.

IN HOCKEY CIRCLES.

FENELON FALLS DEFEATS THE NORWOOD TEAM.

Peterborough Colts Turn Down the Excelsiors of Toronto by a Record Score—Other Items.

At Lindsay last night the final game in the Trent Valley Hockey League series was played between Fenelon Falls and Norwood, resulting in favour of the men from the north by four goals to five. The game was witnessed by an immense crowd, including between 150 and 200 residents of the Falls, who came down by special train. The match was a fast, clean exhibition of hockey, and at no stage of the game was it easy to pick the winners.

The score at half time stood 3-2 in favour of the Norwood men.

Campbellford will, in accordance with the decision of the Executive, play Fenelon Falls in the latter town on Wednesday night, but it is not likely that they will have any chance of capturing the trophy. Mr. Eraie Watson refereed the game and, of course, with his usual satisfaction.

The Excelsiors, of Toronto, champions of the Toronto City League came to town yesterday evening to play hockey with what was understood by the local club to be the Junior Colts. However, the Excelsiors became indignant when they learned that it was the Kindergartens they were to play, and demanded a game with the Colts, the junior champions of the O.H.A. This was readily given, as well as a "licking" of 42 goals to 2. Wouldn't this scald you? 'Nuff said.

The Globe says that Manager McPherson, of the Peterboroughs, is trying to arrange a game between the Colts and the St. George's.

Yes, Capt. Cavanah would like to carry another scalp in his belt before the season breaks up.

Messrs. E. O. Bradburn, Walter English and E. S. Clarry went up to Lindsay last night to see the Fenelon Falls-Norwood game.

Will the team of young ladies that challenged the jewellers please communicate with the secretary of the latter organization?

The A. H. Stratton Cup had a close call last night—not at Lindsay, but at The Examiner office

The Dubbs last night defeated the Pig Iron Tigers in a hotly contested game by a score of 6 to 4. The match is said to have been the fiercest of the series of scratch matches that have been played this season. Manager Burnham's aggregation died very game, but are now out of the running for the city championship. The teams were as follows:—

The Pig Irons had on their regular team.

THE LATE ROLLAND IRWIN.

A Prominent Young Man Passes Away

The death occurred at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon of Rolland C. Irwin, son of Mr. Thomas Irwin, Stewart street. Deceased was 25 years of age and for the past 8 months has been ailing with a chronic disease whose character prevented any hope for his recovery. He was a young man of exemplary habits and a general favourite with all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance. He had for three years previous to last June been in the employ of Mr. J. D. Tully's drug store. The funeral will take place on Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock to Little Lake Cemetery.

A person that has lost appetite has lost something besides—vitality, vigor, tone.

The way to recover appetite and all that goes with it is to take Hood's Sarsaparilla—that strengthens the stomach, perfects digestion and makes eating a pleasure.

Thousands take it for spring loss of appetite, and everybody says there's nothing else so good as Hood's.

A GREAT MAUSOLEUM

WHERE QUEEN VICTORIA LIES BESIDE BELOVED PRINCE CONSORT.

The Late Queen's Loving Inscription in Latin Over the Entrance to the Tomb Wherein Her Beloved Has Lain Awaiting Her For Nearly Forty Years—United at Last in Most Ideal Surroundings.

In this day of England's sorrow thoughts will turn to the quiet, secluded garden at Frogmore, in Windsor Great Park, where the ashes of the late Prince Consort lie in the great mausoleum. It is here, by the side of her ever-mourned husband, that the Queen was laid to rest. Nearly forty years ago, when Her Majesty selected the spot on which to rear the beautiful tomb for Prince Albert's mortal part, she resolved that when for herself had also come the end of earthly things she should share with him its eternal repose. Over the entrance to the mausoleum, which stands within a stonethrow of that wherein lie the remains of the late Queen's mother, Her Majesty caused to be set up in Latin the following tender and loving inscription:

"His mourning widow, Victoria the Queen, directed that all that is mortal of Prince Albert be placed in this sepulchre, A. D. 1862. Farewell, well-beloved. Here, at last, I will rest with thee; with thee in Christ I will rise again."

When her mortal remains were borne into the magnificent mausoleum it seemed as if the late Queen were coming home at last to rest. During all the long, lonely years of her widowhood, when in residence at Windsor, Her Majesty made daily pilgrimages to her husband's tomb, and no place in all the fair domain round her Berkshire home was so dear or more familiar. And, indeed, it is a fitting resting place for even the greatest of England's sovereigns.

MAUSOLEUM AT FROGMORE.

Situated among the lovely scenery of the Frogmore Gardens, the stately tomb is placed amid ideal surroundings. When the Prince Consort was lying dead in Windsor Castle, the late Queen, leaning on the arm of Princess Alice, walked through the grounds to choose the place where the dear dead should lie. Close by her mother's tomb the late Queen selected the spot where Prince Albert and she herself also, should be interred. On that site she built what is one of the most sumptuous buildings of its kind and size in Europe. Familiar as many of Her Majesty's subjects, and numerous subjects of foreign states, are with the stately royal residences of England, very few, comparatively, have seen the interior of the royal mausoleum at Frogmore. Upon only one day in the year was it permitted for strangers to enter the precincts and even then the privilege was confined to residents of Windsor and the vicinity, and a few others who were granted permission by special favor. The only occasion upon which the rule was relaxed was the memorial service held upon each anniversary of the death of the Prince Consort.

In outward appearance the mausoleum has something of the character of an ancient tomb at Ravenna. It stands on high brick vaults, to raise it somewhat above the damp soil on which it is built, for Frogmore, as the name implies, was at some period a swamp or marsh. There is a central chamber, with four trancepts, making the whole monument into a cruciform chapel. The exterior, to the height of ten or eleven feet, is faced with Peterhead granite, and polished granite is also largely used in other places. Externally the building is about 80 feet long by 70 feet wide, and its extreme height from the ground level to the top of the cross is 83 feet. It was constructed by Prof. L. Gruner and Mr. A. J. Humbert. The late Queen laid the foundation stone in March, 1862. Inscribed on the stone are the following words:

"The foundation stone of this building, erected by Queen Victoria in pious remembrance of her great and good husband, was laid by her on the 15th day of March, A. D. 1862. 'Blessed are they that sleep in the Lord.'"

The building was sufficiently complete to receive the remains of the late Prince Consort on Dec. 18, in the same year. It was consecrated on the previous day by the Bishop of Oxford, in the presence of the late Queen and the members of her family and household. On the morning of Dec. 18, at 7 o'clock, the coffin containing the body of Her Majesty's late husband was removed from the entrance to the royal vault in St. George's Chapel, where it had been placed on his death a year before, and deposited in a temporary sarcophagus in the new mausoleum. It was not until Nov. 26, 1868, that the central chamber was completed, and the coffin was finally laid in the great gray granite sarcophagus, in which the late Queen's coffin was also placed. Prince Albert's coffin lies on the south side, and that of His august consort occupies the northern side of the sarcophagus.

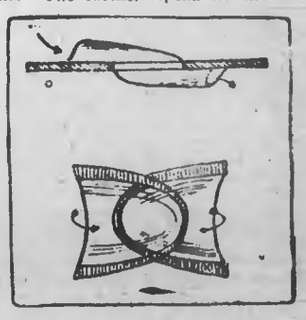
The chamber in which the sarcophagus stands is a magnificent example of brilliant and tasteful decoration. A porch, forming one of the transepts leads into it. The ceiling of the porch is of Venetian mosaics, and the interior beyond is a rich combination of color and artistic effect. The floor is of inlaid marble, and the walls are covered with marble panelling of varying and beautiful design. There are bas-reliefs, urns, statues, frescoes and paintings of scenes and incidents in Scripture history, with appropriate inscriptions in English and German. The chancel, as the central chamber may be called, is lighted by windows in the octagonal lantern surrounding the domed roof. It is entered from the porch through beautiful brass gates of exquisite workmanship. The ceiling is covered with a fresco, painted from a sketch by the Crown Princess of Germany, representing the glorification of the saints. On the ceilings of the transepts are painted representations of the Annunciation, the Ascension and of the Redeemer bearing His Cross. A large painting of the Nativity (after Raphael) covers the south wall. On the west wall is a symbolical picture of the Resurrection, and on the north wall is a representation of the Crucifixion. Statues of David, Isaiah, Daniel and Solomon, each with appropriate texts of Scripture, occupy the niches of the pillars, and above the entrance is a fine allegorical painting representing Virtue, Prudence and Temperance.

The centre of the mausoleum is dome-shaped, and is entered from the transepts through lofty arches, in each of which hang bronze and gold lamps of most elegant design, presented by the Prince of Wales. Above the central chamber the dome has a ceiling of blue, spangled with golden stars, and the ribs of the dome, also enriched with gold, are supported by golden angels. The lantern is filled with stained glass, in which are cherubs holding wreaths of immortelles. Beneath the centre of the dome stands the massive sarcophagus of highly-polished dark-grey Aberdeen granite, raised upon a plith of polished black marble, the gift of Leopold I., King of the Belgians. Bronze figures of kneeling angels are at each corner of the sarcophagus, with wings stretched backwards. The sarcophagus is double, the empty half being, as already mentioned, the receptacle of Her Majesty's remains. On the top of the sarcophagus is a recumbent figure, beautifully executed by Baron Marochetti, in pure white marble, representing Prince Albert clad in his Field Marshal's uniform and wearing the robes and insignia of the Most Noble Order of the Garter. The Prince's name and titles are inscribed on the sides of the sarcophagus in letters of gold. Altogether the mausoleum is a most gorgeous and magnificent structure.

Within its walls are erected cenotaphs in memory of the Grand Duchess of Hesse and the Duke of Albany, two of the Queen's children who are interred elsewhere. That of the Grand Duchess form a very touching group. It represents Princess Alice lying as if asleep, with the child, in attempting to save whose life she lost her own, lying in the hollow of her arm. Surrounding the mausoleum are a number of magnificent trees, most of which have been planted by royal hands. The whole of the grounds around the beautiful building are enclosed by an iron railing, which protects the enclosure from idle sightseers. A handsome entrance leads into the enclosure. It consists of a canopy of classic design, supported on lofty granite pillars. But when all is said of the stately design, and the ornate embellishments of cunning workmanship, the spot which appeals most strongly to British hearts to-day is the place by Prince Albert's side, which, alas! is now filled, and the long, long years of separation are ended by the reunion which shall know no ending.

French Hygienic Window.

The accompanying figures show a new hygienic window pane being introduced in France. It is the invention of Dr. Legrand, and is a perfect ventilator. As will be seen from the illustrations it is perforated and provided with channels, of which there are two—one outside and one inside. The former opens at the bottom and the latter at the top. The fresh air enters as is shown by the arrow, and replaces the warm air, which escapes in the opposite direction. This window pane is put in exactly like an ordinary one, in the upper part of a window sash, and does not interfere with the light.



VENTILATION WITHOUT DRAUGHT.

All She Asked For.

She—To live with you, dear George, on a desert land—to be always near you—that would be my great joy henceforth.

He—You dear girl! And that is really all you ask for?

She—Yes. If there is one other thing I should like when we're married it is that you will take a box at the opera for the season. Will you, George, dear?—Pick-Me-Up.

RUSSIAN MANCHURIA.

Latter's Russification Going on Says German Correspondent.

TRUTH HAS NOT ALL BEEN TOLD.

Facts Which Bear Testimony to the Internal Administration of That Part of China by Russia—German Officials Admit Pekin Negotiations Are at a Standstill Through the Manchuria Incident.

Berlin, March 11.—The Tageblatt's special correspondent, who has been traveling in Northern Manchuria, Mongolia, and the borders of Siberia and China for a year, and whose reports hitherto have been correct without exception, has furnished his paper with a long letter, published on Saturday, containing interesting details regarding the Russo-Chinese agreement on the subject of Manchuria, Mongolia and Turkestan.

He says he is absolutely certain that the published version of this agreement is in no way near the actual truth. He then proceeds to give facts concerning the proposed internal administration of that part of China, demonstrating that Manchuria will become an integral part of Russia, more so than even Bokhara.

In regard to Mongolia, he says there is no doubt a protectorate has been established, as this is evidenced by the hoisting of Russian flags everywhere, the thorough organization of the district, the establishment of tax collecting offices, and the opening of branches of Russo-Chinese banks, with no one but Russian officials in charge. All this, virtually, has taken place during the past six months and began before the outbreak.

German Government circles have no information concerning the Russo-Chinese agreement, a version of which is furnished by the correspondent of The Berliner Tageblatt, and it is insisted that the present treaty is of recent origin, and has not yet been signed by China. Officials admit that the negotiations at Pekin were brought to a standstill through the Manchuria incident.

Russian Railroads in China.

San Francisco, March 10.—Prince Engalitschiffe, who is here from China, en route to St. Petersburg, as a representative of M. De Witte, the Russian Minister of Finance, and confidential agent of Adolph Rothstein, a leading financier and railway promoter of Russia, it is said, will convey to the Russian Secretary of Railway and Communication, final surveys of new Russian lines in China, which are to be operated in connection with the trans-Siberian and the Chinese Eastern, or Manchuria Railroad.

Prince M. Engalitschiffe, who is well-known in this country, was assigned to represent the Russian Government on the staff of Count Waldersee in China, and is now returning to his home.

LI HUNG CHANG SICK.

How He and Prince Ching Try to Jolly the Foreign Court.

Pekin, March 10.—Li Hung Chang is again seriously ill, and his physician says his life hangs by a thread.

Prince Ching and Earl Li seem to think that by spreading rumors of the court's unwillingness to return to Pekin, unless this or that thing is done, they can influence the deliberations of the Ministers of the powers. As a matter of fact, according to reliable reports from Sianfu, the Imperial personages are extremely uncomfortable at Sianfu, where they live in the house of the Governor, which is only a small structure. French missionaries, who have just returned here from Sianfu, believe the Empress-Dowager would bring the court back to Pekin on the first offer of the allies, having as a basis the removal of the troops, except the legation guards. The foreign envoys will not hold a general meeting until Tuesday, owing to the absence of M. Pichon, French Ambassador, at Pao Ting Fu.

The United States Signal Corps will be ready to leave in a week, according to instructions. No transport has been announced, however.

Asks Powers to Help.

London, March 11.—Liu Kun Yi, the Viceroy of Nankin, has appealed to Great Britain, Japan and the United States, according to the Shanghai correspondent of The Daily Express, to assist China to resist Russia's designs in Manchuria.

Germans Stormed a Gate.

Berlin, March 11.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Count Von Waldersee. "Pekin, March 10.—Col. Ledebur's column stormed a gate of the Great Wall, 80 miles west of Pao Ting Fu Friday, March 8, capturing four guns."

Tung Fu Hsiang and Tuan.

Shanghai, March 10.—Despatches from Lanchau assert that General Tung Fu Hsiang, with 20,000 men, and Prince Tuan, with 10,000 men, are at Ning Hsu, prepared to resist arrest. The China Gazette announces that Sheng, the Taotai, has memorialized the Throne in favor of the abolition of the Likin duties, and that all the Viceroys and Governors support him.

An Ominous Move.

London, March 11.—"The Japanese battleship Hatsuse, just completed in England, has been ordered to proceed hither with all possible speed," says the Yokohama correspondent of The Daily Mail.

The Situation Is Gloomy.

London, March 11.—"It is not likely that the powers will oppose the schemes of Russia," says the Pekin correspondent of The Morning Post, wiring Saturday. "The situation is regarded as very gloomy."

A SUNDAY SHOOTING.

Shocking Tragedy in the Nova Scotian Country Near Shubenacadie.

Halifax, N. S., March 11. — Word was received here last night of a shocking tragedy, which occurred near Shubenacadie, about noon yesterday. For some time a grudge existed between the Lantz brothers and two young men named David Emack and Melrose Ettinger. Threats had been made, and as a result the parties armed themselves with revolvers for protection. Saturday as three Lantz brothers were returning from attending service at the English Church, Emack and Ettinger laid in wait, and an encounter took place on Indian road, five miles from Shubenacadie. In the fight the younger of the Lantz brothers, who is about 22, drew a revolver, and fired at his assailants, Emack and Ettinger, who also had revolvers, began shooting, and in all about 25 shots were fired. Emack was wounded in the stomach, three shots taking effect. Ettinger was also wounded, and one of the Lantz brothers, the youngest, was shot in the hip. The other two returned to Shubenacadie to surrender themselves up to the officers of the law. The wounded men were taken to the house of Samuel Noble, and Drs. Salter of Shubenacadie, and Pratt of Stewiacke were soon in attendance. They found the condition of Emack serious, and it is not expected that he will recover. All concerned are single men.

LOST WITH A CREW OF FOURTEEN.

Fishing Schooner Commonwealth of Gloucester Given Up by Owners.

Gloucester, Mass., March 11.—The fishing schooner Commonwealth of this port, with a crew of 14 hardy fishermen, which sailed on Jan. 22 on a haddock trip to the Georges, has been given up as lost by her owners, Messrs. James Tarr & Brother. It is believed that she went down during one of the blizzards Friday night, perhaps on the Georges Bank, where she was last sighted by the schooner Horace B. Parker. The captain of the latter schooner states that he left Georges just before a severe gale and that the Commonwealth, or a schooner that looked very much like her, was on the banks at the time. He thinks that she was caught there in the gale and went down. The Commonwealth was commanded by Captain Oliver Olsen of this city, single, 38 years old, and a native of Norway. The rest of the crew were Scandinavians, and none of them were married.

Canadian Team Will Compete.

New York, March 11.—A special meeting of the Board of Directors of the National Rifle Association was held at the Garden Saturday night. This was the first meeting held since invitations had been issued to foreign countries for teams to be sent to the international shooting tournament to be held at Seagirt, N. J., next fall.

Among replies received, Secretary Lieut. Albert S. Jones read a letter from Adjutant-General Evelyn Wood from London, in which he stated that by direction of the Secretary of State for War he was requested to send thanks for the invitation and regret at not being able to accept it this year.

Canada will send a team to the international match this fall, and it is probable also a team will compete from Italy.

The Deal on Again.

New York, March 11.—It is stated on reliable authority that the St. Paul deal is on again, though not to the extravagant extent that was so popularly believed some time ago. It is declared, however, that Mr. Hill, on behalf of the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific interests, and acting with the co-operation of J. P. Morgan, has made fresh advances to St. Paul officials. He is now prepared to concede all these officials demanded some weeks ago. This, it is said, was to assure to the St. Paul a 7 per cent. dividend guarantee for five years, and 8 per cent. thereafter, figures that, at the time, Mr. Hill considered too high.

Four Dead, Twenty Injured.

Will's Point, Texas, March 11.—At 11 o'clock Saturday morning a cyclone passed through the west side of this town, demolishing everything in its track. Four people are dead and about twenty injured. Fourteen dwelling houses are entirely ruined, and a number of others are badly wrecked. The Public School building is a total loss. Several of the injured are expected to die.

BOTHA'S SURRENDER.

Expected That Boer Commandant Will Lay Down Arms.

GEN. DEWET'S LATEST ESCAPE.

In His Own Campaigning Ground Once More He Is Moving West of Bloemfontein Towards Kroonstad—Boers' Bad Mistake Which Cost Them 40 Lives—The Strathconas in Montreal.

London, March 11.—Advices from two great South African financial houses confirm the press intelligence that Lord Kitchener and Gen. Botha have been in negotiation for six days. Peace, or at least, a long step towards the end of the war, is looked for this week.

The War Office Saturday night declined to contribute to the great expectations, which include, according to some, the making of a formal submission by Botha on Monday, when his force will surrender to French.

According to version as to what is going on, there is one, with some official countenance, that the Government is offering Botha far more liberal terms than the Parliamentary declarations have given any idea of.

The only thing limiting these cheerful speculations is the fact that Delarey, Dewet and Steyn, regardless of what happens on Gun Hill, will continue to wage guerilla warfare.

DEWET'S LATEST ESCAPE.

He Is Now Moving West of Bloemfontein Towards Kroonstad.

London, March 11. — The Times publishes the following despatch from Aasvogelkelp, March 9: "Gen. Dewet has escaped northward by a forced march, with 400 men. His objective is believed to be the vicinity of Kroonstad.

"Four other Boer leaders are still in the southeastern part of the Orange River Colony.

"Now that Gen. Dewet is back in his own country, it will be almost impossible to operate against him. Just as soon as he is pressed, his commando dissolves, to meet again a few days later. Only a few bands of Boers are now left in Cape Colony."

Boers For Lisbon.

Lorenzo Marquez, March 9.—The Portuguese transport Zaire sailed for Lisbon to-day, having on board 103 Boer families, including those of ex-Auditor-General Maris and Commandant De Kook.

Boers Lost Forty.

London, March 11.—A special despatch from Cape Town, dated March 8, says the Boers lost 40 killed in an engagement with an armored train near Rooengate. They mistook the train for one loaded with horses and allowed it to come within range, whereupon fire was opened from the train, and the Boers fled, some of them abandoning their rifles.

Meddlers Met in Paris.

Paris, March 11.—The first meeting of delegates from the European powers and the United States who were called to meet here for the purpose of urging a conclusion of the Boer war, was held on Saturday. It is the purpose of the delegates to draft an appeal to Great Britain urging that country to stop the war and grant autonomy to the two South African Republics. Senator Pauliat presided at Saturday's meeting.

STRATHCONAS IN MONTREAL.

Reached There Sunday and Met With a Fine Reception.

Montreal, March 11.—Col. Steele and his gallant Strathconas arrived here yesterday morning at 9 o'clock, there being 300 all told. On the way up the corps was temporarily disbanded, or rather relieved from duty for two months. The boys got a fine reception, and most of them proceeded West.

It is stated here that Lord Strathcona presented Col. Steele with a cheque for $20,000, while in London, as the Canadian High Commissioner is greatly pleased at the colonel's record at the front.

Col. Steele will return to South Africa as second in command under Major-General Baden-Powell.

The Montreal contingent, numbering 44 men, left at noon yesterday for Halifax, by the Maritime Express.

Khaki Sunday at Ottawa.

Ottawa, March 11.—Yesterday was a veritable khaki Sunday in the Capital. Most of the 800 recruits for the South African Constabulary were in town on leave, and on the arrival of the Strathconas in the afternoon, the streets were thickly sprinkled with men in uniform. Seventy-five of the Strathconas, under Major Belcher, constituted the contingent which came on here to remain a couple of days. Lieut.-Col. Steele is expected in Ottawa to-day. He will not go to South Africa with the 1,000 men now being raised in Canada, but will recruit another 1,000 shortly to form the constabulary division of the Pietersburg district.

Will Buy Canadian Horses.

Montreal, March 11.—Mr. G. M. Bosworth, freight traffic manager of the C. P. R., has received cable advices from London to the effect that Lord Strathcona has completed arrangements with the Imperial Government to send to Canada an officer of the War Office, to purchase horses for South Africa. The number required is from 1,500 to 2,000.

The Dowager Empress Better.

Berlin, March 11.—The Dowager Empress Frederick continues in fairly good health, driving out in the park daily.

BEET SUGAR AND BUTTER.

Farmers of Ontario County Gather at Whitby to Hear Address.

Whitby, March 11.—Beet sugar and butter making were subjects dealt with by a large and representative meeting in the Music Hall here on Saturday afternoon of South Ontario farmers, under the auspices of the Whitby Board of Trade. Mayor Ross presided. Prof. Dean of Ontario Agricultural College discussed dairying with especial concern for the creamery as a profitable business for Whitby to encourage.

Beet sugar was treated of with absorbing interest to the several hundred farmers by Dr. Shuttleworth, who investigated this great agricultural industry in Germany, and last year conducted for the Government the tests at Aylmer, Welland and Newmarket in the growth of sugar beets.

Deputy Minister of Agriculture James made figures eloquent to show that such industries as butter-making and beet sugar were better than discovering a gold mine would be to a farmer country like Ontario County.

Hon. John Dryden also addressed the meeting and made a proposition to have tests conducted by the Department of Agriculture throughout this section of the country.

A resolution, moved by F. H. Annes, seconded by J. H. Long, was adopted appointing a large committee representing Ontario County and contiguous municipalities of adjoining counties of York, Simcoe, Durham and Victoria, to take such steps in organizing the farmers as will lead to successfully interesting capitalists in these, some of the finest farming lands of the province, as a field for the establishment of beet sugar industry.

WILL NOT ACCEPT.

British Government Wishes a New Arrangement re Treaty.

London, March 11.—The reply of the British Government to the note, conveying the amendments of the United States Senate to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, should be formally delivered by the British Ambassador at Washington to Secretary Hay within a few days.

The Foreign Office here did not originally contemplate delaying the British reply until now. The plan appears to have been to transmit the answer previous to the date on which the treaty lapsed. This, according to the British view of the case, would have put the onus of its lapsing on the Senate. The main object of the British Government throughout has been to make an entirely new arrangement. At no stage of the proceedings has there been any inclination to accept the Senate's amendments.

New Proposals re Treaty.

New York, March 11.—According to a Washington special to The Herald, Secretary Hay has received advices that Lord Pauncefote will submit proposals for the revival of the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty and for harmonizing the points of difference between the United States Senate and the British Government.

HIS MOTHER'S CANE.

King Edward Rewards Faithful Service in a Novel Way.

London, March 11.—The King has bestowed an unusual token of recognition of services upon Sir Ponsonby-Fane, a life-long officer of Queen Victoria's household. The recipient of the King's favor, who is broken down by old age, and is retiring to private life, was summoned to Marlborough House, where the King, in a few simple phrases of thanks for his loyalty to his mother, presented him with the cane with which Queen Victoria walked for 30 years. The old man's relatives say that if the King had raised him to a Dukedom he could not so have kindled his pride or touched his heart.

Buffalo Bill Wants Him.

Ottawa, March 11.—Sergt. James Curzon, who made a reputation in South Africa as an expert driver, has received a tempting offer from Col. Cody, better known as Buffalo Bill, to sign a contract to give exhibitions of his skill in driving guns. Sergt. Curzon is considering the offer. The returned soldier was mentioned particularly by his superiors in South Africa for his coolness and skill in handling his horses when in action.

NATURAL GAS LEASE.

Ontario Government Considering Question of Cancellation.

ALL THE PARTIES TO BE HEARD.

People of Essex County Urged the Government to Adopt Drastic Measures—3,000,000,000 Feet Said to Be Pumped Annually Into the United States—Detroit Gas Attorney Asks for Time.

Toronto, March 11.—The question of renewing the lease of the Detroit River bed to the Improvement & Construction Company, which pumps natural gas to the American side of the boundary, is now under consideration by the Ontario Government.

No decision, however, will be reached until the Government has heard the argument of interested parties.

Mr. W. C. Kennedy, Secretary of the United Oil & Gas Company, which works in conjunction with the Improvement Company, has already interviewed the Government on the question, and it is expected that Mr. J. C. Donnelly of Detroit, solicitor of the companies, will do so this week.

Messrs Auld and McKee, the representatives in the Local House for the County of Essex, have strongly urged upon the Government the requests of a large number of the residents of the district, that the lease, which expires this summer, shall not be renewed. They point out that at Windsor, Leamington, Walkerville, Kingsville and several other places the supply of gas is so low that local interests cannot be adequately served so long as such large quantities, claimed by some to reach three billion feet per annum, are pumped over to the American side.

On the other hand, the companies mentioned have spent large amounts, said to reach at least $1,000,000, for the many thousands of feet of pipe and other works in connection with the industry, and they protest most strongly against any proposition to refuse a renewal of the lease. Such a course, they contend, would result in a heavy loss to them, as their pipes and other works would simply be so much useless iron and material. It is thought that a decision will be reached in the course of a week or ten days.

The Ontario Government cannot, of course, interfere with "trade and industry," which are under the jurisdiction of the Dominion authorities, by prohibiting the export of natural gas, but as the only way of exporting it is over the territory leased by the Ontario Government the refusal to renew the lease would stop exportation as effectually as a Privy Council order.

Detroit, March 11.—J. C. Donnelly, attorney for the Detroit Gas Company, has telegraphed Premier Ross to stay further action on natural gas export prohibition until the company can have a hearing.

NO COAL STRIKE THIS YEAR.

Operators and Miners in the Anthracite Region Have Settled.

Hazelton, Pa., March 11.—Danger of another general strike in the anthracite coal fields seems to have vanished. The miners of the three anthracite districts at the convention to be held here next week will doubtless accept the offer made on Saturday by many of the coal companies to continue the present wage scale for the ensuing year. No joint conference will take place, so far as present indications go, and the only question that may cause discussion will be the refusal of the companies to recognize the union.

This Clinches It.

Altoona, Pa., March 11. — After devoting the entire day to secret session, at which the operators' ultimatum of 60c a ton and a nine-hour day was being considered, the coal miners on Saturday night decided to accept the terms offered, the deadlock was broken, and the convention came to an agreeable conclusion. Although the scale is the same as that of last year, the result was obtained by compromise, as the operators first offered only 55 cents a ton, while the miners strenuously insisted on an eight-hour day.

Frightful Accident at Lindsay.

Lindsay, March 11.—A frightful accident happened here Saturday morning to the third son of Mr. A. B. Terry, confectioner. It appears the boy, 10 years of age, was with his brother on the roof of his father's store, a two-storey building, shovelling the fresh snow off, when, by some unknown means, he fell headlong to the stone pavement at his father's feet, who was at the time standing on the sidewalk. The lad fell 30 feet, and sustained a fracture of the skull and jaw, and both arms were broken.

New Coal Land Rules.

Ottawa, March 11.—New regulations respecting the disposal of coal lands in Manitoba, the Territories and British Columbia have been made. They provide that lands containing anthracite coal may be sold at an upset price of $20 per acre, and coal other than anthracite at an upset price of $10 per acre, or may be sold by public competition, if the Minister of the Interior shall so decide.

Plague at Cape Town.

Cape Town, March 11.—The official reports regarding the progress of the bubonic plague in Cape Town show a total of 22 deaths and 102 cases.

The printing office of the Peterboro Examiner, owned by Hon. J. R. Stratton, Provincial Treasurer, was completely gutted by fire on Saturday. The loss to the plant will be $30,000; insured for $16,000.

China and Japan.

Two of the greatest literary productions of the Chinese are a dictionary of 5,020 volumes and an encyclopedia in 22,987 volumes.

U. S. Consul General Williams states that Hong Kong is no place for motor carriages. There are only three carriages of any kind in the entire city.

Robbing graves is the only crime under Chinese law for which the thief may be justly killed on the spot by anyone finding him out.

The Chinese never wear wool—not even in the depth of winter, and, generally speaking, the entire population clothe themselves in cotton all the year round.

In Japan the stranger wonders at the crowded appearance of the tombstones in cemeteries. It is the custom to bury the dead in a sitting posture. The coffins are nearly square and it is possible to bury more of them in a given space than of the oblong caskets.

No Co-Operation at Revelstoke.

Revelstoke, B. C., March 11.—At a special meeting of the Revelstoke Board of Trade, convened to consider the invitation of the Associated Boards to co-operate with them in sending a delegation to urge the Government to support the charter for the road connecting the Crow's Nest coal fields with the Great Northern, the board resolved to decline to co-operate in the matter.

Death of Dr. Macdonald.

Hamilton, Ont., March 11. — Dr. J. D. MacDonald, the oldest physician in the city, died yesterday at his residence here. He was 82 years of age, and had resided here over 40 years. For many years he was chairman of the Provincial Board of Health. He was a native of Scotland.

Railway Smash in Belgium.

Brussels, March 11.—A serious railway accident occurred yesterday at Heolue, near Courrai, Belgium. A passenger train, going at full speed, struck a freight train. The engineer of the former train and two passengers were killed, and many others were dangerously injured.

Naturalized Japs Can Vote.

Vancouver, B. C., March 11.—The full court on Saturday upheld the decision of Chief Justice McColl in the case of the Provincial Elections Act. The decision is that the naturalized Japanese British subjects can vote.

BOMBAY IN A FERMENT.

Two Sects of Mohammedans Slaughtered Eached Other Outside a Mosque.

Bombay, March 11.—The city is in a ferment, and the Mohammadans are rioting. Aga Khan, chief of the Thojas, a sect of Mussulmen, arrived on Saturday. Coincident with his arrival a portion of his followers seceded. The fanatics attacked the Secedars outside the Mosque, and, as a result, two persons are dead and several wounded.

Mutiny on Camperdown.

New York, March 11.—Sunday plum duff aboard the Camperdown for dinner and station house tea and rye bread for supper were the rations served to many members of the crew of the British tramp steamship Camperdown yesterday. The Camperdown, while on a voyage from Cuba to New York, grounded on Cape Lookout shoals, off the North Carolina coast, on March 4. She was gotten off two days afterward without assistance or difficulty and apparently uninjured. When Captain Smith gave orders for the steamer to proceed to her destination, part of her crew mutined, refusing to obey the order to proceed, but offered no violence. According to Captain Smith's intrepretation of the law, refusal to obey orders constitutes mutiny. The British Consul was notified yesterday afternoon that the men were locked up in the Church street station, and it is probable that they will be taken before a United States Commissioner to-day. The Camperdown remained at anchor.

Railroad Contractor Dead.

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 11.—Mr. Henry C. Symmes, the well-known ex-railroad contractor, died at his residence in the village of Drummondville at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, surrounded by his wife and family. Mr. Symmes for years was the senior partner of the well-known Canadian railway contractors, Dawson, Mitchell, Symmes & Co. Among their large railway contracts was the Pacific Junction Railway, which they built from Gravenhurst to North Bay.

VACCINATION.

Dr. Bingham, medical health officer, has issued a word of warning in connection with the necessity of vaccination, and in this connection it is apparent that vastly different views exist amongst the citizens as to the theory and value of the operation.

It is held, an exchange says, that vaccination as ordinarily practised does not always secure immunity from attack of smallpox. It is true that even as ordinarily understood and followed it is a prophylatic measure of utility, and should a person recently successfully vaccinated be attacked by the disease the chances are that the attack would be very light.

It does not follow that because the vaccine fails to "take" on a subject that subject is an immune; often after several failures the virus takes hold "virulently," and the subject is almost as sick as with variola.

It is not true that vaccination is unattended with danger; there is always danger connected with it, and the greatest of care should be used in regard thereto. It is for this reason Government prescribes regulations to secure pure vaccine. Impure lymph may carry germs of worse diseases than smallpox, even if direct blood-poisoning do not result. Lymph should never be carried about from family to family, the contents of the vesicle from one child—probably with disease in its system—being used to inoculate others, as used to be done. Properly prepared points or glycerated tubes are always obtainable.

There is danger after inoculation; and it should not be minimized. Parents should be warned to have the vaccinated part protected from injury and exposure, and to consult a physician if morbid local or constitutional symptoms develop.

No child in feeble health, or suffering from specific disease, should be vaccinated, save as a last resort. It is here that the worst evil of a compulsory system comes in. The best thing to be done is for parents to consult their own physician as to the operation.

The plan used in the Russian army, which has at times in the far past suffered terribly by smallpox, is to vaccinate on enlistment. As soon as the sore is healed the recruit is revaccinated. This is repeated as long as the virus will have any effect. After repeated failures to get results the soldier is regarded as immune for three years. The theory is that the subject who suffers severely from vaccination would be apt to succumb to a smallpox attack

But modern systems of sanitation, quarantine and disinfection have done much to lessen the fear of smallpox. It is to day far less fatal than grippe, pneumonia, Bright's disease, consumption and diphtheria. Its worst feature is the ease with which it may be spread. And against that danger vaccination offers a large degree of protection, and should not be neglected.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mr. McKinley used the personal pronoun "I" nine times in his inaugural address; the personal pronoun "we" twenty-four times; the personal pronoun "me" four times; the possessive pronoun "my" four times, and the possessive pronoun "our" sixteen times. It is figured that had he had the same opportunity, Sir Charles Tupper could have beaten that record into infinitesimal fragments.

In the notices issued for the annual meeting of the Peterborough Board of Trade which is to be held on Tuesday evening next, it is stated that the beet root sugar industry is to be discussed. This district seems to be peculiarly adapted for beet raising in many particulars. A report from one place in Michigan, where sugar beets are the farmers' best money crop, states that Poles are employed to do a large part of the work of cultivation, and that women were paid $1.00 per day for topping the beets. The industry had proved a boon to unskilled labour, the farmers obtained a good profit and there was resultant activity in many trades, such as wagon-making. One pre-requisite of success is that the soil shall be well adapted for the production of beets. The best soil is sandy loam, with a clay sub-soil, in which is found a little limestone.

CHILDREN AND TOYS.

PLAYTHINGS MAY BE TOO BEAUTIFUL AND TOO TRUE TO NATURE.

Children Do Not Care For Naturalistic Toys—The Horse, the Doll and Such Things Should Leave Something to the Imagination.

The other day when I was staying under the roof which had obligingly sheltered Audrey until she left it in a shower of rice, she conducted me to the nursery, where, as she said, her happiest days, had been spent. As to the happiest days, I did not believe in them a bit and told her so. Personally I look back upon my nursery experience with more horror than delight. It bulked huge with ghosts, mysteries of closed doors, portentous wailings. Until the clock chimed midnight I was subject to the powers of darkness. After that no specter could have convinced me of its reality.

There was a vast locker in the nursery in which Audrey had first acquired her sense of humor, and from this she produced an endless variety of discarded toys. All were more or less damaged, many more were inchoate lumps, from which, after a careful examination, there beamed forth some hint of their original condition. Audrey sat in the midst of piled confusion, with an air of surreptitious happiness. It was as though she said, "This is what I want to do all my life." She hugged in her arms what I conjectured to have once represented a hippopotamus. I ventured to say that it had a harassed and disturbed appearance.

"But it isn't a hippo at all," she cried. "Guess again!"

"I give it up," I said.

"Why, it's a horse!" I shook my head.

"My dear girl, your memory must be at fault. That was never a horse."

"Why, it's a horse now," she said affectionately.

"Well, if it's a horse to you, I suppose it is a horse," I said.

"That's just it!" she cried. "That's exactly what I was saying to you yesterday."

I remembered the discussion. Audrey had been inveighing against modern toys, and I had taken the opposite view. She had asserted that children did not care for naturalistic toys; they left nothing to the imagination. A crude representation of an animal was much dearer to them than an accurate model. They respected the elephant which was just like the real ones they had seen and which wagged its head so realistically, but they did not love it. They didn't want to take it to bed with them. It was the same, she said, with dolls. The beautiful creature dressed up in Sunday clothes never touched their hearts; all their affection was lavished upon some tatterdemalion object over which they could laugh and cry without any sense of incongruity. It was the same, she asserted, with picture books; everything was too accurate.

"But," I said, "would you have them grow up with the wrong models before them?"

"Did it do any harm to your sense of form to have an impossible wooden horse to play with? Of course it didn't. You knew the horse was wrong. You could compare it with a proper horse by just looking out of the window, but the thing with a body like a thick rolling pin left something to your imagination."

"You're a very reactionary young person," I said. "Our modern cult of the child has always seemed to me beautifully right."

"So it is in most ways, but not in the matter of toys. It's just like this: When people go to buy toys—grown up people, I mean—they don't look at them from the child's point of view. They see an artistic piece of modeling, and it appeals to them; therefore they buy it. Now, that's all wrong."

"I must admit that," said I. "You've almost convinced me."

At that point our conversation had been interrupted by the youngest brother, who always manages to tell me in some roundabout way what he particularly wants for a Christmas present. He began to talk about books out of deference to my connection with the writing trade. He didn't want a book, it appeared; partly, I suspect, because he fondly imagines I can get any book for nothing. But there was a new cricket handbook with all about bats in it. He could borrow the handbook from Smithson major. By the way, had he told me that his bat had split clean up the blade? "We shall have to give him a bat, I suppose," Audrey had said. "It's a pity they're so expensive."

Well, as I watched Audrey sitting among that amazing collection of dilapidated toys I became more and more convinced that she was right. At any rate, the child in her was awake again, and she even fell into some of the baby talk which years before had been addressed to the contents of the locker. She bombarded me with beasts. If her aim had been a little less infirm, I might have suffered severely. As it was, I escaped with a wool stuffed zebra in the eye.

"No toy should be given to a young child," she said, "which it can't fling about."

"Lay down a few more rules," I said, warding off a kangaroo.

"No toy should be too beautiful."

"Not even for girls?"

"Least of all for girls," she said, though she didn't mean it.

"Well, go on."

"No toy should be directly educational. It makes a child think that it's being imposed upon."

It was apparently to enforce this statement that the zebra was launched at my head.

"I'm so sorry," said Audrey. "Did it hurt?"

"No toy," I replied severely, "should be hurled at a living target, even by a child like you."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Heretofore the deluded, happy savage had been content to labor only enough to keep body and soul together.

Civilization after having pried her way in with a jimmy was horrified.

Henceforth the savage found life more strenuous. Not only did he have to labor to keep body and soul together, but likewise to keep his clothes together.

This new responsibility plainly hurdened his mind.

GAMBLER AND BANKER.

A Big Jawed Man Who Warned a Crusty Banker About His Cashier.

"Occasionally secret service information comes from an unexpected source, as was the case last year with a New York bank," says S. H. Adams in Ainslee's. "The president of this institution, who is something of a crusty customer, received a call one morning from a gentleman whose principal claim to distinction rested on a preternaturally large and clean shaven jaw overhanging a highly resplendent diamond of indubitable worth. The caller proceeded at once to business, introducing himself as being 'the inside man with Square Mike Smith' (naming a fixed star in the gambling house firmament).

"'You think you don't want to know me,' he continued, pointing a fat finger at the disgusted president's solar plexus, 'but you do. I want to put you on to your cashier.'

"The urbane banker growled out his disinclination to hear anything about his employees, but the visitor only hitched his chair up a foot nearer and imperturbably proceeded.

"'He's up in the place every night, that cash pusher of yours, rolling the bank's shiners across the green.'

"'He's been winning your money, I suppose, and that is why you are here giving information that nobody wants,' sneered the banker.

"'Copper that bet unless you want to go broke,' said the 'sport' quietly.

"'What do you mean by that?'

"'Copper it, I say. You're twisted. He ain't getting our money. We're getting his; his or the bank's.'

"'Do you expect me to believe that you came down here'—

"'Say, I'm busy,' the visitor interrupted, with sudden vigor. 'I know you. You're one of those dead ones that think they know it all. I ain't got the time to hear you tell it. Here's the point. You cashier blows in his dough at our place. That's all right. Then he blows in the bank's dough for a few thou', and what happens? Why, you get on to him, and you make a horrible beef, don't you? And then it all gets into the papers, and the cops has to make a play by closing us for a couple of weeks right in the rush of the season. We want that cashier reeled in.' He got to his feet. 'That's all. Take him away. See? Take him away.'

"And with a sudden violent gesture that would have knocked a fly off the tip of the banker's chin if a presumptuous insect had happened to be there the visitor turned and went, leaving the banker blinking and speechless."

BRILLIANT RICHARD VAUX.

The Only American Who Ever Danced With Queen Victoria.

"Richard, I am told thee has been dancing with the queen. I do hope, my son, thee will not marry out of meeting."

This good, old fashioned Quaker simplicity and distrust of royalty were never better exhibited than in these words of the mother of the late Richard Vaux. They were her first greeting to him on his return home from the court of St. James after his memorable exploit at the court ball in Buckingham palace, when he attained the distinction of being the only American who ever danced with Queen Victoria.

It was in 1837. Mr. Vaux's position as secretary to Mr. Stevenson, United States minister to the court of St. James, was in itself a noteworthy one and brought him at once into social prominence in London, but his exceptional personal attributes, his brilliancy of conversation, charm of person, exquisite manners, elegance of diction and gallantry of carriage made him the beau ideal of a court cavalier and a welcome guest in the houses of the nobility, whence he was received and welcomed with open arms. No one, therefore, was greatly surprised in court circles when it became known that the young queen had singled him out for a signal honor and had commanded that he attended the court ball at Buckingham palace, which was to be given in honor of her coronation.

When, however, the night of the ball arrived, and the "queen's cotillon" set was formed, and the guests beheld Richard Vaux, arrayed in his brilliant court costume, take his place in it, a position that was supposed to be reserved for royalty alone, there was surprise and excitement indeed. Then the music struck up, and the gallant young American threaded his way through the intricacies of the royal dance, bearing himself with an air of grace and confidence that was wonderful to behold. The queen was seen to smile in gracious approval as he took her hand and led her through the evolutions of the dance. And there was not a man present who would not have given a coronet to win so coveted a distinction.

After that Mr. Vaux's career was a series of brilliant social triumphs. In his candidacy for congress in 1890 certain voters in his district resented his having danced with the queen of England and used the fact against him as a reflection on his Democracy.

A Duke's Unconscious Humor.

On a hunting expedition the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar saw a forester whose face seemed familiar to him.

"Are you not a brother of Chief Inspector Schmidt?" asked the duke.

"I am Chief Inspector Schmidt," said the man.

"Ah," said Serenissimus, "that accounts for the resemblance!"

Another time the grand duke was waiting at a small railway station in his tiny realm and addressing two little girls playing near the signal box asked:

"Who is your father?"

"The station master."

"How old are you?"

"I am 5 and my sister 4, Serenissimus."

"How is that possible? Why, the line has only been opened three years!"—Mainly About People.

Drawing It Rather Strong.

Apropos of the servant problem is a story which comes from faroff Tasmania which would seem to show that the millennium has arrived there already, so far at least as women cooks are concerned. There the most incompetent servants can command the best wages and choose their mistresses at that. Recently the cook at a Tasmania hotel who was drawing the not to be despised wage of $10 a week demanded a rise and when refused immediately gave notice. At the end of the week, however, instead of departing with her baggage she merely moved to one of the best apartments in the house, and as there was nothing against her character she could not be turned out. At meal times, the Sydney Bulletin says, she sampled every dish and audibly criticised the cooking—done by the unfortunate landlady herself. This went on for a week. Then flesh and blood could stand it no longer, and the cook moved back to her old room with a raise to $20 a week, twice the former amount.

What His Mother Meant.

"I see now what my old mother meant," said Mr. Newlywed, as he took up a particularly soggy piece of bread.

"What your mother meant?" echoed his wife.

"Yes, what my mother meant. When I used to find fault with the meat or the biscuits, she would shake her head prophetically and say, 'Never mind, my boy, you may see the day when you will be glad to get this.'"

Persons extremely reserved and diffident are like the old enameled watches, which had painted covers that hindered you from seeing what time it was.—Walpole.

Healthful Food.

The person who decides what shall be the food and drink of a family and the modes of its preparation is the one who decides to a greater or less extent what shall be the health of the family. It is the opinion of those who have studied the matter that intemperance in eating is one of the most fruitful of all causes of disease and death.

If this is so, the woman who wisely adapts the food and cooking of her family to the laws of health removes one of the greatest risks which threaten the lives of those under her care.

Different parts of the body require different foods. When the body requires a given kind of diet specially demanded by brain, lungs and muscles, the appetite will crave food for it until the necessary amount of this article is secured.

If the necessary food is not supplied, other food will be taken in larger quantities than needed until that amount is gained.

If food is taken which has not the needful quality, more is taken than the system can use, while the vitality of the body is needlessly taxed to digest it.

The proper digestion of foods depends on the wants of the body and on its power of appropriating the aliment supplied. The best of food cannot be properly digested when not needed.

Overeating is the common curse of mankind, and much sickness would be saved if we were more temperate.

WOMAN AND HOME.

"THE PRETTIEST WOMAN IN AMERICA," SAID THACKERAY.

The Muscular Young Woman—Objected to "My Wife"—How She Caught the Burglar—To Discipline the Child—Bred In the Bone.

Mrs. Charles Godfrey Leland, whom Thackeray called "the prettiest woman in America," was born in Philadelphia in 1831. Her husband is known in the literary world as "Hans Breitmann." Her father was Rodney Fisher, who lived long in China, being one of an English firm. Cæsar Rodney, her great-granduncle, was a signer of the Declaration of Independence. Colonel Thomas Rodney, who led the march from Trenton to Princeton, Jan. 1, 1777, was her great-grandfather.

In her girlhood Mrs. Leland was the rival in beauty of Miss Vinning, known as the Revolutionary belle, who was engaged to marry General Anthony Wayne.

Mrs. Leland was married in Philadelphia in 1856. Thirty years ago she and her husband went abroad and remained 11 years. They returned, but after three years they went back and settled in Florence.

While living in London at different times Mr. and Mrs Leland's home was a center for literary people, and they numbered among their intimate friends such celebrities as George Eliot, Lord Bulwer-Lytton, Froude, the historian; Ruskin, Walter Besant, Max Muller and Wilkie Collins.

The Muscular Young Woman.

Says Dr. Arabella Kenealy: "If you will compare the new muscular young woman with what she was a year or two before she went into the business of field sports and hard training, when she had not as yet hardened herself physically, you will be struck with the contrast. Then her complexion was sensitive and variable. There was a mysterious something about her only to be described as 'charm.' Now she is perhaps a good looking girl. Her complexion is possibly too strong, and her glance is unswerving and direct. She inclines to be and in another year will be distinctly spare. The mechanism of movement is no longer veiled by a certain mystery of motion which gave her formerly an air of gliding rather than of striding from one place to another. In her evening gowns she shows evidence of joints which had been hidden beneath soft flesh, and already her modiste has been put to the necessity of ruffling and plaiting to conceal the growing lack of roundness and fullness. Instead of physical enrichment there is physical impoverishment."

There is a disposition to attribute the increased stature of the new generation of young women to athletics, and this idea is probably correct, to some extent at all events. The added height is in added length of limb mainly, a distinct approach to the masculine type of physique, inasmuch as a woman's legs are normally shorter than those of a man in proportion to her height. Any physiologist will testify that such a gain can come about only at the expense of loss elsewhere, the greater length of limb signifying degeneration of the special feminine organization. One has only to look at the bodily make up of a properly proportioned woman to see that with her large hips and other peculiarities of physique she is not designed by nature for vigorous athletic exercises. Her function is primarily reproductive, and in this respect she soon diminishes her usefulness by the hardening process described. The "hard as nails" girl is a monstrosity. She falls short of being a man and is not in the full sense a woman.

Dr. Kenealy says that she has never known any woman who after two years of athletics has retained any pretension to charm. Certainly the pictures one sees of females who distinguish themselves markedly in contests at outdoor sports, winning prizes and making records, exhibit a deplorable average of homeliness.—Washington Post.

Objected to "My Wife."

"I always hate," said the lady who was twirling her gold bowed glasses, according to the Chicago Times-Herald, "to hear a man refer to the lady whom he has wooed and won as 'my wife.' The man who says 'My wife did this' or 'My wife has gone there' or 'My wife likes so-and-so' has not a proper realization of the lady's importance or the position she should occupy in his household. 'My wife,' indeed! Pouf! In the next breath he speaks of 'my horse' or 'my dog.' I'd like to have such a man for a husband a little while. I think I could teach him a few lessons that would be good for him. When a man has occasion to refer to the lady who lowered herself in accepting his ring at the altar, he should speak of her as 'Mrs. Smith' or 'Mrs. Jones,' as the case may be. I'd like to hear my husband mention me as his wife! I think he would limit himself to just that once."

"And yet," said the little lady with the soft hazel eyes and the rather timid manner, "it seems to me that a man might do worse than speak of her as his wife. When your husband was over at our house night before last, Mrs. Frithington, he and my husband played parlor golf, and I happened to be in an adjoining room for a few minutes, where I could overhear their conversation. I thought it sounded awfully nice when Henry spoke of me as his wife. It just made my heart leap every time I heard the words come from his lips."

"Well, of course, some women are so constituted that they prefer to be regarded as inferior beings, and where a case of that kind exists it may be just as well that the husband does take it for granted that he is her proprietor. But you didn't hear John Frithington refer to me as his wife, I'll venture. I think I have succeeded in coaching him to know his place a little too well for that!"

"No; when he spoke of you, he merely called you 'the old girl.'"

Some of John Frithington's friends seem to think that his wild, hunted look is of late more in evidence than usual.

How She Caught the Burglar.

A rather curious method of burglar catching was resorted to by an ingenious maidservant recently in New York city. As The Electrical Review tells the story, while in pursuit of her household duties the maid noticed a man's foot inside the clothes closet. She did not scream; neither did she jump at the door nor shut it with a bang. Instead she took a broom and began to sweep that corner of the room near the closet. Her approach was gradual, and the sweeping was done so naturally that it would not have aroused the most suspicious burglar. At last the broom brushed the door gently, but hard enough to close it to the fraction of an inch. With five or six more gentle sweeps that closet door was shut and almost latched, which she at length succeeded in doing by gently pressing her arm against it.

As the telephone in her house was so near the closet that the burglar would be able to hear her if she called for assistance she bethought herself of another plan. In the back yard some telephone linemen were at the time making repairs on a wire that runs to another house in the block. She went out and spoke to them. They promptly tapped a wire, attached a testing instrument and called up one of the down town exchanges, which, in turn, got the house owner, who, in his turn, called up police headquarters. From there the call was sent to the police station nearest the house, and two policemen were sent around and got the man.

To Discipline the Child.

A symposium on the subject of parental duties and home discipline appeared in a leading New Zealand newspaper, and the published interview with Dr. Symes gives material for thought.

"The tendency of modern ideas," says Dr. Symes, "has been to abolish any real discipline in family life because discipline depends on the principle of headship in the father, whereas at the present time the mother is often the real head of the family. A father teaches children to obey as a duty, while a mother coaxes them to do what is required by giving them presents. The rule of the father develops respect for law and order, while the mother depends entirely on the persuasion of love.

"It is true that the mother's influence develops sympathies which are the source of all that is most beautiful and attractive in human nature, but unless these sympathies are properly controlled and directed they may lead to disaster. The father's rule is that of the head or judgment; the mother's influence is that of the heart or sympathy.

"If a wife will not support her husband's rule as head of the family, she is not likely to acquire the power to make the children obey her. So that if the mother's influence predominates over the father's rule the children will grow up to do only what they find most agreeable, instead of making obedience to duty the rule of their life."

Bred In the Bone.

Did you ever notice a little girl, 10 or 11 years old, short of skirt, cross a muddy street, wearing an air of importance and "hiking" with he right hand the corner of her outer garment? If you haven't, you can scarcely have paid much attention to street scenes. It would require a psychological explanation to detail the reasons which move these tiny persons to go through such a ludicrous maneuver, but they do go through it, and they will continue to go through it so long as the feminine remains eternal.

To begin with, the dresses of these little girls usually end at the knees, and their knees are so far from the pavement as to make it impossible for the skirt to trail within less than a linear foot of the dust and dirt of the sidewalk. But this consideration has no weight with the little women. They have noted that their elder sisters and other women of their acquaintance invariably elevate the skirt when crossing—and so they follow, not always consciously, the example.

The practice is inborn and as ineradicable as it is amusing. By no stretch of imagination could one picture the short gowns coming in contact with the roadway. But the children don't stop to analyze. They just lift the skirt, gravely cross the street and as gravely lower the garb. Next time you see a little girl going to school watch her movements when she comes to a corner. There will be 60 seconds of amusement for you in the spectacle.—New York Herald.

Egypt's Lovely Khedivah.

The khedive of Egypt is one of the few eastern rulers who have lived in a genuine love story, with the heroine for his wife.

The lovely Ikbal Hanem is of the Circassian race. She was formerly a slave of the vidid (dowager) khedivah, at whose house the then young ruler of Egypt first saw her. As beauty gives rank in the orient, the young slave's condition did not interfere with her advancement. She was courted and won by the dashing young prince and finally formally married to him and raised to the rank of khedivah.

The happy couple model their household after the European fashion. She neither paints nor powders her face, as is the custom of Egyptian women of high rank. She likes European dress and has European servants and governesses for her three daughters. She studies with her children and has an open, inquiring mind.

The khedivah has one of the most sumptuous yachts in the world. The saloons are most magnificently upholstered in white satin, brocaded with pink roses, the cornices done in real gold, while the panels are hung with beautiful pictures. Her own room is decorated in pink and white, the bed, with its lace trimmings, looking particularly inviting.

Drinking at Meals.

Drinking at meals induces a person to eat more than he otherwise would, and excess in eating is one of the great causes for sickness. In fact, the two great dietary failings seem to be overeating and drinking of too little water at the proper times. Many colds are from overeating or from eating gross food. Persons with abundant lung power, who exercise a great deal and breathe much, can dispose of a large quantity of food, but the more delicate and sedentary should eat moderately. A cold once taken will run its course, in spite of what may be done for it, unless it is attended to within 48 hours after its inception. The treatments vary. The cutting off of supplies by skipping a few meals is one of the principal things, for the old saying about stuffing a cold and starving a fever should be literally amplified into the condition and conclusion that if you stuff a cold you will have a fever to starve. Some persons assert that any cold, if taken in time, may be cured without any medicine whatever by following the simple precautions of keeping warm, going without eating for 24 hours and drinking largely of some sort of warm tea. Another plan is that of drinking cold water freely and going without eating.—New York Sun.

Solitary Life.

An article on the life of gentlewomen of no occupation and very limited means gave some sensible enough hints on making the most of a tiny income and maintained that to live alone under such limitations is not necessarily a lonely, dull or narrow existence. The writer especially impressed on people thus situated never to get careless in regard to diet, but always to cook dainty and appetizing little dishes for their daily fare. This no doubt is sensible advice, but how very few women could keep up sufficient interest in eating to take this trouble for themselves alone? This indifference to food is one of the many objections to a solitary life. For every reason it is infinitely better for those who are alone in the world to chum together. It is more healthy, more economical, more cheerful and more desirable, above all, because it tends to prevent the gradual sinking into narrowness and selfishness which may so easily be the result of a lonely life during the later years of middle age.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Her Hands Full.

"A woman in York county," says the Lewiston (Me.) Journal, "seems entitled to the belt. She was asked to lend her assistance to a certain cause, but explained that her time was so taken up with exacting duties that she would be obliged to refuse. From her detailed explanation it seems she is at the head of an organization of King's Daughters, a place that involves a great many little responsibilities; she is an organist in church, Sunday school and prayer meeting services, is the secretary of a ladies' aid society, a member of a Bible class, teaches a class of 16 young women every Saturday afternoon and furnishes them work for hospitals and the poor, is one of a committee to visit the sick of the parish, takes active part in the getting up of church and public entertainments, is a member of several orders, including library association, and in addition to all this does all her own housework and fulfills her various social duties."

Just Woman's Way.

Women, as a rule, are not strong on facts. No matter how startling or revolutionary they may be, they simply accept them, and that is the end of it. They never enthuse over them in man fashion, but keep cool and calm over announcements that would unsettle a man from head to foot. But her fancies—there is the weak, perhaps we had better say the strong, point in her armor, all the stronger because of their intangibility. Any one who has ever attempted to reason a woman out of any particular fancy knows how perfectly invulnerable she is. She always proves the better "man" of the two and scores a victory. Perhaps, after all, it is better so. Man loves her all the more for her little weaknesses and fancies, even if he does at times like to play the oak to the clinging vine.—Boston Herald.

Shoestrings.

Like everything else there are right shoestrings and wrong. Never buy them with a flat metal tip. This is sure to pull off and to leave you with a soft, blunt end of string, which laughs at your efforts to force it through eyelets. The proper shoestring has a tip of wire coiled to a point in a spiral. This never pulls out, and when some one invents a string which never breaks or wears shabby perfection will be touched. Our nearest approach to it so far is the coiled wire tip, fastened to a tubular mohair braid for ladies' shoes or to a leather string for men and boys. Mothers of school children take notice of this "tip" or this "point," as you please.

Which?

Max O'Rell says: "It is difficult to decide who are the most beautiful women.

"In the streets of Budapest and in Irish dining rooms the greatest beauty exists.

"If the law of my country made polygamy compulsory, I would make love to an English woman or a fair daughter of Virginia; I would have my house kept by a German wife; my artistic inclinations I would intrust to a Frenchwoman; my intellectual ones to an American one.

"Then when life got a little dull, and I wanted my blood stirred up, I would call on my Spanish wife.

"I would get it!"

Little Economies.

Teach the children not to waste trifles, which they often throw away without thought, and which if saved might be of use to others, if not to themselves. Wrapping paper, pieces of twine, odds and ends of various kinds may do service a second time if put away until the need for them arises. The habit of economy is one that ought to be cultivated, for careful saving makes lavish giving possible. Hoarding is not a vice of childhood, nor should it be encouraged, but the wise husbanding of resources for future expenditure is a valuable lesson that cannot be learned too early.

Exquisite Needlework.

Some of the most exquisite art needlework in existence has been produced by semicivilized women, as, for instance, the natives of parts of Canada, who used to embroider with their own hair and also that of animals and who introduced into their work pieces of serpents' skins and the fur of various animals. The negresses of Senegal imitate the skins of animals and the colors of flowers with the greatest skill. Turkish and Georgian women used gold thread with wonderful delicacy on the finest gauze and introduced specimens of the coinage of various countries into their embroideries.

MONDAY, MARCH 10, 1901.

OUR ADVERTISERS.

During the present disturbed relations with our advertisers, on account of the disastrous fire in the Examiner buildings, we are compelled to ask the indulgence of our patrons for a few days until we can pull ourselves together again. Hard and earnest work is being done to instal an entirely new printing plant in our present temporary premises at No. 411 George Street, a few doors south of the burned building, and by the end of the week, we hope to resume our contracts with our advertisers. In the meantime, in order to keep our advertisers as much in touch with our readers as possible, we will be able to insert short local notices of their business announcements.

The Peterborough Bookstore.

Our store will necessarily have to be closed for a day or two longer before the insurance men will be able to adjust the losses and we are in a position to put the stock in shape for doing business. The daily papers will be delivered to customers as usual, and may also be obtained at the Examiner's temporary premises, 411 George Street, where business orders may also be placed in the meantime.

A. H. STRATTON & CO.

Gough Bros.

We are offering for two weeks an extra special snap in made-to order Spring Suits. We will make up to measure by our own cutters and tailors, black and blue worsted serge suits, regular value $16.50, for only $11.75 As this chance will only last for two weeks, better lose no time closing with this snap.

GOUGH BROS.

Retiring from Business.

There have been enough bona fide bargains handed out to the ladies of Peterborough, during the first seven days of our closing-out sale, to go around the town like wild-fire. There's not a home in town but what has been talking about our sale. Let it be distinctly understood that the whole stock must be cleared out without delay, and that means almost at your own prices. We can't afford to dilly-dally over sales. With the same object in view, we trust all those indebted to us will be kind enough to pay their accounts promptly.

MISS K. RUDKINS.

Routley's Magic Prices.

The great sale of the Toronto Bazar stock, bought at a fraction on the dollar, is a bonanza to Peterborough citizens. The goods are moving with such rapidity that special lines advertised one day are very often completely sold out the next. There are many lines, however, such as Wall Papers, Window Blinds, China, Crockery, etc., that can stand a month's heavy selling before being cleared. Another thing is certain—that no matter what you buy here you can count on securing wonderful bargains—bargains such as can be obtained nowhere else in Peterborough or any other town in Ontario.

C. B. ROUTLEY.

Sunday Funeral.

The funeral took place yesterday afternoon from the family residence, Sherbrooke street, of Alex., the 12-year-old son of Mr. W. C. Barrie. Deceased died on Saturday after an illness of some weeks. Interment took place in Little Lake cemetery.

Boys' Committee.

An important meeting of a sub-committee of the Boys' Department Committee for Ontario and Quebec was held in the local Association building on Saturday—attended by Mr. R. J. Farrell, Secretary, Ottawa; P. B Williams, Secretary, West Toronto, and G. H. Williamson, chairman of the committee.

The Examiner has completed arrangements for having a new plant installed by the latter part of the week and will by that time be in a position to fulfil all advertising contracts and orders in job work. A telephone has already been placed in position in our new premises, 411 George St. No. 57 will find us as usual.

Mr. Crombie's Meetings.

The pulpit in St. Paul's Church last night was occupied by Mr. Crombie, the evangelist, who during the week has been conducting evangelistic services in the country. Commencing to-morrow night, meetings will be held in Bethel Church, Otonabee. The Young Peoples' Society of Christian Endeavour of St. Paul's Church will drive from the church at quarter to seven o'clock down to the service in the country. So far Mr. Cromie's meetings have been successful.

Sunday School Festival.

The annual Sunday School Festival in connection with Park street church took place on Friday night and proved to be most successful in every particular. Tea was served 6.30 o'clock until 7.30, and commencing at 8 o'clock a delightful entertainment was run off. The programme was furnished by the children of the school assisted by a male quartette under Mr. Nelson Boyle. The chair was occupied by Rev. O. C. Elliott, the pastor of the church.

LABOUR MEETING.

A Public Meeting in the interests of workingmen will be held in the Opera House on Friday night, commencing at eight o'clock. Addresses will be delivered by Mr. Ralph Smith, M P, President of the Dominion Labour Congress and Mr. A.W Puttee, Labour Member for Winnipeg. Admission free. R. F. McGregor, Chairman; Fred Browne, Secretary Committee.

TO BE BANQUETTED TO-NIGHT.

Directors of the Cereal Company Entertained by Hon. J. R. Stratton.

Hon. Senator Cox and some of the directors of the American Cereal Company, arrived in town at noon to-day in connection with the commencement of actual operations upon their important industry here.

Hon. J. R. Stratton entertains these gentlemen and a number of leading citizens at a dinner at the Oriental Hotel to-night at 7.45.

This will be a timely opportunity for our citizens to come into personal contact with the gentlemen associated with an enterprise that promises to have so important a bearing upon the industrial interests of the town.

CAPT. BARKER HERE.

He Speaks at Half-Past Seven Under the Auspices of the Fortnightly Club.

Capt. Barker, of "C" Company, which so distinguished itself at Paardeberg, will speak in the Y.M.C.A. to-night at the meeting of the Fortnightly Club.

His remarks promise to be most interesting, as he participated in many thrilling engagements and is a fluent speaker with rare descriptive powers at his command.

Particular notice is called to the fact that the meeting will open promptly at half-past seven.

EAST RIDING LIBERALS.

Convention to Nominate a Liberal Candidate.

A convention of the Liberals of East Peterborough will be held for the purpose of nominating a candidate to contest the representation of the riding in the Liberal interests at the next general elections, in the Town Hall, Norwood, on Saturday, March 23rd at 1 o'clock. Addresses will be given by prominent members of the Liberal party.

LAID AT REST.

Funeral of the Late Roily Irwin Yesterday Afternoon.

The funeral of the late Roland Irwin took place at three o'clock yesterday afternoon from the family residence, Stewart street to Little Lake Cemetery. The funeral service at both the home and the grave were conducted by Rev. J. P. Wilson, pastor of George Street Methodist Church.

The bearers were all young druggists and former associates of deceased. They were Messrs. Ernie Payne, Robt. Davidson, Will. Bathgate, Robt. Meharry, Lou Best and H. H. Edmison.

The floral offerings were very numerous and a very large number attended the funeral service to pay their last tribute of respect to one who was a general favorite and whose noble and manly qualities won him the respect of the community.

LABOUR MEETING.

Addresses to be Given by Two Prominent M.P.'s.

The public are reminded of the mass meeting in the Opera House on Friday night next when addresses will be delivered by Mr. Ralph Smith, M.P., of Victoria, and President of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, and Mr. A. W. Puttee, Labor Member of the Dominion House for Winnipeg. The addresses will be along the lines of Trade and Labor Organizations and Municipal and Government Ownership of Franchises, etc. The meeting is free to all and should be largely attended,

PERSONAL.

Miss Maud Edmonds is very ill at the Nicholl's Hospital.

Rev. Dr. Cade, of Millbrook, intends retiring from the Ministry next June, after a long and faithful service.

Capt. Dick Cairns, of the 14th Field Battery, was in town on Saturday night, shaking hands with friends.

Miss Barnet and Miss Grace Barnet are visiting their sister Mrs. C. B. McAllister at "The Pines."

Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Gough, of Toronto, are in town for a day or two.

Dr. Bell, of the Toronto Asylum, is in town and is receiving many warm greetings from old friends.

Mr. Gus. Sawers, who has been working on the Campbellford section of the Trent Valley Canal, concluded his work there on Saturday and returned to town.

Mr. Herman Gray, who for some time has been in the office of Messrs. Edmison & Dixon, Barristers, intends leaving to night for Buffalo, N.Y.

R. J. Farrell, Secretary Y.M.C.A., Ottawa, gave an impressive address to men at the Y.M.C.A. yesterday. Several expressed a decision at the close of the meeting to enter the Christian life.

The Brockville Recorder in referring to Hon J. R. Stratton's recent speech in the Ontario Legislature, says—Hon. J. R Stratton is one of the new Ministrs, an indefatigable worker, a pair of broad shoulders, better looking than the average newspaper man, and on this occasion he was a hard hitter, in fact a regular thumper.

NEWS NUGGETS

—There was a baptismal service at Park street church yesterday morning.

—The Central Charity Board meets this evening in the town clerk's office.

—The Daughters of Erin, of St. Andrew's Church, intend giving a social on Monday night next.

—The Beet Sugar Committee of the Board of Trade will meet this evening in the town council chamber.

—Members of the Board of Trade are reminded of the annual meeting of that body which will be held in the town council chamber to-morrow night.

—The Belleville Board of Education has decided that pupils must not be kept in after school hours, as such punishment is too far reaching, being detrimental to the health. This is something the local Board might consider.

CHURCH CHIMES.

At St. Paul's Church yesterday morning Mr. James Dawson sang the solo in the anthem "Hosannah" by Granier.

YESTERDAY'S STORM.

IT IS FEARED THAT RAIN AND HAIL HAVE DAMAGED FRUIT TREES.

The Telephone and Telegraph Lines are Down in Many Places—The Trains Were on Time This Morning.

Yesterday's heavy sleet and rain must have done a lot of damage to the fruit trees in this section, as the ice formed thickly on the branches and caused many to break with the load. The streets became so slippery during the evening that pedestrians were forced to use the roadway instead of the sidewalks. The attendance at the seven o'clock services in the churches were in consequence rather slimly attended. Many hard falls with narrow escapes from accidents are recorded.

The long distance telephone lines are down, as are a number of those in town, but Manager Stringer has all his available staff out on repair work. Connection has already been made with Port Hope and Lindsay.

The G.N.W. Telegraph Company is in bad shape down East, all the connections being broken. The local office, however, has a line working as far west as Toronto.

Mr. T. E. Boddy is rejoicing in the fact that the C.P.R. lines are all working fairly well. There was a break in the vicinity at Agincourt, but this has been repaired.

All trains were on time this morning.

REFLECTIONS FROM FIRE.

The Examiner Will be Able to Fulfil All Advertising Contracts by the Latter End of the Week.

The safe of The Examiner was opened this morning and all the books were found intact although damaged around the edges by water. The mailing lists were also saved.

Through a typographical error in Saturday's edition the loss of the stock of the Peterborough Bookstore read as $3,000 instead of $20,000. The loss was at first estimated at $30,000 and the error was occasioned in making the change to $20,000.

The Toronto Savings & Loan Company promise to have the EXAMINER paemises refitted by the end of the month, if it is at all possible.

A telephone was placed in the new premises to-day. The number is 57.

A new plant has already been ordered and will be placed in position by the end of the week, when all advertising contracts will be filled as usual and job orders taken.

The flames again broke out in the EXAMINER cellar this morning, but a few pailsful of water extinguished them.

Mr. Donald Edwards, of Toronto, arrived in town on Saturday to represent the insurance companies, which are interested in the fire.

MISSIONARY SUNDAY.

Anniversary Services Held in the Local Methodist Churches.

The missionary anniversary services in connection with the local Methodist churches were held yesterday, when interesting addresses were made on behalf of the missionary cause by Rev. Thomas Manning, of Lindsay, and Rev. J. P. Wilson of town. Rev. Mr. Henderson of Toronto, assistant missionary secretary, was to have been present and taken part in the services was unable to owing to illness.

Rev. Mr. Wilson gave an interesting review of missionary work and quoted a number of valuable statistics concerning the same. The Indian, French, Chinese, Japanese and other missions were ably touched upon, and the speaker before closing expressed his thanks to the ladies of the church for the valuable services they had rendered as collectors.

Rev. Mr. Manning explained very fully the object of Missions, which meant in reality civilization and happiness. He traced the work done by missionaries throughout the world and pictured vividly what the various countries would be without missions. His address was clear and forcible and at the close of the same, contributions for missionary work were taken up.

MR. WILLIAMSON'S TRIP.

He May Accompany the South African Constabulary.

It is pretty generally understood that Mr. G. H. Williamson, the popular and energetic secretary of the local Y.M.C.A., will leave Canada for South Africa with the South African Constabulary in the interests of the Association.

At a meeting of the Y. M. C. A. board on Saturday night Mr. Williamson was granted three months' leave of absence if he should desire, and it is therefore most likely that he will take advantage of the opportunity. Of course it is not likely that the local Secretary will stay any time in South Africa, but just accompany the Constabulary there and then return. Mr. Williamson is to be congratulated upon his selection.

IN SPORTING CIRCLES.

ITEMS THAT ARE OF GENERAL LOCAL INTEREST.

Campbellford to Play in Fenelon Falls no Friday Night—Scratch Matches are Now in Order.

CURLIANA.

The return match for the Cox Shield will be played here this week.

The championship for the 2nd Colts Cup lies between Skips D. Davidson and Arthur Blade. The final match will be played this week.

The following scratch match was played at the rink on Saturday evening between two picked teams.

Dr. Wightman	Geo. Revell
A. W. McPherson	Dr. Scott
R. F. McWilliams	H. B. Burnham

H. R. H. Kenner, sk. 5 W. G. Morrow, sk. 13

Majority for Mr. Morrow, 5 shots As a result Mr. Kenner's rink was elected for the oysters. Next Friday night the same two teams will face each other on the hockey ice.

HOCKEY.

The hockey season has come and gone, as far as championship matches are concerned, and in reviewing the work of the O. H. A. Executive for the year, the EXAMINER has nothing but good words to say. Too much credit cannot be given to the officers of an Association who have worked so assiduously to keep sport clean and weed out the undesirable professional element. Mr. John Ross Robertson has indeed lived up to his ante-election promises.

add hockey

Those who saw the game in Lindsay on Friday night between Fenelon Falls and Norwood for the championship of the Trent Valley League, state that they shall never forget the scene inside the rink after the game was over. The Fenelon Falls team had come down per special train with about 200 backers, who throughout the game, waved the Fenelon colours and cheered ferociously throughout. The climax was reached, however, when the whistle blew declaring time was up. Old men and young men jumped many feet to the ice below, and half frenzied with excitement, snatched their representatives and carried them off the ice. They were hoisted high in the air and declare to be "the only things that ever happened." Fenelon Falls people know how to support their team, and money and enthusiasm is never wanting.

It was thought by many that while Campbellford's hockey team were given permission to play the winners of the Trent Valley League series on the latter's ice for the championship and the Stratton Cup, still, that in view of the fact that Fenelon had won out, thereby necessitating a very long journey, that the Easteners might not avail themselves of the opportunity. Such, however, is far from being the case, Campbellford have signified their intention of going up into the north country on Wednesday, and they will make a determined fight to bring back the championship Mr. Walter English, who has manifested so much interest in the Trent Valley League this season, will officiate as referee.

It is rather late to be talking hockey, but if the weather keeps any way frosty; the Colts will see a couple more matches. They will likely go up to Fenelon Falls next Friday night to play the team of that place. Fenelon will come down here the following week.

The Lindsay Hockey Club have made money this year by reason of the number of tie matches that have been played there. They started the season under adverse circumstances, but have pulled up very nicely financially. The rink is a beautiful one, and all hockey privileges are controlled by the Lindsay hockey club.

No. 6 Company will play No. 6 at the rink this evening Much rivalry exists between the two companies, and the game will be for blood. A detachment from the Dragoons will act as a police force.

The closest and roughest match our hockey team has played this season was played at Keene on Friday night with the Keene team and resulted in a victory, as usual, for us by a score of 4 to 3, the tally at half time being 3 to 1 in favour of Keene. Our boys had the best of the game throughout, but owing to the badly lighted rink, could not see sufficiently well to score until half time, when they pulled ahead, and, once in the lead, played a block game. C. Deyman went back to cover point, making a defence Keene found to be impregnable; Alvin Gould having only one shot to stop afterwards. The Keene team played a very rough, dirty game, and some of the officials of the club, who tried to make a little disturbance after the match was over, did not succeed. Mr. Whitcroft of the Peterborough Colts, was referee, and his rulings on the tripping and rough work of Keene, did not suit the crowd at all.

Notwithstanding the fact that the Ontarios of Port Hope were defeated in Toronto by the St Georges and therefore put out of business as far as the championship was concerned, still their town was justly proud of them and gave them a royal welcome upon their return to the Lake Ontario town. They were met at the station by the band and hundreds of citizens and were the subjects of numerous congratulatory speeches.

Mr. Harry White, of Port Hope, was in town to-day on business. Though yet in his teens Mr. White has won his way high up into the management of sporting organizations of his town. He is the efficient and energetic secretary-treasurer of the Hockey Club and holds a like position with the Rugby Club of Port Hope.

The Montreal Herald publishes a table showing the number of goals scored by the forward line of the different teams in the Quebec Hockey Association The table was compiled to show that the centres are not altogether responsible for all the goals scored The results are: Goals scored by wings, 65; by centres, 81; by others, 10. The Montreal Victoria's centre have the best record, there being 31 goals to their credit, against twelve of the wings.

An interesting game of hockey will take place at the rink to-night, when Ritchie's Dandies will try and sustain their reputation as being the crack company of the 57th Regiment, against No. 6 Company. No. 4 Company have decided to appear in full Highland costume, and as they are composed of Bankers, Zoo-Hunters, Pig Irons and Pill Pounders, the spectators can rely on seeing some very effective leg play. Although up against some O.H.A. men, who belong to No. 6, the brave men of No. 4 are confident of winning out, and no doubt a large number of their lady admirers will be there to cheer them on to victory, as the Dandies are credited with having captured a very large number of their hearts last summer.

The Argoons will challenge the winners and, if successful, will put on their full armour and try and take a rise out of the Pig Irons, but it is very dangerous work to tackle the Tigers, for there is generally a large demand for glass eyes next morning, or some other missing members, such as cork legs and numb-skulls.

The Port Hope team has scored 29 goals this year to its opponents 23. The Peterborough Colts record is 134 to 20.

The St. George's scored the goals which won the championship from Port Hope in the first ten minutes.

At Pittsburg the P. A. C. hockey team defeated the crack new York team by three goals to one. Murray, Reyner, Hamilton, Lamb and Curtin, former Kingstonians receive great praise for their effective work for the home team. Of their play the Post says:—"For P. A.C. Capt. Murray was the hero. Mack never, since he has been in the city, has played a better all-round game He was everywhere and used excellent judgment in his passes. He did some of the best legitimate checking ever seen at the garden. Reyner, Curtin and Hamilton also contributed largely to the victory. "Jerry" played his first game for P A C., and played in his usual fierce style Lamb very ably defended his goal" Reynor assisted by Murray scored two goals, and Murray unaided, one.

The Stauntons, of Toronto, are anxious to come to Peterborough for a game with the the Colts. Should the weather prove favourable, the game will be arranged.

The Zach Bunt Camp will play No. 4 Company on Wednesday night at 10 o'clock.

Sporting Editor of the Examiner:

The wood working artists of the Wm. Hamilton Mfg. Co. are very desirous of arranging a game of hockey with the wood butchers of the C.G.E. Co.

It is reported the latter are practising daily on the swamp in the rear of the works, but Saturday night's exhibition with the Sand Hogs was poor evidence of such a report.

We would like to show Munro's Scouts that they haven't enough electricity and magnetism and that Emmerson's Mounted Foot are engineers as well as stick-handlers. With such notorious hockeyists as "Spike" Armstrong, "Snag" Kennedy and "Rusty" Hancock, we should be able to play six men against seven and win hands down, but for the sake of the sport we will play even numbers.

If the Wood Butchers cannot see their way clear to accept this challenge, it stands good for the Excelsiors, of Toronto. None others need apply.

The Butchers will kindly take notice that this is a hockey challenge and not "shinny," such as they are accustomed to play, and also that they are at liberty to play Davie Lewis, in the second half only, besides their own seven.

BASEBALL.

The new baseball rules adopted in New York lately may be summarized as follows:

Abolition of play "hit by pitcher." Will merely count as a ball—no base will be given.

All fouls are strikes, unless there are already two on the batter.

Catcher must remain behind the bat for the entire game, when his team is in the field.

Pitcher must deliver ball to batsman inside of 20 seconds after latter has taken position. Should the pitcher throw the ball any other place than the plate it will count a ball for each delivery.

Galt has approved of Danny McCabe's proposed Canadian Baseball League to be run under the same principles as the Ontario Hockey Association.

John Sargent, the artist, has at last put into practice his theory that a painter should never be far from his work. He has rented the house on Tite street, Boston, next to his studio and has had communicating doors cut through the intervening walls.

RAILWAY TIES.

The Uganda railway has now a length of over 300 miles. The rolling stock includes 92 locomotives and 942 carriages and cars.

At the recent congress of railway officials in Paris there were 190 delegates representing 38 governments besides about 1,000 representatives of 324 railways.

The Moscow-Windau-Ribunsk railway has decided to organize a quick service for carriage of perishable agricultural produce from the eastern provinces of Russia to Riga for export to Great Britain.

The officials of the New York Central railroad have been investigating motor vehicles of various types with a view of establishing not only an automatic cab service, but auxiliary freight feeders to their lines at various points from towns not connected therewith.

REJECTS THE TREATY.

RESPONSIBILITY IS ON THE U. S

Formal Answer Was Friendly, But Completely Rejected the Senate's Amendment's to the Hay-Pauncefote Canal Treaty—Not Likely to Be Anything Done in the Immediate Future.

Washington, March 12.—The answer of the British Government to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty amendments made by the Senate was received yesterday by the British Ambassador and communicated to Secretary Hay. The contents of the document show that the British answer is a dignified but complete rejection of the Senate amendments, and it leaves upon the United States Government the responsibility for any further action that may be deemed expedient.

Nothing Will Be Done.

Washington, March 12.—No opportunity offered yesterday afternoon for conferences between the President and Secretary Hay respecting the British answer, therefore it cannot yet be stated what action, if any, will be taken by our Government. The belief seems to be warranted that there will be no further negotiations on the subject in the immediate future.

For the present the text of the British answer will be withheld from publication, on this side of the water, at least. The British answer is quite long, and would make about two newspaper columns. The tone of the reply is distinctly friendly throughout, particularly so in the concluding assurances of good will, and a desire to co-operate in the realization of this undertaking.

THE TUBERCULIN TEST.

Cattle Breeders Will Benefit From Hon. Mr. Fisher's Negotiations at Washington—Free Test Here.

Ottawa, March 12.—The Hon. Sidney Fisher makes the following statement concerning the negotiations with the United States Government in connection with the requirement of the tuberculin test for pure-bred cattle imported into either country:

"In consequence of the imbroglio which the testing for tuberculosis of cattle going into the United States had reached, I arranged to discuss the matter with Secretary Wilson in Washington, and went down there last week. I found that what the breeders had so insistently demanded and what The Breeders' Gazette has so aggressively insisted upon, namely, that the tuberculin test should be done away with for animals going into the United States from foreign countries, was quite impossible. Mr. Wilson, the Secretary of Agriculture, said that he felt that he was absolutely right in his policy, and that he was not going to be driven from that position, especially as the law of the United States required such action. Under these circumstances, the hopes of our own breeders that the tuberculin tests should be entirely removed as between Canada and the United States were impossible of fulfilment.

"Formerly the United States department accepted the certificate of test from any Canadian veterinary whose name I submitted them. Having taken the steps which they did, they now are not prepared to go as far as this, but will accept the certificates of any of my departmental officers, just in the same way as they take the certificates of their own departmental officers. For the purpose of facilitating this work, and relieving the burden as much as possible on the breeders of Canada, I have decided to appoint a few more departmental officers, and do this testing free of charge, for exports as well as for the freeing of our herds of tuberculosis.

"In connection with the importations from England, the United States department are also willing to accept the certificate of an officer of mine in England, just the same as they accept the certificate of their own officer whom they have sent over. As our own importers much prefer to have their cattle tested in England, rather than in our quarantine on this side, I have decided to facilitate importation by sending over a thoroly qualified officer, who will remain in England and be at the disposal of breeders there who wish to import to this country, and his certificate of test will be accepted for cattle going thru to the United States, without further test here or at the frontier. This will be a considerable expense to my department, but I feel it will facilitate the important work of our live stock breeders so much that I am justified in adopting this course. I am sure that the Canadian live stock men will appreciate these steps, and, while they have not secured all that they had hoped, the arrangements made will relieve them of much embarrassment, and assist them to continue that profitable trade in cattle between Canada and England and the United States in which they have done so well."

DIED AT THEIR DUTY.

Chicago Laundry Girls Killed in Terrible Boiler Explosion.

Chicago, March 12.—By the explosion of a boiler in the Doremus Steam Laundry in Madison Street shortly after 8 o'clock yesterday morning, the entire building was wrecked. It is stated that about 30 girls, and between 50 and 60 male employes were buried in the ruins, which immediately took fire. Twelve girls were dragged from the wreckage before the fire broke out. They were badly hurt. It is feared that the others, caught in the crash of falling walls and flying timbers, were killed. A general alarm was turned in, and hundreds of firemen attacked the pile, in a desperate effort to drag the unfortunates from certain death in the fire.

The building was a two-storey brick. The boilers which exploded were located in the basement. There were between 75 and 90 men and women employed in the laundry, and they had just gone to work.

A. F. Doremus, owner of the laundry, was arrested shortly before noon. It is said that he was warned on Friday by the City Boiler Inspector not to use the boiler in his establishment.

A SHORT SESSION.

There Were Few Members Present and the Legislative Session Lasted Only a Few Minutes.

Toronto, March 12.—Barely a quarter of the members of the Legislature were in attendance yesterday afternoon, and the proceedings, which were entirely of a routine character, only lasted a few minutes. A couple of private bills respecting the Church of England burying ground at Shelburne village by Mr. Barr, and to incorporate the town of Kingsville by Mr. Auld, received second readings and a batch of half a dozen others were put through committee with celerity and despatch.

Dr. Pyne's bill, authorizing municipal grants for the reception of the Duke and Duchess of York, was read a second time.

Mr. Robson wanted to know if F. J. Dunbar, barrister, was in the employ of the Government, to which Hon. J. M. Gibson replied that he was not and never had been.

Mr. Whitney secured an order for copies of correspondence with the Imperial Government with relation to the establishment of a Remount Station in Canada.

Ontario Division Courts.

Some Ontario Division Court clerks may have fat offices, but a great many have not, as shown by the annual report of the inspector. A table of salaries, showing that 100 clerks receive less than $100, 100 from $100 to $200, 42 from $200 to $300, 23 from $300 to $400, 16 from $400 to $500, 9 from $500 to $600, 6 from $600 to $700, 2 from $700 to $800, 3 from $800 to $900, 6 from $900 to $1,000, 13 from $1,000 to $2,000. The Division Court clerk at Ottawa is the best paid officer of the list, who gets the maximum of $2,000.

The number of suits entered last year was 88,686. The claims amounted to $1,202,745, and the amount paid into court was $427,511. The appointments during the year numbered 26 clerks and 35 bailiffs.

ELECTION CASES.

Judgment in West Huron Case—Mr. Thornton Appeals.

Toronto, March 12.—Judgment will be given this morning at 11 o'clock by the Court of Appeal in the election case of Beck v. Hon. J. T. Garrow, M.P.P. for West Huron. The appeal was taken from the judgment of Justices Osler and Rose, unseating Mr. Garrow.

An appeal has been taken on behalf of Mr. C. J. Thornton of West Durham from the decision of Mr. Justice Street, given on Saturday, dismissing the preliminary objections to the petition brought by one Burnham. The appeal is to the Supreme Court.

ROBLIN'S RAILWAY BILL.

Valuable Live Stock Burned.

Rochester, N. Y., March 12.—During one of the first electric storms in this section in March since 1890, and the heaviest ever seen in Charlotte, the big stock barns of ex-Congressman Halbert S. Greenleaf, on Rigney's Bluff, just west of Ontario Beach, was struck by lightning late Sunday night and completely destroyed. Forty-three head of Jersey cattle, and 21 blooded horses, together with 100 tons of hay and 100 tons of straw, were burned. Loss $25,000, covered by insurance.

CANADIAN RIFLEMEN.

Hon. Dr. Borden's Statement on Col. Hughes' Motion.

GOVERNMENT IS CONSIDERING.

Hon. Mr. Fielding Answers Mr. Lemieux's Question Regarding the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company—Premier States That There Are No Negotiations on With Newfoundland—Time Not Auspicious.

Ottawa, March 12.—A discussion bearing upon the new policy of the Militia Department, which General O'Grady-Haly has advised, arose in the House yesterday afternoon when Col. Sam Hughes moved:

"That in the opinion of this House it would be in the best interest of the militia of Canada were the Government or the Minister of Militia to authorize payment of $10 annually towards expenses of one man, selected under departmental regulations, from each company, squadron and battery, or other unit of the active militia, to attend the Provincial Rifle Association annual rifle matches, each in his own province; and that the sum of $15 annually be granted to each of the two men of the foregoing number from each battalion of 250 men, and corresponding number of cavalry and artillery and other arms of the service (while an additional man should be selected for each extra 125 members of any arm of the service), towards expenses in attending the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association matches annually; and, further, that a liberal supply of ammunition shall be granted to each active militiaman free, for practice under proper departmental regulations on local or home ranges."

Col. Hughes said at present no opportunity of competing in rifle shooting is given to the rural battalions. In fact they are particularly prohibited. Some encouragement should be given the boys from the side lines, who had shown themselves in South Africa to be fully the equals of the lads from the cities. Experience in South Africa had shown that it is battalions that can shoot that the enemy fear.

Col. Thompson (Haldimand) did not agree with the proposal of the Militia Department to bind men to serve if they received rifles as members of the association. He thought rifles should be put into the hands of all who are willing to learn the art. If the Government did not give free ammunition also, it should at least give cheap ammunition.

Col. Tisdale argued in favor of bringing up the general average of good shooting.

Col. Prior, replying to Col. Thompson, held that the members of rifle clubs should bind themselves to serve.

Hon. Dr. Borden.

Hon. Dr. Borden expressed the opinion that the House felt very much obliged to the hon. member for Victoria, who brought this matter up for the sole object, no doubt, of discussion. There could be no question that the rifle practice is highly desirable for the militia. The department is giving its best consideration to the establishment of the rifle associations in the country. He expected that the proposals would have been formulated before this; but after the discussion at the meeting of the Dominion Rifle Association it was felt desirable to give still further consideration to so important a subject. He expected that the proposals would be formulated before the militia estimates were brought down.

With regard to the views expressed by the member for Haldimand, Dr. Borden thought the hon. gentleman would change his mind about the undesirability of an agreement to serve. The Government of the country could not give assistance to any other class than those who declared their willingness to serve.

Mr. R. L. Borden (Halifax) asked if the Minister of Militia had considered the desirability of training young men throughout the country in the art of horseback riding.

Hon. Dr. Borden—That matter will be discussed when the estimates are brought down. Last session Parliament discussed the establishment of mounted infantry. He had then stated that a beginning would be made in Manitoba and the Northwest, and that was being carried out now. A school would, he thought, be established in Winnipeg or some place in Manitoba, somewhat of the character designated by the hon. gentleman.

Col. Hughes congratulated the Minister of Militia on the style of his reply. He took it for granted that men who were trained in rifle shooting would be ready to come to the front in case of necessity. He believed in the large average being able to shoot well, but there must be some enthusiasts in a battalion to lead the average number of the majority. In view of the Minister's reply, and being satisfied with the discussion, he withdrew the motion.

In the same spirit as the above resolution, Col. Hughes also moved the following and withdrew it after discussion:

"That in the opinion of this House it would be in the best interests of the active militia of Canada were the books and data used in the staff college course of the Imperial service placed at the disposal of such officers of the Canadian militia as might wish to have the reading thereof."

Questions Answered.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier informed Mr. Gourlay that no negotiations were pending looking to the admission of Newfoundland into the Confederation, and he did not consider the present time auspicious for re-opening negotiations.

The Finance Minister made reply to a question by Mr. Lemieux as to the status of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. He said the Government was aware that the lapsed policies of the company amounted to $5,695,872, and its annual revenue to $344,158. There had been no special enquiry into this, but the Government was aware that the official returns showed it was a large proportion of lapses.

The bill respecting the Supreme Court of the Independent Order of Foresters, to change the name to Independent Order of Foresters, was read a third time and passed — the first bill passed this session.

THE SENATE.

Ottawa, March 12.—Yesterday Sir Mackenzie Bowell moved for an order for a return showing all contracts and papers relating to the Pacific cable. Agreed to.

Hon. W. D. Perley drew attention to the appointment of farmers as Senators. At Confederation farmers were fairly represented, but since that time the agricultural representation had fallen away till only about six men who could make any pretense of being farmers remained. The present Government had only appointed one farmer.

Hon. David Mills claimed that himself and Dr. Landerkin were farmers. He thought that the farmers were well represented. There were others who had farming interests besides farmers.

After others had spoken, the Senate then adjourned.

THE CIVIL LIST.

Grant May Have to Be Increased—Redmond Promised Opposition.

London, March 12.—In the House of Commons yesterday, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Chancellor of the Exchequer, when moving the appointment of a select committee to consider the new civil list, conveyed a hint that an increase in the civil list might be expected. He said that, while the Government's proposals would be based on the late Queen Victoria's civil list, it must be remembered that King Edward had a Queen consort, and that he was not only King of the United Kingdom, but the head of a world-wide Empire.

In previous reigns, the Parliament has been asked to pay the debts of the sovereigns, but no such application was ever made by Queen Victoria. The country might look forward with confidence to King Edward, who has for many years occupied an exceptional position, involving exceptional expenditure. His income, although not large, when compared with that of some private individuals, had sufficed him to perform his duties in a manner which had won the gratitude of the country. The proposals would be framed in a spirit of justice to the Crown and people.

Mr. John Redmond, the Irish leader, gave notice of his intention to oppose all consideration of the subject until the Government promised to alter the monarch's anti-Catholic declaration, known as the "No Popery" oath. But, on Mr. Balfour's announcing that it was proposed to appoint a commission to consider the matter, Mr. Redmond withdrew his opposition for the present. The committee was then appointed.

FEAR BODY-SNATCHERS.

Strong Body of Soldiers Has Been Placed Over Queen's Mausoleum.

London, March 12.—Apprehension appears to prevail here as to the possibility of an attempt to desecrate the mausoleum at Frogmore, in which Queen Victoria lies entombed.

Not content with the strong guard of police that has until now kept watch over it, the authorities have, by order of the King, established a strong military post there, and soldiers are in future to assist the police in keeping guard over the body of the late Queen.

That the arrangement is to be a permanent one is apparent from the fact that a guard house of considerable dimensions is being built in the immediate vicinity of the mausoleum.

Yukon Royalty Cut Down.

Ottawa, March 12.—An order-in-council was passed at Saturday's Cabinet meeting reducing royalty on gold from 15 to 10 per cent.

At the same meeting an order-in-council was passed appointing J. H. Ross, who has just resigned the Commissionership of Public Works for the N. W. T., to be Commissioner of the Yukon, in place of Commissioner Ogilvie, who asked to be relieved of the position. Mr. Ross expects to leave for Dawson City in a few days.

Deeds, Not Words.

"Just do a thing and don't talk about it. This is the great secret of success in all enterprises. Talk means discussion; discussion means irritation: irritation means opposition and opposition means hindrance always, whether you are right or wrong."

STEYN'S HOPE WANING

Ex-President of Former Orange Free State Despondent.

BOTHA'S PENDING SURRENDER.

Uncertainty Still Reigns—Boers Are Burying Their Guns—They Have Now No Artillery or Ammunition—Two Cape Rebels to Suffer the Death Penalty for Wrecking a Train.

London, March 12.—The Times has received the following from Bloemfontein: "Boers who have surrendered here say that Mr. Steyn, in a recent speech at Philippolis, admitted that there was no chance of regaining the country."

BOTHA'S PENDING SURRENDER.

Hope Reigns in Spite of the Uncertainty at Pretoria.

Pretoria, March 12.—The result of the negotiations between Lord Kitchener and General Louis Botha is anxiously but hopefully awaited. The presence of Sir Alfred Milner in Pretoria to consult with Lord Kitchener is expected to hasten the change from the military to the civil administration.

Botha Is Willing.

Lorenzo Marquez, March 11.—Gen. Botha is willing to surrender. He asked an armistice in order to communicate with General Dewet and Mr. Steyn. Should they decline, it is believed nevertheless, that General Botha will surrender.

The Boers have no artillery or ammunition, and are burying all their guns.

The railway from Lorenzo Marquez to Pretoria is practically clear of Boers.

DEWET'S RAPID MARCH.

Boer Guerilla and His Men Moving 25 Miles Per Day.

Bloemfontein, March 10.—General Dewet is reported to be moving northward steadily, at the rate of 25 miles a day, with a view of crossing the railway to the eastward. He should now be west of Kroonstad. Several small commandoes are in possession of the southeastern portion of the Orange River Colony.

It is impossible not to be struck with the fact that a great proportion of the former enemies of Great Britain in South Africa now frankly throw in their lot with the British. Brandfort, Kroonstad and Bloemfontein companies of ex-burghers are now bearing arms against the Boers. They state their object is not to operate against their former comrades, but to defend homes and property against marauding bands. Every town in the Free State occupied by the British soon will become a centre of British influence, extending a long distance in their vicinity. Over 13,000 refugees are now within the British lines, and many of them demand arms and permission to take the field. If their requests be granted it will be easy to get 2,000 ex-burghers enrolled on the British side.

Rebels Sentenced to Death.

Cape Town, March 11.—A court-martial has sentenced to death two rebels connected with the recent wrecking of a train at Taalbosch. Others concerned in the crime were condemned to various terms of punishment.

SERIOUSNESS OF THE PLAGUE.

Cape Town Reports Fifteen New Cases—Two Colored People Died in the Streets.

Cape Town, March 11.—The bubonic plague is developing seriously in Cape Town. Fifteen new cases were officially reported to-day and 97 other persons were isolated because of having come in contact with victims of the disease.

To-day two colored persons who had been attacked by the plague died in the streets of Cape Town. A European died while being removed to the hospital.

The malady is reaching the more prosperous classes, and it has been necessary to remove to the hospital the entire family of a gentleman.

KRUGER WANTS DETAILS.

A Long Telegram Sent th Acting President Schalkburger.

London, March 12.—No further news has been received concerning the negotiations between Lord Kitchener and General Botha. The Daily Express says it hears that Lord Kitchener declared the surrender must be unconditional, while the question of the future treatment of the Boers was referred to London. It is asserted that Mr. Kruger, through Dr. Leyds, has sent a long telegram to Mr. Schalkburger, Acting President of the South African Republic, asking for details regarding the negotiations.

Gen. Colvile's Deposition.

London, March 12.—In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. Charles MacKinnon Douglas (Liberal) moved for an inquiry regarding the retirement of Major-General Colvile, who was sent home from South Africa by Lord Roberts for inefficiency in the field.

Mr. Brodrick, Secretary of War, replied as follows: "At Sanna's Post Gen. Colvile blundered about and manoeuvred about until his force was weary, while the Boers carried off guns unmolested. Lord Roberts thought Col. Broadwood did right, although General Colvile took exception to Col. Broadwood's behavior. General Colvile left Col. Broadwood and his shattered force severely alone, and marched his troops in another direction. He showed a lack of enterprise which lost him the confidence of Lord Roberts."

CAPT. BARKER ON THE WAR.

HE LECTURED IN THE Y. M. C. A. LAST NIGHT.

Under the Auspices of the Fortnightly Club—An Interesting Address.

A special meeting of the Peterborough Fortnightly Club was held last night in the Y.M.C.A., where a most interesting talk was given by Capt Barker, of Toronto, who commanded "C" Company First Canadian Contingent to South Africa. The attendance was very large, no doubt, in anticipation of the treat which was about to be heard; nor was there anyone disappointed.

Whilst many have read accounts of the South African engagements, and heard special war correspondents lecture on the same, still, hearing one who was in the thickest of the fight, relate the personal experiences of himself and his company, proved to be intensely interesting.

The chair was occupied by Mr. R. M. Dennistoun, Vice-president of the Club, who called upon Mr. Walter Stocker to open the proceedings with a vocal selection, which he did, the song being entitled "A Greeting to the King."

The chairman in introducing Capt. Barker, the lecturer of the evening, said that it was with feelings of satisfaction and great pleasure that he did so. They had studied in the same office together, and he had watched the captain's record with pride. He had been a good soldier both professionally and as a civilian. His company had always been the banner company of the Queen's Own of Toronto, whilst his record in South Africa had won him distinction. It was the Toronto Company, under the command of Captain Barker, that had first made a name for the Colonials at Sunnyside, and later at Paardeberg. In conclusion, the chairman said that Captain Barker had received flattering offers to remain in service in South Africa, but chose to return an humble citizen of Canada, after having served his country in time of need.

CAPTAIN BARKER.

Captain Barker was cordially received. In his introductory remarks he modestly acknowledged the flattering remarks that were made by the chairman concerning him. He explained at the outset that he was not a lecturer, and he had never delivered a lecture, no did he ever expect to do so. He had promised to come to Peterborough to talk on his experiences in connection with the work of the 1st Canadian Contingent and he would do so in a simple story-like manner. This Captain Barker did in a very interesting manner, and throughout the evening held the undivided attention of his audience, while dealing with a subject that has been rehashed many, many times. With the aid of a black-board, the speaker was able to picture more vividly than no doubt he would otherwise have been able to, the positions of the various forces at different times, the critical points at different moments, and bring out many features that were entirely new to those present.

He had at one time made up his mind to go back to South Africa and join Baden-Powell's police force, but on second consideration he had thought best to remain in Canada, although he felt satisfied that should the time ever again arise when Canada would send troops to help the Motherland, as she no doubt would in the near future, he amongst many others would be found ready to face the enemy.

Capt. Barker brought his hearers very hurriedly over the story of the mobilization of the men at Quebec, the voyage to South Africa, telling of the hardships endured while on shipboard and the strenuous efforts to keep off the disease, resulting in their landing at Cape Town with a clean bill of health. They arrived in Cape Town thirty days after they embarked from Quebec. The reception accorded them at Cape Town, their meeting with the 7th Gordon Highlanders, with whom they continued on friendly terms till the close of the war, the trip from Cape Town to the front was all told in vivid language. On the 7th of December they reached the Orange River, where they gained their first experience at railroad building. The Shropshires, the Gordon Highlanders and the Royal Canadians were brigaded together and known as the 19th Brigade. Continuing, Capt. Barker related the nine weeks' stay at Belmont, the poor Christmas dinner, the excessive heat, and of how on New Year's day the speaker's detachment and the Royal Horse Artillery opened fire on the Boers at Sunnyside. They captured 50, killed 30 and wounded about 17.

Perhaps the most interesting portion of Capt Barker's address was in connection with the Modder River engagement. With the aid of a blackboard and chart the positions of the armies were made very clear, and the leading part the Canadians took in this engagement was told amidst much applause.

Continuing Mr. Barker brought his hearers over the journey to Pretoria, telling of the many amusing and pathetic incidents that occurred on the way. His address throughout was one of the most interesting on the war that has ever been delivered in Peterborough.

At the conclusion of the address a hearty vote of thanks was tendered him and the affair closed by singing "God Save the King."

GRAND DISPLAY

—OF—

Silk and Satin

WAISTS

To the Ladies of Peterborough:

We beg to inform you that we have arranged with the New York Silk Waist Mfg. Co., of Montreal, to have their representative at our store on THURSDAY, MARCH 14th

1901, from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m., for this day only. We propose to display their entire line of Silk and Satin Waists, which are made in the very latest PARISIAN and NEW YORK effects.

This opportunity should not be missed as it will enable our patrons to see and examine a complete range of High-class Waists, and also to select any style and shade made to their order, which will be delivered within a few days.

These Goods are magnificent in every detail, being manufactured on special machines and under expert eyes.

As this is the only opportunity to examine this display, we trust both you and your friends will take advantage of it.

Awaiting your favor,

We remain, yours truly,

R. FAIR & CO.

MATRIMONIAL TRICKS.

A certain much-quoted wise man of old said that "in vain is the net spread in the sight of any bird." But so insidious are the snares that are laid to catch eligible suitors that they are too often unsuspected and undetected, until the fatal matrimonial noose has been tightly tied round the victim's neck.

Perhaps in matters matrimonial the fair sex is more sinned against than sinning; but on the whole the division of forces in this game, in which, as in war, all is fair, is pretty equal. The men tell the lies that bait the matrimonial hook, the ladies act them.

Not every mamma, with a few revolting and marriageable daughters on her hands for disposal is so simple as that dear old lady who fed her daughters largely on a fish diet, because as she ingeniously observed, "Fish are rich in phosphorous, and phosphorous is useful in making matches!"

It would take us far beyond our present purpose to attempt to sound all the depths of the deceptive wiles of coquetry, dress and "make-up" by which the overtrustful of the plain and straightforward male sex are beguiled into believing the objects of their—to begin with—merely polite attention, to be worthy of a life's devotion. These are but the natural weapons of the sex, highly polished and deftly wielded by many, though despised and unused by a few.

Some have gone so far as to say that the word "matrimony" is derived from the fact that the state it names is so much a matter of money; and certainly a great many of the snares laid in the path of the unwary bachelors by designing mammas, maidens and widows are financial pitfalls.

It is generally supposed, and not without grounds, that while men in general look twice at a pretty face, and hardly take the trouble to look at a plain one at all, if the plain one has money she is fairly certain to be married long before the penniless beauty; and of course the wealthy beauty is, so to speak, snapped up before she has time to think seriously on the matter. Hence the importance of money as a bait leads to much painful endeavor to appear well off, and to earn the repute of the possession of wealth, as the repute serves the purpose of bait well enough if it can only be kept up until the fateful words have been said at the altar. After that—well, a veil may decently be drawn over the scene.

In a certain small watering place a retired major on the half-pay list had taken up his abode with a view to living as comfortably as possible within his income. Soon after his arrival, he made the acquaintance of a very charming widow, who lived in a nice little house, and appeared to be very comfortable indeed. Of course it was not to be expected that the gallant soldier would give himself away by telling the real reason of his residence in this particular place, and his rather boastful conversation led the widow to believe that he would prove a splendid catch if he could only be secured. It was an easy matter for her woman's wit, sharpened by experience, to devise a plan by which the major might be suitably impressed with the knowledge of her own wealth, without her having to say anything on the subject. She had, as a small reserve in a local bank, the sum of £20, and this she asked the major one afternoon casually to draw for her, as she did not care to go herself, not being conversant with the ways of banks. The major was delighted to oblige, and it so happened that he was sent on the same errand about once a fortnight. This set him calculating, and the end of it was that being thus, as he fondly supposed, the possessor of direct evidence of the little widow's moneyed possessions, he proposed and was accepted. But too late the eyes of both were opened. The scheming widow had paid in again into the bank, as soon as she received it from the major, her little capital of £20, and the major had ultimately to confess to his bare half-pay.

A fond father of four girls, determined to do all he could to get them off his hands, was accustomed to buttonhole confidentially any eligible young men who might happen to drop in, and inform them that it was his intention to leave to each of his daughters as near £2,000 as he possibly could. But the trick was too palpable. The poor man could not have mustered £2 for each of them, and as in small places the real state of matters can hardly be concealed, he was made the subject of much ridicule, and was often facetiously referred to as "old two thousand."

Going a step further some have been known to have their wills drawn up in due form, leaving to the female members of their families large sums of money in the hope of thereby creating the needful favorable financial impression, though the sums so left were entirely fictitious. The lawyer in such a case is not made the sole repository of the contents of the will, as a few judicious hints given in the proper quarters are sufficient to spread such particulars as it is desired shall reach the ears of those whom it is intended to deceive.

It has indeed happened that the astute legal gentlemen called in to make such a fictitious will has been himself thoroughly well taken in. A certain widow who occupied a large house in a fashionable London district, without means, and living entirely on credit, at last outran her long-suffering creditors' patience, and they began to press her hard. Bethinking herself of a way out of her difficulties, she sent for a solicitor, who happened to be unmarried and in a very large practice, and instructed him to make her will. In it she disposed of properties and investments—all purely imaginary—to the tune of $50,000 or $60,000. Not long afterwards the solicitor proposed, was accepted and found himself, on his marriage, the husband of a penniless adventuress.

Breach-of-promise cases sometimes bring to light the wiles of men in this particular line. During courtship they hold splendid positions, with big salaries, large businesses and the like; but when it becomes their object to cry off, all this property vanishes, they have not salaries enough to marry on, their business hardly pays expenses. Queer reverses of fortune in this way sometimes bring the partner of a large flourishing firm in a week or two to the post of a pound-a-week clerk.

Largest Dam in the World.

The great artificial lake situated at Dnebar, twenty miles southeast of Udalpur, Rajpootana, India, covers an area of twenty-one square miles. The ma in masonry dam which helps to confine this immense body of water is 1,000 feet long by 95 feet high. Engineers say that it is the largest dam in the world.

OUT IN A BLIZZARD.

Sault Ste. Marie, March 11.—Arthur Little, a woodman, was found frozen to death in a snowdrift near Goulais River, Ont., on Friday. The deceased was driven out of camp in Sunday's blizzard by the foreman, with whom he had an altercation. The body was buried in the snow in a ravine, and was found by the barking of a dog, who followed his master. Little was married and leaves one child at Gravenhurst, Ont. The foreman fled from the camp to the American Soo. An investigation has been started by the Crown Attorney.

For the preservation of cut flowers there are numerous recommendations. The last is that a little camphor should be added to the water into which they stand. This is said to lengthen their life for a considerable period.

A Maid to Order.

A Story Touching on the Servant Question.

The table was charming. The pearly expanse of damask that infolded it was one of the Misses Dormond's most treasured possessions, saved out of a general wreck of family fortunes.

The old fashioned silver, of those inimitable patterns which no modern shop can supply, gleamed like irregularly shaped planets at intervals across the cloth.

Moreover, a daffodil bulb cherished in window sill warmth had obligingly thrown out a handful of blossoms. This pot, sheathed in yellow tissue paper, made a thoroughly attractive centerpiece.

"It is simply lovely," said Winifred, with a little sigh of relief and satisfaction. "I shan't be in the least afraid to have Mrs. Caulkington's eagle eye turned upon it, even though you are a candidate for her secretaryship, Isabel, and so much does depend upon making a good impression."

"The house couldn't fail to make a good impression," Isabel broke in. "It is clean and sweet and old fashioned from top to toe. One can't say that a house has a toe. There's just one thing lacking. I do wish we had a good maid to wait on the table. I hate those embarrassing breaks in a home luncheon where the hostess is obliged to cut off in the middle of a sentence and bolt into the kitchen to bring the broiled squab course to table."

"Yes. That's always wretchedly embarrassing," Isabel agreed. "It's harder on the guests than the hostess too. However, there's no help for it. We don't keep a maid, and this suburb isn't a place where you can find a girl to call in for a day at a time. It's a pity, but it can't be helped."

"What is a pity, but can't be helped?" demanded the youngest Miss Dormond, who pirouetted into the room just in time to hear the last half of the sentence.

"Isabel and I were lamenting that we didn't have a maid to serve the luncheon, Gertrude. We were saying how desperately embarrassing it is for a hostess to jump up to remove the plates after a course and to bring the next course to table."

"I never thought of that," Gertrude acquiesced in a disappointed tone "Our entertaining has always been so informal we're likely to make the guests change the plates and bring in the courses from the kitchen themselves. But it's true, as you say, that kind of thing won't do when we're entertaining Mrs. Caulkington. She's so critical that her eyes burn holes in anything they fall on. We wouldn't mind her little peculiarities if she were merely an acquaintance, but if Isabel is going to demand a big, fat salary she must make a big, fat impression. I'm sure Mrs. Caulkington would cut her down half if she knew how poor we are and how badly we need that secretaryship. Something must be done."

"Gertrude, dear, you know perfectly well that nothing can be done. There are only two hours left, and in any case you can't secure a girl here in the country to come in for just one day."

"I know that, but whisht, my dear! An idea dawns in my brain! Let it mature!"

"An idea for what? For getting us a maid?"

"Yes, my dear—a ready maid, so to speak."

"Silly! Do you think Isabel and I have time to waste upon your vaporings?"

"A ready maid—no, a maid to order! Don't talk to me for three minutes. I feel the idea grow in my cerebrum, and it really is a good one."

The young lady sat down in the little oaken window seat and buried her face in her hands.

Three minutes later she sprang up and pirouetted triumphantly around the charming table.

"Huzza! I've solved the problem," she cried. "And I'll stand for it that you shall have a maid to serve Mrs. Caulkington's luncheon. A stunning maid, well trained, light footed, soft voiced; a maid who will not send so much as one plate of raw oysters down the back of your guest; who will do things without diagrams and will not cause the downfall and destruction of precious willow pattern china. In fact, the maid I propose to offer you will be an explanatory key with copious illustrations to the entire servant question."

Gertrude's sisters were very far from despising the girl's ready imagination. It had often helped to solve an economic problem which they themselves had abandoned in despair. But this crisis of the maid to order seemed considerably beyond Gertrude even, and they frankly announced themselves skeptics.

"Do you mean to look for your remarkable maid here in the suburb or elsewhere?" they demanded.

"I shall procure her in the city, or, rather, I shall go on a trip to the city, and I will send the maid to you in my absence."

"But, Gertrude! If you leave now for the city you won't have time, child, to get back for Mrs. Caulkington's luncheon."

"I'm not afraid, but I'm glad of an excuse to absolve myself. I'm in awe of Mrs. Caulkington, and I tremble before the glare of her lorgnettes. You can make my excuses to Mrs. Caulkington and tell her that I was obliged to go into the city on pressing business."

It seemed an injustice that Gertrude should not be there to witness the success of the occasion for which they had all worked so hard.

The older girls reasoned, pleaded, represented, but Gertrude stood firm.

* * * * * * *

Mrs. Caulkington's critical eyes were already boring holes in the drawing room furniture, and the luncheon hour was but three minutes in the future.

Isabel, in her prettiest silk waist, was arranging the oyster plates upon the table preliminary to ushering their guest into the dining room.

Suddenly a purling of gingham skirts brushed the silence of the place, and a soft voice sounded in Isabel's ear.

"If yo' please, miss," said the voice, "Miss Gertrude done send me. I am de maid to ordah."

"Good gracious!" shrieked Isabel under her breath. She started back, the oyster plate in her hand narrowly escaping calamity.

She said "Good gracious" once more, and very fervently, when she turned, for there, not a yard from her side, waiting to be assigned to her duties, stood the most desirable of colored waitresses.

She was tall, well poised and, barring her skin, a strikingly handsome young woman. Her pink gingham gown fitted to perfection and closely resembled one worn by Gertrude for mornings on the porch. Her dainty ruffled apron was strikingly like one which Isabel herself wore while sewing. Perched saucily in her black, ripply hair she wore a bit of a cap, which, when examined at close range, seemed to be nothing more than a tuft of white lace cleverly pinned.

Isabel took a second look at her new acquisition and dropped into a chair, laughing weakly.

"Miss Gertrude done send me, miss," the maid repeated softly, "an she said fo' yo' to jest go set in de pariah an leave all de servin to me."

"Oh, Gertrude, Gertrude!" gurgled Isabel. "What nonsense won't that child attempt?"

The luncheon was faultlessly served. Never was waitress quicker, lighter, softer, more all seeing, more graceful.

Even the critical Mrs. Caulkington was impressed.

Afterward, when the luncheon party had adjourned to the drawing room, the guest deliberately led around to the subject of domestics.

"Do you find it as hard to get good girls in the suburbs as we do in the city?" she asked. "I imagine not, for that young waitress of yours is perfection itself."

"Well, good girls are very scarce here," answered Isabel, "and I've no doubt we'd have endless trouble if we had to change. But, you see, we have raised Anna ourselves. She knows our own ways and suits us perfectly. We've had her for more than ten years. I know she'll never leave us—unless, of course, she marries and has a home of her own."

"My dear girl, you simply have a treasure," cried the visitor, with warmth. "If I were in your place, I would shiver at the very thought of losing her. And, do you know, since I've seen how perfectly your little table is arranged and served I'm really afraid of what Miss Isabel will think when she comes to me in the city. I hope you will close your eyes to a number of things in my housekeeping, Miss Isabel."

"Oh, I am not critical, Mrs. Caulkington," laughed Isabel. "And every one knows how hard it is to get maids like Anna nowadays."—What to Eat.

Neglected Dryden.

Notwithstanding Lowell's high praise of Dryden's prose works and the accusation he brings against literary plunderers of this magnate of letters 200 years ago, few people except scholars now ever open Dryden's essays, though they are well worth careful perusal and study, in spite of Swift's malicious and witty lines:

Read all the prefaces of Dryden,
For these our critics much confide in,
Though merely writ at first for filling
To raise the volume's price a shilling.

There is truth as well as wit in this characterization, for Dryden was in some respects but a literary hack, although a man of genius. But, being a genius, it was impossible for him to write anything, however carelessly and slipshod, without something finding its way in that will arrest the reader's attention even yet, after the lapse of two centuries. Unlike the other and smaller literary hacks of his time, whatever Dryden wrote he wrote freely, and there is an absence of cramped formulas and of pedantic utterances, as a rule, which is interesting. Even in his shilling prefaces to which Swift alludes the reader will have no difficulty in discovering a man of genius, one of many lovable traits and great characteristics, and at least Dryden's own likings and judgments are set forth pleasantly and frequently in a convincing manner. He is one of the old writers that weary modern given up to novel reading could profitably turn back to and peruse to their own great advantage.—Exchange.

A LONG COURSE OF LOVE.

Although it is many years since Lang Tam's courtship, it is still spoken of in the Shaws. I myself have heard the story told at more than one ingle within the month, and the last recital interested me as much as the first. In the main, I think, Lang Tam was a philosopher.

What has made his one amour a part of the unwritten history of the village, was not that courtships were scarce, that young men were few or young women distant, Time and manner were what did it, but as to the former, the Shaws was notorious.

It was always slow in arriving at its own mind, but having once reached it there was no turning back. This was cardinal and the reputation of the Shaws rested upon it. The subject made little difference, and if much depended upon the issue, the more deliberate it was. It looked at it from all sides, and then tried to reckon with the future. The Shaws browsed over every thought it got, and then chewed the cud at leisure.

But it even carried this into its love affairs. The young men were exasperating, and had young women known anything better, very few marriages would have taken place in the Shaws. The latter wereaccounted douce, a trait that was altogether in their favor, but it was caused by nothing more nor less than their training in patience, both by precept and example; the first in their childhood, and the second when they were old enough to observe for themselves.

A young man of the Shaws unconsciously followed the leading of his heart—but only so far. He took love and fact, weighed the one against the other, and became reflective. A struggle usually ensued, and love sometimes won, sometimes other considerations, in which latter case he would retire from the field with the admonition to the young woman that love was terribly deceiving and dangerous to meddle with. The two would part in silence, and the Shaws would exonerate the young man.

No one ever knew how Lang Tam began his courtship of Peggie Wilkie, but the first real symptom of his love, as far as the Shaws has any record, was the Sabbath morning he gave Peggie a peppermint when they met at the kirk gate. Peter Pirn stood by and saw them. Lang Tam, he afterwards said, was like one transfigured. He seemed to grow in height and strode as no one had ever seen him do before, even to leaving Peggie a step or two behind in that moment of his tense emotion. He stumbled when he reached the kirk steps which was interpreted as a certain sign that his happiness blinded him. Peter said they would make a match of it sometime, and the Shaws settled down to see what would come of it.

It was soon made manifest that Lang Tam and Peggie were thick in love. At kirk and market they were seen together, on the brae in the evening and down by the Mains Loan, Kirstie Powrie, who regarded life only from its prosy side, declared that 'they carried on like perfec' fules."

The Shaws withheld its judgment, though they recognized the seriousness of the situation. True love had its mean, the heart was never to be permitted to get the better of the mind, but Lang Tam and Peggie were beyond all reason. It was as if they were the only two in the Shaws, and made no disguise of it. Their love ripened too early. The Shaws shook its head, but waited. What it feared was what happened. Lang Tam and Peggie were engaged before the end of two months. The Shaws frowned and said it was a scandal. Mary Wilkie mildly remonstrated with her daughter: Jeames Ford took his son to task for his perversity, and prayed that a right mind might be vouchsafed him.

Peter Prin declared years afterwards, that Jeames' prayer was the most effectual he ever delivered, and on the whole, he thought that he might have asked for less. It was nearly four years since the engagement, and Lang Tam and Peggie were still unmarried. Had the probationary courtship lasted that time nothing would have been thought of it. The Shaws was seized with another fear, and felt that its reputation was in jeopardy. Lang Tam had long before returned to his normal mind, the only difference noted being an absent manner whether with Peggie or alone. According to a report brought to the village by young Willie Purdie, who had watched them one evening under covert for two hours on the edge of the Caithly woods, about the only thing Lang Tam said to Peggie was:

"Ay, umpha, just so—ay," and that Peggie's answer was:

"It's terrible hoo the time gaes by."

One or two believed that Lang Tam was carefully considering the matter, while others feared that his long reflections were induced by a desire to withdraw, and that he was simply planning the safest means to do it. Jeames was consulted as to the behavior of his son at table, and when he told Peter that he was "just a kinda aff his meat," Peter, who was an oracle on the subject, pronounced it "naething ava." Seven months later, when Jeames was again asked for the signs, he announced hopefully:

"Weel, the laddie's beginnin' tae fik; fike, wi' only half o' hes parritch gane."

"Ye tell me sae?" Peter said with the light of import in his eye. "Then, sal, things is gett'n' serious. Keep a gude look oot Jeames, an, lat's ken again hoo he behaves,"

A month later Jeames was striding down the brae towards the wynd when he almost ran into Peter and Willum Duffy.

"He's gettin' on fine," Jeames said, reassured. "This vera mornin' he cud just tak's spunefu', an' it was na suner in than it was oot again. Ou ay, he's gettin' on fine."

Peter and Willum exchanged glances and nodded simultaneously. There was no fear of Lang Tam now, he would soon marry Peggie.

Some time after, when Peggie was Mrs. Thomas Ford, Lang Tam explained in a moment of confidence to the questioning stare of Peter, that—

"It was sae sweet tae think that Peggie was mine that I juist roued an' roued it like a sweet morsel under my tongue until I cudna keep the lassie waitin' ony langer, but the mair I thocht o' the time when we wad get marriet it was maist a' I cud get thro' wi'. I lived in a kinda heaven for weeks, an' my heart kept loup, loupin' until I really thocht it wad stick i' my mooth. I ay thocht muckle o' Peggie, but noo' I ken there's no' the marrow o' her in a' the Shaws."

FOWLS AND THEIR FRUIT.

Corn fattens and is heating.

A warm breakfast will help the laying hens.

The roosting places demand three things—cleanliness, good ventilation and good drainage.

Too much food means, first, wasted grain; second, ill health of the fowls, and, third, fewer eggs.

Unsuitable locations entail loss; inconvenient houses waste time. Lack of proper appliances increases labor.

In a state of nature hens seek food of various kinds in order to have a supply of all the elements that go to form the eggs they lay.

Pullets are the best layers. Outside of those kept for their special excellence for sitters the hens that are over two years old should be sold.

During the winter care should be taken to provide a warm, soft breakfast, ready as soon as the hens fly down from the the roosts. It will help laying.

A close, unventilated or imperfectly ventilated house is emphatically a foul house. Better cold than foul air; better a little danger of frozen combs than germs of disease.

KITCHEN HELPS.

Dish towels should be first washed out in cool or lukewarm water before scalding. To put them in hot soapsuds first is to set the grease.

Teacups, even when carefully kept, sometimes have dark stains at the bottom, caused by the action of the tannin in the tea. Salt, slightly moistened, will remove these, but in the case of very fine china it sometimes scratches it a little. Powdered whiting will be found quite harmless and equally good.

LOVE LAUGHS AT COLD.

Whatever May Be the Weather Couples Spoon in the Park.

It may be all very true that "love laughs at locksmiths," but it appears to be equally true that love laughs at cold weather. For three months or more I have been watching the performances of several pairs of lovers in Johnson Park. It is a beautiful place in summer—I know of no more dainty spot in all the earth, yet it is not quite an ideal place for love-making if one desires any particular degree of isolation. But all through the summer evenings these lovers have told each other the "old, old story" night after night in the little park. It is always light there. The gleam of the electric lights and the windows of many residences make any part of the park almost as light as day, but these lovers seem to have become accustomed to all that, and have even become so tame that they have grown to disregard even the children who play in the park during the early evening. This season of love-making has served as amusement for many residents living in that neighborhood, and everyone supposed that when the cold weather came on the young people would disappear and continue their billing and cooing in somebody's parlor; but not so. During all the cold evenings of th past week, at least two couples have never miss'd a night. As soon as it is fairly dark they appear on the benches just as affectionate as ever, if not a little more so, because as the nights grow colder they sit a little closer together, and there are not so many windows open from which they are watched, and not so many mischievous children to throw sticks at them. I believe that must be what is known as true love, for it certainly cannot be a false love that induces two human beings to sit out of doors such nights as we have had during the past week.—Buffalo News.

What a Bridegroom Should Do.

There is a modern definition of a bridegroom which is a little cruel certainly, but which pretty well describes the position of that personage. A bridegroom is said to be a thing in a black coat who attends weddings. And it is quite true that in point of importance he ranks very low down indeed in the eyes of the spectator. Yet there is not the slightest reason really why he should appear in such a very poor light as he too often does.

He need not, for instance, come into church or the room as if he were being led to execution. He need not hang his head as if caught in the commission of a crime, or blunder about with an awkwardness which makes every girl present feel thankful she is not in the bride's shoes.

No doubt his position is painful and trying. He feels that he is the target for all eyes, when, in fact, he is nothing of the kind. Let him start by convincing himself that no one is likely to waste a chance on him when there are the bride and the bridesmaids to be looked at, and he will find it easier to preserve his self-possession. He must try to look happy, no matter how he feels.

Can a worse compliment be paid to the girl he has induced to marry him than looking as if he regretted his folly? He must try to look manly, not only for her sake, but his own, for she is very likely to regret her decision at the last moment when she sees how it seems to affect him. He should look proud.

Surely it ought to be the proudest moment of his life; he should be elated, and not ashamed. He should be in good spirits, yet not carried away by them. A jocular bridegroom is a thing one has only to see once to remember with horror for the rest of one's days.—N. Y. Times.

Bound Children.

In these days of progress and discontent with the old methods the following item from a western paper may be refreshing to those who long for the "good old times":

"A novel document was filed in the office of the County Recorder recently. It is a paper wherein Mrs. Belle Asher apprentices her daughter, Letha Asher, 9 years old, to Mary Jane Love 'to learn the trade and art of housekeeping.'" Although it appears to be "novel," the apprenticeship, or, as it is familiarly called, "the binding out" of children, particularly girls, as servants, is very common in the west and south. The writer knows of a case where a benevolent western woman had a little colored girl "bound" to her (or apprenticed) by the mother as a token of gratitude at Christmas, In return for the child's services the mistress became responsible for her boarding, lodging and education.

They Stopped Laughing.

It takes a bright woman to rebuke another woman's rudeness, a general statement well borne out by the following story:

A lady entered a railway train and took a seat in front of a newly-married couple. She was hardly seated before they began making remarks about her.

Her last year's bonnet and cloak were fully criticized, with more or less giggling on the bride's part, and there is no telling what might have come next if the lady had not put a sudden stop to the conversation by a bit of strategy.

She turned her head, noticed that the bride was considerably older than the groom, and in the smoothest of tones said:

"Madam, will you please ask your son to close the window behind you?"

The "son" closed his mouth, and the bride no longer giggled.

Sunlight Made to Order.

Tesla, says an article quoted in Current Literature, had two big undertakings on hand when his laboratory caught on fire and was destroyed in New York. The more important of these, from his point of view, was the production of light by the vibration of the atmosphere. According to the inventor, the light of the sun is the result of vibration in 94,000,000 miles of ether, which separate us from the center of the solar system of which we are a part. Tesla's idea is to produce here on earth vibrations similar to those which cause sunlight, and thus give us a light as intense as that of the sun, with no danger of obstruction from clouds. The inventor had already done something towards accomplishing this end when the fire occurred. It is understood that he has again taken the subject up in a way. To illustrate his principle it is only necessary to take a long bar of glass and note the brilliancy of the light it produces through vibration alone. It is a prismatic experiment, in general terms, applied to electricity. Tesla can compute vibration as readily as most people count the wealth they would like to have. He can tell you the number of vibrations produced by a fly in action and draw interesting comparison therefrom. For example, this young man from Smiljan will tell you that a certain kind of fly peculiar to the swamps of Central America moves his wings about 25,000 times to the second. You may doubt the accuracy of this statment in your own mind, but if you hunger for details Tesla will sit down and convince you with figures adduced from a scientific contemplation of the problem.

"All I have to do," he said, recently, "is to duplicate the number of vibrations required to light up the sun, and the practicability of my theory will have been demonstrated. It is difficult for me to give you an idea that you will readily grasp about this question of vibration. In ordinary life our minds do not deal with the figures that come up in such investigations. I have come to the conclusion that the sunlight is produced by five hundred trillion vibration of the atmosphere per second. In order to manufacture the same kind of light it will be necessary to produce an equal number of vibrations by machinery. I have succeeded up to a certain point, but am still at work on the task."

The Smallest Commonwealth.

The smallest commonwealth of the world, says an article quoted in Current Literature, is the little republic Tavolara upon the little island of the same name, situated some seven or eight miles south of the island of Sardinia. Tavolara is an island about one mile in diameter and inhabited at present by fifty-five people——men, women, and children. In 1836 Karl Albert, then King of Sardinia, bestowed the supremacy over this little isle upon the Bartoleoni family, and for forty-six years "King" Paul I. reigned in peace in his domain. He died on May 30, 1882, and shortly before his demise called all his faithful subjects to his bedside and declared it to be his earnest desire that none of his relatives should succeed him as the head of Government in the island, but that he considered if for the best that the good people of Tavolara should govern themselves. After this last wish no candidate for the vacated throne could be found among the family of the deceased, who were used to consider their "King's" wish law, and the little island remained ungoverned for four years. At last, in 1886, the little island was declared a republic. Their constitution gives elective franchise to both men and women; a president is elected to serve six years. None of their officers receive any compensation.

They Deserved It.

A country minister took permanent leave of his congregation in the following pathetic manner: Brothers and sisters, I come to say good-by. I don't think God loves this church, because none of you ever die. I don't think you love each other, because I never marry any of you. I don't think you love me, because you have not paid my salary; your donations are moldy fruit and wormy apples, and by their fruits ye shall know them. Brothers, I am going to a better place, to be chaplain of a penitentiary; where I go ye cannot come; I go to prepare a place for you, and may the Lord have mercy on your souls, Good-by.

Must Have Been There.

A good story is told on Chauncey Depew. He received a letter from a young married friend in Albany asking for a pass for his mother-in-law, who was coming to make him a visit, and closing with the delicate hint: "Don't forget to have the return coupon attached." Mr. Depew is nothing if not worldly wise and sympathetic, and in sending the pass he wrote; "I have not neglected the return coupon, and have limited it to three days."

The Future.

We can as little argue respecting the laws of the future state from those which gird us about here, as the Esquimaux could argue respecting tropical productions from the sterility of his own ice-bound snow-covered coasts. That there is a future, that we shall live in it, and that God will be our God then as now, these are the great facts of transcendent importance; that there will be love and friendship and mutual recognitions is indicated by many passages in scripture and is not contradicted by Christ's teaching.

His Wages.

Mrs. Potts-Point Toorak—My good man, would you mind telling me what your wages are? Paddy O'Harren, of the Botanical Garden—I'm workin' in the Santanical gardens here, and I gess thirty bobs a day ma'am. Mrs. P.—Dear me, what a princely income! Thirty shillings a day, you said, did you not? P. O'H.—Thirty bobs a day ounst a week.

When Death Comes.

"When death comes we walk down the valley of shadows, knowing that we shall find there the shining footprints of the Saviour, and confident that in due time the morning light of the resurrection will break upon the spirit and we shall be with God forever."

STORIES OF BRET HARTE.

How He Came to Print "The Heathen Chinee" and Win Fame.

Several friends of Bret Harte were discussing a story of his which came out lately in a leading periodical, and several anecdotes were told about him which have, I believe, never been in print. The men were all prominent in some department of life, and the conversation was held in the reading room of the Union League Club.

"I wonder if you know how Harte became famous?" said one fine-looking old man. "I was in the West at the time. Dear me, it must have been twenty-five years ago! He had been doing regular work for the California Overland Monthly, and the editor looked upon him as a person to be relied on to do not only regular work, but to fill in gaps when they appeared. One day he rushed up to Harte and said:

"'I must have half a column immediately. Have you anything on hand?'

"Harte went to his desk and, overturning a pile of manuscript, picked out some verses and threw them to the editor with the remark:

"'I don't know whether they will suit, but I have nothing else the right length.'

"The verses were 'The Heathen Chinee.'

"The next day Harte was famous. He has since done what he himself considers better work, but the public, for once constant, gives the highest praise to the work which he thought hardly worth printing."

"The first time Bret Harte came east," said a friend the other day, "he was to take in all the chief cities in New England. We who are familiar with the east exclaimed almost in a breath, 'How he will enjoy the beautiful New England fall! Perhaps the gorgeousness of the foliage seen by him for the first time will inspire another famous poem!'

"After he had been east for a short time he wrote me a letter, which I can tell you almost word for word. It ran like this:

"'You ask me what has impressed me most since I left home. I can answer emphatically the waitresses! I never saw a woman wait at table before. After my lecture in Concord I was waited on by one at breakfast. She said to me:

"'Coffee, tea, ham, eggs and bacon, I enjoyed your lecture, Mr. Harte. You had a most select audience.'

"He never even mentioned the autumn leaves!"—New York Herald.

Valuable Farm
AND TWO PARK LOTS

BIRTH RATE GOES UP.

An Increase of 1,314 in 1900 Over 1899—Registrar-General's Full Returns.

Toronto, March 9.—The Registrar-General has received complete returns of the births, marriages and deaths in Ontario during 1900. The increase in deaths is thought to be due to the excessive heat during the month of August. The birth rate last year was 19.9 per 1,000, compated with 19.4 in 1899, and 20.4 in 1898.

Marriages	15,375	16,514	17,123	609
Deaths	28,370	28,607	29,594	987

Daily Examiner.

MONDAY, MARCH 10, 1901.

OUR ADVERTISERS.

During the present disturbed relations with our advertisers, on account of the disastrous fire in the Examiner buildings, we are compelled to ask the indulgence of our patrons for a few days until we can pull ourselves together again. Hard and earnest work is being done to instal an entirely new printing plant in our present temporary premises at No. 411 George Street, a few doors south of the burned building, and by the end of the week, we hope to resume our contracts with our advertisers. In the meantime, in order to keep our advertisers as much in touch with our readers as possible, we will be able to insert short local notices of their business announcements.

The Peterborough Bookstore.

Our store will necessarily have to be closed for a day or two longer before the insurance men will be able to adjust the losses and we are in a position to put the stock in shape for doing business. The daily papers will be delivered to customers as usual, and may also be obtained at the Examiner's temporary premises, 411 George Street, where business orders may also be placed in the meantime.

A. H. STRATTON & CO

Retiring from Business.

There have been enough bona fide bargains handed out to the ladies of Peterborough, during the first seven days of our closing-out sale, to go around the town like wild-fire. There's not a home in town but what has been talking about our sale. Let it be distinctly understood that the whole stock must be cleared out without delay, and that means almost at your own prices. We can't afford to dilly-dally over sales. With the same object in view, we trust all those indebted to us will be kind enough to pay their accounts promptly.

MISS K. RUDKINS.

Routley's Magic Prices.

The great sale of the Toronto Bazaar stock, bought at a fraction on the dollar, is a bonanza to Peterborough citizens. The goods are moving with such rapidity that special lines advertised one day are very often completely sold out the next. There are many lines, however, such as Wall Papers, Window Blinds, China, Crockery, etc., that can stand a month's heavy selling before being cleared. Another thing is certain—that no matter what you buy here you can count on securing wonderful bargains—bargains such as can be obtained nowhere else in Peterborough or any other town in Ontario.

C. B. ROUTLEY.

Board of Trade.

The annual meeting of the Board of Trade will be held this evening, for the election of officers and the conduct of routine business.

Teacher Wanted.

Teacher wanted for S. S No. 5, Smith (Bridgenorth), Normal preferred. Duties to commence March 25, if possible. Apply to G. D. Mann, Bridgenorth. 3d1w

Charters for Peterborough.

In the charters granted on Saturday by the Provincial Government are those of the Peterborough Hydraulic Power Co., capital stock $250,000, and the Central Milling Co., of Peterborough, capitalized at $40,000.

Gents' Shirts.

For variety, style and latest ideas in Gentlemen's Spring Shirts, with and without collars, made from all the most desirable fabrics, at 25c, 50c, etc., etc. Call at the Port Hope Knitting Works—it will be worth your while.

The Engineering Club.

At the Engineering Club this evening Mr. F. A. Dobbin will give a review of the various mechanical processes connected with printing. To those unfamiliar with the modern typesetting machines the review will be of unusual interest. The general public is invited. Meeting opens promptly at 8 o'clock at Y.M.C.A. hall.

The Examiner has completed arrangements for having a new plant installed by the latter part of the week and will by that time be in a position to fulfil all advertising contracts and orders in job work. A telephone has already been placed in position in our new premises, 411 George St. No. 57 will find us as usual.

Maid of Mount Shannon.

The public are reminded of the military drama, entitled "The Maid of Mount Shannon," which will be presented in Bradborn's opera house, under the auspices of St. Peter's T.A.S., on Monday evening next. The affair promises to be one of the best amateur productions that has been put on by any amateur company in some time. Tickets, 25 cents; reserved seats, 35c.

A Cheque for $90,000.

Mr R C McHarrie, manager of the local branch of the bank of Commerce, who has been holding in trust the final deposit of $90,000 00, in connection with the purchase of the Dickson Company property by the Cereal Co., handed over a cheque for that amount to-day, to Mr A P Poussette, K C, solicitor for the Dickson Coy, finally closing the deal.

LABOUR MEETING.

A Public Meeting in the interests of workingmen will be held in the Opera House on Friday night, commencing at eight o'clock. Addresses will be delivered by Mr. Ralph Smith, M.P., President of the Dominion Labour Congress and Mr. A.W. Puttee, Labour Member for Winnipeg. Admission free. R. F. McGregor, Chairman; Fred Browne, Secretary Committee.

AMERICAN CEREAL COMPANY WELCOMED

Many Prominent Citizens Gather to Meet the Directors at a Banquet.

HON. SENATOR COX WAS ALSO PRESENT.

Cordial Words and Offers of Co-operation From Many of the Town's Representative Business and Professional Men—The Big Concern Will be in Full Swing This Fall—Many Hundreds of Hands to be Employed—List of the Guests Present Last Night.

The banquet hall of the Oriental hotel was filled with representative professional and business men of the town, last evening, assembled as the guests of Hon. J. R. Stratton, for the purpose of extending a welcome to Messrs. Robt. Stuart, W. D. Douglas and G. E. Wells, directors of the American Cereal Company, who were in Peterboro during the day accompanied by Hon. Senator Cox.

The proposed visit of the aforementioned gentlemen was not learned of until Saturday evening and consequently arrangements had to be completed with the greatest despatch, but Mine Host Graham was equal to the occasion and served a most excellent menu, which was the subject of much complimentary comment during the evening.

Previous to entering the dining room a reception was held in the parlours, when the citizens had an opportunity of being introduced to the directors of Peterboro's new industry and meeting them personally.

There were in the neighborhood of a hundred and fifty guests present. The chair was occupied by Hon. J. R. Stratton. At his right were seated Messrs. G. E. Wells, R. R. Hall, W. D. Douglas and His Honor Judge Weller, while on his right were Messrs. Peter Hamilton, Robt. Stuart, Ven. Archdeacon Casey, Hon. Senator Cox and His Worship Mayor Denne. The list of invited guests present was as appended:

THE GUESTS.

THE TOAST LIST

When justice, not to be characterized as tardy, had been done the menu, Hon. Mr. Stratton proposed the toast of His Majesty the King, which was honoured by singing the National Anthem. Mr. Stratton then explained that when he had expressed a wish to bring the Directors of the Cereal Company in contact with the citizens of the town, his desire had been acceeded to on the stipulations that on this occasion the visitors would not be asked to make speeches. He felt, however, that it would not be in keeping with the occasion if he did not ask the gathering to join in drinking the health of the guests of honour. It was seldom that the citizens had with them such distinguished visitors, and he was sure that those present would be disappointed if no opportunity was afforded them of expressing their appreciation of this great industry which was about to be established in their midst and of voicing their pleasure and co-operating in any measure which would give assistance to the directors. In saying this he was sure he expressed the sentiments of all present. (Applause.) He hoped the venture would prove to be a most profitable one to the company—so profitable, in fact, as to ensure the establishment of an industry of even far greater importance than was at present anticipated by the citizens. (Applause). In referring with so much pleasure to the advent of the new industry he did not intend to forget to mention the name of one who had always stood by the town and taken the keenest interest in its welfare. He referred to the Hon. Senator Cox (Applause) who had taken the initiative in inducing the Cereal Company to locate its Canadian Branch in Peterborough, and had brought all his influence to bear in endeavoring to secure the industry for the town. (Applause). Mr. Stratton did not think he was at all overstepping the mark in saying that it was owing entirely to the energy of Hon. Senator Cox that Peterborough's great water power was at last to be properly harnessed and developed for the best interests of the community. He asked all to join him in drinking the health and in wishing all success to the American Cereal Company.

The toast was received with cheers and the greatest enthusiasm.

SENATOR COX.

When Senator Cox rose to reply to the toast, he was greeted with tumultuous applause, which he modestly asserted he felt sure was accorded, not to him, but to the directors of the Company. He did not pretend to be the possessor of eloquence, but any powers which he possessed in this regard he had exerted in showing the directors of the Company that Peterborough was the only place in the Dominion in which to locate their Canadian branch. (Applause) He had pointed out that an unequalled water power could be procured, that competing lines of railways entered the town, that freight rates would be reasonable on account of the near completion of the Trent Valley Canal—that, in fact, Peterborough possessed every advantage desirable for a first-class manufacturing town. He could now say with confidence that his efforts had been successful as, though work was not actually commenced, yet the purchase money, amounting to $100,000 had been paid over for the property this afternoon, which might be regarded as a sure evidence of good faith. He was much gratified to see such a representative gathering of citizens assembled for the purpose of meeting the representatives of the Cereal Company. He still regarded himself as a citizen of Peterborough, and liked to think that he had only removed to Toronto for a time. He intended to return to the town—he held a lot in the cemetery here. But joking aside he was ready to return at any time when he felt that his presence would be any use to Peterboro (applause). Speaking again of the Cereal Company Senator Cox referred to it as one of the most important industrial undertakings on the continent, which would not only employ a large number of hands in the town, but would create a grand market for the farming community—a market such as would establish the future of Peterboro. In concluding he brought up the matter of the ratification of the town by-law by the Legislature, and spoke of his faith in the ability of Mr. Stratton to secure the assent of the members of the House to the passage of the necessary legislation.

The next toast which Mr. Stratton proposed was that of "The Mayor and Corporation," with which he coupled the names of His Worship Mayor Denne and His Honor Police Magistrate Dumble.

MAYOR DENNE.

Mr. Denne warmly thanked Mr. Stratton for the opportunity afforded him of meeting the representatives of the Cereal Company, and in his official capacity on behalf of the citizens extended the heartiest welcome to the visitors and extended to them the freedom of the town. In expanding on the advantages possessed by the town he mentioned the educational facilities, the numerous churches, the good streets and the permanent improvements, including the sewers and the possession of a first class waterworks system. There were all advantages, he thought, which would be appreciated as well as the fact that Peterboro was located in the midst of a vast fruitful agricultural district, especially adapted to grain-growing purposes. The shipping facilities could not be excelled.

The council fully realised what the result of the work of this company meant to the Town of Peterborough, and the town was sending a deputation to wait on the Government on Thursday next for the purpose of impressing on the Government the value to the town of new industry. It would give this deputation the greatest pleasure to return home and report to the ratepayers of Peterborough that the by-law fixing the assessment had been confirmed.

MR D W DUMBLE

Mr. D. W. Dumble, P.M., responded to toast. In referring to the representatives of the Company present, said he preferred to consider them as repatriated Canadians, and that next to a Canadian he respected and honoured good Americans, and he welcomed them to this country. He knew the Americans appreciated the resources of this country for the investment of capital, by their entering into this country at the Yukon, Sydney, and Peterborough. (Applause) He did not see the difference in Canada being developed by the Canadians or the Americans if the Canadians got the benefit from the investment. He congratulated the Cereal Company on their appreciations of the conditions to be found in Peterborough, which the citizens had realized, but had not the courage of their convictions to develop.

The next toast proposed by the chairman was "The Learned Professions," and those named in connection therewith were His Honour Judge Weller, Mr R M Dennistoun, Dr Halliday and Ven Archdeacon Casey. This toast was received by those present with loud cheers.

HIS HONOUR JUDGE WELLER

His Honour Judge Weller on opening, after being loudly applauded, said this was the best dinner he had enjoyed in his remembrance, and he spoke of the thoughtfulness of Hon Mr Stratton in inviting the leading citizens to meet the representatives of the Cereal Company, and personally he was particularly grateful in being afforded an opportunity of extending a welcome to these gentleman. The grand jury at the last general Sessions had brought in a presentment endorsing the by-law proposed by the town, fixing the assessment for forty two years, and, as the Grand Jury represented the whole constituency, this fact should make it an absolute certainty that the by-law should be ratified by the Legislature. He spoke of the modesty of Senator Cox over the ovation which he received on rising to respond to the toast of the Company, and said that Senator Cox was personally fully entitled to all thanks for all he had done for the town of Peterborough and for the sacrifices which he had made in the interests of the municipality.

R. M. DENNISTOUN.

Then Mr R M Dennistoun was called on by the chairman. In opening, Mr Dennistoun expressed his surprise at being called on to reply to the toast as he thought that all the learning was not centred in the legal profession. The clergy and the medical profession had for years passed been looked upon as the leading professions. But the old limits had been extended in recent years and we find this in all special studies and it went beyond the studies of law, theology and medicine in all branches of manufacturing. In these new branches specialists were needed in manufacturing, such as the scientist. Then he spoke of the benefits already felt in Peterborough by the Cereal Company coming to the town. All felt the impetus already. There was no law firm that had not already felt the impetus given to rents and business generally. The American Cereal Company is associated with all classes and it is welcomed with open hearts on every hand. The citizens would loyally support Mr. Stratton in obtaining from the gentlemen of the Legislature the ratification of the by-law as it stands.

DR. HALLIDAY.

Dr. Halliday was warmly applauded as he arose. In reply he thanked the chairman for the opportunity which had been given for meeting the gentlemen of the Cereal Company. He was glad to join his voice in extending a welcome to them, and he was proud of the town and enthusiastic as to its future. The Town of Peterborough, he said, was peculiarly adapted for the purposes of the new company and it was unique in being situated amid the best of agricultural districts and unique also for its splendid connection with railways and other carriers of trade. He referred glowingly to the mineral resources of the district which were only awaiting such energy as displayed by the Cereal Company for the proper development. He hoped that the Cereal Company was one of the first of many manufacturing industries which would locate in Peterborough. (Load applause).

VEN. ARCHDEACON CASEY.

Then came what proved to be the speech of the evening. Ven. Archdeacon Casey was warmly received as he rose to reply. In return he opened by extending quite as hearty a welcome to the directors of the Cereal Company. He had come to the reception at the invitation of Mr Stratton, for the good of the town, and he hoped it was for the good of the Company as well. The town had showered all kinds of encomiums on Senator Cox for taking initiatory steps in connection with inducing the Company to establish the Canadian branch in Peterborough, and he surely deserved them all. Senator Cox had spoken of retaining his lot in the cemetery, but he hoped he would be a long time in taking it up. Peterborough is known as the greatest town in the Dominion and it would be known as the greatest town in the world after the citizens had been dieted for a time on "Quaker Oats." He had heard once that oats were the staple diet of Great Britain. The story ran that a Scotchman was taunted with the fact that oats were fed to horses in England and to men in Scotland, to which the Scot replied, "Where would you find better horses or better men." (Applause and prolonged laughter) After further witty remarks which convulsed the audience with laughter he closed by saying the people of Peterborough should eat porridge three times a day to encourage the coming industry "Manufacturing Industries" was the next toast proposed by the chairman. With this he coupled the names of Mr John Carnegie and Mr. Peter Hamilton. This toast, of course, was received with applause.

MR. CARNEGIE.

Mr Carnegie was received with cheers. The speaker appreciated the kindness of Mr Stratton in giving him an opportunity of expressing his satisfaction over the establishment of the Cereal Company in Peterborough. He was doubly glad on account of the chance given of adding his voice to that of Senator Cox in regard to the importance which Peterborough attached to the ratification of the agreement with the Cereal Company, which he considered should be carried out, not only to the letter, but in the spirit. He was sure that Mr. Stratton with his influence could carry out the town's wishes in the matter. He strongly urged the Council to back up Mr. Stratton's efforts in regard to the agreement, in order that the good name of the town might be maintained. (Applause.)

MR. PETER HAMILTON.

Mr Peter Hamilton was next called on. He was received with applause, which was renewed by cheers to the echo. Mr Hamilton's remarks commanded the closest attention from the interested diners. As a representative of the manufacturing interests of the town he had felt when the project of bringing this Cereal Company to town was first mentioned that its presence would be of incalculable benefit to the town and mean a large addition to the population. Later reports had confirmed his ideas upon the subject. Peterborough was well situated for the establishment of such an industry, as the two most important railways of Canada passed through the town and we had in the perspective the completion of Trent Valley Canal, which would have in its influence the lowering of freight rates, the importance of which was understood by no man better than the manufacturer. Towns having waterway facilities reaped the benefits of cheap freight rates in summer and had this advantage over inland towns. The completion of the Trent Valley Canal would give Peterborough the benefits of cheap summer rates by coming into competition with the railways. He had lived here for many years—in fact he could boast that he had been born in the town and could watch its progress with deep interest; though it had stood still at times it never retrograded for a day, simply rested to go ahead again. He looked forward to an immense impetus for the new industry. If the people of Peterborough met more often in this way and got closer to one another, they would become more interested in each other and consequently in the welfare of the town. He considered all present were under a debt incalculable to their representative, Hon J R Stratton, in being not only enabled to meet among themselves and congratulate each other upon their excellent progress but congratulate themselves on meeting the representatives of the Company. (Applause.

MR. A. P. POUSSETTE.

Mr. A P Poussettee, K C, in a very neatly turned complimentary speech, spoke of the recent heavy loss sustained by Mr Stratton in connection with the burning of his newspaper premises, and assured him that the sympathy of all good citizens went out to him in what he might term his calamity. The fact of his sacrificing all personal feelings and personal troubles in order to afford the citizens the gratification of meeting the Cereal directorate showed that while dull care was sitting on his brow, he still possessed the indomitable courage which he had exhibited on many occasions before. (Loud cheers) He then proposed the health of the Hon. J. R. Stratton, to whom the pleasure of the evening was due.

Mr. Stratton replied feelingly and while he regretted the unhappy circumstances in connection with the fire which had brought him to Peterborough, he was glad of the opportunity of bringing together so many of the good citizens, and he wished to express his cordial appreciation of their great kindness in turning out in such numbers to meet the gentlemen of the Cereal Company. He had been anxious to get as many together as possible, and was only sorry the banquetting hall would not hold more in order to show that the Company had the warmest support and hearty co-operation of every citizen. He had visited many important towns throughout the province, but he knew of none which appeared to have a greater future before it than Peterborough. He understood from what he had learned that when the plans and specifications were put into effect the magnitude of the new concern would reach a point far beyond the anticipation of the citizens, and before the fall the industry would be in full running order. As for the legislation on the bylaw, he could say that when Senator Cox had stated his case to the premier and himself, he had used all his influence to show that the entire town was in entire sympathy with the provisions of the by-law. He had never been in a position to vouch for the passage of a private bill as this would indicate that he carried the majority of the votes of the Legislature in his pocket. What he could promise, however was that he would use all his influence and his best arguments in its favor and if the bill did not go through, it would be no fault of his. He urged the citizens to send a strong deputation to Toronto on Thursday to press the Committee to endorse their claims. In conclusion he hoped that this would not be the last occasion on which he would be the host of such a gathering (Loud cheers.)

Then there were numerous cries of "Stewart, Stewart," and Mr Stewart, one of the leading directors of the American Cereal Company arose, amid loud applause and waving of handkerchiefs and said: "Though not intending to make any remarks whatever, I feel that I cannot allow the occasion to pass without expressing my thanks on behalf of the Cereal Company's directors to Mr Stratton for the very pleasant evening he has afforded us."

The Company intends entering vigorously upon the work of construction of the necessary buildings as soon as the weather permits. Some idea of the extent of these buildings may be formed from the statement that when in operation the Company's works will turn out between 5,000 and 6,000 barrels of finished breakfast foods per day, employing between 600 and 800 hands daily, and consuming in the course of a year about twelve million bushels of grain This will mean a brisk demand for farmers' grains from a large area of surrounding country and good products will doubtless command good prices. Even the auxiliary industries to supply barrels and boxes for the products of the Company, will, in themselves, represent no small manufacturing operations.

The gathering of last night semi officially signalized the establishment of the Company in Peterborough, and the inauguration of its operations here. The cordial welcome extended the visiting officials of the Company by the extremely representative gathering of citizens, is evidence that Peterborough appreciates the enterprise that has led to the establishment of so very important an addition to our already important industries, which will be rendered more or less important from the fact that this large reserve water power at the disposal of the Company will not probably be allowed to remain idle, and may mean the establishment of other manufacturing concerns.

NEWS NUGGETS

—The People's Popular Concert Course entertainments will be held on the 8th, 17th, and 27th of April.

—The Daughters of Eais, in connection with St. Andrew's Church, will give an "At Home" to their friends on Monday evening next, in the lecture room

—The regular meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of George street Methodist church will be held to-morrow afternoon in the Bible class room of the church. An interesting programme has been arranged.

—The committee appointed to arrange for a public meeting in the interests of the Toronto Women's Hospital Fund, hope to announce the date therefor in a few days. In the report of the preliminary meeting the name of Mrs. (Rev.) J. P. Wilson was inadvertently omitted.

Y.W.C.A.

The ladies of the Y.W.C.A. Board of Management will please meet next Wednesday afternoon at half-past three o'clock. A full attendance is requested, as the business to be discussed is urgent.

DAILY AND WEEKLY EXAMINER.

At a meeting of the Directors of the Peterborough Examiner Printing Company held yesterday afternoon it was decided to close out the business of the Company, the fire of Saturday last having completely destroyed the plant and premises of the Company. The President of the Company, Hon. J. R. Stratton, assumed all its obligations and will continue the publication of the Daily and Weekly Examiner and will place an entirely new plant and equipment as rapidly as orders now placed can be filled. Senator Cox when in town yesterday looked over the building and arrangements were made for the immediate reconstruction in a manner to make the premises with the new plant and equipment one of the completest printing establishments in all its departments in the Province. The loss by fire was greater than was reported, and the representatives of insurance companies have agreed upon a settlement of the claims.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

The Examiner has to acknowledge the receipt of numerous telegrams and letters of condolence on account of our loss by fire, from our esteemed contemporaries, many of them accompanied with generous offers of practical assistance in the emergency that has naturally arisen.

While we heartily appreciate these friendly offers, we are happy to state that arrangements have been made for replacing our plant and machinery destroyed by fire and we hope in a few days to be on our feet again, especially so far as the newspaper is concerned; and the other departments will before long be in full running order, with a new and complete modern equipment.

RESOLUTION OF CONDOLENCE

Passed by Royal Black Preceptory, No. 261, R.B.K. of I

At the last regular meeting of Royal Black Preceptory, No. 261, Royal Black Knights of Ireland, the following resolution of condolence was ordered to be sent to Mrs. Hetherington:

To Mrs. John Hetherington:

DEAR MADAM,—On this particularly sad occasion, when we, with you, must "sigh for the touch of a vanished hand and the sound of a voice that is still," we feel that words cannot express our feeling of sympathy with you in your great bereavement.

By this act of Providential guidance, while you have lost a husband and father, we have been deprived of a true friend and associate and our glorious cause of civil and religious liberty has one champion less; so we feel that the bereavement has been mutual and we, with you, must mourn the loss.

How clearly we have been shown by this sudden removal of so useful and valuable a Knight of the Royal Black Institution, that the ways of the Almighty are not our ways, and though, from the standpoint of earthly affection and the reading of the hearts ringe such separation entails, the event is one of greatest affliction, we ask:—"Is this life all?" "Is this the end?" And every fibre of the soul responds condolence to the bleeding hearts in one long answer, "No!" This life, we know, is but the serving of an apprenticeship for that which is to come. And when sh all we gaze and at the Father's throne, amid the blood-bought worshippers, we see one waiting with longing, outstretched arms to give us welcome, we realize earth's mission's fulfillment.

To you and us this has been a most trying ordeal, but let us hope that it may prove the refining fire our souls require to remove the grit and dross of earthly discord and disorder.

Signed on behalf of Royal Black Preceptory No. 261, Royal Black Knights of Ireland.

JOHN A. McWILLIAMS, W. P.
W. H. G. ARMSTRONG, Registrar.

PERSONAL.

Miss May Duncan, of Millbrook, who has been in town on a visit to her cousin, Miss Hattie Melville, returned home to-day.

Mrs W J Overend's many friends will regret to learn of her serious illness with little hopes of her recovery.

While playing hockey at the rink last night Mr Gordon Poser of the Bank of Montreal, received a very ugly blow in the eye with the puck.

Miss Little, of Port Hope has assumed a position with Messrs Robert Fair & Co, as saleslady.

Miss Clara Brownscomb, of Port Hope, is in town the guest of her cousins, the Misses McWhinnie, London Street.

Mr Alf Brown, who went to South Africa with the Strathcona Horse, did not return with his regiment, having been confined in the hospital at Johannesburg when the Strathconas left for home.

Mr. Norman Bell, of the Ontario Bank, who has been somewhat indisposed for the past week, left yesterday for his home in Toronto, where he will remain until he is sufficiently recovered to resume his duties at the bank.

Miss Mills, of 320 Charlotte Street, left this morning for Grand View, Manitoba, where she intends spending the summer with her sister, Mrs. Joseph E. Argue of that place. Many friends here will wish her a safe journey and a speedy return.

Mr. Roland Denne, who for the past four or five years has been engaged on the staff of Richard Hall & Son, has taken a position offered him with the firm of H. E. Bradley & Co. Mr. Denne's popularity amongst the citizens should cause an appreciable increase in Mr Bradley's sale of tasty suitings and furnishings.

HOCKEY.

Manager Will Higgins, of the E.K.O. Camp hockey team, telephoned to The Examiner this morning to the effect that he would place his team on the ice against the 20th Century Club combination, and would go the length of playing his goalkeeper against their seven men for the first half, and take chances in catching up with the score in the last half.

The Examiner's Temporary Business Office will be at No. 411 George Street, a few doors south of the burned premises. Telephone 57.

VOL. XXXI, NO. 60. THE DAILY EXAMINER, PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 13, 1901

MR. BOURASSA'S RESOLUTION.

Policy of Great Britain in South Africa Attacked.

THE PREMIER'S GREAT REPLY.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Makes Another Record Speech in the House of Commons—Proves That the War Was Justified, and That the Boers Brought the Misery on Themselves.

Ottawa, March 13.—The galleries of the House were crowded by a deeply interested audience yesterday afternoon when Mr. Bourassa rose to move his amendment, declaring that there is no necessity for sending any more Canadian troops to South Africa, and that the enlistment of recruits for the South African Constabulary should not be allowed to take place in Canada. Mr. Bourassa's speech was received in silence by the House. That the Premier in his reply voiced the sentiments of the House was manifest from the loud and frequent cheering from both sides of the House, and the leader of the Opposition, in winding up the debate, expressed his entire concurrence in the position taken by the Premier, whom he complimented upon his eloquent speech. The amendment found but one supporter in a House of 147 members.

Mr. Bourassa said that Canada had no right to interfere in the Boer war, but, having been taxed for the war, had now the right to pronounce upon it. He would never acknowledge that the Canadian Government had the right to go into the war by Order-in-Council. Touching on the recruiting of fresh forces in Canada, he said this was resorted to because Britain had failed to find recruits at home, in Australia or in New Zealand. It was time for Canadians to put a stop to the speculations of Sir Alfred Milner and Mr. Chamberlain, whose acts Mr. Bourassa referred to as manifestations of the growing audacity of the master of the Empire. He appealed to members on both sides of the House to resent Mr. Chamberlain's dictatorship. He appealed at least to those who were not so devoted to the person of Mr. Chamberlain as to hold this treatment honorable to Canada.

He quoted The Military Gazette in opposition to the recruiting of Canadains for police duty in South Africa; and The London Times, that the Government of New South Wales had objected to Sir Alfred Milner sending a recruiting officer there. The same had occurred in New Zealand. Sir Alfred Milner had come last to this rich land of Canada. He regretted that the Canadian Government had assisted the British authorities in recruiting men in Canada for the benefit of Cecil Rhodes. Mr. Bourassa decried the sowing of military passion in Canada. This question is brutal, he said, and those who wished for the harvest should themselves go and sow the crop.

Mr. Bourassa described himself as a strong Britisher and a strong anti-Imperialist. He held that the vote in Quebec was for Laurier and not for the war. The public speakers in Quebec did not approve of the sending of troops from Canada, but excused it on the ground of pressure from the English-speaking provinces, and that if the Tories were in power things would be far worse.

He had studied British history, he said, and his study had increased his love and admiration of Britain. But the Britain that he loved was the Britain of progress and peace, the apostle among the nations of liberty and true Liberalism, and was not the Britain who sent her sons to the inhospitable soil of South Africa to die under the command of incapable officers. The men in power in England to-day are endeavoring to make her an object of derision and contempt in the world. He held that his resolution deserved the support of the whole House, as it only expressed the desire of a peace-loving community. The peace that should be attained in South Africa was not the peace that followed the vanquishing of a brave opponent, but a peace founded on forgiveness and reconciliation. For every farm burned by Lord Kitchener, a hundred fires would blaze. Lord Kitchener, Sir Alfred Milner and Mr. Chamberlain are not the people of England. He and those who opposed the war felt that they were not accomplices of the loyal murderers of the Queen. It was in the spirit of a true British subject that he moved the following resolution, which would be seconded by Mr. Angers of Charlevoix.

That whilst strictly adhering to the fundamental principle of Canadian autonomy, and refusing to admit that the intervention of Canada in South Africa has committed this country to any future participation in the wars and policy of Great Britain, this House thinks that the contribution of Canada in the South African war, both in armed help and public expenditure, entitles the Canadian people to express an opinion on the matter.

This House therefore humbly reminds His Majesty King Edward VII. that the glorious reign of his august mother, Queen Victoria, whose memory shall ever be cherished by Canadians of all origins and creeds, was inaugurated in bloodshed and rebellion in this part of her dominions; that peace and prosperity were subsequently restored, and forever, when Her Majesty's advisers understood, as Lord Grey told in his instruction to Lord Elgin, Governor of Canada, that it was "neither possible nor desirable to carry on the government of any of the British provinces in North America in opposition to the opinions of its inhabitants"; that since that time Her Majesty has found in no portion of her Empire a more faithful, devoted and contented people than her French-Canadian subjects.

This House therefore expresses the hope and desire that His Majesty's Government will endeavor to conclude in South Africa an honorable peace, founded upon the law of nations, which guarantees independence to all civilized people, and upon the true British traditions of respect to all national and religious conviction, and to the spirit of colonial autonomy.

This House further declares that there is no necessity for sending any more Canadian troops to South Africa, and that the enlistment of recruits for the South African Constabulary should not be allowed to take place in Canada.

The Premier's Reply.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier expressed regret and surprise that the mover of the resolution had persisted in moving it. He (Mr. Bourassa) had refused to send troops to the war for England, but now he wishes to send advice. How far that conduct was in keeping with his former well-known views he would leave to his own pondering. He not only admitted the right of Parliament to send representation on public questions to England, but claimed it as a right since first it was exercised in 1882. The question then was for them to decide: "Shall we adopt this motion or shall we not?"

"As to the first conclusion of the proposition," said Sir Wilfrid, "that there is no necessity for sending Canadian troops to South Africa, I must say I altogether agree with him, not for the same reasons that have prompted him, but for the reason that the war is at an end. (Cheers.) There will be still some guerilla warfare; there may be still some brigandage, under the name of war; but the war is no longer at issue. Though he pretends to be very much in doubt as to the issue of the war, for my part I am ready to leave the issue in the hands of men who have it in hand now, and to say with them that there is no necessity for sending Canadian troops to South Africa. As to the other portion of conclusion, that enlistment of recruits for the constabularly should not be allowed to take place in Canada. I ask what reason there can be why the enlistment of men for this force should be put an end to in Canada? If there are men in Canada, I care not for what motive, whether high or low, whether dignified or undignified, whether because they desire to get a living, or from a spirit of adventure, or from the nobler impulse of fighting for their sovereign, wish to take service in the South African Constabulary, on what principle should a Canadian Government interfere and prevent their liberty being so exercised?

"My hon. friend has spoken well and eloquently upon the cause of liberty, on which he has constituted himself the champion in this House, and almost alone; but I must ask him, what kind of liberty is it which will not permit a British subject, if he so chooses, to offer his King to serve him, no matter in what capacity. I am a Liberal, as my hon. friend declares himself to be, but my idea of liberty does not agree with one that will not allow that freedom to every British subject in Canada. (Loud cheers.)

"But, sir, the gist of the motion is in the last paragraph but one. If this paragraph means anything, it means that we are to invite the British authorities to restore the two republics, the South African Republic and the Free State, to their independence. My hon. friend will not deny that this is the meaning that he has in his mind; but, strange to say, he never said a word as to that proposition. (Hear, hear.) I would have expected him to deal at length with this point, which, after all, was a noble, worthy subject to consider, and which, after all, might invite discussion. I would have expected him to give his reasons and arguments why the British authorities should be invited by the Canadian Government to undo what has been done and restore to the two republics the independence which they forfeited on Oct. 9, 1899. (Cheers.) He did not speak a word upon that subject, and, sir, perhaps I might sit down and not utter another syllable upon this subject, and I would do so were it not for the fact that my hon. friend, in some of his arguments, has been so unjust, so unfair, to the British Government, that I feel constrained to place before the House the other side of this question. (Cheers.)

"If he means anything, he means this: That the two republics, the Republic of South Africa and the Republic of the State of Orange, should be restored to their independence, should be restored to the position which they occupied on Oct. 9, 1899; that the supreme arbitrament of war, which they themselves invoked, should be satisfied; that all the blood which has been shed should count for nothing; that all the suffering which has been endured should be forgotten, and that Mr. Kruger and Mr. Steyn should be restored to the position of which they made such an abuse. He spoke eloquently of miseries of war, of destruction of farms, of burning of houses, and I agree with him. I take no exception to what he said in that respect.

"Miserable, indeed, is the condition to-day of the once proud South African Republic; miserable by reason of its ruined farms, its closed mines, its cities arrested in their growth, its people impoverished, and its old President a fugitive in Europe, a fugitive from the misery which he brought upon his own country. (Hear, hear.) Miserable indeed is the condition of the once happy State of Orange, which had no quarrel with Great Britain, but which was precipitated into the horrors of war and of invasion by the man to whom it had entrusted its destinies, himself to-day a self-constituted outlaw in his own country. (Hear, hear.) These men appealed to the god of battle and the god of battles has pronounced against them. (Cheers.) They invaded British territory; their territory was invaded in turn, and it was annexed to the British domain in consequence of the terrible logic of war. If I understand my hon. friend aright to-day, he would have the Government and Parliament of Great Britain undo what has been done, and bring the rebellious Boers back to the position which they occupied on the 9th of October, 1899, and which they had forfeited. My answer to that is a very simple one. Whether he will agree with me or not, I am sure everybody else will agree, that in the terrible uncertainties of war, in the series of successes and reverses which generally make up the history of war, the leader of defeated people has no right to complain if he receives from his victorious opponents the same treatment which he had previously applied to his opponent in the hour of victory." (Cheers.)

Sir Wilfrid then recounted the history of the events leading up to the war and culminating in the insolent ultimatum by which President Kruger went to war with such a light heart on Oct. 9, 1899. Afterwards he discussed those kindred subjects which furnished not only excuse but complete justification of Great Britain in the course she had pursued.

A Calamity for England.

Continuing, Sir Wilfrid Laurier said: "Mr. Bourassa deprecates the war. I do not deprecate as much as he does, but I believe, perhaps, it is the greatest calamity which has befallen England within the last forty years or so, because it places on England the burden and the duty of governing South Africa, with its two races estranged perhaps for generations by the cruel memories of war. But, sir, even from that view we must take the situation as it is. The problem of South Africa is this, that you have in that country two races so mixed and so intermingled that it is not possible to separate them. These two races must be governed by the same power and the same authority, and that power has either to be the power of England or the power of the Dutch. It has either to be the liberal and enlightened civilization of England to-day, or the old, bigoted and narrow civilization of the Dutch of two hundred years ago. (Cheers.)

"Let Mr. Bourassa forget for a moment that he and I are British subjects, and in the name of civilization, in the name of humanity, I ask him which is the power that ought to govern in that distant land. Is it the enlightened power of England or is it the semi-barbarous civilization of the Dutch. (Hear, hear.)

"There is but one future for the Dutch. They have been conquered, but I pledge my reputation and my name as a British subject, that, if they have lost their independence, they have not lost their freedom. (Cheers.)

"There is but one future for South Africa, and that future is a grand confederation on the pattern of the Canadian confederation. It is a federation in which Cape Colony and Natal and the Orange Free State and the Transvaal and Rhodesia shall be united together under a federal constitution, under the British flag, and under the sovereignty of England. (Cheers.)

"Mr. Bourassa will agree with me that when they have the British flag over South Africa they shall have that which has been found everywhere during the last sixty years under the British flag, liberty for all, equality for all, justice and civil rights for English and for Dutch alike. (Loud cheers.) For these reasons I have to ask the House that they shall not agree to this motion, but shall vote it down." (Renewed cheers.)

After Messrs. Charlton, Hughes and Jabel Robinson had spoken, Mr. R. L. Borden closed the debate.

Mr. R. L. Borden.

Mr. Borden pointed out the uselessness of the motion and the debate, and the irrelevancy of Mr. Bourassa's speech to his motion. "And," said Mr. Borden, "I will go further."

Mr. Bourassa—I think the leaders did not like it.

Mr. Borden—I trust that Mr. Bourassa did not take up the time of the House for the purpose of saying something that would be displeasing to both leaders. (Cheers.) For my part, I am bound to say that a portion of his remarks were displeasing to me; not that portion of the remarks which reflected upon the political party which I have the honor to lead in this House, because I intend to let those remarks pass without a single word; but I regret that he introduced into his speech certain remarks which seemed to me to invite controversy along certain lines which I, for one, do not desire to see introduced in this House.

"Suppose," said Mr. Borden, "that such an eventuality should occur, as it may possibly occur, although we all hope and trust it never shall, that the soil of Canada should be assailed by an armed invader, whom we were unable to repel, would he then think that the remainder of the Empire should say we have nothing at all to do with Canada; we are not assailed, we shall stand to one side? Unless we are prepared to accept the position, how shall we say, when enjoying, as we do, all the protection of the British Empire and the British navy, that we are never to join forces of the Empire unless the soil of Canada is assailed. (Cheers.) I know that Mr. Bourassa has a generous nature, and I trust and believe that when he comes to consider this matter in its true aspect, he will not always adhere to some of the opinions which I have heard him express in this House in regard to it."

Mr. Borden then pointed out that Mr. Bourassa should have made the French-Canadian reference in his motion simply "Canadian" and also the futility of appealing to the rebellion incident in our history. He then showed the causes of the war justified Great Britain at every step, and that members of the Boer peace committee recognized as the only basis of lasting peace that his countrymen should accept the dictum of their conquerors and work for reconciliation along that line.

Mr. Borden's speech was greeted with loud cheers. The Conservatives asked for the ayes and nays which were taken. Messrs. Bourassa, Monet and Angers only voted for the resolution, practically the entire House voting for Sir Wilfrid's amendment.

On the vote being recorded the House sang "God Save the King."

After passing some items of supply the House adjourned at midnight.

MAJORITY HAS GROWN TO TEN.

First Division of the Session in Ontario Legislature.

BUDGET DEBATE CONCLUDED.

The Attorney-General Speaks on the West Elgin Prosecution—Discrepancies in Law—Premier Ross Winds Up the Debate in a Very Able Speech—Taking of the Vote.

Toronto, March 13.—In the Legislative Assembly yesterday, Hon. E. J. Davis presented returns respecting the timber cut in the Township of Grimsthorpe as ordered some days since. He stated that complete returns of all timber cut in that township had been made to the department.

Mr. Graham as a matter of privilege explained as a matter of privilege that he had not charged the Conservative "organizers" with paying Albert Bossard for false evidence in the North Waterloo election case. The term he used was not "organizers" but "workers."

Mr. Beatty resumed the debate on the budget and reversed the usual order of proceedings by beginning to speak on election frauds, dealing more particularly with the Brockville and West Huron cases. He did not linger long on these topics, however, but proceeded to assail the Government's timber policy, contending that they were driven to make extensive sales of timber in order to avoid deficits. They had lost large amounts by changing the rule of log measurement from the "Scribner" to the "Doyle" system. By the latter rule the Government was losing annually one-third of the dues, as under it little or nothing was obtained from the smaller trees. At the present rate of cutting, the pine timber of the Nipissing District would be exhausted in three years. All the timber that could be taken out by way of the Ottawa River had already been got out. He contended that the estimate of three billion feet of pine timber in the district according to the reports of last year's explorers was altogether without foundation and not in accord with what was previously known of the country. He deprecated the proposed Temiscaming Railway, and doubted whether the area of good land in Nipissing and Algoma was so extensive or so fertile as reported. He read extracts from surveyor's reports to prove that the value of the tract had been greatly overestimated.

Mr. Charlton said that the Scribner rule of log measurement had been discarded after full consideration by Hon. T. B. Pardee as incorrect, in favor of Doyle's rule. The latter was in force in all the lumbering States of the Union. Scribner himself in his publications had adopted the Doyle rule. He gave a number of details respecting the extent of lumbering operations since Confederation. Over 90 per cent. of all the logs cut in Ontario had been manufactured in the province. The Government had received a total revenue from timber of $26,582,000, or an average of $781,000 per year. The quantity of timber now in sight he estimated at 34,000,000,000 feet. In addition to the area in Nipissing containing 3,000,000,000 feet, there were 30 surveyed townships in Nipissing which were well timbered with pine. The value of the pine timber now in sight as a Government asset was at least $100,000,000. It would take 84 years to sell what pine remained at the rate the province had been selling it, and 62 years to cut it at the present rate. It had been claimed that Mr. Beatty knew more about New Ontario than the exploration parties, but so far he had given no evidence of any superior acquaintance with the subject and he certainly would prefer to take the word of the men who had been carefully over the ground. He concluded by expressing his strong faith in the future growth and prosperity of the country.

Mr. Jamieson said that though the Government took great credit for their forward policy, but the Premier when a member of the Ottawa House had strongly apposed the construction of the C. P. R. and other progressive measures. After dealing with the financial question and denouncing as "direct taxation" the imposition of taxes on corporations, he assailed the Government policy in connection with the Clergue syndicate and the Algoma Central Railroad. The announcement of the Premier with regard to the Temiscaming Railway showed that the Government realized that public opinion was strongly opposed to the bonusing system. If the road were built by the Government, all companies and not merely the Grand Trunk, should have running powers over it. He concluded with the inevitable reference to the West Elgin case and as an offset to Bossard affidavit, read an affidavit by John L. Bayle, formerly of London, now of Detroit, whom he described as a "conscience-stricken" young man, to the effect that he and others had been engaged to personate voters in the West Elgin contest for which he had received $4.

Hon. J. M. Gibson replied to criticisms on the Attorney-General's Department, which had been assailed because no reward was offered in a Toronto murder case. He thought the police force of a large city were competent to look after cases of crime, and it was not well to encourage the idea that nobody should afford aid in the capture of criminals unless they were well paid for it. As regards election cases there were local authorities whose duty it was to prosecute, and our system did not contemplate the intervention of the Attorney-General unless the assistance of the department were asked. The course taken by the Government in the West Elgin case was the reasonable and natural course. Had the department assumed to interfere to take cases out of the hands of the private prosecutor, an outcry would have been raised that they had a political purpose to serve in so doing. A commission had been issued and the facts had been fairly got at, and they failed to justify the strong language of the Opposition leader. Out of 38 polling divisions no irregularity occurred. As to the personations occuring in the others, the persons who personated deputy returning officers were so closely watched that they could not carry out their purposes. Their conduct was reprehensible and he did not for a moment defend it. But the offence was not covered by the Criminal Code. He was not prepared to say whether some of them were legally guilty of the crime of forgery or not. If they were it was a crime under Dominion law and an Ontario election court would have no jurisdiction to try them for that offence. Prosecutions had taken place in other constituencies and it could not be said that in connection with them the Government had shown favoritism or partiality. In one case, a Crown Lands agent, an excellent official had been guilty of an offence in supplying liquor to elections, and the Government at once insisted upon his resignation. He did not think prosecutions should be set on foot while petitions for an election trial were pending, and he thought the judges concurred in this view. It must be borne in mind that the penalties had been greatly increased and the punishment of offenders made more certain. Many of those already dealt with had suffered severely, and owing to the adoption of the provisions of the English Act it would hereafter be extremely unsafe to offer money for votes. The cases of Wildfong and Cummings were of a particularly heinous class, but, the wrong counting of ballots of Cummings might have been inadvertent.

Mr. Wardell—Ha! Ha!!

Mr. Gibson — The honorable gentleman might laugh, but such things often happened as he had known in his own experience. Wildlong was charged with defacing ballots and there was no possible excuse to be urged for him. He thought there should be prosecutions in both these cases. As to the burning of ballots, an inquiry had shown that it was the result of inadvertence. He believed that in the West Elgin case Mr. Macnish had been elected by the honest votes of the constituency. So far as the irregularities complained of were concerned they were committed by irresponsible persons whose acts the Liberal party had no sympathy. It was otherwise with the Conservatives, however, who had been maintained in power at Ottawa for years by a widespread system of corruption.

Mr. Whitney said if there was any doubt as to the extent of the timber resources of the province it was the fault of the Administration who had years ago been urged to make an investigation as to the timber supply, but had neglected to do so. He warmly denied a charge recently made by the Provincial Secretary that he had made a corrupt bid for the support of the people of Welland by proposing to make the water power of the Niagara Falls free. They had opposed the Algoma Central Railway concessions because the Clergue Syndicate were ready to do in any event many things which were mentioned as considerations for the enormous grants made them. He contrasted the policies of the two parties on the labor question. The West Elgin frauds were no mere irregularities, but a series of acts of scoundrelism unparalleled in the history of the country. Dealing with Bossard's affidavit he intimated that Bossard had been granted a tavern license in Penetanguishene as a reward for making it. He reviewed the leading features of the investigation, contending that the scope of the Commission was too narrow to permit of their finding anything out. He replied in detail to the arguments of the Attorney-General, and urged that the Government should have prosecuted the offenders. He closed by denouncing the educational policy of the Government, and urging the adoption of a scheme for permanent aid to Toronto University.

Hon. G. W. Ross ridiculed the extravagant language used by the Opposition leader. If he really had felt the gravity of the situation as he assumed to do, he would have been calmer and more judicial in tone. He regretted that declamatory speeches of this kind had retarded the business of the House. The Opposition appeared to have staked their whole future on the one card of West Elgin. Formerly the tone of the Conservative party was one of optimism and hope in the future of the country, now it seemed to be altogether pessimistic. Mr. Beatty ran down the resources of New Ontario on the ground of having traveled over 100 square miles of it, but those who had traveled over 100 times that area told a different story. The Conservatives thought the Province had no future, but the country would see no future for them. He reiterated the charge that Mr. Whitney had tried to influence the Welland electors by promising free access to the water power of Niagara. If every proper asset of the country should be used as a means of revenue, why should the power of Niagara be given free. If the Government did this the maintenance of Niagara Falls Park would have to be borne by the people of the Province at an annual cost of $25,000.

The Vote.

After the ayes and nays had been taken on the Hoyle amendment to the motion to go into supply, the members were called on for a division, the vote being taken on the amendment:

Yeas—Allen, Barr, Beatty (Leeds), Brower, Carnegie, Carscallen, Colquhoun, Crawford, Dempsey, Duff, Elber, Fallis, Fox, Gallagher, Hoyle, Jamieson, Jessop, Joynt, Kidd, Kribbs, Little, Marter, Matheson, Monteith, Mogdson, Macdiarmid, McDonald, McLaughlin, Powell, Reid (Durham), Robson, Thompson, Tucker, Wardell, Whitney—34.

Paired—Harty, Foy; Pardee, Lucas; Lumsden, Powell; Ferguson Reid (Addington); Pettypiece, Boyd; McKay, Pyne; Bowman, Miscampbell.

The main motion was adopted on the same division.

Mr. Charlton was called to the chair, and an item in supply passed. The House adjourned at 11.55.

Wheat in Farmers' Hands.

Washington, March 12.—The March report of the statistician of the Department of Agriculture shows the amount of wheat remaining in farmers' hands on March 1 to have been about 125,100,000 bushels, or 24.5 per cent. of last year's crop, as compared with 158,700,000 bushels, or 29 per cent. of the crop of 1899, on hand March 1, 1900, and 198,000,000 bushels, or 29.3 per cent. of the crop of 1898, on hand on March 1, 1899.

Steamers to Be Built in Canada.

Ottawa, March 12.—Sir Louis Davies will call for tenders for the building of two new Government steamers to replace the Newfield and Druid this week. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries intends giving an opportunity for these steamers being built in Canada, that is, if the work can be done at anything like a reasonable cost. The tenders will, therefore, ask that the new boats be built in Canada.

OLD TUNES.

Old tunes, old tunes! How memory crooms
Their rhythm through my soul tonight!
Of joy replete or pathos sweet,
In scenes that charm my raptured sight!

A form once loved, by fancy moved,
Enthralls me as in days agone,
And bright eyes beam with love's first dream—
Lips warm unto mine own.

Hand clasps hand in friendship's bond
O'er vows once broken, now restored,
And laughter low, with music's flow,
Vibrate with one accord.

Oh, tender past; weird, mystic past!
Fain would I dream thy pleasures o'er,
And tunes, old tunes that memory crooms,
Thrill through my soul forevermore.

—Richard Pelham in Washington Post.

A Leviathan's Revenge.

By M. Quad.

[Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Lewis.]

We were bound for Alijos island, off the coast of Lower California, in the bark Dolphin, to look for an old wreck of 40 years before. One day, when yet 200 miles to the north of the island, a whale suddenly breached within 300 feet of our craft, which was making only about three knots an hour under a light breeze. The monster of the deep shot to the surface and above it as if propelled by an engine of 1,000 horsepower. At least 40 feet of his great body was in the air when he came down with a crash, and the fall kicked up such a sea that the bark was boarded by three waves in succession. Instead of sinking out of sight or making off the whale kept company with the vessel and gradually edged down toward us until a man could have tossed his cap over the rail on the broad back covered with patches of barnacles. Almost as the whale shot up from the depths of the sea our mate, whose name was Davids, cried out:

"Before heaven, but that's old Sam Patch, and he's after me!"

We had come out of a California port with a picked crew, excepting the mate. I mean by that that Captain Chambers knew his men personally, most of whom had sailed with him before. At the last moment the old mate of the bark had met with an accident, and Davids had been given the berth at an hour's notice. He had been found to be a man who thoroughly knew his business, and it was understood that he was an old whaleman. He had spun no yarns of his adventures, however, and now for the first time, as the whale kept pace with us and the frightened crew tiptoed about the decks, the mate gave us a brief outline. He had been whaling in every sea, both in sail and steam vessels, and had been ashore after his last cruise only a month when joining us. Three years before in a whaler out of London they had lowered for a monster whale off the Canaries and fought him for four hours. The leviathan had smashed two boats and killed five men. Davids in his boat had got him fast, but the whale sounded so deep they had to cut the line and let him go. Three months later 700 miles to the north the whaler encountered the same fish and had another boat destroyed and two men killed. Again Davids got fast, but after being towed 15 miles to windward had to cut loose. Six months later, down off the coast of Brasil, he had his third fight with the same whale and got in a third harpoon.

During the next two years Davids sighted that whale, which had come to be known as Sam Patch, off the Cape of Good Hope, off the coast of Peru and off the coast of Mexico, and on each and every occasion at least one boat was smashed and some one killed, and the mate also made fast and had to let go again. The whale had scars by which he could easily be identified. He had always been known as a wild fish, and that he should rise so near our bark and keep company with us for hours was more than a mystery to the mate.

"I'll tell you what it is," he said after leaning his elbows on the rail and taking a long look at the vast bulk almost rubbing our starboard side; "that whale is after me. He knows I'm aboard here. Six of my harpoons are rusting in his carcass, and though I'm not after him on this voyage he wants revenge."

We laughed at the idea, but the mate clung to it. He was an intelligent, fairly educated man, and it was evident that he fully believed in his own words. Perhaps it was his earnestness that made us also come to believe that there might be something in it, although it looked absurd at first sight. When the whale had been keeping company with us for three hours, we let the bark go four points off her course, thinking to quietly steal away from him, but he changed his course and kept with her. Then we shortened sail, but he slowed up. For an hour we worked to part company, but he was up to all our tricks. For seven long hours he hung to us, and then of a sudden he sank out of sight without so much as a splash. We argued that he had gone for good, and it was a weight off our minds, but Davids shook his head in a mournful way and replied:

"Sam Patch came here after me, and he won't leave for good till he gets me. He's only off to feed."

We reached the island without having seen more of him, however. As we came within a mile of the north shore the bark was thrown into the wind, the boat lowered, and Davids was to be rowed in to sound the depth and find a safe anchorage. Three sailors took their places at the oars, and the boat shoved off. It was a sunny sky and a calm sea, with never a thought of danger, but the yawl had not pulled above a cable's length from us and every man in the bark had his eye on her when she suddenly rose in the air with a crashing, rending noise. Below her appeared the great head of Sam Patch, and it was thrust upward until the stove boat was lifted 30 feet high and then slid off. When ten feet more of the body was exposed to view, the whale fell over with a mighty swash, rolled his great body over and over three or four times and then disappeared beneath the surface.

We had a second boat down in no time to pick up the men, but while four had gone in the boat there were only three to rescue. The trio were more or less knocked about and almost frightened to death, but they had come off better than the mate. Whether the whale seized him in its mouth or drowned him as it rolled we could not say, but our search for the body was in vain, and Sam Patch disappeared to trouble us no more.

WOMAN AND HOME.

A REAL DAUGHTER OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

How She Lost a Thousand—The Care of Food—Treatment of Measles—As One of the Family—The Love of Jewels.

There are those living today who can look back to the time when at a father's knee they listened to the thrilling experiences of the stirring times of the Revolution as told by the actual participators in the struggle. The number of these is, of course, exceedingly small, scattered over different parts of the United States. Two are residents of the state of Wisconsin.

The first of these two original daughters of the Revolution, Mrs. Jane A. Walker of Waupun, Wis., was born at Ferrisburg, Vt., Aug. 31, 1810. She is the daughter of John Powers, whose name appears upon the muster roll in both the battles of Lexington and Bunker Hill. He was 27 years old when he answered his country's call in 1776, and he faithfully bore arms until the war was ended.

Mrs. Walker tells many interesting incidents of her father's experiences. She said: "I have often heard my father tell of the battle they fought at Bunker Hill, what a fierce struggle it was and how their ammunition gave out and they had to fall back. But they were not whipped. History tells of this battle that the Americans were told not to fire until they could see the whites of the eyes of the British."

On her mother's side also Mrs. Walker has a remarkable Revolutionary ancestry, her mother's father having been one of the famous minutemen of the Revolution. She says she has often heard her mother tell of how, a child of 8 years, she had to plow while her father was away at the war.

Mrs. Walker is one of a family of 16 children and the only survivor. She possesses great activity both of body and mind, is interested in all the questions of the day, reads the papers and is an active and devoted church member. She is quite an adept in the art of embroidery. At the age of 80 she began to make colored embroidery on linen, and since that time she has completed over 100 pieces, one of which she presented to the local chapter D. A. R. of Port Atkinson, Wis., of which she is a member, and it is highly prized by the society.

Mrs. Walker has resided upon her farm near the limits of the city of Waupun for over 50 years. Soon after its purchase she was left a widow with six small children, all of whom she brought to womanhood and manhood. Four of the six are living today—one, a daughter, resides in Canada. Two sons, Charles and Gideon Walker, live at Waupun.—Chicago Times-Herald.

How She Lost a Thousand.

"I've just lost a thousand dollars," said the girl with the pensive face casually.

"Well, it's hard to keep track of such a small sum in one's purse," was the rejoinder the sarcastic young woman in the Morris chair made.

The pensive girl's nose wrinkled in disdain. "It was this way," she explained: "I was coming home with one of the latest novels my friend on the North Side had lent me. The book I carried was brand new, and I was going through a department store and happened to stop and look at some books in the book department. It was then I thought of it. They are always on the lookout for shoplifters, you know, and it suddenly occurred to me that it was quite likely I would feel the heavy hand of a house detective on my shoulder as I walked out of the store. In fact, I didn't quite see how a detective who was doing his duty could avoid nabbing me. There I was loitering around the books and intending to walk away with a brand new, unwrapped novel under my arm. What grounds would the detective have for believing I hadn't stolen it? I decided to remonstrate gently but firmly with him. He would scoff. Thereupon I would consent to be led away. I would demand being taken to the manager. I would state my case to him in a quiet, ladylike, haughty manner which would cow him, so different would it be from the usual hysterical threats of the real shoplifters. He would be convinced and apologise and hope it was all right. Then I would smile frostily and make no move toward going. 'Oh, no,' I would say, 'it is not all right. You know perfectly well what a box you and your bright detective have got yourselves into. I have a good damage case against this store, and I intend to put it in the hands of my lawyer. Either that and the annoying publicity for you or you sit down and sign a check for $1,000 and hand it to me.' Of course he would be glad to get out of it for a paltry thousand, and then I would depart, planning a summer trip to Europe."

The fascinated audience was listening breathlessly.

The pensive girl drew a long, long sigh. "But the horrid house detective let me walk out right under his nose, and I flashed the book in his very face. I could have hit him, I was so mad."

"It was a shame!" sympathized the listening chorus.—Chicago News.

The Care of Food.

It is quite as necessary and important to know what care food requires after purchasing as it is to know how to select such foods. Through carelessness and ignorance the loss is sometimes very great. The meats and poultry should be placed in a cool, dry atmosphere. Meat or poultry should not rest against each other. Chops and steaks should be arranged so that they will not rest on each other. If the poultry or meats are to hang, they should be suspended with the tender and choicest part down. Hang turkey and poultry by the feet, mutton and lamb by the shank bone.

Do not allow fresh fish to soak in water. If it is to be kept overnight or several hours, keep in a cool place until ready to cook. Then, after cleaning, dip into water, wash quickly and wipe dry.

Butter should be kept where it will not absorb odors and if purchased by the tub or firkin should have a cloth over the top and a layer of salt half an inch thick. When a pound or more is to be taken from the tub, lift the cloth from one side and when the amount is taken place the cloth back and spread the salt over it. When several pounds are purchased at a time, put it in a tin or agate pail, wring a cloth out of strong brine of salt and water and lay the cloth over it, then cover with the tin pail cover. When taking butter from the tub, take it in even layers and not from one side.

Milk and cream should be kept from all foods, as they, too, readily absorb any flavor emitted. Eggs, too, should be kept in a cool, dry place and handled carefully, as rough handling breaks the membrane that separates the yolk and white. All small and soft fruits should be scattered on large platters and not kept in the baskets in which they are purchased, as their own weight crushes them, and when scattered one can see the overripe and imperfect fruit and remove it before further damage is done to the perfect fruit. In buying peaches by the basket they should be placed on a shelf and not allowed to touch each other and the riper ones used first. Tomatoes may be ripened by wiping dry and exposing them to the sun.

Treatment of Measles.

The room used for the patient should be large, bright and well ventilated, then if a second child in the family comes down with the same disease, which is most sure to happen where there are other children, the second patient can be placed in the same room with the first without crowding or danger of exhausting the supply of fresh air, as would be the case in a small room. As the eyes are weak and affected by bright light the light in the room should be rather subdued. After a few days, when the child is allowed to sit up, a cup with a large peak in front is a good device to shade the eyes from the glare. The room and patient must be kept warm and drafts carefully avoided. When I say warm, it does not mean hot, and the patient should not be kept so warm that he perspires, but it is essential that the hands and feet should not be allowed to get cold. In the sickroom, as in the nursery, the open fire is, if possible, desirable as a means both of heating the room and of assisting in the ventilation.

As the rash begins to disappear the fever also subsides, and about the end of four or five days the patient begins to feel as though he were well, and an older child will often rebel at being kept in bed, but as it is at this stage the lung symptoms are likely to develop extra precaution must be taken. Active children are not likely to lie perfectly quiet in bed or neatly tucked under the bedclothes, and it is not absolutely necessary that they should be kept so. They will be much happier and more comfortable, also sleep better at night, if frequent change of position is made during the day. For a little child it is well to have a warm bed sack to protect the arms and chest, so that the patient can sit up in bed and have toys about to divert and amuse him.—Marianna Wheeler in Harper's Bazar.

As One of the Family.

"I understand that there are hundreds and hundreds of young and middle aged women in the large cities who are out of employment and likely to remain so unless they change their point of view and instead of seeking hopelessly positions already crowded turn their energies where they will always be needed," says a New York society woman. "As most of them have seen better days, are fairly well educated and have had some experience I ask if it would be beneath their self respect to take positions in the homes of others as home helpers? That is, to help with children and housework, without being considered servants and without losing their social position. I know the position is a delicate one, but having tried the experiment successfully for over ten years I feel justified in giving an opinion.

"In the ten years I had four companions or home helpers of different ages and experience, but they were all well born, well educated and of good principles. Having six children, I preferred having them intimately associated with a refined and responsible person instead of the ordinary irresponsible nurse.

"The home helper was treated like my own sister in being on a perfect equality with the family, and I always found her willing to do whatever had to be done, even cooking and dishwashing when I happened to be without a cook. Of course I always worked with her and never expected her to do what I would not do myself. The golden rule is a good guide to follow and seems particularly fitted for domestic complications.

"I ask all overburdened mothers," adds the New York woman, "all disappointed women without employment, to consider this question of home helpers and see if they cannot make it practicable."—New York Journal.

The Love of Jewels.

In all countries and in all ages women seem to have inherited a love for precious stones, and it is no wonder that these gems are popularly supposed to exercise some subtle magnetism that influences their natures. This inherent passion may account in a measure for the recent craze for some mascotic jewel, a survival of mediæval superstition. Upon impressionable people certain gems appear to wield a potent influence. Who has not listened to weird tales of some heirloom talisman which when lost or stolen presaged the ruin of a noble house? A person with a vivid imagination might even believe in the theory of the Pythagoreans, who formulated the doctrine that inanimate things are endowed with souls. Certain evolutionists of today trace the origin of man back to stones, asserting that in their adamantine bosoms they contain the all pervading essence of spirit and that the spark emitted from their crystalline hearts is the revelation of the imprisoned soul within.

From time immemorial jewels have served as propitiatory offerings at holy shrines, as tokens of amity from one crowned head to another, as mystic messengers of affection between distant friends, as pledges of constancy exchanged between plighted lovers. Men have bled and died, kingdoms have crumbled, families have been rent asunder, husband and wife parted, over the disputed possession of some coveted jewel. Perhaps poor Marie Antoinette of ill starred memory might have kept her pretty head upon her shoulders had it not been for the unfortunate affair of the diamond necklace. Women in all ages have succumbed to the temptation of gems. Faust bartered his soul for the love of a woman; Marguerite sold hers for a gem starred bauble.

Jenny Lind's Duet With Webster.

Jenny Lind visited Washington during the winter of 1851 and sang in concert to a delighted audience. It chanced that on the evening of her appearance several members of the cabinet and senate were the guests at dinner of Bodisco, the Russian minister, and the concert was half over when Webster and the other members of the party entered the hall.

After the applause which greeted their appearance had subsided the second part of the concert was opened by Miss Lind with "Hail, Columbia." Webster, deeply moved by this patriotic air, arose at the close of the first verse and added his rich, sonorous voice to the chorus. Without avail, his wife, who sat behind him, pulled at his coattail to make him sit down or stop singing. The volunteer basso joined in at the close of each verse, and none could tell whether Lind, Webster or the audience was most delighted.

As the last notes of the song died away Webster arose, hat in hand, and made a profound bow to the singer. Jenny Lind, blushing at the honor, courtesied to the floor, while the audience applauded to the echo. Webster, not to be outdone in politeness, bowed again; Lind recourtesied, the house again applauded, and this was repeated nine times.—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

A Great Traveler.

Miss Jessie Ackerman, the world's organizer for the Women's Christian Temperance union, is regarded as one of the greatest women travelers living. She has gone around the globe twice and has been in nearly every known country, and the immense sum needed to defray the expenses of these journeys has been raised by her own efforts. Miss Ackerman has organized societies and held meetings in Alaska, Australia, China, Egypt, Iceland, India, Japan, Malaysia, the Philippines, Palestine, Siam, Tasmania and the Transvaal. Her most startling experience, however, was not gained in the line of duty, she says, but in satisfying the spirit of adventure. At the great pearl fisheries between Australia and Java a fleet of pearling ships and an army of divers are always at work, and Miss Ackerman expressed a desire to visit the bed of the ocean. Accordingly she was locked in a diver's suit and began to descend, but the air had not been sufficiently exhausted in the diving bell, and she found herself going down headforemost. She had the presence of mind to pull the signal cord vigorously and was drawn to the surface with all possible speed.

An Egg Shampoo.

An exchange gives the following directions for an egg shampoo: Separate the white and yolk and beat each with a tablespoonful of water until thoroughly mixed. First rub the yolk into the scalp and then the white of the egg. Rinse with tepid water and finish with cold. Never take hot water after an egg shampoo. If the hair is brittle and harsh, the yolk only may be used. Better results are obtained by the use of the white only when the hair is excessively oily. When the hair is dry and lifeless, a slight oiling of the scalp after the bath is permissible. Great care must be taken that the fatty matter is sweet and pure. For this reason vegetable oil is best. Cocoanut oil is safest for general use. If the scalp is tense and dry, a composition of one-third lanoline and two-thirds carbolated vaseline warmed and beaten together may be applied with benefit. As before stated, it is the exception where any oil application is necessary. With proper care, massage and cleanliness the glands about the root of each hair will do their part.

Her Seven Stages.

It is held by a writer on woman that the seven stages of woman's life may be reckoned as composed of multiples of seven. The first seven years are infancy, the second seven childhood, the third seven girlhood, and the fourth seven bring fully developed womanhood. The fifth seven—that is, from the age of 28 to 35—may be looked upon as the infancy of age, for during that period one learns to exercise the faculties and perceptions that have developed in the preceding years. Until the age of 42 the lessons go on and character is being matured and fixed. After that few changes are made in the real person. Slight varieties and variations of opinion are likely to occur, but nothing deep or vital to transform the life.

What Could He Say?

"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Torkins, "I am going to turn over a new leaf."

"In what connection?"

"I'm going to quit being superstitious. I have always disliked to begin anything on Friday."

"Yes; it is very silly of you."

"Well, your arguments have convinced me. You know that new dress I was talking to you about?"

"Y-yes."

"Well, I'm going to start out and buy the material on Friday just to show I'm not afraid."—Washington Star.

Scented Rooms.

One may keep one's rooms swept with that fragrance of violets all winter by setting little bowls of powdered orris root about in them. The orris root should be renewed once or twice a month and the bowls washed whenever it is changed. Dainty Japanese bowls and quaint dishes and vases make the best receptacles, and it is wise to cover them during the night to preserve the sweetness of the powder. By hanging sachets or orris root in the wardrobes one's garments will be given an evasive and charming fragrance.

Naphtha will clean velvet as well as it will silk and other fabrics. The velvet should be sponged or brushed with the naphtha until it seems to be perfectly clean. Then, to restore the pile, it may be held down over a basin of very hot water from which the steam escapes through the velvet.

After boiling a tongue and while it is still hot remove the skin; then put the tongue in a bowl just large enough to hold it coiled up and put a plate on top, with a heavy weight over that. When cold, the tongue will come out in fine shape for slicing around instead of across.

An easy way to perfume linen or gowns is to put a few drops of good extract on small pieces of pumice stone, which are then placed in drawers and boxes and among dresses in wardrobes.

BALLADE OF A STUBBORN LOVER.

Never a kiss she gave him when
Swift she vanished from out his sight,
Lost as fades in a marish fen
Phosphor gleams of the witches' light.
Stanch was he and her faithful knight—
That indeed she could not gainsay—
Murmuring not at her sudden flight;
Ah, willow and welladay!

Back he turned to the haunts of men,
Mingled in with the bitter fight,
Caught the thread of the world again,
Never doubting in all despite;
Knew no wrong that was not her right,
Smiling still in the olden way,
Not resenting a fancied slight;
Ah, willow and welladay!

Recked she little in passing then
Whether on him would sorrow light,
Thus to wander from out his ken,
Fading and disappearing quite;
Though he bent to her beauty's might,
Never a prayer had he to pray;
Curse on him for a stubborn wight;
Ah, willow and welladay!

ENVOY.

Prince, when the bards of earth recite,
They strike the chords and insistent say,
Some will love, though the loved one smite;
Ah, willow and welladay!

The Instructive Case of Jenkins

Jenkins is a bright young lawyer, who has sat before a big empty desk for nearly two years without earning enough to buy a whole suit of clothes. Of course he's busy. It takes him about ten hours a week to study out the diplomatic possibilities of his next encounter with his landlady. Then there is his affair at the restaurant. He has to keep watch of the holes in his meal ticket and look for chance invitations to more sumptuous meals. It took him nearly a year of finance with Chinese laundrymen before he adopted celluloid. What leisure he had was until lately occupied with a sort of credit correspondence with his father, upon whom he is at liberty to draw only in cases of extreme necessity. Jenkins has written home many really able definitions of "extreme necessity."

All this may not prove that Jenkins is willing to work, but he is, and he proved it last week. He "offices" with an eminent lawyer. This means, in his case, that he gets deskroom in exchange for his services as office boy, court messenger and a few more important vicarious duties. In the same office with Jenkins there is Stack, the clerk, whose chief excuse for being there is that he is nephew to the aforesaid eminent one. Then there is Harkins, the stenographer, who really works and who is the envy of both Jenkins and Stack because he draws a good salary and is allowed postage on his own mail. Stack's salary is $7.50, but as he lives with his uncle and pays no board he is really the aristocrat of the office. Jenkins gets 2 per cent on the bills he collects.

Two weeks ago, however, somebody bought him a good dinner, and then such an unwonted courage rose up within him that he decided to approach the eminent lawyer with whom he "offices" and ask advice. To the lawyer Jenkins said:

"Mr. Lord, I'm not getting along very well, and I don't know exactly what to do to improve my affairs. Of course I don't want to leave you, but the fact is if I don't commence to take in a little more money I'll have to get a situation, go into some trade—quit the law."

"Now, see here, Jenkins," said Mr. Lord. "I'll tell you what I'd do in your place. I'd start a collection agency. You can do it right here in my office. Take in the other boys; get up a little stock company. It doesn't require any capital, and if it's run right it ought to pay. I'll give Stack all my old accounts, and you can get as many more as you want by advertising."

Jenkins' eyes bulged with joy. Here at last was his chance. He thanked his superior repeatedly, and that very day the Calumet Quick Collection company was formed. Jenkins wrote a long letter to his father, explaining that postage stamps were an "extreme necessity," and then drew for $5. Stack and Harkins each contributed as much, and the new concern began life with a stock of enthusiasm and hope that was not expressed in the amount of paid up capital. Jenkins contributed most of the enthusiasm, but Stack and Harkins hoped for the best. The work was so divided that the young lawyer had to do all the outside work. The stenographer, of course, could not leave the office except for meals, and the clerk argued that it would pay to have some one at headquarters to meet customers and clients; so, with some misgivings, Jenkins agreed to this arrangement.

The young lawyer was determined to do or die in his new venture, and to this end he came down to the office about daybreak on the morning of his first effort. He had a package of statements an inch thick and a long book in which the names and amounts were listed. He began work at 8 o'clock with 65 cents for car fare in his pocket and the anticipation of swift and certain success shining in his eyes. On foot, in street cars and in trains he literally flew about the town till noon.

Some of the men he sought were dead.

Others talked as if they would like to be.

Many had left the city for good—for their own good, Jenkins thought. Some were so poor that he knew they would never pay.

A few laughed at him.

Nobody paid him.

He got back to the office about noon broken in finances, but not in spirit. He almost lost his temper, however, when Stack laid down the paper covered novel he was reading, took his feet down from the steam radiator and asked:

"How much did you get?"

He even fancied that he could hear Harkins laugh when he answered: "I didn't collect a cent. Hard luck, isn't it? I ran into a gang of tough ones and then ran out of car fare. Any answers to our dunning letters?"

"Not a glimmer," mourned Harkins.

Stack looked glad of it. He loaned Jenkins a half dollar for car fare, charged it up on the company's book and resumed his warm place in the corner.

When the young lawyer was gone out, the clerk sidled up to the stenographer and said:

"Say, Hark, I think we're on a dead one, don't you?"

"I hope not, for Jenk's sake. He's so in earnest," said the stenographer.

"Well, it's Jenk's doings. He suggested it, and I guess he needs the money worse than we do."

"But if it fails?"

"Well, if it fails I think Jenkins ought to stand the losses. I'm out five-fifty already, and it's his fault."

"But he's doing all the work," suggested Harkins.

"Well, so he ought." And Mr. Stack went back to his novel.

The young lawyer worked like a fiend. When car fare was gone, he walked, even ran, after his supposed victims. He quit going back to the office and worked far into the night. He pestered the life out of every debtor who showed the least sign of paying up, and if they offered him a dollar he took it and asked for two. In the meantime, a few answers to advertisements came into the office, but Mr. Lord seized upon them as "too deep for the boys." Nobody called. Stack began and finished three paper covered novels. Harkins plodded away indoors, both wondering how long Jenkins' nerve would stand the hardships of chasing his prey through ice and snow.

At noon on Saturday Jenkins appeared at the office. He looked thinner than ever. His shoes were worn out. He had a piece of red flannel round his neck and his voice was a husky whisper. Harkins didn't have the heart to ask him how he fared, but Stack yelled:

"Hello, old man! We thought you had absconded with the firm's money!"

Jenkins was very silent. He sat down at his desk and began to make out his statement. Stack watched him with curious interest as he piled up the few checks and greenbacks which represented the first week's business of the Calumet Quick Collection company. He had collected $240, and the net earnings of the company at 10 per cent amounted to $24—just $8 for each of the three stockholders.

"Good boy!" said Stack, picking up his share. "You're a wonder. I didn't think you'd make it go."

Harkins, being what Stack calls "a chump," flushed when Jenkins handed him his share of the profits.

"I'll tell you, Mr. Jenkins," he said. "I don't feel as if I was entitled to any of this money. You and Stack here did all the work, and you ought to keep my share for stamps and car fare, eh?"

But Jenkins insisted, and the stenographer yielded.

"All right," he laughed; "I'll take it on condition that you take dinner with me this evening. We'll celebrate the week's success—kind of christen the business. What do you say?"

Jenkins and Stack promised, and at 7 o'clock that evening the three partners were sitting together at a restaurant table christening the collection company.

When they got to the coffee, Jenkins let his bomb fall upon the festal board in this wise:

"Now, Hark and Stack, as to this collection company. I don't know whether it is 'the quick' or 'the dead,' but I want to announce that, so far as I am concerned, it is dissolved, evaporated, vanished. Here are our accounts." He pulled out the package. "They are supposed to represent $840.00 of good accounts. You can have them. I wouldn't give $4 for the bunch."

His partners looked at him in astonishment. "You're joking!" they chorused. "Why, we have just got to work!"

"You mean I've just got to work," said Jenkins. "Well, I'm done too. I'm out $5 for stamps, I've worn out a pair of shoes, I've done $100 worth of the meanest work on earth, and I haven't got anything but $8 and the grip. This is the first square meal I've had for two weeks, and I tell you the quick collection business is all off."

The next day Stack said to Harkins that Jenkins wasn't such a mark after all. As for the young lawyer, he is in doubt whether to go back to the farm or look for a more congenial place to "office," for now Mr. Lord, the eminent attorney, says that Jenkins has "no sand" and will never get along unless he learns to "love work."—Chicago Record.

WOMEN AND BICYCLING.

It Is in the Tendency to "Scorch" that the Chief Danger Lies.

In the first place, it ought to be a law for every woman that she should never ride a bicycle after a distinct feeling of weariness comes over her. For those who are beginning, especially, and in a measure for all women, there is a danger of riding out a certain distance, and only turning towards home when this feeling of weariness comes on. In such cases the strain on the nervous system all the way home is very great, and by the time the end of the journey is reached—for it has become a journey by this time—the rider is exhausted to such an extent that a severe headache or some more serious indisposition is the result. There is no other reason for this than the fact that she did not prescribe for herself a certain distance before starting out, which was not to be exceeded under any circumstances. No ordinary woman who rides for pleasure once or twice a week should do over about ten mile's at a time. This is perhaps an hours ride, that may be easily extended to an hour and a quarter before that distance is covered; and if she does not feel fresh and in a glow when she stops she may be certain that she has ridden too long. Naturally their is that healthy tired feeling which any one recognizes after athletic exercise, but it is quite different from and never to be mistaken for the weariness which comes from too much exertion and straining of the nerves and muscles. Very few women have ever been injured on a bicycle who kept to this rule and limited their riding to normal distances.

The limit of distance which is designated by the first feeling of weariness, is only a little more important than the limit of speed which the female frame is capable of undergoing under healthy exercising rules. Whether a man can ride at full speed for a long distance and still retain his good health is a doubtful question, but it does not particularly concern us in the present discussion. It is quite certain, however, that no woman can keep up a high rate of speed for even a generous portion of a mile and not create the beginnings of injuries. The added strength required to increase your speed even a little after a certain amount of power has been expended is out of all proportion to the results. There is no relaxation of the muscles between revolutions of the pedals nor any let-up on the nervous and muscular strain while the speed lasts. The heart is far more taxed than one realizes at the moment, and that species of tingling or numbness in the nerves and muscles which often results is only a sign that they have both been overtaxed.

This danger of acquiring too much speed is natural enough. The bicycle runs so easily on smooth asphalt or macadam that it is a strong temptation to "scorch"—indeed, it is so strong a temptation that as soon as a girl has fairly learned to ride easily she has to put a deliberate check on herself to avoid dropping into it.

The Toper's Dinner.

Instead of going to their work one Monday a number of workmen entered a public house determined to spend the day there.

About noon a woman looked in and said, addressing one of the party:

"I supposed you are not coming home to dinner today, so I have brought you your share."

So saying, she placed a dish and plate, carefully tied up, in front of the toper and went away.

"Looks well after you, your wife does," said a mate. "Suppose we taste and see what it's like?"

"Aye, let us have a taste," said the husband as he untied the bundle.

But the plates were empty, and there was a note with them which ran as follows:

"I hope you will enjoy your dinner. It is the same as myself and the children are having at home."—London Answers.

Mother (who always takes things literally)—My dear Clara, what a very shocking remark. I know he was very ill the first few days out, but fancy noticing such a thing.

An Epitaph.

In the churchyard of Leigh, near Bolton, will be found a tombstone bearing the following amazing sentence: "A virtuous woman is 5s. to her husband." The explanation seems to be that space prevented "a crown" being cut in full, and the stonemason argued that a crown equals 5s.—Notes and Queries.

OUR ADVERTISERS.

During the present disturbed relations with our advertisers, on account of the disastrous fire in the Examiner buildings, we are compelled to ask the indulgence of our patrons for a few days until we can pull ourselves together again. Hard and earnest work is being done to instal an entirely new printing plant in our present temporary premises at No. 411 George Street, a few doors south of the burned building, and by the end of the week, we hope to resume our contracts with our advertisers. In the meantime, in order to keep our advertisers as much in touch with our readers as possible, we will be able to insert short local notices of their business announcements.

The Peterborough Bookstore.

Our store will necessarily have to be closed for a day or two longer before the insurance men will be able to adjust the losses and we are in a position to put the stock in shape for doing business. The daily papers will be delivered to customers as usual, and may also be obtained at the Examiner's temporary premises, 411 George Street, where business orders may also be placed in the meantime.

A. H. STRATTON & CO

Retiring from Business.

There have been enough bona fide bargains handed out to the ladies of Peterborough, during the first seven days of our closing-out sale, to go around the town like wild-fire. There's not a home in town but what has been talking about our sale. Let it be distinctly understood that the whole stock must be cleared out without delay, and that means almost at your own prices. We can't afford to dilly-dally over sales. With the same object in view, we trust all those indebted to us will be kind enough to pay their accounts promptly.

MISS K. RUDKINS.

Routley's Magic Prices.

The great sale of the Toronto Bazaar stock, bought at a fraction on the dollar, is a bonanza to Peterborough citizens. The goods are moving with such rapidity that special lines advertized one day are very often completely sold out the next. There are many lines, however, such as Wall Papers, Window Blinds, China, Crockery, etc., that can stand a month's heavy selling before being cleared. Another thing is certain—that no matter what you buy here you can count on securing wonderful bargains—bargains such as can be obtained nowhere else in Peterborough or any other town in Ontario.

Gentlemen's New Spring Hats.

We are showing all the new and stylish shapes in gentlemen's black and coloured hats for early spring wear. The styles are the correct English and American makes in Derby and Fedora hats, and to be right in line with this year's fashions you should let us fit you. Our hats are all fine makes, who have guaranteed records.

The Alarm Clock Won.

The man who tried to sleep after one of our "Early Risers" started in to do its work didn't have a ghost of a show. On the fourth round, he had to tumble out, slightly profane, but grateful. Makes no difference how heavy a sleeper you are, or how late you went to bed, our alarm clocks never disappoint.

CLARKE & GIBSON.

Quite a Fad.

It's a great fad some people have of buying watches from perambulating peddlers. They apparently like to be taken in, or to indulge in risky speculations If you come to Schneider's and buy a watch you don't have to take any risks. If the watch we sell you don't suit you, we're here to give you your money back for the asking

ANNUAL MEETING, BOARD OF TRADE.

MR. D. W. DUMBLE ELECTED PRESIDENT.

Norwood Apsley Railroad — The Beet Sugar Question Discussed—Resolutions passed and Other Business Transacted.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Board of Trade was held in the town council chamber last night, when officers were elected for the ensuing year, and other business transacted,

Among those present were Mr T E Bradburn, chairman, T Q Quartermaine, secretary, J H Burnham, R Fair, T A S Hay, Dawson Kennedy, H LeBrun, Wm Collins, D W Dumble, R McWhinnie, Thos Rorke, R Harrison, Thos Hooper, J Carnegie, W Salisbury, T F Boddy, Peter Campbell, E M Elliott, Warden Fitzgerald, Rev J C Davidson, H Rush, J Corkery, Jos Batten, B Shortly, His Worship Mayor Deane, John Sawers, A P Poussette, G M Roger.

The minutes of the last annual meeting were read and confirmed.

A number of communications were read and laid on the table.

The council of the Board reported having gone through certain correspondence and carefully considered the same, and the Railway Committee also reported regarding certain matters.

The report of the Treasurer, Mr Robert Fair, showed a balance of $143 to the credit of the special account, and $239 27 to the credit of the general account.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The Secretary's report was presented by Mr T Q Quartermaine, and read as follows:

Mr. President and Gentlemen:

I have the honour of presenting to you, as secretary, the Twelfth Annual Report of this Board, and must ask you to excuse its brevity on the ground of want of subject matter on which to base it.

MEETINGS—Since our last annual meeting we have held two meetings of the Board; also a meeting of the Council of the Board and of the Committee on Railways and Canals.

MEMBERSHIP—The membership roll of 73 fell somewhat short in comparison with that of last year, but we trust to be able to show a more healthy record in the near future.

ATTENDANCE—The average attendance at above meetings of the Board was 10 members. At the meeting of the Council of Board and of the Committee on Railways and Canals we had a quorum on both occasions.

DEPUTATIONS—At the meeting of 25th ult. a deputation from the West Peterborough Farmers' Institute, composed of Mr E. M. Elliott, president; Mr. Wm. Collins, secretary; and Mr. T. M. Hunter, waited on the board to discuss the matter of the sugar beet industry.

This deputation was cordially invited to the adjourned meeting of 28th ult., when Mr. G. W. Fitzgerald, warden of the county of Peterborough; Mr. Frank Adams, reeve of the village of Ashburnham; Mr. Dawson Kennedy, Alderman Harry Rush, Alderman Joseph Batten, Mr. J. J. Howden and others were also present.

SUBJECTS UNDER DISCUSSION—The following subjects have been duly discussed:—"Grand Trunk Railway-Portland." "Sugar Beet Industry." "Technical Education." "The King's Title," "Norwood-Apsley Railway."

MANUFACTURERS ETC—The Board has been in correspondence with several manufacturing enterprises with the object of inducing them to locate in our town, among which may be mentioned the Specialty Manufacturing Company, of Toronto; North American Bent Chair Company, of Owen Sound; Goldie & McCulloch Safe Manufacturing Company, of Galt; Knechtel Manufacturing Company, of Hanover; Bell Organ and Piano Company, Guelph; McCormick Harvesting Machine Company, of Chicago; also a large tanning company from the English Midlands.

LOCAL PRESS—Thanks are due to the members and reporters of our local press for the able manner in which they have always reported the business of the Board.

COUNCIL CHAMBER—The thanks of the board are also due the mayor, the board of aldermen and town clerk for the use of the council chamber during the past year.

Your obedient servant,
T. Q. QUARTERMAINE
Secretary.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The election of officers was proceeded with and resulted as follows:

President—D W Dumble.
Vice-President—Peter Campbell.
Treasurer—Robert Fair.
Secretary—T Q Quartermaine.

Mr Bradburn in retiring from the chair, said that he regretted that he was unable to do more for the Board than he had, and expressed every confidence in the ability of his successor, Mr. Dumble.

Mr Dumble in accepting the office, spoke in fitting terms, thanking the members for their kindness, and assuring them that he would do all in his power to promote the interests of the Board and the town in general. Mr Dumble then took up matters of general interest, referring first to the Norwood & Apsley Railway, claiming that it would be beneficial to Peterborough, although it would touch Norwood, as the distance from the north country to Peterborough could not be lessened in any better way. He thought that it would be finally extended to tap the main line of the C.P.R., and went on to speak of the many benefits to be derived from such a line.

MR. BURNHAM.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, in speaking of the railroad question, said that there was no possibility of the G.T.R. in building any further north than they have and as there was a likelihood of the Norwood and Apsley Railroad going through, he moved, seconded by Mr H LeBrun, that Mr Dumble and Mr P Campbell be a deputation to join the Norwood delegation to interview the Government on the matter.

However, neither of these gentlemen could go, and Messrs J. H. Burnham and R. Harrison were appointed.

Rev J C Davidson at this junction put a different complexion on matters. He spoke strongly against the practice of bonusing such a railroad and advanced many reasons for holding such views. The railroad would run from a fairly respectable village to nowhere. There was no timber north of Apsley and the country was barren. It was a place the Creator had designed for no one to live in, and it would be a better plan for the Government to send wagons up to bring what people are there back to civilization Mr Davidson went on to say that Norwood would be the place which would receive the benefit from such a line, and why should we be asked to assist in such a project?

Mr Burnham replying to Rev Mr Davidson, pointed out the great possibilities in the northern country as a summer resort.

Mr R Harrison spoke in glowing terms of the resources of the north country, touching upon the subject of the mica mines, the secondary marble, the timber supply of elm, blue oak, etc.

G.T.R'S. POSITION.

A communication was read from General Manager Reeves of the Grand Trunk, stating that there was not the slightest possibility of them extending the Lakefield any further north.

Mr Dumble reminded the meeting of the time when the C P R could not make arrangements with the Grand Trunk Railway Co regarding the North Bay line when they then ran their trains by way of Smith's Falls. Would they not preferred to have had a line to the north from about this point? The C P R are anxious to have a line to tap their main line.

Mr John Carnegie spoke of the rapid growth of timber in the back country. He strongly supported the project and thought that it would be of a great benefit to Peterborough if this vast country to the north were opened up 30 years ago when he was advocating the Haliburton railroad to terminate in Peterborough, the project was defeated by such arguments as Rev J C Davidson put forth.

Mr Peter Campbell drew attention to the fact that the C P R had intimated that they would put a fleet of steamers on these waters and erect several large commodious hotels.

Mr Rorke claimed that he knew the country quite well and expressed surprise at the gloomy view Rev J C Davidson took of the matter. The G T R had all the summer resorts and the C P R were anxious to have something of this kind to compete with the rival road.

Mr. Carnegie asked why the G.T.R was allowed to close down the Bridgenorth road, when it had been bonused by the community? They should be made hand the same over to the C.P.R, and thereby allow the road to tap the lakes in this manner.

Mr. A. P. Poussette spoke in favour of the road. He thought that Peterborough had lost its opportunity and the people of the town should not act the part of the dog in the manger, but should turn in and assist in opening the road via Norwood.

After over an hour's discussion on the matter, Messrs. J. H. Burnham and R. Harriston were appointed a delegation to go to Toronto, along with the Norwood deputation for the purpose of laying before the Ontario Government the claims of the Board.

Upon motion of Mr. Carnegie, seconded by Mr. Robert Fair, the following resolution was put through, being carried unanimously:

"The Peterborough Board of Trade desire to put on record their great sorrow for the death of Wm. Cluxton, so long an extensive and honourable merchant in Peterborough. Mr. Cluxton's life has been one which is an inspiration and an example to all young men. Commencing life without many advantages, he cultivated assiduously all natural talents, and by industry, perseverence and a constant aim to maintain a high standard of commercial honour, Mr. Cluxton secured and ever held the esteem of the people, the respect of all business men and eminent success in business.

This Board tenders to his family their condolence and desires this resolution to be entered in the minutes."

Upon motion of Mr. R. Fair, seconded by Mr. J. H. Burnham, the usual grant of $5.00 was made to the reporters of the local press.

The old council was re-appointed and a committee was selected to strike the standing committees.

Mr. Dawson Kennedy, chairman of the special committee appointed to gather information regarding the proposed establishment of the Sugar Beet Industry reported, recommending that the Board take such action as they think proper and best to bring the subject intelligently before the people.

Mr. J. H. Burnham moved, seconded by Mr. P. Campbell, that the reports be adopted, and that $10.00 be voted towards the expense of calling a public meeting to be addressed by capable men on the subject.

The motion was adopted after Mr. E. M. Elliott and Mr. Dawson Kennedy had spoke in support of the same.

The committee appointed to continue the work regarding the matter is composed of the President and Secretary of the Farmers' Institute, the Warden of the County, the Mayor of the town, the President and Secretary of the Board of Trade and Mr. Kennedy.

The usual vote of thanks was passed to the Mayor and Town Council and the Clerk for their kindness to the Board.

Rev. J. C. Davidson fathered the following resolution, which was seconded by Mr. H. LeBrun, and carried by the Board. "That this Board recognizes with pleasure the public spirit shown by Hon. Geo. A. Cox and our esteemed fellow citizen Hon. J. R. Stratton, in connection with the American Cereal Company, and assure these distinguished gentlemen of our appreciation of this and other evidences of interest in our town.'

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONCERT.

Held in Union Sunday School on Friday Evening Last.

Union Sunday School of S. S. No. 1, Smith, held a very successful concert on Friday, March 8th. Mr. Stone, of Toronto, who happened to be in the section, very ably filled the chair. The programme consisted of songs, recitations, dialogues, etc., and at intermission fruit bags were passed. At the conclusion the pupils and friends showed their appreciation of the valuable services rendered by their school teacher, Mr. John Mahood, by presenting him with a handsome gold chain and locket, accompanied by a suitable address. Although completely taken by surprise, he thanked them in a few well chosen words. In spite of the storm the house was well filled and all were satisfied with their night's entertainment.

NEWS NUGGETS

PAYNE SHOT HIMSELF

AN ASHBURNHAM RESIDENT'S VERY RASH ACT.

Wm. Payne Locked Himself in His Bedroom and Ended His Life—Tried it Once Before.

Wm Payne, an old gentleman, who for many years has been a resident of Ashburnham, committed suicide at 7.30 o'clock this morning by shooting himself with a shot gun.

Payne is a man of about 55 years of age, and was employed at Calcutt's brewery. He has during the past few years shown signs of being demented, and about two years ago attempted to take his life by cutting his jugular vein.

As stated the attempt which he made this morning was successful.

His wife gave the alarm, and Messrs M Carton, Fred Hawes and John Collins broke in the door of his room, only to find Payne lifeless.

Deceased acted in no way strange last night, and his wife and family had not the slightest intimation of the awful deed he meditated.

He leaves a wife, two daughters and one son. The former are Mrs. Daniel Howley, of Norwood, and Miss Emma, of Ashburnham, and the latter, Mr Ross Payne, of Toronto.

THEIR EFFORTS APPRECIATED.

The Members of the Fire Brigade Thanked for Their Work.

Peterborough, March 9th, 1901.

Thomas Rutherford, Esq, Chief of the Fire Brigade, Peterborough:

Dear Sir,—I wish to recognize most heartily the efficient service your brigade has rendered in their heroic efforts to save The Examiner establishment from the effects of fire this morning and although your efforts were not successful, I wish to say that nothing was left undone by any member of the brigade to do all that was possible in preventing the spread of fire.

In very partial appreciation of the splendid work you have done I beg to enclose herewith my cheque for $20.00, to be applied to the fund of the Brigade.

Yours very sincerely,
J. R. STRATTON.

FROM HIS EXCELLENCY.

Letter Acknowledging Message of Condolence.

His Worship Mayor Deane has received the following message from His Excellency the Governor-General:—

Government House, Ottawa,
March 6, 1901.

Sir,—In obedience to correspondence received from His Majesty the King His Excellency the Governor General desires me to convey your worship and the citizens of Peterborough His Majesty's heartfelt thanks for the kind expression of sympathy contained in your worship's message of the 23rd of January last, which has been gratefully appreciated by His Majesty and the Royal Family.

I have the honour to be sir,
Your worship's obedient servant,
HARRY GRAHAM,
Capt. and A D.C.,
Acting Governor-General's Secretary.

His Worship the Mayor of Peterborough.

ALMOST CRUSHED TO DEATH.

A Smith Farmer Caught Between Two Tiers of Lumber.

Mr John Archer, of the 4th Line of Smith, was seriously injured at noon to-day in front of the Dickson Company's mill in Ashburnham, while loading lumber on his sleigh. It appears that he was standing at the time between two tiers of lumber. He was pushing from one when the other fell on him from the rear. He was found unconscious. The lumber was quickly removed and the unfortunate man was carried into McAllister's mill, where he was examined by Dr. Bradd, who ordered him removed to the Nicholls Hospital.

A number of severe scalp wounds were received and the crushing administered was a fearful one, yet no bones were broken and if internal injuries were not received Mr. Archer will be able to be out again in a couple of weeks.

FOR MACKENZIE RIVER.

The Peterborough Canoe Co'y Have Built a Steamer for the Northern Waters.

The Peterborough Canoe Company are to-day shipping to Edmonton, via C.P.R. the hull of a small steamer which will be used in the Arctic waters, in the fur-trading industry. The boat was ordered by Mr. W. H Connors, a leading fur trader of the north country and was built in a surprisingly short time by the Peterborough Canoe Co. Owing the limited facilities of the Examiner, at the present time, it is impossible to give a very detailed account of the make-up of this staunch little steamer. It might be said, however, that two weeks ago the timber used in its construction was growing in the forest. It is made of the very best white oak, and will undoubtedly withstand the rough duties to which it will be assigned on the Mackenzie river. She is 55 feet long, 10 feet wide, with 5½ foot beam. The boat will be taken by C.P.R. to Edmonton in pieces, thence 100 miles by teams to Athabasca Landing, then 800 miles by barges to Great Slave lake, where she will be put together. The Peterborough Canoe Company is to be congratulated on their enterprise.

SPORTING PASTIMES.

HOCKEY.

The Druggists claim that the West Enders have defaulted to them.

The Campbellford team will go up to Fenelon Falls to-night to play the final game in the Trent Valley League series.

The Miffs and Biffs will play another game on the rink to-morrow night between 7 and 8 o'clock.

AFTER THE E.K.O. SCALPS.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Manager Ernie Taylor of the Twentieth Century Club wish to announce that as soon as arrangements can be made for the rink he will give the E.K.O. Campaigners, providing they don't play Comstock, as their funeral will certainly be to-morrow and their fratemal brother will in shape to look after their remains. I would also like to draw Manager Higgins' attention to the fact that Rolly and Richard, the two men they put so much dependence in, played with the aggregation who met defeat at the hands of Port Hope. Great "Scott!" We'll have to be to beat us! We don't mean to insinuate that we can trim Port Hope, as we have been compelled to practice on a packing case which we had thrown over in our rooms for the purpose of oiling taffy, yet could home and home games be arranged even this seven would doubtlessly leave the arena for good

Trusting to see William "Bill Howe" Higgins at an early date, I remain,

Yours in war,
ERNIE TAYLOR,
Man. T. C. C.

P.S.—Willie, you may be all right on the farm.

CURLIANA.

The Second Colts' Cup will repose in the keeping of Skip Blade until next season, as he landed the coveted trophy last evening by a majority of four shots from Skip Davidson in a closely contested game. The rinks were composed as follows:

M E Green,	T F Matthews,
J H Hall,	Alf Terrill,
A Blade, skip—16	D Davidson, skip—12

THE RING.

The Argonaut Rowing Club, having obtained the sanction of the Canadian Amateur Athletic Union, will hold the Fifth Annual Boxing and Wrestling Tournament, to decide the amateur championships of Canada, on April 11th, 12th and 13th next.

The Boxing competition embraces seven classes, viz: Special, 105 lbs. and under; Bantam, 115 lbs. and under; Feather, 125 lbs. and under; Light, 135 lbs. and under; Welter, 145 lbs. and under; Middle, 158 lbs. and under; and Heavy, 158 lbs. and over.

The Wrestling embraces five classes: Bantam, 105 lbs. and under; Feather, 115 lbs. and under; Light, 135 lbs. and under; Welter, 145 lbs and under; and Middle, 158 lbs and under.

The Tournament is open to amateurs only who are bona fide members of any regularly organized athletic club: As the object of these contests is to encourage manly scientific boxing and wrestling, no slugging or strangling or prize ring tactics will be tolerated. The winner in each class will receive a handsome gold medal representing the Canadian Amateur Championship of his class.

Entry forms and all other particulars may be obtained from the Secretary of the Tournament Committee of the Argonaut Rowing Club, Toronto.

Y. W. C. A.

Miss Carson, of Christodora House, New York, will visit the Young Women's Christian Association, next Saturday, March 11th and will be here for several days.

On Sunday afternoon a gospel service will be held at 4.15, to which all women are invited.

On Tuesday evening, at 8 o'clock, there will be a reception for all our members. Invitations will be sent out to each member, but if any should happen not to receive one, they will kindly accept of this invitation and come. Both the Gospel service and the "At Home" will be held at the rooms, 168 Brock Street. 2d

Maid of Mount Shannon.

The public are reminded of the military drama, entitled "The Maid of Mount Shannon," which will be presented in Bradburn's opera house, under the auspices of St. Peter's T A S., on Monday evening next. The affair promises to be one of the best amateur productions that has been put on by any amateur company in some time. Tickets, 25 cents; reserved seats, 35c.

CONDOLENCES RECEIVED.

The Examiner desires to express its appreciation of the following kindly references to our recent misfortune.

THE GLOBE.

Mr. Stratton, the Provincial Secretary, will have the public sympathy in the loss he has just sustained by the burning down of The Examiner Office. We hope soon to see The Examiner as well equipped as before the fire. It is one of the best papers in eastern Ontario.

HAMILTON TIMES.

His many newspaper friends throughout the Dominion will regret to learn of Mr. Stratton's loss by the Peterborough fire, and will hope soon to see the Examiner again printed on its own presses.

WOODSTOCK EXPRESS.

Hon J. R. Stratton's many friends will sympathize with him in the destruction of the Peterborough Examiner. The Examiner will, of course, manage the same out as usual, for it is a very difficult thing to stop a newspaper, as some people know; but the loss is a serious matter, nevertheless.

GALT REFORMER.

Hon. J. R. Stratton, proprietor of the Peterborough Examiner, whose printing plant was destroyed by fire last week, will have the sincerest sympathy of his confreres in the loss he has sustained. The Examiner, thanks to the courtesy of Bros. Dobbin, of the Review, who placed his plant at the disposal of Mr. Stratton, is appearing as usual, and will continue to be issued from the the Review office till a new plant is secured

BRANTFORD EXPOSITOR.

The sympathy of the newspaper community of Canada will be extended to the Hon J. R. Stratton, Provincial Secretary, whose valuable plant of The Peterborough Daily and Weekly Examiner, was completely destroyed by fire on Saturday morning. The Examiner is one of the best papers in Ontario, and its plant was unusually valuable and up-to-date. Mr. Stratton has announced that he will immediately rebuild. From the well-known energy and enterprise of the Provincial Secretary, it is, as we should expect, The Examiner will rise Phoenixlike, from its ashes.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

The village blacksmith, R Touchbourn, is leaving for Bethany, We regret his stay here has been so short.

S Casey takes his place in the old parsonage, leaving room for Mr J Boyd to occupy the house he has been living in so long.

Farmers and others are invited to call at Mount Pleasant post office and examine an article manufactured by T A Jackson to be used on harness.

Mr R Howden, ex-Reeve of Cavan, is not enjoying good health just now.

LAKEFIELD.

Mr. Govan, of Indian Head, Man., was in the village last week, the guest of Mr. John Diswoodie.

Miss Laura Grylls left here on Tuesday for Griswold, Man.

Miss Sarah Walton has gone to Rochester on a visit to friends.

Mr. J. C. Grylls is in Toronto this week.

Dr. Alex. Bell is removing from Lakefield to practise his profession in Apsley. He will be very much missed. Our loss will be Apsley's gain.

Mr. H. O. Fisk, of Peterboro, was in the village on Monday.

Mr. J. S. Knapman of Peterboro, was in the village this week.

The people of Lakefield were sorry to learn of the loss to the Examiner by fire. Many expressions of congratulations have been made on the promptitude of the staff in having the paper issued the same evening.

Dr. Duncan Fraser has been appointed medical health officer for the village

R. Graham & Son are daily opening out large quantities of new spring goods.

Municipal ownership of the electric light plant is the popular theme of conversation just now. It is well worth considering, as it is a paying investment, and will yield a revenue to the finances of the village, and help to lower the taxes.

Miss Teresa Armstrong of Mount Julian, was in the village this week.

Mr. James Long has returned from Buckhorn, where he was engaged cutting ice.

On Saturday night about 7 o'clock, the fire alarm was sounded, and on making inquiries it was found that the residence of Mr. J. F. Tate was on fire. The boys at McKenzie's school noticed the fire and telephoned over. It was in one of the upstairs bedrooms, and had ten minutes more elapsed it is doubtful if the building could have been saved. The room was badly scorched, but was put out without further damage except that caused in other parts of the house by water and smoke. The origin of the fire is unknown.

WESTWOOD.

Miss Edith and Mr. Robt McMillan, of Norwood, spent a few days here last week.

Mr and Mrs J Bennet, Mather's Corners, spent Sunday in the vicinity, the guests of Mr and Mrs J White.

Mrs W Sharp and her son, Jas Sharp, spent a few days with friends in Baltimore this week.

Miss J Smith, of Harvey, is spending a few days with friends in the vicinity.

Mrs J Kindred, of Zion, spent a few days last week with her parents, Mrs J Brethenridge.

Mrs W Manley, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs W Brockenridge, of Monaghan, has returned home.

Teacher Wanted.

Teacher wanted for S. S No. 5, Smith (Bridgenorth). Normal preferred. Duties to commence March 25, if possible. Apply to G. D. Mann, Bridgenorth. 3dlw

The Examiner has completed arrangements for having a new plant installed by the latter part of the week and will by that time be in a position to fulfil all advertising contracts and orders in job work. A telephone has already been placed in position in our new premises, 411 George St. No. 57 will find us as usual.

VOL. XXXI. NO. 61. THE DAILY EXAMINER, PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY. MARCH 14, 1901.

AN IMPORTANT STEP.

Provincial House Resolves on a Committee of Agriculture.

THE VOTE WAS UNANIMOUS.

The Speeches of the Mover and Seconder of the Resolution, the Minister of Agriculture, the Commissioner of Crown Lands and the Premier —Will Also Deal With Colonization.

Toronto, March 14.—In the Legislative Assembly yesterday, Hon. Mr. Dryden in reply to Mr. Duff, stated that the commissioners sent to Michigan to investigate the results of the Sugar Beet industry were appointed Sept. 27, 1900, and were engaged 19 days for which they received $95 each.

Hon. J. R. Stratton, in reply to a question from Mr. Brower, stated that 527,488 pounds of binder twine were manufactured in the Central Prison in 1899 and 1900, of which 48,170 pounds were sold to farmers direct. All orders sent in from farmers were filled.

Mr. Joynt asked if it was the intention of the Government to introduce legislation to abolish the use of Trading Stamps?

The Premier stated that the Government would not introduce any such measure, but he understood that a bill of that kind would be brought in by a private member.

Mr. Little moved that in consideration of the fact that Agriculture is the chief industry of the Province of Ontario, and that a large tract of fertile land in New Ontario is still unoccupied, this House is of the opinion that the appointment of a Committee on Agriculture and Colonization would advance the interests of Agriculture and assist in the settlement of New Ontario, such committee to be considered as one of the Standing Committees of the House.

He asserted that the existence of such a committee would have prevented the mistakes made by the Commissioner of Agriculture in dealing with the San Jose scale. He asserted that Mr. Dryden could not do all he wished for agriculture on account of the influences by which he was surrounded.

Hon. Mr. Dryden said that his colleagues had always co-operated with him and given him their hearty support in all proposals in the agricultural interests, so that the motion was quite unnecessary. As a matter of fact, new departures were being steadily taken in connection with agriculture. He referred to the traveling dairies and dairy schools, the good roads movement, etc., as showing that the department kept fairly abreast of the times. It had for years conducted a campaign of education on behalf of agriculture. The publication of the numerous reports and the bulletins circulated by the department had done a great deal for the education of the farmers. As to the San Jose scale, no committee could have helped matters, in view of the lack of information about the pest which prevailed. He had no objection to the proposed committee if the House considered it desirable, but he wanted it to be understood that he did not need any committee for the purpose of defending himself against his colleagues.

Mr. Duff thought that such a committee irrespective of party considerations would be useful. They had a legal committee and a railway committee, and why should they not have a committee on agriculture? He referred to several matters such as remounts for the British army, sugar beet growing, colonization and reforestation, in regard to which an agricultural committee could do good service.

Hon. E. J. Davis said it was not correct to represent the Government as having opposed this resolution last year. They simply objected to its being put through at the close of the session at a time when it could not be fully considered. He welcomed the action of the mover of the resolution as indicating that the Opposition were showing a disposition to co-operate with them in developing the interests of the province. He reviewed the work of the Colonization Bureau in directing the attention of settlers to the agricultural districts of New Ontario—resulting in some thousands of settlers finding homes there. The forestry department under the management of Mr. Thomas Southworth, a most efficient officer, had done excellent work, and good progress in reforestation was being made. He was always glad to receive suggestions as to colonization and forestry from any source. No harm could come from the adoption of the motion.

Mr. Carnegie favored the constitution of a Committee on Agriculture. The members of that committee could suggest many directions in which experiments could profitably be made.

Mr. Kidd condemned the Government's policy with regard to tuberculosis tests. This had resulted in an altogether erroneous idea as to the danger of disease from the milk of tuberculous cattle.

Hon. J. R. Stratton denied that the settler in Michigan enjoyed more favorable terms than the settler in Ontario, as had been stated in the course of the debate. There was no country in the world where the settler could secure land on more favorable conditions than in this province.

Mr. Monteith would like to see a committee established on the principle that "in a multitude of counsellors there is wisdom."

Mr. Ellber spoke in favor of the committee and made the charge that young man wishing to settle in Parry Sound had been unable to do so, and on applying to the Crown Lands Agent had been referred to the Ontario Lumber Co.

Hon. E. J. Davis said he was not in a position to speak as to the case without examining the records. Perhaps the township where these men wished to settle had not been thrown open for settlement at all. The pine might not have been removed. But certainly there was no reason for any man to go outside of Ontario to find plenty of good land on which he was free to settle.

Mr. Whitney assailed the Government on the same line as Mr. Ellber, and did not consider that the Provincial Secretary's statement as to the favorable terms offered to settlers was justified in view of the facts.

Premier Ross hoped that the committee might be useful. There were many skilled agriculturists on both sides of the House, and he was not going to discredit it in advance. If it did any good they would be grateful for it, although the proposal came from the other side of the House.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. McLaughlin moved for an order for return of correspondence in connection with the two license inspectors in Stormont County, contending that one was sufficient. The Provincial Secretary pointed out that as conditions had changed since the inspectors were appointed it might be found possible to dispense with one of them. The motion was withdrawn.

The House adjourned at 6 o'clock.

The University.

A deputation consisting of about 200 members of the University of Toronto Alumni Association waited on the Government this afternoon to present the claims of the university for aid from the Government. The spokesmen comprised Dr. R. A. Reeve, President of the Association, Rev. James Allen, P. W. Ellis, President Canadian Manufacturers Association, E. V. Clergue of Sault Ste. Marie, James Chisel, Hamilton; Dr. Otto Klotz, Ottawa, and several others. They were accorded a sympathetic hearing and the Premier in his reply intimated that some measure of financial assistance would be granted to the departments of mineralogy and geology.

Other Deputations.

Due consideration was promised to the requests of numerous deputations which waited on the Government yesterday. There were heard deputations from New Ontario asking for a grant for the Pigeon River colonization road and for $500 for a bridge; from Peterboro asking the Government for a bonus of $3,000 a mile for the Apsley and Norwood Railway; general asking Hon. R. Harcourt to have an amendment made to the school law taking away the power of inspectors over the extension of second and third-class teachers' certificates; natural gas interests, to which Hon. J. M. Gibson emphatically stated that no decision had been arrived at respecting the export of natural gas; general asking Hon. Mr. Latchford to have net fishing prohibited in the River Thames; from the National Sanitarium Association asking Hon. J. R. Stratton to have the law amended so that municipalities could make grants when the sanitoria are outside the municipal boundaries; from the Elgin Historical Institute for a grant towards the Statue to Col. Talbot, which is to be unveiled at St. Thomas May 21, 1903, the hundredth anniversary of his arrival there.

Child Burned to Death.

Baie St. Paul, Que., March 14. — Tuesday night a fire entirely destroyed the saw mill of Messrs. Phydime Gagnon & Bros. The family, composed of Mr. Gagnon and seven children, residing in the upper part of the mill, awoke just in time to escape suffocation. All succeeded in saving themselves in night dresses, with the exception of a boy, aged 8 years, who was unfortunately forgotten in the precipitation, and the charred body was found yesterday morning among the ruins. Nothing was saved.

Irish Bill Defeated.

London, March 14.—The House of Commons yesterday, by a vote of 250 to 163, defeated the second reading of the congested districts (Ireland) bill, one of the main features of which was the appointment of a board with power to bring about the compulsory purchase of land. The Chief Secretary for Ireland, Mr. Wyndham, opposed the measure.

Listowel Grants the Loan.

Listowel, Ont., March 12.—The by-law to grant the Hess Bros.' Bent Chair Company a loan of $10,000 was yesterday carried by an almost unanimous vote, there being 425 votes polled for the bylaw to 35 against. The factory is expected to be running within four months.

DOMINION ELECTIONS.

Mr. Fitzpatrick's Bill to Amend the Present Act

VICTORIA DAY FIXED FOR MAY 24

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Speech Against Making Divorce Easy in the Dominion of Canada—Premier Also Discusses Some Misapprehensions Regarding the Island of Anticosti.

Ottawa, March 14.—The House, having disposed of the order paper, adjourned before 9 o'clock last night. Mr. Fitzpatrick introduced a couple of Governments bills, and explained the provisions of one which amended the Dominion Elections Act in several respects where experience of the elections indicated amendment is necessary. It proposes to authorize the acceptance of a marked check as a deposit, to improve the ballot paper, and to remove difficulties experienced in the operation of the Manhood Franchise Act. The debate upon Mr. Taylor's motion respecting Anticosti gave the Premier an opportunity to dispel the illusions entertained by some as to the possible menace to Canada in Mr. Menier's occupation of the island, and to remove misunderstanding as to the removal of the Fox Bay settlers. Arguments in favor of the establishment of a divorce court in Canada were submitted by Mr. Britton in a speech which dealt exhaustively with the subject. In the evening Dr. Horsey spoke ably and eloquently in moving the second reading of his bill establishing the 24th of May as a national holiday.

Dominion Election Act.

Mr. Fitzpatrick introduced a bill to amend the Franchise Act.

The Solicitor-General also moved the first reading of a bill to amend the Dominion Elections Act of 1900. He explained that the bill provides for amendment to the section respecting the posting of proclamations in the Territories. It also provides that in the case of a deposit with the returning officer, a certified cheque on a bank will be available as a deposit. Then it provides for a change in the form of ballot to obviate difficulties arising in certain sections of Ontario where some of the voters mark their ballots, outside of the disc opposite the name.

Another provision is that in the case of manhood suffrage those who move from one district to another will not lose their votes, and in the event of a manhood suffrage list having been prepared on the Dominion Act within the three years prior to a bye-election, it may be available for that election, and do without the necessity of making a new list, as is now the case.

The bill was given a first reading.

A Divorce Court Proposed.

Mr. Britton moved, "That jurisdiction should be given to some one court of each of the Provinces of the Dominion, or a court should be established in each of the said Provinces, for the trial of cases for divorce, and that such courts should have jurisdiction to decree a dissolution of marriage."

Mr. Britton hoped, if the Government could not accept his motion, it might at least take into consideration the suggestion that the judges in each Province should be referees, before whom evidence might be taken and forwarded to the Senate.

Mr. W. F. Maclean held that this was another case where a remedy must be found for a grievance. So far as it has jurisdiction, the House ought to put the question on a basis satisfactory to the whole country, and take up not only the question of divorce, but that of marriage, otherwise Canada would ere long find itself in the state of confusion that prevails in the United States. The greatest social discord prevailing in that country arises from the laxity and diversity of the divorce and marriage laws in the different states. Leading men in the United States were agreed as to the necessity of federal enactment there. He hoped the resolution of Mr. Britton would receive consideration. He would not say on what grounds divorce ought to be granted, but the present law was unsatisfactory and, most of all, unfair to the poor man or woman.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Speech.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier replied that the different attempts made since 1867 to have a divorce law in this country had never been prosecuted with much vigor, showing that public opinion is not much in sympathy with having a divorce law introduced into Canada. The small number of divorces granted since Confederation was another proof that divorce was not favored here.

"It may be," said the Premier, "that the facility with which divorces are granted in the United States has produced in this country a sentiment rather hostile to divorce. Would it be advisable, therefore, for us to change the system we have, cumbersome though it is, difficult though it is, but which has the advantage of discouraging divorce? Mr Maclean, who is a stalwart in everything, is perhaps a stalwart in this also, although I do not know that he would particularly favor a divorce court; but he will agree with me, at all events, that divorces are not to be desired. For my part, I would rather belong to this country, where divorces are few, than belong to the neighboring republic, where divorces are many.

Divorces are not looked upon with favor as a rule in the Province of Quebec, from which I come, and in the church to which I belong. In other religious denominations of Canada, where divorces are allowed, I am glad to say that as a rule they are not favored. They are discouraged, and that fact speaks well for the moral condition of our people. Divorces," the Premier continued, "were doubtless expensive, but not much more expensive in the Senate than they would be in the courts. But, as the chief factor of expense was the bringing of witnesses to Ottawa from a distance, the suggestion of allowing judges to take the evidence might be met by altering the rules of the Senate." For himself, however, he was not in favor of any alteration. Sir Wilfrid added: "For my part, so far as the work of Confederation is concerned, I am a Conservative of the Conservatives, Liberal though I am. I do not want to touch our constitution, except in cases where the defects have become absolutely glaring and demand remedy at all costs. I think it will be better to suffer some little inconvenience than to commence to alter the constitution." (Hear, hear.) He therefore asked that the resolution be withdrawn.

The motion was then withdrawn.

The bill from the Senate to amend the Canada Evidence Act was read a first time.

The Island of Anticosti.

Mr. Taylor moved for all the documents that had passed between the Dominion and Imperial Governments respecting the Island of Anticosti. He said the ownership of this island by a foreigner was a matter of interest to both Governments, and the public should be in possession of all the papers. The people of Fox Bay, who had been treated most unfairly, should be restored to their homes.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said there was no objection to the papers being brought down. He would say, however, that no correspondence had been exchanged between the Canadian and Imperial Governments with regard to the expropriation of Mr. Menier; but certain representations had been made which would be brought down. The Imperial authorities had never thought of calling the attention of the Canadian Government to the fact that Mr. Menier ought to be expropriated on the ground of there being danger from his possession, to the British Empire or to Canada.

If a battery were placed upon Anticosti, the wildest stretch of imagination could not make its fortification an obstruction to vessels passing up the St. Lawrence, there being 60 miles of water on either side. The idea was preposterous. With regard to the Fox Bay and other settlers, Mr. Menier had established his title against French and English alike. The Fox Bay settlers alone resisted his title, and they were expelled. That was certainly a hard thing, but it was done through the courts, not through Government, and according to the right of the subject. If the Fox Bay settlers had been squatters for thirty years, they could have upset M. Menier's title. They were helped to go to the Northwest, where they now are.

Dr. Roddick (Montreal) introduced a bill to establish a Dominion Medical Council. He explained its aims and objects, chief of which was to give doctors recognized under its laws universal rights of practice in Canada.

The bill was read a first time.

May 24 Always a Holiday.

Dr. Horsey moved the second reading of his bill to make the 24th of May a perpetual holiday in Canada.

Sir Wilfrid said public opinion was, with good reason, in favor of the bill, and he agreed to the second reading, but wished to make some changes in the phraseology.

Mr. Madore's money lenders' bill was sent to the Banking and Commerce Committee.

The House adjourned before 9 o'clock.

The Cook Charges.

Ottawa, March 14.—After further debate on Sir Mackenzie Bowell's motion for investigation into the Cook charges yesterday, the motion was carried by 84 contents to 80 non-contents, the Conservative majority now being cut down to 4.

The Divorce Committee reports on the Lilias Middleton and James Ward McDonald divorce cases were received and the bills read a first time.

The Lepers to Govern.

Honolulu, March 5, via San Francisco, March 13.—As a result of an official trip to the leper settlement on Molokai Island, native members of the Legislature announce their intention of giving local self-government to the lepers. They will receive the authority to conduct the settlement as they see fit.

Nominations in Kas Queen's P.E.I.

Charlottetown, March 14.—Yesterday was nomination day in East Queen's. Hon. D. A. McKinnon, Liberal, and Alex. Martin, Conservative, were nominated to contest the county, and both of them accepted.

PEACE CONFERENCE.

General Dewet to Meet General Botha at Pretoria.

GENERAL ARMISTICE DECLARED.

Lord Kitchener Authorized to Give Boers Better Terms—Free Institutions for the New Colonies—Important Statement by The Daily News—Government Announcement Expected To-Day.

New York, March 14.—A special despatch from Pretoria says: Pending the arrival of Gen. Dewet a general armistice has been declared. General Botha has been in conference with General Kitchener and Sir Alfred Milner for several days, and all three desire to consult Dewet. Dewet is hurrying north through the Orange River Colony in obedience to Botha's summons. He passed Brandfort Tuesday night. On his arrival a conference will be held near here. There is joy to-day in the hope that the last gun has been fired in the Boer war.

WILL GIVE BETTER TERMS.

Free Institutions for the New African Colonies.

London, March 14. — The Daily News says: "In addition to the modifications announced by The Daily News yesterday in the unconditional surrender policy, we understand that the Government has authorized Lord Kitchener to give a distinct promise that the Government of the new colonies shall culminate in a complete grant of free institutions."

Mr. Leyds arrived at Utrecht yesterday, and had a long conference with Mr. Kruger. A despatch to The Daily Mail from Utrecht corroborates the statement made by The Daily Mail yesterday regarding the concessions offered to the Boers.

It is generally expected, as a result of yesterday's Cabinet Council, that the Government will make some announcement to-day as to the result of the negotiations at Pretoria.

Preparing For Prisoners.

Lisbon, March 14.—A hulk in the harbor here is being fitted out for the reception of the Boer families expected to arrive shortly in these waters on board Portuguese warships from Lorenzo Marques, Delagoa Bay.

Canadian Scout Wounded.

Ottawa, March 14.—The Governor of the Cape of Good Hope cables to Lord Minto that 135, Capt. Spicer, Canadian Scouts, was slightly wounded on account of an accident on Feb. 25.

DEATH OF GEN. HARRISON.

Ex-President of the United States Passed Away Quietly and Without Pain on Wednesday.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 14.—Gen. Benjamin Harrison, former President of the United States, died at 4.45 o'clock yesterday afternoon without regaining consciousness. His death was quite painless, there being a gradual sinking until the end came, which was marked by a single gasp for breath as life departed from the body of the soldier and statesman. The relatives, with a few exceptions, and several of his old and tried friends, were at the former President's bedside when he passed away. None of Gen. Harrison's children were present at his death. Neither Col. Russell Harrison nor Mrs. McKee had reached the city, although both were hurrying on their way to the bedside of their dying parent as fast as steam could carry them.

The News at Washington.

Washington, March 14.—As office hours had closed for the day before the end came, the first official information regarding the death will be deferred until to-day, when, following precedents, President McKinley will issue his proclamation to the people, notifying them of Gen. Harrison's death and setting out, in becoming terms, his virtues and characteristics. He also will order salutes to be fired at the various army posts the day of the funeral and on shipboard when the news is received. The Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy will send out special notices to soldiers and sailors conveying the President's directions in this matter.

Secretary of State Hay said: "The death of Mr. Harrison is a national loss. Independent of the great official position he has held, he was a man of extraordinary mental capacity and activity. He was a true statesman, lawyer and orator, and he has left few men his equals behind him. In character, as well as abilities, he was a man of very unusual force and value."

CARNEGIE GIVES $5,000,000

For Benefit of Superannuated and Disabled Employes of Old Firm.

Pittsburg, Pa., March 14.—Two communications from Andrew Carnegie, which were officially made public last night, tell of the steel king's retirement from active business life, and of his donation of $5,000,000 for the endowment of a fund for superannuated and disabled employes of the Carnegie Company. This benefaction is by far the largest of the many created by Mr. Carnegie, and is probably without a parallel anywhere in the world.

THE ROBLIN BILL PASSED.

By a Vote of 23 to 10 It Passed the Third Reading.

Winnipeg, March 14.—The Canadian Northern Railway bill passed the House yesterday afternoon and was read a third time, by a vote of 23 to 10. Morton, Opposition, shirked the vote. Premier Roblin made a bitter attack on the Board of Trade.

Mr. Young, Opposition, suggested that every municipality in the province petition the Ottawa Government to protect the province.

Premier Roblin says the first freight schedule of the new company will considerably reduce the freight rates.

FEDERATION OF LIBERALS.

Delegates of Ontario Clubs in Convention in Toronto.

Toronto, March 14.—Delegates from Liberal Clubs all over the Province to the number of over 300 met in convention at St. George's Hall yesterday in attendance on the third convention of the Federation of Liberal Clubs. It is six years since the Federation assembled here, but the convention at present going on gives promise that the Liberal Clubs of Ontario will be active factors in the politics of the Province, and that the organization of the party will in a considerable degree be strengthened. The attendance from the outside clubs exceeding two hundred in number was a satisfactory proof of the interest that is being taken in the proceedings. Yesterday the members were occupied principally in arranging their credentials and electing the various committees, which afterwards met and mapped out the program of business to be submitted to the meeting to-day. Last night the delegates listened to addresses from Hon. Geo. W. Ross and Hon. E. J. Davis. The convention resumes business at 10 o'clock this morning.

A Deficit to Be Expected.

London, March 14.—With the naval estimates presented in the House of Commons Tuesday evening, the budget for the coming year shows an expenditure of upwards of £181,000,000, against £150,000,000 for last year. Unless the revenue is increased the statement of Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Chancellor of the Exchequer, will show a deficit of nearly £54,000,000, the largest ever estimated.

Shoemakers Won the Strike.

North Brookfield, Mass., March 14.—The strike of the 110 operatives at the shoe factory of E. & A. H. Bathheller at this place was declared off yesterday afternoon, after a conference between members of the firm and the strikers. The help will go to work this morning under the old scale of wages.

Another Negro Burned.

Corsicana, Texas, March 14.—John Henderson, colored, who brutally assaulted and murdered Mrs. Younger, a farmer's wife, living just outside this city, several days ago, was burned to death at the stake in the Court House square here at noon yesterday.

Albani at Montreal.

Montreal, March 14.—Madame Albani appeared before an immense audience here last night and received a most flattering reception. After Saturday she will proceed on her trip westward as far as the Coast.

Ontario West Grangemen.

Stratford, Ont., March 14.—The forty-second annual session of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Ontario West opened here yesterday. The Grand Lodge was called to order at 2.30 p. m. by R. W. Bro. Jermyn, who delivered his address. He made feeling reference to the death of the late Queen and the accession of King Edward. The movement to change the coronation oath was condemned in vigorous terms.

Nova Scotia Gets $671,000.

Ottawa, March 14.—The Province of Nova Scotia has been awarded $671,000 in the arbitration case between itself and the Dominion Government over the taking over of the Eastern Extension Railway. The arbitrators were Sir George Burton, Mr. F. B. Wade, K. C., and Mr. Barbeau of Quebec.

Will Drop It.

Ottawa, March 14.—Jabel Robinson, M. P., said yesterday morning that, after the decisive vote against Bourassa's motion, he does not think it necessary to go on with his own motion relating to Canada and the Empire. It will therefore be dropped.

It is said Mr. E. B. Osler will reply to Mr. Fielding's budget speech for the Conservatives.

On Tuesday evening Turnkey Garley Clench at St. Catharines was struck by young Spratt, a prisoner, with the leg of an iron bedstead, a most formidable weapon, but was rescued by the governor's son before Spratt finished him.

SIGN OF THE GOLDEN LION.

Daily Examiner.

THURSDAY, MARCH 14, 1901.

THE NEGLECTED CHILDREN OF ONTARIO.

The report of the Superintendent of Neglected Children, Mr J J Kelso, has just been laid before the Ontario Legislature and affords new proof of the admirable work which is being done, and the wisdom of the Government in passing the recent legislation which has enabled determined action to be taken in connection with the reclamation and saving of those children whom the cruelty, or indifference, of others have caused to be strays and waifs. Much is shown in the report, but it is pleasing to be told by the Superintendent that "not half the work that is done for children ever gets on any public record." The Ontario Children's Act has served another good purpose, inasmuch as it has also enabled a great educational campaign to be carried on with the result that thousands of young lives have been indirectly influenced for good, as the act has been brought to bear upon parents and others in behalf of neglected and dependent children. The more direct action of the law is seen in the fact that during the past year the total number of new entries of children who have gone to foster homes was 257, which makes the total number of children on the records of the bureau 1 318 up to date, exclusive of changes or older children helped to situations, and the superintendent holds the opinion, which will be generally endorsed, that is is a highly satisfactory showing. It is, it appears, an advance upon previous years, notwithstanding the difficulty of sustaining the interest of the societies and keeping up the supply of foster homes. In this work, more perhaps than in any other, the success of the movement depends very largely on the zeal and enthusiasm with which it is prosecuted. There has been very little change either in the work or the manner of carrying it out. Careful attention has been given to the interests of the many children in foster homes, and full particulars of the system and results of supervision are given in detail in the report. This part of the work, which is so important, is thoroughly done and no child is lost sight of. The report should be generally distributed and as generally read, and its perusal ought to result in the co-operation of all our people, a co-operation solicited by the Superintendent It must be obvious that the most important and vital branch of all charitable work is that which deals directly with the children. In every centre of population it is desirable that there should be some society or person to interpose in behalf of, or to rescue if need be, children that are exposed to neglect or cruelty. There are many cases where children, although not ill treated in the sense of personal abuse, are exposed to vicious and degrading teaching through the evil conduct of those with whom they live. No nobler work can be carried on than that which the Government has taken in hand. It is also of great importance to the people generally, as it puts in the right way numbers of boys and girls who would otherwise go to swell the criminal population and become menaces to society.

BACON HOGS FOR ENGLISH MARKET

MR. GEO. MATTHEWS WRITES UPON A QUESTION OF GREAT INTEREST TO FARMERS

Should Not Try to Market Hogs in Five or Six Months - Hogs Should Not be too Fat - Much Good Advice in Regard to Marketing.

To the Farmers of Peterborough and surrounding Counties:

I am pleased to see the interest taken by the agricultural papers and all Farmers' Institute Meetings, in "Bacon Hogs," or rather the hog required to make "Wiltshire Cut Bacon" for the English market. There has been continuous writing and talking the last five or six years among farmers and packers on this subject, and I though last fall that the farmers had succeeded fairly well in preparing their hogs so that the packers would be able to make an article of "select" bacon that would be a strong rival of the celebrated Danish Bacon in the London market. In the months of September, October and November of last year we received a larger percentage of hogs suitable for the best bacon trade than we had ever received before, and as a result the packers were enabled to send their customers in England just the quality of bacon they required, and also to take contracts to supply them with the same quality each week, all the year round.

But alas, what a chance has come over the business during the last few months We are still getting hogs from the same drovers and I expect from the same farmers, but the hogs will not make the same grade of bacon as they did last fall. The hogs are about the same weight as they were then, but instead of being lengthy lean hogs, they are now principally short, chunky hogs, altogether too fat for the English trade. The buyers there will not take the sides excepting at greatly reduced prices, and to-day the bacon made from fat hogs, weighing from 160 to 200 pounds, is selling in London at $2.50 per 100 pounds less than is the bacon made from hogs of the same weight, but of the lengthy lean quality, same as we received last fall.

Now, what can be the reason for the great change in the quality of the hogs and also of the bacon, so great that some of our customers refuse to take the quantity they contracted for. They say,—"The sides are the right weight but the meat is too fat and we won't take the bacon unless you can send it as lean as we received from you when we made the contract. If you cannot supply that quality we shall have to buy Danish bacon even at higher prices."

We then lose a customer for Canadian bacon, as we certainly cannot make long, lean sides from short, fat hogs.

Who is to blame for the change in the quality of Canadian bacon? I think there is but one answer and that is the man who feeds the hogs. The packers are taking heavy losses on fat sides just now, but this is not the worst of it. The injury to the reputation of Canadian bacon on the English market will react on the whole trade, on farmers as well as packers. Both farmers and packers are interested in making a success of this bacon business. The packers have gone to a great deal of expense in fitting their buildings to enable them to turn out their meats exactly the same quality all the year around, whether the weather be hot or cold. The farmer must also go to some trouble and see that their hogs are not too fat, especially in the winter months, when they are usually penned in.

Last fall the general run of hogs was so satisfactory that I began to think that the breed of hogs was about right, but now when unloading cars of live hogs we see a very great difference in the quality of the hogs as compared with those we received last fall. It is no trouble now to pick out the Yorkshire and Tamworths; they are about the only hogs at this season that will make select bacon. In the summer most hogs grow fairly lengthy, when they have plenty of exercise, but when they are penned in and fed well, most of them get very chunky, but the York and Tamworth won't get too fat while growing up to 200 pounds weight, alive, providing a little care is exercised in feeding and handling them. The great mistake that the average farmer makes is in my opinion, that when prices are good he forces the feed to the hog, having but one aim, and that is to get the animal to the desired weight without proper regard for the other essential qualities, viz.: a lengthy hog, full of flesh but not of fat.

In conclusion, I would advise,—Don't try to market your hogs in five or six months, give them longer time, feed good sound mixed feed, make them to weigh from 180 to 200 pounds each and market them just when they are finished. Don't hold them and make heavy fat hogs because the market appears to be against you, but stay in the business. Keep several lots coming on and you will find that the market will be in your favor the majority of times.

Yours faithfully,

The Geo. Matthews Co., Limited,
Geo. Matthews, President.

JENKIN AT THE 16TH LINE.

Sir,—I am sure the friends of Evangelist Jenkin will be glad to know of the success of the "revival meetings" now being held by him at Wesley Church at the 16th Concession of Smith.

He is now entering on his third week and the success of these meetings is something marvellous.

For over a week the altar rail has been filled night after night with anxious, seeking souls of all ages, and as a result some forty of these seekers have experienced the joys of a new life And all those who were converted long ago have been so aroused and quickened that it seems to them like a new conversion, and many of them experienced a degree of joy and peace they never thought possible.

Mr. Jenkin has the rare faculty and power of so explaining the scripture that though it hits hard, it is at the same time simply captivating and one must hear him to understand it.

You will understand something of the interest that has been aroused when I tell you that last Sunday night, when it was hardly fit for humanity to be out doors, there was no abatement in the attendance and the church was filled to the door.

One of the best things connected with these meetings is the fact that there is not the least trace of excitement nor any attempt at it; the appeal is wholly to reason and as a consequence we are now assured that great and permanent good will be the result.—Com.

KRUGER IS STUBBORN.

The Ex-President of the Transvaal on Botha Negotiations.

GOVERNMENT ANTICIPATIONS.

War Office Inclined to Believe That Gen. Botha Will Surrender—Dewet's Present Whereabouts—Pilcher's Good Work—Gen. Bruce at Rouxville—5,000 Boer Prisoners for India.

Brussels, March 13.—Dr. Leyds announces that Mr. Kruger will ignore the surrender negotiations between Gen. Botha and Lord Kitchener.

Only a Report.

London, March 13.—A report was current yesterday afternoon that the Government anticipated a speedy announcement of the surrender of Gen. Botha, the Boer commander-in-chief.

Inquiries made at the War Office show the officials there have no recent news of the surrender negotiations. They think the armistice expires March 14, and are inclined to believe General Botha will surrender. But the officials are doubtful in regard to the other Boer commanders in the field.

Gen. Bruce Hamilton at Rouxville.

Rouxville, Orange River Colony, March 11.—(Monday)—General Bruce Hamilton arrived here to-day and found Rouxville completely deserted. The houses were open and many of them contained no furniture. The column on its way here destroyed the grain.

Pilcher's Good Work.

Bloemfontein, March 11.—Col. Pilcher's column has cleared the country of Boers between this place and the Orange River. The column has arrived here, bringing in 33 prisoners and 3,000 horses.

Dewet's Present Location.

London, March 13.—A despatch from General Kitchener, dated Pretoria, March 12, says General Dewet is north of Brandfort, Orange River Colony. Continuous rains have interfered with the movements of the troops in Cape Colony. Two bands of Boers are being hunted among the hills by troops under Gorringe, DeLisle, Grenfell and Henniker.

Boer Prisoners For India.

Calcutta, March 13.—The Government is perparing for the possible arrival of 5,000 Boer prisoners, who will be located in batches of a thousand.

Baden-Powell Recruits at Halifax.

Halifax, N. S., March 13.—The Elder-Dempster liner Montfort, which is to take the Baden-Powell force from here to South Africa, arrived in port from Liverpool last evening, and the work of fitting her up will be commenced in the morning. About $10,000 will be expended on this work alone. Nearly 100 Baden-Powell men slept at the barracks here last night. The New Brunswick men arrived yesterday afternoon, and the Prince Edward Island, Montreal and Quebec men arrived last night.

Lord Pauncefote a P. C.

London, March 13.—Lord Pauncefote, the British Ambassador at Washington, has been appointed a member of the Privy Council.

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

Toronto, March 13.—The receipts of live stock at the cattle market were light yesterday, only 32 car loads, composed of 493 cattle, 317 hogs, 462 sheep and a few calves. Trade, although not brisk, was fair. A light run, combined with favorable weather, caused a better feeling, with a firmer tendency than existed last week. Prices, however, were practically unchanged.

Meant Well but Lacked Tact.

If all the tactless things one hears said in a week were to be printed there would be a paper famine, and printer's ink would be higher than beef is now. However, here is something I heard, gossips a Washington Post writer. It was said to a woman I know by a woman who meant to be agreeable. This particular woman to whom this thing was said has a dear little girl of 9 who is as sweet as barley sugar. The agreeable woman watched her playing about the room. Then turning to my friend, she said:

"Your little girl has such a sweet temper. Your husband must have a very lovely disposition.

WOMAN AND HOME.

A TALENTED YOUNG WOMAN'S VARIABLE IDEAS ON LOVE.

Cures For the Romantic—Her Unique Vocation—Brisk Women In Little Shops—Fleeting Flower Fads—Salt as a Remedial Agent.

Dickens said, "'Tis love, 'tis love, 'tis love that makes the world go round." Dickens knew a good deal.

Julia Helen Twells, Jr.—something unusual for a woman to follow her name with junior—paraphrases Dickens thus: "Love is the axis of the world. Everything is depending upon it."

Hence "Singed Wings," "The Quality of Mercy" and some other writings by Julia Helen Twells, Jr., of Philadelphia.

In the City of Brotherly Love Miss Twells, Jr., is the high priestess of the god of love. Good old family, pleasant life thus far, social distinction and a heap of good sense—all these are credited to

JULIA HELEN TWELLS.

Miss Twells, Jr. Her grandfather was once minister to Austria, her father was consul at Naples and is now vice consul at Jamaica. Her mother wrote "The Mills of the Gods" and "Sousl."

At 21 Miss Twells, Jr., disbelieved in marriage and wrote "A Triumph of Destiny" to show that love was purely an affinity of mind and soul. Three years later she changed her belief or modified it. And now she says she will write all she believes some day, regardless of what people may say.

At 21 she wrote this:

"I must say I cannot see the wisdom of tying oneself to one man for any reason. If a woman loves the man she marries, inevitably he wearies of her. If she marries a man without loving him, some fiend sows in her heart an unconquerable passion for another."

A little later she wrote:

"It is not that I wish to idealize the man I shall love, but I want some one who can wake to its uttermost this power of love that I feel persuaded exists within me."

And then, in the awakening of her true nature, this:

"A woman's nature, when ignorant of passion's deepest meaning, is like a new strung harp whose cords lie slack, every passing breath setting them a-quiver with false sound and inharmonious vibration."

Cures For the Romantic.

One young woman who makes her living by ministering to those less healthful than herself was asked by a convalescent patient if she didn't fear the effects of the numerous lay recruits on the future of the "profession."

"Put down the novel," said the patient. "I am tired of being read to. Talk to me awhile about nursing. Aren't you afraid you will be crowded out?"

"Not in the least," answered the young woman. "There is nothing alarming to us in the situation. The girls who on the outbreak of every war or the publication of every novel treating of wars are seized with an uncontrollable desire to do grand things in the service of suffering humanity are not a bit dangerous to us.

"They have an idea nursing is just about what I have just been doing, that it consists solely of such pleasant duties as reading aloud from the pages of the latest books, of dressing becomingly in the uniform of a nurse—almost any woman with any pretensions to comeliness looks well in a simple black gown, white apron and cool white collar and cuffs—or at most bathing the brow of an interesting hero with sweetly smelling cologne.

"It doesn't take the majority of these girls long to be disillusionized. They early discover the hard work that is attached to the calling. I had to go through a severe schooling before I was qualified to nurse. No," in answer to a question, "I can't truthfully say it is what I should choose as my life work if I had my choice. But, then, the pay is comparatively good.

"For my part I consider teaching school the greatest of the genteel drudgeries. And, then, the pay is not so good. Nursing brings in more money than the little typewriter and stenographer gets. It is more remunerative than bookkeeping and of course pays better than being a saleswoman in a store. But it certainly has its drawbacks. I meet all classes of people, a great many of them inconsiderate and ill natured. For the most part they are people of the medium or better class, for the other kind cannot afford trained nurses, but their ability to pay very frequently doesn't mean good breeding and gentility.

"So the girls who go into the business from unbusinesslike motives soon leave the field to those who enter it from necessity. Right here today there is a young woman in a sanitarium as a result of her experience. Her father is an army officer, and she has tried to be a nurse. What she saw and encountered during her short trial proved too much for her, and now she is a victim of nervous prostration."—New York Herald.

Her Unique Vocation.

"I know a little woman in St. Louis," said an artist of this city, "who has gradually drifted into a very curious vocation. Briefly told, she earns a living by engrossing resolutions of respect for the dead. I confess that calls for a little explanation," continued the speaker, smiling, "but I really mean exactly what I say. The lady is a water color artist with marked ability for decorative work, and in connection with teaching it at a school she used to make a good many designs for embroidery, tapestry and so on

LOVE FORSAKEN.

I that was blithe erewhile,
Dreaming the world a lovely lotus isle,
Am one for whom the sun hath lost its smile.

There was a garden place
Wherein, methought, there blossomed every grace
That man might crave to look upon—her face!

And, ah, the golden store
Of heartseas that it brought me! That is o'er
Since otherward 'tis turned forevermore.

I shall go down the years,
Groping through sterile hopes and crowding fears,
To darkling solitude too deep for tears.

A Triumph of Photography.

Of course it was a Missourian, one of the "you've-got-to-show-me" type, who remarked to a companion as they examined with awestruck interest a picture in which there was seen the faces of all the presidents of the United States. "Say, Bill, how in thunder did the photograph man ever get them men all together at once?"

A Writer's Aspirations.

They were looking through the library. "If you had the divine gift what would you rather write?" asked the romantic young woman.

"Checks," replied the sordid young man.

LIVING IN THE SUN.

Don't get mildewed
Living in the shade,
Damp and dreary
By your own tears made;
Sorrow is certain
To come to every one,
But sweeten it and shorten it
By living in the sun!

Don't get morbid
Living in the gloom,
When just outside
There's a world in bloom.
Life is a brief thing,
Too soon done;
Oh, lighten it and lengthen it
By living in the sun!

—Ripley D. Saunders in St. Louis Republic.

A CORRECTED PREJUDICE.

A Story of a Girl, a Young Man and a Railroad Car.

A merry party was on the station platform when Mabel Rodman, her arms full of roses, waved her adieus from the rear platform of the car. The house party was breaking up, and she was on her way home. It had been a lovely week, and her mind was still filled with the nearness of its delights. She sat back with her eyes upon the dying landscape, but her thoughts were elsewhere.

Then she realized that somebody was standing in the aisle. She looked around. A tall young man with a frank smile was gazing down at her. He raised his hat.

"This is quite a pleasant surprise," he said. "No, it isn't," he laughingly added. "Strange how we get in the habit of saying these meaningless things. It's a great pleasure, of course, but it isn't a surprise. I knew you were going on this train."

The roses and her handbag and the latest magazine were on the seat beside her, but Mabel did not offer to remove them.

She answered his greeting in a well bred and dignified way, with no trace of special friendliness in her tone.

Presently with a courteous phrase in which he expressed the hope that he could help to brighten her journey he raised his hat and passed along, evidently on his way to the smoking car.

Mabel took up her magazine, but though her eyes were on the page her thoughts were on Arthur Blake. He was certainly fine looking and very well bred, but these qualifications could not excuse his lack of ambition and his idle ways. Of course it was his misfortune rather than his fault. Rich men's sons were usually handicapped in this way. And yet Mabel felt she could hardly forgive Arthur Blake. The fact is he was the only cloud on an otherwise perfect vista. The very first time she had met him he had shown his admiration so plainly that it was almost embarrassing. Probably nobody else had noticed it, but it was almost strange if they had failed to do so. It was true that he hadn't paid her any really marked attentions, but there was a different look in his eyes when he addressed her and a softened modulation of his voice that told the story quite too plainly. She had left her Pittsburg home for a good time, and it irritated her to have this serious element intruding itself on her week of gayety. For Arthur Blake evidently was serious, as serious as such a frivolous fellow could be. That he was an idler she was quite sure. His time seemed to be entirely his own. And here he was now actually taking the very train she had taken in order to be near her. She would show him that his tactics were not appreciated. She was not to be won in any such way. No doubt he had set his heart on her as he might on any gilded toy that his rich papa could buy. Well, his heart would be disappointed this time, if he really had a heart.

There was a great deal of mirror work along the sides of the car. There were strips of glass between the windows, and there were other strips below them, and Mabel, musing above her magazine, with its cover opened before her as a pretense, found that by looking in these strips at certain angles she could get a very fair view of a number of her fellow passengers along the other side of the aisle.

And just as she made this discovery Arthur Blake returned. He came down the aisle and threw a hasty glance at her as he passed and then took a seat on the opposite side of the car a little back of where Mabel sat.

There was no doubt that he was a fine looking fellow. Of course Mabel took good care that he shouldn't discover that she was watching him. Then she soon found out that although he had every opportunity to watch her he didn't avail himself of the chance as he might have done. On the contrary, he only threw two or three casual glances in her direction as if to assure himself that she was all right. Then he drew some letters from his pocket and looked them through. When he had finished them, he produced a memorandum book and made a number of figures. And Mabel noticed that his face wore quite a different expression while these business transactions were under way. After he put aside his memorandum book he sat still for a moment, and his brow was knit as if in deep thought over some abstruse problem. And Mabel, covertly watching him in the mirror, felt that this was an Arthur Blake whom she had never met.

Then his face lightened up, and he glanced along the aisle. Half way up the car a young man, several years Arthur's junior, occupied a seat. He was a pale and cadaverous youth with a look of deep melancholy on his troubled face. Arthur walked up the aisle and paused by this passenger, and Mabel saw his lips move. The invalid, for such the youth must be, looked up with a sorrowful, sullen expression and briefly nodded. Then Arthur spoke again, leaning upon the seat and smilingly regarding the young man. This time the youth made some reply and Arthur laughed merrily. The invalid responded with a slightly frosty smile, and then Arthur slipped into the seat beside him. In five minutes they were chatting like old friends. When Arthur arose to leave, the invalid hastily put out his hand and Arthur shook it warmly. As he passed down the aisle the tired eyes of the pale youth followed him with a softened and wistful gaze.

The porter had met Arthur and handed him a yellow envelope. He turned as he tore it open and glanced at the message and then walked slowly back.

There was an old lady, a very neat and very, white old lady—white of face and hair and neck scarf—who sat nearly opposite Mabel, and this sweet old lady had fallen asleep. Arthur paused and looked at her. Then he went back and spoke to the porter. A moment later he returned with a pillow. The gentle old lady was only in a doze and she opened her eyes as Arthur proffered the easier resting place. She smilingly accepted it and let him place it carefully beneath her silvered head.

And all this time Mabel had been watching the young man in the telltale mirror. Was this the idler, the man of no sentiment, the selfish pleasure seeker? She felt her cheeks color as she realized her lack of charity, her stupid and unfounded prejudice. And yet he had idled, and was he not on the car at this very moment on a silly love chase.

A moment later when Arthur turned and caught her eye she was looking squarely at him. He thought she had never seemed so beautiful. The soft flush on her cheeks was wonderfully becoming. In each hand she held a bunch of the lovely roses that had lain beside her on the seat. Her gaze told him she wanted him. He stepped to her side.

"Perhaps your friends would like these," she said as she held up the flowers.

He knew what she meant.

"Of course they would," he cried in boyish pleasure. And then he added in a lower tone as he reached down for the roses, "How very, very thoughtful."

Mabel reddened again and looked away and this time did not follow his movements in the glass.

He was back presently.

"They were both delighted," he said, "and send you their grateful acknowledgments."

Mabel looked up and caught the eye of the invalid youth, who smiled and nodded to her and held up the flowers, and she smiled and nodded back. And then she smiled and nodded to the dear old lady who had pressed her dear old face into the roses as if they brought back the sweetness of her happy youth.

"I find I shall be in Pittsburg for several weeks," said Arthur. "A telegram has just reached me that somewhat changes my plans, or, rather, it prolongs them."

"So you are on a business trip?" said Mabel, with the slightest interrogative inflection.

"Why, yes," Arthur laughingly answered. "Business, I fancy, of considerable importance and requiring instant attention. I took this train in answer to a telegraph call from your city, and just now I received another message warning me that my presence is demanded at a meeting of consolidated interests there this afternoon." He paused and watched Mabel slowly clearing the roses from the seat beside her. "I am afraid," he went on, "that you have thought me a good deal of an idler. The fact is I have been taking an enforced vacation during the last ten days. My dear mother has been suffering from a recurring malady, and when she has these peculiar attacks she always insists that I must be within easy reaching distance. But she is so much better that I gained her consent to slipping back into the harness."

Mabel hastily lifted her handbag from the seat.

"Won't you sit down?" she asked in as indifferent a tone as she could assume.

He accepted the invitation with a delighted alacrity.

"You are very kind," he said, and his eyes were much more eloquent than his words.

"Did I understand you to say," Mabel remarked in her blandest manner, "that you would remain in Pittsburg for several weeks?"

"Yes," he answered. "For three weeks at least."

"Then," murmured Mabel, "I should be pleased to have you call."

"Thank you," he quickly said. An audacious gleam shot from his eyes. "May I call this evening?"

Mabel hesitated.

Then she looked up and nodded, and the rosy flush deepened on her rounded cheeks.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

From Louis XIV to Disraeli.

In 1853 a French officer of my acquaintance, Count Charles de Sommerard, was dining at a table where he found himself seated near a very aged lady, who remarked casually, "My husband once said to Louis XIV." My friend thought the old lady must be insane, but was told that she was the Duchesse de Richelieu, widow of the famous Armand du Plessis, duc de Richelieu, and marshal of France, the captor of Port Mahon, who died in 1788. The duc married his third wife in 1784, when he was 88 years old, his bride being 18 years old. She died, I believe, in 1855. This was a substantial link between the second empire and the reign of the "Grand Monarque," or between the reign of Queen Victoria and that of William of Orange, for the Duc de Richelieu was born in 1696. The Duc de Richelieu knew the great Duke of Marlborough, and his third wife was well acquainted with the Duke of Wellington. The duc knew Robert Harley, earl of Oxford, and was intimate with Bolingbroke. His widow knew Mr. Disraeli, possibly Mr. Gladstone and almost certainly Lord Granville, who was an attache of the British embassy in Paris in 1830.—London Spectator.

His Accent Won Them.

When the Marquis of Lansdowne was governor general of Canada, he was called on to make a speech to some French Canadians. With all its loyalty to the English connection, this little bit of transported France adheres very rigidly to many things French and especially to the purity of the French tongue—at least as it was spoken in the eighteenth century. Few viceroys have ever ventured accordingly to leave the safe security of the English tongue, and it was with some trepidation that the French-Canadians heard that Lord Lansdowne was going to deliver a speech to them in their own language. But he had scarcely uttered the word "messieurs" when the whole audience burst into cheers. They recognised at once the accent of the true French tongue, the accent only possible to a man of French blood, and one who had spoken French as his mother tongue.—New York Tribune.

How to Dress.

Corpulent women are undoubtedly at a great disadvantage in matters of the wardrobe. It is possible to so dress a too attenuated figure that it will appear reasonably full and round, but it is impossible to disguise or suppress superfluous flesh. Much can be done, however, by good taste and management to make a too bulky form seem less in size. Dark colors should be chosen instead of light, subdued tints instead of brilliant, dull surfaces instead of glossy and small, inconspicuous designs or none instead of large, noticeable patterns. The clothing should not be very scant and tight, but should veil the figure and leave its precise outlines vague, since they are naturally too exuberant. Flat decorations should be chosen and those of a sober character. A long skirt is always more suitable for a stout figure, as it gives an impression of greater height and consequently greater slenderness.

Woman's Sense of Humor.

I, who like to smile and who like best of all to make others smile, am well pleased when there are many women in my audience. I have ever found their sense of humor to be like the touch of the blind—unerring. It is this that makes me especially respect it. They never lose a fine point. I bow before l'humeur des femmes. Watch an audience and see for yourself if the women do not enjoy the humorous passages as much as the men, if the smile does not come to their lips even before the mouth of the man relaxes. It is true they are very, very critical. The flavor must be perfect; there must be no false note. I might almost say that it is the women I have found to be connoisseurs of humor. —C. Coquelin in Harper's Bazar.

Why Should He Care?

Mrs. Smith repeatedly reminded her husband that the silver was hers, the furniture was hers and so on, until poor Smith almost wished he had married a girl without a penny.

The other night Mrs. Smith awoke to hear strange voices in the lower part of the house.

"John, get up! There are burglars down below!"

"Eh?" inquired Smith sleepily.

"Burglars—down stairs!" shrieked Mrs. Smith.

"Burglars?" said Smith as he turned over. "Well, there's nothing of mine there!"

King's Private Secretary.

Sir Francis Knollys, King Edward's private secretary as Prince of Wales, will succeed Sir Arthur Bigge as Secretary to the Sovereign. Sir Arthur, who served Queen Victoria for so many years, and up to the time of her death, will, it is thought, be appointed private secretary to the Duke of York.

Hard work is the feature of each of the positions. The secretaries to the Sovereign and the Heir Apparent each have from six to ten assistants, to whom they dictate replies to the large mail received by their royal employers. Some sort of an answer is sent to every communication received, and, inasmuch as the typewriter is never used in royal communications, everything being written by hand, the daily task of answering letters is alone a trying one.

SIR FRANCIS KNOLLYS.

MARRIED AT CALGARY.

STOCKEN—SYMONDS—On March 13th, at St. Barnabas' Church, Saron Reserve, Calgary, by the Rev. Archdeacon Tims, assisted by the Rev. Canon Stocken, brother of the bridegroom, Mary Symonds, third daughter of the late George Symonds, Esq., of the County of Suffolk, England, and the Rev. Stanley J. Stocken, Principal of St. John's Boys' Home, Blackfoot Reserve, and Incumbent of St. Andrew's, Gleichen.

Mrs. Stocken is a sister of the Rev. H. Symonds, St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, and has been laboring as a missionary on the Blackfoot Reserve for the past seven or eight years. Many residents of Peterborough will remember her visit here in 1895, when she addressed several meetings on behalf of the Indian Mission work of the Church of England in the Northwest.

RESOLUTION OF CONDOLENCE.

At the regular meeting of Peterborough Lodge No. 135 A.O.U.W. the following resolution of condolence was passed:—

Whereas it has pleased the Great Master Workman to remove from our midst, by death our late Bro. John Hetherington, we, the members of Peterborough Lodge No. 135 A.O.U.W., desire to place on record our deep sense of loss in the removal of one whose genial presence will be greatly missed, and whose untiring energy was so unselfishly given for the spread of the principles of our noble order. We hereby tender to the bereaved widow and family our sincere and heartfelt sympathy, and commend them to the loving watch-care of Him who is too wise to err and too loving to be unkind.

Signed on behalf of the lodge,

Miss Carson, of New York City, Visits the Town.

Miss Carson, formerly of Christodora House, New York city, now travelling secretary for the Dominion Young Women's Christian Association, will visit Peterborough Association for about ten days, coming on Saturday, 16th inst. Miss Carson is thoroughly interested and well informed along the lines of Association work. The officers of the Association are anxious that the work will profit in every department, and in order to do this, they must have the hearty co-operation of all women interested in the work. Further notice will be given of the meetings to be held during her stay in Peterborough.

CEREAL COMPANY'S ASSESSMENT BILL.

THE PRIVATE BILLS COMMITTEE CONFIRMS THE TOWN'S BYLAW.

The Amount of Assessment Fixed for Forty-Two Years—Precedent Over-Ruled.

(Special to The Examiner.)

Toronto, Ont, Mar 14—The Private Bills Committee of the Legislature this morning swept precedent aside and gave the Town of Peterborough and Village of Ashburnham the right to fix for 42 years the assessment of The American Cereal Company, which has works and property in both places. The Chairman, Hon Mr Harcourt, said the bill set aside the rules laid down by the committee not to grant exemptions for more than 20 years and not to do so without consent of the people. The committe, however, decided to pass the bill.

SOUTH CENTRAL SCHOOL.

Its Sanitary Condition to be Rigidly Investigated.

The Board of Education is acting with commendable promptitude in connection with the sinister rumours which have been set afloat in regard to the sanitary condition of the South Central School. Dr. Bingham's report has been received, stating the premises are in a healthful condition, and Mr. Robt. Fair, chairman of the Property Committee, has arranged to have an engineer examine the building thoroughly. The rumors concerning the school have been traced to certain persons and premises other than those of the South Central School are to be investigated.

SPORTING PASTIMES.

HOCKEY.

Mr A W McPherson entertained the Colts and some of the hockey club officers on Tuesday evening last.

Toronto Telegram: Peterborough Colts and Toronto Excelsiors are billed to come together again. Probably the Colts want to make the score an even hundred.

The Biffs and Niffs play at the rink this evening at 8 o'clock. The young ladies have the game down to a science now, and the match should prove to be an interesting one to watch.

The final game in the city Commercial League was played last night before a large and fashionable audience, mainly composed of the members of the A.T.C. from Ashburnham and they were evidently rooters for the Zso-Bunters. In spite of the rooters from the A.T.C. the poor old Zso-Bunt Camp was turned down by the score of 6 to 3 and this leaves them miles behind in the race for the local trophy.

The famous Pig Iron Tigers are now the winners of the handsome medal cast by Dagger McAuliffe of the Lock Co., having defeated the Pill Pounders twice and the Lead Pipe Cinchers and Dry Goods men both having defeated. They intend going out to Lakefield on Tuesday night next to play an exhibition game with the team in that city, and no doubt they will come home with the Lakefield scalps hanging at their belts.

The following will comprise the team which the "Brass Finishing Department" of the Canadian General Electric Company will place on the ice against the "Meter Department" of the same concern, for a friendly game of hockey, to be played next Saturday evening, between the hours of 10 and 11: "Monitor" Doris, goal; "Rheostat" Huffman, point; "Q B." Brethenridge, cover point; Lightning Arrester" Peddlar, "Controller" Graham, "Safety Fuse" Dormer, "Blowout" Hopkins, forwards.

The Fenelon Falls Club now holds the undisputed championship of the Trent Valley Hockey League and are the custodians of the Stratton Cup, for the year 1901. Last night in Fenelon Falls, before a large and enthusiastic crowd of spectators, the Campbellford team was defeated in the final match, by a score of 10 to 4. The circumstances which lead up to the final game last night, by which Campbellford was allowed to play the winners of the series, are too well known to readers of the Examiner to require a further review here. They took advantage of the opportunity, but it was of no use, they were up against the real thing and went under by a sweeping score. At no stage of the game were the visitors in the play and there can be no doubt but that the better team won. The game was refereed by Mr. W. J English, of town. After the match, the Fenelon Falls boys treated the visitors and their friends to a banquet, at which speeches, etc., were in order.

Mr. E. S. Clarry, secretary of the Trent Valley League, went up to Fenelon Falls last night, to take in the final match of the League.

The Zach-Bunt Camp were defeated by the Pig Iron Figers last night.

The West Enders claim that they have not defaulted to the Druggists, and are prepared to meet the latter aggregation at any time.

It is most likely that the Fenelon Falls team, the champions of the Trent Valley League, will play the Peterborough Colts on the local ice, on Monday night.

LACROSSE.

The Ontario Lacrosse Club was organized for the coming season at an enthusiastic meeting held in Port Hope, Tuesday evening. It was decided to enter a team in the O.L.A. The club has not been in existence for several years, but prospects are exceptionally bright for a good team. The following officers were elected:—Hon President, H. A. Ward, M.P; Hon. Vice-President, R. J. Hemmick; President, Mayor White; Vice-President, F. L. Curtis; Secretary, John H. Renwick; Assistant-Secretary, H. S. White; Treasurer, Frank Garfatt; Manager, Alf. Brandrett; Delegates to C. L. A., T. E. Burt and J. H. Renwick. Port Hope would like to see Peterborough, Lindsay, Bowmanville, Oshawa and Whitby represented in the Association, so as to make up a compact district.

A QUIET WEDDING.

Nuptials of Miss Mary Crebs and Mr John Emberson Last Evening.

A very pleasing event took place Wednesday evening, 13th inst, at the home of the Misses Crebs, No. 505 Aylmer street. This was the marriage of Miss Mary Crebs to Mr John Emberson, of Bensfort. The ceremony was performed by Rev J Kilgour, of town, in the presence of a small company, all of whom were relatives or intimate friends of the contracting parties.

The bride was very tastefully attired in a gown of white organdie. Her sister, Miss Hattie Crebs, acted as bridesmaid, while the groom was supported by Mr Fred Porter, of Omemee.

After the marriage a very choice supper was partaken of, followed by a few hours of pleasant social intercourse, when the party broke up, and Mr and Mrs Emberson drove out to their home at Bensfort, followed by the good wishes of all their friends.

PETERBOROUGH PRESBYTERY MEETS

THE REGULAR QUARTERLY MEETING HELD IN PORT HOPE.

Rev. Mr. Johnston, of Millbrook, Elected Moderator for the Ensuing Six Months.

The Presbytery of Peterboro met in the Walton St. Hall, Port Hope, on Tuesday, the 12th inst.

There were present Rev Messrs. Bennett and Potter, Peterborough; Duncan, Colborne; McLeod, Brighton; Lord, Grafton; Hamilton, Havelock; Hunter, Baltimore; Crow, Warkworth; Johnston, Millbrook; Kannawin, Omemee; Sinclair and McQuaig, Port Hope; Campbell, Lakefield; Beattie, Cobourg; and Elders Ross H. Cobourg; Horsburg, Coldsprings; Craick and Archer, Port Hope; and Archer, Millbrook.

Mr. Johnston, of Millbrook, was appointed moderator for six months.

Very interesting reports were read by the convenors of the standing committees on Augmentation, Home Mission Work, Church and Life Work, Sabbath Schools, Young Peoples' Societies.

The Home Mission Committee were authorized to confer with the corresponding committee of the Methodist church with regard to an exchange of mission fields.

The Assembly's remit on aids for social worship was disapproved of, as also the remit on "Sabbath School Field Secretary.

The following ministers were appointed as delegates to the Assembly, viz, Messrs. Johnston, Reeves, Somerville, Potter, by rotation, and Messrs Lord, Duncan and Hamilton, by election.

The elders appointed were Messrs. Horsburg, Plainville; I H. Johnston, Grafton; Alex McIntosh, Colborne; James Thompson, Havelock; Jas. Russell, Cobourg; Jos. Craick, Port Hope and Wm. Oakman, Hastings.

Rev. Dr. Warden was nominated as Moderator of Assembly.

Mr Beattie, Cobourg, was appointed to represent Presbytery at the annual meeting of Women's Foreign Mission Presbyterial Society, and to give an address on Foreign Missions.

Messrs Sinclair and Beattie, ministers, and Mr. Craick, elder, were appointed a committee to examine J H Edmison, B A, on the subjects prescribed preparatory to license.

The Presbytery declined to make any nomination for the vacant professor's chair in Knox College.

The next meeting of the Presbytery was appointed to be held in St. Andrew's church, Peterborough, on the second Tuesday of July, at 6 a.m.

LENTEN SERVICES.

Rev. J. McKee McClelland Spoke in St. John's Yesterday.

The Lenten services in St. John's church last night was delivered by Rev. J. McKee McClelland, on "Christ and Our Life Work."

He began by showing how large a factor work had been in Our Lord's life, and how it had forever ennobled and sanctified work. To many people work merely meant toil, but such is not its real nature. It might be regarded as part of God's mission on earth and done heartily and gladly as under him. In work done in this spirit we helped forward our religious life and the purpose of God in the world. There was a disposition abroad to concentrate the whole time and energies of man on his work and to make it a practical slavery. This was contrary to the will and command of God, who bade us divide our time and take a certain definite purpose for rest and His worship. Moreover the lowering of the idea of work lead to every kind of fraud in it, which was also directly contrary to the Divine law. Our work was to be done honestly, heartily and well as unto the Lord. Were our work done as intended by God it would have the effect in conjunction with the advances of religion to fit us for our future life and home.

Y. P. S. C. E.

The Regular Meting of St Andrew's Branch.

The young people of Omemee are not only Christian Endeavourers in every sense of the term, but heroic. In conjunction with an invitation, a delegation of sixteen volunteered to come over such bad roads, and they arrived in time for the Young People's meeting in the lecture hall Monday night, Rev Mr Potter presiding. The special subject for study was on "Native Missions."

Rev Mr Kannawin divided his admirable address into three distinct points. First, the coming of the Kingdom of Christ. Secondly, the need of the world and missions; and thirdly, the salvation of ourselves and our immediate posterity. It was to our spiritual advantage to hear this earnest address. If people could only feel their great responsibility they would be more interested in the fact that the well being of the nation depends largely on their consecrated liberality and trust that a greater interest in the missionary enterprise of the whole world will be the fruitful result of this gathering. We enjoyed Mr. Gordon Wright's solo very much. We were delighted to have Mr. and Mrs. Fred'k Armstrong with us, two of our active workers, now of Lakefield.

After refreshments had been served by the Social Committee the following programme was provided by the Music Committee:—Miss Weddell, solo; Miss Tucker, solo; Mr. Semple, reading; Miss A. Porter, solo. By request Miss Weddell sang "I am Far Free my Home."

A very enjoyable evening was brought to a close with prayer and benediction by the Rev. Mr. Kannawin, of Omemee.

ASHBURNHAM CIVIC ASSOCIATION

HELD ITS FIRST REGULAR MEETING, WHICH WAS WELL ATTENDED

The President Mr. E. A. Peck Read an Able Paper—Several Resolutions of Great Importance Passed.

The first regular meeting of the Ashburnham Civic Association was held Tuesday in the village hall. There were present Mr. E. A. Peck, President, in the chair; Messrs. H. Morgan, Vice-President; S. Fitzgerald, W. Gibbs, J. Russell, W. A. Graham, W. Pollock, R. Record, H. Hamilton, E. T. Strickland, Rev. H. Symonds, Jas. Fowler, P. Glover, J. Butcher, H. Adams, Geo. Wards, J. MacWilliams, J. Douge, W. Sawyer, S. McCarthy, E. Courtney, J. Kylie, F. Adams, D. McGregor, A. Richardson, W. Collins and J. H. Smith.

COMMUNICATIONS.

A communication was read from Mr. H. Calcutt, pointing out the advantages of the village constructing a dry dock beside the canal near the lake. He suggested petitioning the Government in regard to the matter. Mr. Calcutt also suggested that the village should be advertised.

The communication was received.

PECK'S PAPER.

Very ably did Mr. E. A. Peck, in the first paper to be read before the Civic Association, deal with the question, "How can we best advance the interests of the village in view of the probable establishment of an extensive manufactory in Peterborough and Ashburnham?"

The interest of the village, said Mr. Peck, can be principally promoted by encouraging the settlement in the village of many of those who will, on account of the establishment of this industry and other industries which will follow, require to take up their residence near their work.

All residents of the village, though not perhaps, to the same extent, would derive a benefit from a substantial increase in the number of its householders. Opportunities for business or employment would be greater, new residences would be built, thus increasing the amount of the taxes which would be collectable without raising the rate and involving very little extra expense for roads and walks, lighting, street watering, etc. Reduced taxation might then follow, or else funds provided for payment for those advantages which larger municipalities enjoy.

ATTRACTIVENESS.

Assuming then, without dwelling further on the point, that we desire to see the advance and growth of our village, it follows that we should exert ourselves so far as possible to render the village as a place of residence attractive to new comers.

It is very easy to say this, but how to proceed to do so is a difficult matter to deal with at all completely.

It is to be noticed that what one person might consider interesting or important might not interest another, who would, however, regard as of considerable importance some other feature in connection with our municipal government.

The rate of taxation, school advantages, churches, water supply, sewerage, and lighting are only a few of the matters regarding which persons proposing to settle here might enquire.

We could not expect to satisfy every enquiry made, but when we consider the natural advantages we possess, that we have a healthy location, and suitable soil for the erection of houses of sufficient height for drainage, good water close at hand, it is clear that we have only ourselves to blame if our village does not present itself as a desirable place for residence to any reasonable person.

In asserting that this Association can aid materially in bringing this about there is no desire to interfere with the rights and duties of the Council or the School Board, or to undervalue the services rendered by them. I venture to say that these bodies have carefully watched the interests of the village in the past, and that on this account we compare favorably in many respects with other municipalities of the same population.

TAXATION.

As evidence of this I point out that our rate of taxation is by no means high. For some years it has been less than that of our sister municipality, Peterborough, and our total debenture debt only reaches the very moderate sum of $19,000. Roads and walks have been kept in good condition; our public school is well managed; provision has been made by which children can attend the excellent Collegiate Institute in Peterborough on the same conditions as the town pupils, and an ample water supply has been provided on such terms that the cost to the ordinary ratepayer will be reduced to a nominal sum when the use of the water for house purposes becomes general. While, then, any action on our part should not tend to interfere with the Council, nevertheless, even in matters within jurisdiction, we can assist by stirring up interest of the residents in any subject, by collecting information and encouraging discussion. There is a provision in the Municipal Act for calling public meetings of the ratepayers, but these generally are held only at critical times, and when prompt action is necessary. Through the medium of this Association, which will hold regular meetings, changes can be anticipated, public opinion moulded, and precipitated and inconsidered action avoided.

I submit, then, as one of the ways by which the village interests can be advanced, the support of the ratepayers to this association, regular attendance at its meetings, participation in its discussions and suggestions for debate of any question which might seem to effect the general good.

Amongst matters which the Association could profitably consider is that of a system of sewerage for the village. With our population at its present limits but may not be necessary, but it will certainly have to be undertaken if there is any considerable increase in our numbers. Although the construction of such a system would be under the authority of the Council, a quantity of information would have to be collected on the subject, the system to be adopted, portion of the village to be provided for, the disposition of the sewage, would all be subjects requiring much consideration, and in undertaking this, the Council would be much assisted by our Association.

LANDSCAPE GARDENING.

Another to which the Association could give attention with much advantage to the village is towards the improving of the appearance of the streets and garden plots, etc. With the majority of persons the tidy appearance of the village would be a decided attraction in its favor.

I think efforts should be made to plant all the streets with trees and that, further, steps be taken to protect and water them so long as that is required. The householders, too, should be encouraged to keep their garden plots neatly, grass cut and trimmed, etc., and also to pay similar attention to the portions of the streets immediately in front of their properties. They should be urged, too, to remove any unsightly fences and encouraged either to entirely dispense with them or to construct ones which are small and neat.

It might be profitable if this Association would offer small prizes for the best kept gardens and lawns on such conditions that the holder of a small lot could compete on equal terms with the larger holders. It might be possible for the Association to go even further, and endeavor to influence the removal of old, unused, unsightly buildings.

Another need in the village, in my opinion, is that of a reading room or club room. It would take a certain amount of money to start this and also to maintain it, and I confess that I am not able to suggest how these funds should be provided, but I venture to lay this matter before the Association, as possibly someone may be able to suggest a solution of the problem. A place where the men of the village, young as well as old, could meet in order to chat, read the papers, and, possibly, engage in such games as chess, drafts, etc., would, I believe, be well attended and supply a real need.

Another matter which, perhaps, this Association would like to suggest to the Council is the numbering of the houses. This would be a useful thing and would not be much expense to do. At present it is difficult to direct a stranger to any particular house in the village.

As stated at the commencement of this paper, it is difficult to deal with the question raised thoroughly. I have made no attempt to do so. I suggest these few matters with a view of introducing the subject, which will, I trust, be fully discussed by those present, and it is not necessary for me to express the hope that the speakers will consider the subject with a desire to promote not any individual interests, but the welfare of all.

The paper gave rise to an interesting discussion in which Rev. Mr. Symonds, Mr. Tivey, Mr. Strickland, Mr. Butcher and others took part.

Moved by Mr. Symonds, seconded by Mr. McCarthy, that this meeting having had the paper of the President of the A.C.C., hereby calls upon the citizens of Ashburnham to endeavour in every way within their power to promote the interests of the village. It is of the opinion that the Association is a valuable medium for this purpose and invites all citizens to become members thereof.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. McCarthy, seconded by Mr. W. Gibbs, that this meeting is of the opinion that the village might be beautified by the planting of trees on all streets and suggests the advisability of the citizens observing Labour Day for the purpose of tree planting.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Courtney, seconded by Mr. Hamilton—That the Council of the A.C.C. be requested to take steps to have the letter box now at the corner of Lake and Elizabeth streets moved to the corner of Mark and Elizabeth streets and to apply for two more letter boxes.—Carried.

The Club meets the second Tuesday in each month. All citizens are invited to attend.

CONCERT AT AUBURN.

Tea Was Served and a Programme Afterwards Provided.

The tea and entertainment held Tuesday night last at Auburn by the Auburn Sunday School, proved a decided success. There was a large attendance, the hall being crowded. An elaborate supper was served from 6 to 8.30, after which the entertainment commenced, with Rev J P Wilson acting as chairman. The different numbers on the programme were well rendered, the two dialogues bringing down the house. The following is the programme:

Chairman's address.....Rev J P Wilson
Chorus.....Edison Glee Club
Recitation.....Miss Alberta White
Song.....Mr W G Mulligan
Recitation.....Miss S Green
Dialogue—"Bridget's Investment"..Misses N Courtney, M Darling and Mr Jas Young.
Clarinet solo.....Mr P B Blade
Recitation.....Miss M Hamilton
Chorus.....Edison Glee Club
Recitation.....Miss A White
Dialogue—"A Heavy Shower"—Misses M Euston, M Mann, A Porter, and Messrs G G-Pratley and T Cunningham.
God Save the King.

The thanks of the committee are due to the entertainers, Mr E F Mason, and all others who assisted in making the affair a success.

NEWS NUGGETS

—The prophecy of bad weather until March 21st, and then an early spring, seems about to be fulfilled.

—The postponed meeting of the Ashburnham Reading Circle, will be held on Monday evening, March 18th, at Miss Fair's.

—The meeting of the Trent Valley Canal Association, on Monday next, will doubtless draw a large number of delegates to town.

—Work is beginning in St. John's and All Saints' in preparation for the confirmation which will be held next May. Classes are being held in the St. John's Guild Room every Friday night.

I. O. O. F. NOTES.

Peterborough Lodge, No. 111, I.O.O.F., expects to be visited on Thursday evening, March 14th, by members of the lodges at Pontypool, Havelock and Norwood.

Several candidates are expected from these lodges to receive the three degrees, which will no doubt be conferred in the usual excellent style, for which Peterborough Lodge is noted.

OUR ADVERTISERS.

During the present disturbed relations with our advertisers, on account of the disastrous fire in the Examiner buildings, we are compelled to ask the indulgence of our patrons for a few days until we can pull ourselves together again. Hard and earnest work is being done to instal an entirely new printing plant in our present temporary premises at No. 411 George Street, a few doors south of the burned building, and by the end of the week, we hope to resume our contracts with our advertisers. In the meantime, in order to keep our advertisers as much in touch with our readers as possible, we will be able to insert short local notices of their business announcements.

The Peterborough Bookstore.

Our store will necessarily have to be closed for a day or two longer before the insurance men will be able to adjust the losses and we are in a position to put the stock in shape for doing business. The daily papers will be delivered to customers as usual, and may also be obtained at the Examiner's temporary premises, 411 George Street, where business orders may also be placed in the meantime.

A. H. STRATTON & CO.

Retiring from Business.

There have been enough bona fide bargains handed out to the ladies of Peterborough, during the first seven days of our closing-out sale, to go around the town like wild-fire. There's not a home in town but what has been talking about our sale. Let it be distinctly understood that the whole stock must be cleared out without delay, and that means almost at your own prices. We can't afford to dilly-dally over sales. With the same object in view, we trust all those indebted to us will be kind enough to pay their accounts promptly.

MISS K. RUDKINS.

Routley's Magic Prices.

The great sale of the Toronto Bazaar stock, bought at a fraction on the dollar, is a boon to Peterborough citizens. The goods are moving with such rapidity that special lines advertised one day are very often completely sold out the next. There are many lines, however, such as Wall Papers, Window Blinds, China, Crockery, etc., that can stand a month's heavy selling before being cleared. Another thing is certain—that no matter what you buy here you can count on securing wonderful bargains—bargains such as can be obtained nowhere else in Peterborough or any other town in Ontario.

C. B. ROUTLEY.

Gentlemen's New Spring Hats.

We are showing all the new and stylish shapes in gentlemen's black and colored hats for early spring wear. The styles are the correct English and American makes in Derby and Fedora hats, and to be right in line with this year's fashions you should let us fit you. Our hats are all fine makes, who have guaranteed records.

W. LECH & SON.

The Alarm Clock Won.

The man who tried to sleep after one of our "Early Risers" started in to do its work didn't have a ghost of a show. On the fourth round, he had to tumble out, slightly profane, but grateful. Makes no difference how heavy a sleeper you are, or how late you went to bed, our alarm clocks never disappoint. CLARKE & GIBSON.

Quite a Fad.

It's a great fad some people have of buying watches from perambulating peddlers. They apparently like to be taken in, or to indulge in risky speculations. If you come to Schneider's and buy a watch you don't have to take any risks. If the watch we sell you don't suit you, we're here to give you your money back for the asking.

THE BUDGET.

BIGGEST SURPLUS IN OUR HISTORY.

A Favorable Balance of Over Eight Million Dollars.

EXACT FIGURES--$8,054,714.51.

Hon. Mr. Fielding's Splendid Showing--National Debt Reduced Over Three-Quarters of a Million--Surplus of Over Six Millions for the Current Year Predicted -- No Tariff Changes.

Ottawa, March 15.—The features of Mr. Fielding's budget speech yesterday afternoon are briefly these:

There will be no tariff changes.

Machinery for the equipment of beet-root sugar factories will be admitted free of duty for one year. At present such machinery is free only when it is of a class not made in Canada.

Total revenue last fiscal year—$51,029,994.

Total expenditure last year—$42,975,279.

Surplus (largest in Canada's history) last year—$8,054,714.51.

Estimated revenue for year ending 30th of June—$52,750,000.

Estimated surplus for year ending 30th of June—$6,350,000.

Increase in aggregate foreign trade, 1900—$59,856,023.

Iron and steel bounties to cease in six years from 1st of July next.

Mr. Fielding, as he always does, gave a lucid, comprehensive and most interesting statement of the finances of the country. He spoke for barely an hour and a half, yet in that time he covered the ground most thoroughly.

Mr. Osler sat in the front Opposition benches alongside his leader, but he did not appear to have prepared himself for the role of financial critic. He made a poor showing in comparison with Mr. Fielding, as, indeed, any member on that side would have done, but what impressed the listeners most was his want of information with respect to the finances and fiscal policy of the country. His speech fell rather flat, and the countenances of the Conservative members around him plainly reflected how disappointed they were that Mr. Foster's successor did not prove equal to the occasion.

MR. FIELDING.

Annual Financial Statement by the Dominion's Finance Minister.

At 3.20, Finance Minister Fielding rose to deliver his budget speech. His first word was upon the prosperity of several years past, but he said the past year was one of unexampled prosperity, and what he would say that afternoon would form the most satisfactory financial statement that it ever fell to the lot of Finance Minister to make in the Dominion of Canada.

He immediately launched into a comparison of revenue and expenditure, covering the period from 1896, and gradually led up to the announcement that in 1900 the total revenue was $51,029,994 and the total expenditure chargeable to consolidated fund $42,975,279, showing a surplus of $8,054,715, the largest ever known in the history of the Dominion of Canada. Dealing with capital expenditure, he said the public debt showed a reduction of $779,639.

In the current year, which is to close on the 30th June next, up to the 10th March the revenue was $34,942,177, an increase over the corresponding period of last year of $1,227,698. The total revenue for the current year would be estimated at $52,750,000, or an increase of $1,720,000. The probable expenditure would be $46,400,000, which would make a surplus of $6,350,000. He estimated that the total expenditure chargeable to capital for the current year would be $10,700,000.

Next year he calculated that the Government would have to pay in iron and steel bounties the sum of $1,000,000. He continued: I shall not be surprised if the sum has to be somewhat larger. I think, therefore, we shall be obliged to provide a very considerable expenditure for the coming year.

As to revenue, I do not expect that we can keep on at the rate of increase which has been so marked during the three or four years. I think we have probably now reached about the crest of the wave of prosperity. I think the business of Canada has been developed during the past four or five years upon very safe and sound lines. I think that there has been to a very large extent an absence of that inflation which is so apt to mark a period of good times. I am of opinion that the business of the country as a whole has been so carefully conducted, and is on such a sound basis, that we are not likely to suffer any serious reverses, but I do not think it is reasonable to expect that we can go on increasing our business as rapidly as we have during the past few years. What may happen is that we might suffer a check.

Mr. Fielding dealt at length with the results of the preferential tariff, and estimated that in 1897 the imports from Great Britain had increased to the extent of about 30 per cent. He did not understand exactly how the preference was viewed by the Opposition; but his own contention was that the preference was an instrument increasing the trade of the Dominion with Great Britain.

Mr. Clancy—Will the hon. gentleman give us the increase of imports from the United States in the same period?

Mr. Fielding—No, sir; but, to set my hon. friend's mind at rest, I will tell him that we import large quantities of things from the United States, not to please the United States, but to please ourselves. (Laughter.) We import raw materials from the United States.

The Finance Minister went into an array of figures, showing the progress which the country has made since 1870. He reviewed the issue of postal notes, deposits in the Government and chartered banks, the value of exports of Canadian produce, imports for home consumption, and the total trade of Canada. He then dealt with the receipts and expenditure of the Yukon as a separate item, figuring out that, up to date, the revenue of the Yukon district had exceeded the expenditure by $128,508. This justified the reduction of the royalty from 10 to 5 per cent. In the first flush of the gold excitement, the people were willing to go in and pay their royalty cheerfully, but that period had gone by now.

Parliament had appropriated for the South African war the sum of $2,000,000. In 1899 and 1900, the expenditure had been $1,429,353, in addition to which, during the present year, so far, the expenditure was $539,356, and before the end of the year, $35,000 more would be spent. This would turn over the $2,000,000, and, in addition to this, the sum of $387,000 had been spent upon the garrison at Halifax.

Speaking of the iron and steel bounties, Mr. Fielding said: The policy of paying bounties on steel and iron was adopted a good many years ago, and, by some strange process, the exact reason for which one cannot easily find, that was never made a direct payment from the Treasury. A curious process was adopted, whereby these payments were treated as refunds, or drawbacks, in the Customs Department. The consequence has been that our actual revenue for customs has been stated somewhat less than it really was, because it was charged with these sums. I propose, therefore, that hereafter, beginning with July 1 next, whenever payments are made in the way of bounties on iron and steel, they should be paid directly from the Treasury, and should be shown in the public accounts in that way, instead of appearing in the Auditor-General's report, which is the only place you can conveniently find them, as a refund of duty, which is, of course, entirely incorrect. Now, I think, the House generally will agree with me that that is a wise policy.

The Finance Minister then made the following references to tariff matters: I do not propose to make any changes in the tariff. In saying that I do not for one moment assume that the tariff is perfect. I realize that here and there some special interest would be pleased if we were to make some change. But there are not many items in the tariff which can stand absolutely alone. As a rule, the tariff items ahev relation one to another, and it is not easy to make any considerable number of changes without opening the door to a wide revision of the tariff. I think the business men of the country have appreciated fully the advantages of having a stability of tariff. (Hear, hear.) I have again and again expressed the opinion that it was better we should bear some imperfection and some inequalities than to be constantly engaged in the process which is irreverently described as tariff tinkering. (Hear, hear.)

Turning to the needs of the beet sugar industry, Mr. Fielding said that in addition to the Ontario bounty, the Dominion Government would grant exemption from duty on machinery, which would be a valuable concession. This concession was already on the tariff, but it was qualified with the words that the machinery would be of a class not made in the Dominion of Canada. An amendment would be introduced making it clear that for one year, reserving the question as to whether the circumstances will warrant continuing it, free admission would be permitted of machinery of any kind imported for the purpose of equipping a beet root sugar factory in the Dominion.

Continuing, Mr. Fielding said: After all, the only question of real importance in the budget speech is the question of tariff changes. The tariff policy we have to offer to-day is the tariff policy which we adopted in 1897, and which we have continued up to the present time. It is a tariff policy based upon the necessities of our revenue, a revenue tariff, and which incidentally affords a very considerable degree of encouragement to those engaged in Canadian industries, and having as its leading principle the question of the British preferential tariff. I am afraid that on that question we are as wide as ever from our honorable friends opposite. Perhaps it is not easy for me to determine how wide the difference is between us, in view of some of the conflicting statements hon. gentlemen have made from time to time, but I suppose I would not be wrong if I say that the ground taken by hon. gentlemen opposite is, that while they are in favor of the principle of a British preferential tariff, they are opposed to what they call a one-sided preference.

Conservatives—Hear, hear.

The Minister of Finance—I am glad to have received these hear, hears, because they show that I have correctly described, as I desire to do, the attitude of hon. gentlemen opposite. They say that they are opposed to a one-sided preference, and they say our preference is a one-sided one.

Conservatives—Hear, hear.

The Minister of Finance—Surely, if a one-sided preference is bad, and if our preference is a one-sided one, there is only one thing for hon. gentlemen to do, and that is to bring down a resolution to repeal the British preference tariff. I am bound to think that they will do so, and if so, of course we will have at once the issue joined between us. We can respect their view, although we differ from it. But we will know exactly where we stand, and we will know where they stand. They have held that we did wrong in granting a preference to the goods of Great Britain without demanding a preference for Canada in the markets of Great Britain.

Conservatives—Hear, hear.

The Minister of Finance—Again those comforting "hear, hears," which show that I am correctly giving the views of my honorable friends. They have been pleased to try to persuade themselves, and to try to persuade the public, that a preference in the English market which they desire can be had for the asking. I suppose that, like a man who tells the same story again and again, until he persuades himself that it is true, many honorable gentlemen opposite have persuaded themselves they can easily obtain that preference in the English market. The only new incident that has occurred that I can recall is the discussion which took place on this question in connection with the meeting of the Associated Chambers of Commerce in London last summer. There the question was raised in a very gentle, modest form; in the form of a resolution asking Her Majesty's Government to appoint a Royal Commission to inquire into the question of Imperial trade. But even in that innocent form, we find that when they asked a hearing before the British Prime Minister, to present their resolution, he stated that it was not opportune to consider it and he declined to receive the deputation. And, then, discouraged and disconsolate, from the illustrious Prime Minister of Great Britain, they went to the Colonial Secretary. They tried to persuade Mr. Chamberlain that this preference should be granted. Mr. Chamberlain told them courteously, but firmly and emphatically, that the thing could not be entertained for a moment, unless they were prepared to give up their tariff protection against Great Britain.

Mr. Maclean—Mr. Chamberlain may have to change his mind, like others.

The Minister of Finance—Possibly my honorable friend will do me justice to say that I am dealing with things of the past and present, and we will not say too much of the future. (Hear, hear.)

We do not deny that if you did get that preference in the English market it would probably be of some advantage to the Dominion of Canada; but we say that it is a question for the Imperial authorities, rather than for us. The only difference between us is as to the possibility of getting it, and as to the means of getting it. I do not believe, sir, that it can be obtained today.

I would not speak of the future, I will not say that at no future time in the history of the Empire, and the early future possibly, shall this preference not be given. The true policy was to give to Great Britain this preference freely and openly, leaving the Imperial Government and Parliament to adopt that trade policy which in their judgment was best adapted to the interests of the English people. (Liberal applause.)

CONSERVATIVE REPLY.

Mr. E. B. Osler Makes an Attempt to Fill the Shoes of Mr. Foster.

Mr. E. B. Osler (Toronto), replying, congratulated the country on its prosperity. He said: We, as a party, claim that protection has materially advanced the interests of Canada. We contend that without protection the interests of Canada would be very seriously impaired, no matter how bountifully Providence might bless us with crops, or how rich our mines might be. The Finance Minister, I am glad to say, has been able to make a very short budget speech. He has quoted comparatively few figures. In the last four years they have had an increased revenue amounting to $30,980,000 over and above the revenue of the preceding four years. This is the amount they have taken in direct taxation out of the pockets of the people, over and above the expenditures.

This surplus of revenue over expenditure should be treated in one of two ways: It should go either to reduce the taxes, or to reduce the debt of the country.

What indication has the Finance Minister given us in this budget that he has treated this surplus in either of these ways? He has spent with a free hand. He has not been able to show us a decrease in the net debt of the country; but, on the contrary, in the last four years he has increased the debt to the extent of $6,900,000, notwithstanding the enormous increase of revenue which he has had at his disposal.

The hon. gentleman boasts of the increased trade of this country with Great Britain. He was asked how the exports of the United States to Great Britain stood. The exports from the United States to Great Britain show an average increase in the last four years of $105,000,000 a year. Naturally, our imports should show an increase; but they have not increased in any greater proportion than the imports of Great Britain from the United States, notwithstanding our boasted preference.

I agree with the hon. Minister of Finance in the opinion he has expressed, that we are perhaps on the crest of the wave of prosperity for some time to come. When we have to face a falling revenue, how are we going to meet it? We have increased our expenditure over the sum which the Finance Minister in the Mackenzie Government stated was ample; we have added to that by millions of dollars, and that hon. gentleman's voice is not raised against it. He has no thought for the morrow. He tells us that the bounty to be paid on iron he will not consider as a payment out of revenue, but will add it to our debt. Is there to be no limit to this method of conducting business?

It is, of course, only natural that our expenditure should increase as our trade increases, but this increase in expenditure is far outrunning any increase in revenue, and there is not the slightest attempt on the part of the Government, or any member of it, to keep our expenditure within our means. Does he propose going on borrowing as long as he can in the English market? It seems to me he would do better to try and take advantage of a flourishing revenue to reduce our capital debt, and not go on losing all the benefit of the increased revenue by continuing a system of lavish expenditure.

Having spoken of the Ontario and Quebec road built by private money, and the squandering of money on a road in Elgin County, Mr. Osler discussed the issuing of scrip to the half breeds, which, he said, meant that the Government would sell its own bonds at a discount of 60 per cent.

Speaking of the preferential tariff, Mr. Osler said: There is room for difference of opinion as to whether the preferential tariff is a wise thing or an unwise thing, but let us see how it works out. The Government first gave a 25 per cent. preference. They were so pleased with that that, having nothing else to suggest, they said: "Let us go one more, and make it 33 1-3. That admits German, Belgium or Italian goods, the produce of cheap labor, competing with our Canadian labor, the only condition being that it shall be sent to Britain, and 25 per cent. of British labor added to it. The whole amount, of which four-fifths is made by foreign cheap labor, comes into this country under a preference of 33 1-3 per cent. In reality, this preference works out to give the Germans and other cheap continental manufacturers a much greater advantage than is given to the manufacturers of Great Britain. (Hear, hear.)

Turning again to the transportation question, Mr. Osler said: "The Government have done their best in bonusing the Grand Trunk, rebuilding their bridge, helping them to double track their line and put on a double track their line and put on fast trains, deliberately to divert trade from Canadian ports to foreign and rival ports. They are spending large sums of money on Midland Harbor, Collingwood Harbor, Depot Harbor, but they have not yet apparently made up their minds as to whether the future seaport of this country is to be Quebec or Montreal. Let us face that question squarely. Personally, and I think I may speak for all the members on this side of the House, if Montreal or Quebec can be made through Canadian ports, from which we can send all our produce, any expenditure the Government may ask for that purpose will be ungrudgingly given. Now, if Montreal is to be the port of this country, then we must spend enormous sums of money upon it and upon the approaches. It is impossible that Montreal can successfully compete with the American ports unless you have an absolutely safe channel, a channel well lighted, so that an insurance company will consider it safe enough to justify them in insuring a vessel passing through the St. Lawrence at the same price as they would insure a vessel coming to Portland or other ports. If it found that Montreal cannot be made the port of Canada—I know nothing about its capability—I am beginning to entertain a strong feeling that we should have to go to Quebec and that Quebec will be the port of Canada for all time to come. (Hear, hear.)

I do not think the Finance Minister is entitled to congratulate himself and his fellow-Ministers especially upon the prosperity with which this country has been favored during the past three or four years. I contend that the Government have entirely misused that prosperity. They have taken advantage of it to inaugurate a rule of extravagance. While our revenue increases it is the duty of the Government in charge to lighten the burdens of the people, either by reducing taxation on the necessaries of life, or by reducing the public debt. (Conservative applause.)

Mr. Clancy Follows.

In the evening the budget debate was continued by Mr. Clancy of Bothwell. He said if the Government could show a single article in regard to which the preference had been of benefit to Canada, they would be dealing honestly with the country. He figured out that the present taxation of the Canadian people is 17.93 per cent. on the value of the import trade. It is not, he said, the duty of the Opposition to repeal the silly, one-sided preference enacted by the Government. The tariff did not lighten the burden on the necessaries of life, but admitted the luxuries by the same stright cut.

Sir Richard Cartwright moved the adjournment of the debate.

The House adjourned at 9.30.

THE GOOD ROADS BILL

Measure Explained and Referred to a Select Committee.

MR. DRYDEN'S FACTORY BILL.

Owners of Building Are Held Responsible for Having Fire Escapes Put Up—Several Government Measures Advanced a Stage—A Good Day's Work—The Education Act Amended.

Toronto, March 15.—In the Legislative Assembly yesterday, Hon. Mr. Dryden introduced a bill to amend the Factories' Act. He explained that it was intended to place the onus of providing fire-escapes on the owner of the building. Proprietors of factories alleged that they could not put up fire-escapes without the consent of the owners of the property. The bill also provided that inflammable materials should be kept in a separate fire-proof building, and contained other provisions for the safety of employes.

Hon. G. W. Ross intimated in reply to a question that the Government had not decided whether the Committee on Agriculture and Colonization would be appointed this session or not.

On motion of Hon. Mr. Stratton, the agreement between the Government and the H. A. Nelson & Sons Co., relative to the manufacture of brooms at the Central Prison dated June 1, 1900, was ratified.

Hon. G. W. Ross moved the second reading of his bill for the improvement of the public highways. He pointed out that while large amounts of money had been spent on railroads, the highways in many parts of the country were very defective. The bill proposed to set apart $1,000,000 for improving the highways. He stated that under the influence of the Good Roads movement the people of the United States were devoting great attention to highway improvement and spending large sums of money for the purpose. The proposal of the Government was that the roads to be improved in any county should be designated by by-law of the County Council with the assent of the local municipal councils, or of a majority of the ratepayers qualified to vote on money by-laws. The roads to be selected were to be those facilitating the direct transportation of produce to the local markets. The counties would receive aid in proportion to area, amounting to $25,000 on the average, but no aid would be given to those counties receiving assistance by the building of colonization roads. The roads were to be constructed according to the regulations of the Public Works Department. It was proposed to give one-third of the amount appropriated by the county for road-making as an incentive to liberal local expenditure. The municipalities might apply the money towards the purchase of toll roads or for the purpose of road-making machinery. He strongly favord the abolition of all tolls on highways. The bill also provided that the statute labor for which lands fronting on highways, constructed or repaired under the Act were liable, should be commuted and the amount applied to the improvement of other highways in the municipality.

Mr. Hoyle asked if it was proposed to limit the annual expenditure of the County Councils upon roads?

Hon. G. W. Ross intimated that it was not proposed to fix any limitation, as public opinion was fairly represented in the councils.

Col. Matheson asserted that the expense of county road building could not be met by annual taxation. The counties would have to borrow money to do the work effectively. The proportion of Government aid would be very small as compared with the total outlay if the road system was to be materially improved.

After some further discussion the bill received a second reading and was referred to a special committee.

Hon. R. Harcourt moved the second reading of his bill to consolidate and amend the act respecting the Education Department. He explained that it made but little change in the law—the principal amendment being one to render it easier for teachers trained in other provinces or in England to qualify for employment in Ontario. The bill received a second reading.

Hon. R. Harcourt, in moving the second reading of the act to consolidate and amend the act respecting Public Schools, stated that the leading change was the establishment of a Consultative Committee.

Mr. Whitney congratulated the Government on having adopted an idea first formulated by the Opposition.

Mr. Harcourt pointed out that the Department had always been ready and willing to receive suggestions from any quarter. As a matter of fact, the proposal of a consultative committee had long been agitated in Britain and adopted there. The system, however, was still on its trial and was not favored by the teachers there. Mr. Whitney had formulated an extensive educational program, but the best portions of it had been taken from his (Mr. Harcourt's) expressions on the subject.

Mr. Harcourt's bill consolidating the High School Act received a second reading.

Hon. J. M. Gibson's bill respecting summary convictions received a second reading, the Attorney-General explaining that it was intended to prevent the quashing of convictions on merely technical points.

Hon. E. J. Davis moved the second reading of the bill appropriating land for the South African volunteers and Fenian Raid veterans. He explained that the scope of the bill had been somewhat enlarged. Those who were on duty in 1870 had been included as well as the volunteers of 1866. Other small classes having legitimate claims were also recognized. The land granted was to be exempt from all taxation except for school purposes for 10 years. This clause had excited a good deal of controversy, some wishing the term extended and others strongly objecting to the principle. As soon as the land passed to other parties this exemption ceased. The land was also to be exempt from seizure for debt.

Mr. Jessop thought the next of kin should receive the grant in the case of the Fenian Raid veterans, as well as in that of the South African volunteers.

Mr. Carscallen favored giving the timber and minerals with the land. The next of kin ought certainly to obtain a grant.

Mr. Powell pleaded the cause of those Ontario men who enlisted from other Provinces.

Mr. Davis said the bill would be interpreted in a liberal spirit in this respect.

Mr. McLaughlin hoped the surviving veterans of 1837 would not be overlooked.

The bill received a second reading.

The Attorney-General's bill to amend the Trustees' Investment Act and the Provincial Secretary's bill respecting sanitary regulations in unorganized territories, providing for better sanitary conditions in lumber, mining and railroad construction camps, etc., were read a second time.

The House went into Committee of Supply, the items relating to civil government and amounting to $230,870 were passed.

Flower Girls in Real Life.

The "flower girls" of Italy are worse than the peddlers.

The "girl" is usually a plump and picturesque creature, aged anywhere from 25 to 40, and possessed of "nerve" even beyond her years. She flourishes best in Venice and Naples, but there is no certainty of escaping her anywhere.

Suppose the stranger seats himself at a table in St. Mark's square, Venice, to listen to the evening concert. No sooner has he seated himself than the flower girl advances on him, preceded by the witchery of a beaming smile.

She will place a flower in his buttonhole.

He may prevent her doing so by rising and offering physical resistance, but otherwise he must accept the flower. After the flower has been placed there he may remove it and offer it to her, but she will laugh coyly and refuse to take it back. He may throw it on the ground, but that would be rude.

Suppose that he accepts the inevitable and decides to leave the flower in his buttonhole. He puts his hand into his pocket and says to the flower girl, "How much?"

She knows her business. If he gives her 20 centimes or more he knows that she will regard him an easy victim of her extortion, whereas if he gives her only two or three small coppers she will say, "Eet ees not much," and politely revile him. The unprotected man has little chance against the large and determined flower girl.

ROBERT FAIR & CO.

SIGN OF THE GOLDEN LION.

Daily Examiner.

FRIDAY, MARCH 15, 1901.

NORTH MONAGHAN.

The council of the township of North Monaghan met in the Town Hall on Monday, March 11th, at the hour of 1 30 p.m. All the members were present.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The following communications were received:

From the Single Tax Association of Toronto, re assessments.

From M. F. Ainslie, clerk of Blenheim, re the proposed legislation regarding roads.

These communications were received.

A petition was presented and read from Geo. Webber, Wm. Whitfield and John Johnstone, re a'leged damages to their property by the overflow of water thereon.

It was moved by Messrs. Madill and Smith, that the whole council be a committee to confer with the petitioners with regard to the grievance complained of on 9 h concession, on such date and place as may be appointed by them, the petitioners. This was carried unanimously.

The clerk reported having communicated with various printing establishments, as instructed at last meeting, and having received quotations from some of them as follows:—Peterborough Review, Peterborough Examiner and Norwood Register, each enclosing a schedule of prices showing the cost of the yearly printing to be from $40 to $45; the Lakefield News at $40 00; A. C. Garvey, $55 00 and the Millbrook Messenger. It was moved by Messrs. Madill and Dobbin, that the clerk is hereby instructed to procure the printing and supplies for the township from the Peterborough Review Printing Co. for the year 1901. This was carried unanimously.

The following accounts were then presented: Peterborough Examiner Printing Co., balance of printing account for 1900, $11 70, Municipal World, two accounts for dog tags and supplies, $6.34; Sam. McCabe, bread for the Close family, $1.00; Davis, Thompson & Co., insurance premium, $5.95; E. Mann, hardwood for Mr. Close, $3 50. W. H. Moore, one-half the account for drawing agreement and bylaw re division of south boundary, $8 00

It was moved by Messrs. Madill and Smith, that the accounts be paid, with the exception of that of W. H. Moore, which was referred to Mr. Hunter, ex-reeve, for to certify to.

The auditors for 1900 presented their report, enclosing duplicate copies of the statement of receipts and expenditures for the year 1900 in detail, also a statement of assets and liabilities of the township for the year ending Dec. 31st, 1900. The report also contained a detailed statement of the expenditure under the road commissioners for the year.

It was moved by Messrs. May and Madill, that the Auditors' Report be received and adopted, and that the clerk is hereby instructed to have the same published according to law; and also that orders be issued in part payment of the auditors' salaries. This was carried unanimously.

It was moved by Messrs. Madill and May, that Councillors Smith and Dobbin are hereby a committee to investigate a complaint that trees growing along the quarter line on 12th concession are an obstruction, and if such is found to be the case they are empowered to have the same removed. This was carried unanimously.

On motion Bylaws Nos. 497 and 498—to appoint a collector and to confirm agreement with the township of Smith re boundary road, respectively, were introduced, given the necessary readings and passed.

In committee on the second reading of Bylaw No. 497, Mr. Joseph Barnard was appointed as collector for 1901 at a salary of $40. This appointment was confirmed.

Council then adjourned until called by the reeve.

BRITISH BANKRUPTS.

PRIVILEGES WHICH ARE ACCORDED BY LAW TO PEERS.

Some English Legal Decisions as to What Constitute the Necessaries of Life—They Widely Differ From Duke to Ordinary Mortal.

Recent bankruptcy cases in London have brought up various legal decisions which have been reached in England on the subject of what are necessaries of life for men of various stations and degrees who are not in command of their own incomes.

A duke, for instance, or even a marquis or an earl is entitled by law to one bottle of champagne a day if his trustees hold the money to pay for it. In the case of the former Duke of Manchester the law decided that seven bottles of champagne a week are necessary to a duke whose affairs may be in the hands of trustees and that if he had not the control of his own income he must be allowed to have a carriage with one horse, a riding horse as well, one manservant and a house with a rent of not less than £250 a year; otherwise he must be allowed to have the use of £2,000 a year, while the rest might be allowed to accumulate for the good of the estate till the trustee period expired.

A viscount or a baron is allowed by law to describe as necessaries things which smaller fry might struggle along without. But a viscount's income—provided there is anybody to pay it—is fixed at £1,500 a year and a baron's at £1,000. He is, supposing any guardians have a few thousands a year to pay out to him according to discretion, only entitled to claret as a beverage, for his yearly wine allowance only runs to £60, which would not keep him in champagne unless he drank it very seldom. The duke's wine bill may run to £150.

The viscount must have a carriage, but it may be attached for debt, and he cannot force his guardians to give him a horse. Of course, if he has no guardians, nor any income, either, he must do as other people and go without, but these things are considered necessary to peers. A manservant is allowed to a viscount or baron, but the house rent need not exceed £200, nor can it be less than £150.

A doctor is better off than a viscount in one way—his carriage cannot be seized in most cases, nor can the expenses of it be reckoned in his income tax returns. In selling up a doctor for debt he may retain one horse, and two of his carpets are considered as necessaries to his business—in the hall and consulting room—and reckoned at £20 apiece. He may have surgical instruments and medical appliances to the value of £1,000, and these cannot be seized.

An ordinary man can retain nothing but his clothes, his hairbrushes and a few stern necessaries of that kind. No wine is allowed to a doctor, but if a student in the hands of trustees, he can demand a couple of servants and a house rent of £60 per year.

The son of a well to do merchant or tradesman making about £1,000 a year can demand neither wine nor horses nor servants, but the law may allow him a rent of £50 and another £150 or £200 to keep himself on, supposing he is in the hands of guardians, whether under or over age. As to debt, he can be sold up, bar his personal necessaries and his clothes, though he is not generally allowed to keep more than six suits of the latter.

If he has more a judge might allow them to be taken with the other chattels, and he can be left without a chair to sit on or a spoon to eat with. Jewelry, if he has any, can be taken; but if he has, say, two pairs of valuable sleeve links he can keep only one of them. In the same way he may keep a dress suit, but if he has two an order may be made to sell up one of them.

A lawyer can have 500 books on legal subjects or in some way pertaining to law, and these have to be left alone by the brokers. There are extreme cases in which everything, even necessaries, may be taken, but the lawyer may also demand exemption even in such cases for his wigs, or at least two of them, and two gowns. As a student in the hands of guardians he can make them pay him £80 a year for chambers, and they must pay his examination and other fees.

A clergyman or minister of any kind is worst off of all and can keep very little for himself. He can make his guardians come down with the fees his profession needs, however, and if he lives in the country as a curate and has some trustees and also a guardian he can make them supply him with a gardener.

SIR ARTHUR'S DOG MELODY.

A Canine That Had an Educated Taste In Music.

It is not generally known that the late Sir Arthur Sullivan was not only passionately fond of dogs, but had made a special study of them in every way. The brilliant composer, whose loss is indeed a blow to the world at large, declared frequently to the writer of this article that in the dog is embodied all the necessary conditions for the appreciation of music of all kinds and that the organ of hearing in a dog is of marvelous delicacy. Sir Arthur bore out the truth of this statement by relating the following fascinating anecdotes of incidents which came directly under his notice:

Some years ago, when Sir Arthur was accustomed to go down to the theater very regularly in order to conduct the rehearsals of his own operas, he was followed every morning by a dog, which entered the theater the same time as he did, placed itself between the legs of the musicians and listened delightedly, eagerly, to the music. This occurred day after day, until the constant appearance of the dog at the rehearsals excited the curiosity and admiration not only of Sir Arthur himself, but of all the musicians, who, not knowing its name, gave him that of Melody. Very soon he was petted by all, and each one in turn invited the dog to dinner—"Melody, will you dine with me today?" These words were sufficient. The dog followed his host, ate heartily and as soon as dinner was over rushed off again to the theater, found its way to the orchestra, placed itself in a corner and never left until the evening performance was finished.

Nothing could be more amusing, more curious, than the attitude of Melody during the performance. If a new work was being performed, he found it out before the overture had been played many seconds. If the piece abounded in rich and original melodies, he testified his pleasure by his delighted barks and by scraping his feet raptuously on the ground. On the other hand, if the piece was only ordinary, insipid, Melody invariably gaped or yawned, turned his back upon the orchestra, gazed around the boxes and at last slunk away in a decidedly bad humor. This expressive pantomime was the most piquant criticism of the new opera.

When the work of some great master was played, Melody always knew the precise moment when an artist was going to sing some striking song or play some special part of the work, and then his movements, his gestures, were such as to almost plead for silence among the spectators. "I do not know," said Sir Arthur not many weeks before his death, "what became of this dog later on, but his name and his reputation are still fresh in the memories of several musicians who have frequently seen his singular antics."—People.

Was Ready to Compromise.

A very small pile of coal lay on the sidewalk in front of a house on A street southeast. A correspondingly small son of Ham was sauntering along and, seeing it, scented a job. He rang the doorbell.

"Am dat yo' all's coal?" he asked the lady at the door.

"Yes."

"Want it toted in?"

"Yes."

"Kain't I git de job?"

"Why, you're pretty small, and then you might charge too much. You might ask more than I could pay."

"How much is yo' got?" asked the small man of business. "Kin yo' raise a dollah?"

"Oh, my goodness, no!"

"Seventy-five cents?"

"No; run along and don't bother me." And she started to close the door.

"Mebbe so yo'll gib 50 cents."

"No, no; run along."

"I reckons yo' all ain't got er quahtah?"

"No."

"Ner a dime?"

"No, not even a dime," replied the woman, beginning to laugh.

"Well, how much is yo' got?" questioned Ham, showing his ivories. "I sut'nly does wanter git de job."

"I've got just a nickel."

"Well, I'm jus' a-lookin fer nickel jobs." And he straightway began.

And Yet He Could Write.

Among the public servants who are worried by foolish questions the superintendent of mails in the postoffice gets his full share. One of his visitors on a certain occasion was a man who said to the deputy who answered the call at the window:

"I am going out of town today and want to get a letter to my brother, who is on board the Majestic, and she is not due until Wednesday. I don't know where he will stay in New York or where he will go from here. Can you help me?"

"Certainly we can," said the clerk. "A mailboat goes to meet the steamer, and if you address your letter properly and put domestic postage on it it will be delivered all right."

"But how shall I address it—where shall I send it?"

"Address it 'John Smith, passenger on board incoming steamer Majestic, due in New York, Dec. 12.' That will reach him."

"No city? No nothing?"

"That's all—just as I told you."

The man thanked the clerk and went away, and came back a little later with an addressed letter in his hand.

"Say," he said to the clerk, "about that letter. I've addressed it and stamped it all right, but the man's name isn't John Smith. How about that?"

The Old Home Paper.

Noting the fact that many country bred men in the large cities take the local paper in their old home, the Philadelphia Record says: "The head of a large Market street wholesale business house, a man now advanced in years, has been a regular subscriber to one of the Bucks county papers for 50 years. 'He wouldn't give it up for anything,' said this man's son. 'He gets more real enjoyment from it than from anything he reads. A daily edition has been started within the last ten years, but he doesn't want that. He only gets the weekly edition, which prints gossip of a personal nature from the various towns throughout the county. He will pore over this by the hour, and his comments on the various items of news are often amusing. Scarcely a name is mentioned that he doesn't say, "Why, I used to go to school with his father," or "I once licked his Uncle Jim for tying my clothes up when we used to go swimming in the Neshaminy."'"

Not His Day For Selling.

"Does you want to see de president of de road?" queried the colored man who sat in a chair at the head of the stairs.

"Yes; he's the man I want to see," replied the caller.

"'Bout a pass or sunthin?"

"About buying out the road for $50,000,000. Can you attend to the business for me?"

"I 'spects I could, sah; but, dis bein my second day yere an bein I ain't feelin powerful well, perhaps you'd better see de president hisself—right down de hall an second doah to de left, sah."

New Insomnia Cure.

Brown—Say, I've been trying the finest cure for insomnia that I ever heard of. It is for one to count each breath that he exhales while lying in bed.

Smith—Ah! Then you go to sleep.

Brown—No, but after a little while a fellow gets rather interested in the work, and the night passes away so quickly that he doesn't mind lying still so long.

THE GLASS OF FASHION.

Tortoise shell buttons flecked with gold are a feature of the tan cloth coats.

Pretty stocks to wear with dainty lawn waists are made of finely tucked white batiste with narrow colored hemstitched edges.

Shirt waists of paisley silk squares with a plain border add variety to the list of new models for spring wear. Three squares are required for one waist, and the plain border is for collar, cuffs and front finish.

For trimming ball gowns silver seems to be taking the place of gold, and in combination with lace on pale blue tulle of net it is very attractive. Silver gauze roses are used effectively, and lace with silver flounces woven in is another form of decoration.

Sable seems to be the only fur which is considered elegant enough to be used alone without any other fur in combination with it. Almost all the fur garments show some combination, the least effective of which is chinchilla and ermine. Contrast in color is necessary to produce a good result.

Dainty flowered silks are promised as a fashionable fabric this coming season. They are in the Louis XVI style, with plain and flowered stripes in alternation. Narrow ruchings of chiffon in some color in the silk are a suitable trimming, and narrow black velvet ribbon makes a pretty contrast.

If you see any deep round lace collars or collars of fine embroidered batiste on the bargain counter, do not pass them by, for they will give a fashionable touch to your summer gowns later on. The latest bolero, cut low, shows several circular collars, and any sort of collar in the Louis XIII style is a good investment.

THE PLAYHOUSE.

Evelyn Millard may play the title role in "L'Aiglon" this season in London.

Grace George is to appear next season in a dramatization of "Alice of Old Vincennes."

"Betsy Ross," the new colonial play, will be done in Philadelphia in April for the first time.

Eric Hope (the Earl of Yarmouth) has begun a starring tour in "The Councilor's Wife."

Theresa Vaughn is reported as a physical and mental wreck and as unlikely ever to recover.

Mme. Paderewski, wife of the noted pianist, will in the future act as his secretary and business agent.

Margaret Bronson, a niece of Bronson Howard, the playwright, is soon to make her debut in vaudeville.

Camille D'Arville, who announced a permanent retirement from the stage on the occasion of her recent marriage, is singing in the varieties.

Mrs. E. H. Sothern (Virginia Harned) will be seen this season at a number of special matinee performances of "Camille," supported by Mr. Sothern's company.

Mr. Pinero says that the cast of his new comedy is a short one and that the piece itself is exceedingly simple in construction, the action being practically confined to four or five persons.

A delegation of students from college attended a New York theater recently and, recognizing Mark Twain in a box, cheered him. The veteran humorist bowed his acknowledgments, but declined to make a speech.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

Rural French towns are busy barring the skirtless bicycle costume for women.

During the last year there was an increase of nearly $30,000 in the value of monkey skins exported from the Gold Coast. It is estimated that at least 1,000,000 monkeys were killed in that district alone.

In Belgium there are more than 50,000 dogs used for draft purposes. They are mostly employed by milkmen, peddlers and small farmers, and a society for the improvement of the breed has just been formed.

It has long been considered highly dangerous on account of the danger of spontaneous combustion to ship coal for sea transportation in a wet condition. Experiments have now been made which show that after all this is quite the safest condition in which to ship it.

THE HAUNTED OAK.

"Pray, why are you so bare, so bare,
O bough of the old oak tree,
And why, when I go through the shade you throw,
Runs a shudder over me?"

"My leaves were green as the best, I trow,
And sap ran free in my veins,
But I saw in the moonlight dim and weird
A guiltless victim's pains.

"I bent me down to bear his sigh,
I shook with his gurgling moan,
And I trembled sore when they rode away
And left him here alone.

And set him fast in jail.
Oh, why does the dog howl all night long,
And why does the night wind wail?

* * * * * * *

"I feel the rope against my bark
And the weight of him in my grain;
I feel in the throe of his final woe
The touch of my own last pain.

"And nevermore shall leaves come forth
On a bough that bears the ban.
I am burned with dread, I am dried and dead,
From the curse of a guiltless man."

—Paul Dunbar in Century.

An Ambiguous Answer.

Lady Lester had given her daughter Alice a season in town, hoping to marry her off. By doing so she had run badly into debt. Lady Lester was a handsome woman, tall, stately, fortunate in the possession of a figure that did not age, clever and discreet in repairing the ravages of time. She usually wore black, partly because it was intensely becoming to her, partly for economy's sake. She presented a marked contrast to her daughter, who was petite, piquant, dainty, with retrousse features. Taking the pair together, they were as attractive a mother and daughter as one could hope to see, if it had not been for the eternal discontent written on their features.

Her troubles had not improved Lady Lester's temper.

"If you had only," she said peevishly to her daughter, "given half the encouragement to Lord Wimberley that you have to that wretched Anderson, you might be Lady Wimberley, off my hands and able to help me a little out of this scrape."

"It's no fault of mine," said Alice sullenly. "I did all I could to encourage the stick, wasted no end of dances on him, wore myself out with endeavoring to talk to him and make him talk, next to asked him for his box seat at the meet of the Coaching club"—

"Well, you got it," interposed her mother.

"Yes, and everybody of course thought that it meant something, but I knew better. I am quite sure that he never intended to offer it to me and that my offering myself was not agreeable"—

"Then why didn't he say that he had given it away already?"

"That's a mystery to me. But I know perfectly well that he did not give it to me for love of me and also that he obviously thought before taking my very plain hint"—

"I am sure that he was most nice"—

"Nice!" cried the girl shrilly. "He always is nice in a kind, aggravating, brotherly way. 'Hope you are enjoying yourself like a good little girl.' 'Can I help?' 'Don't mind me if you don't want me.' That's what he always seems to be saying. Could any one make anything out of that?"

"But he comes here a good deal"—

"Yes, and is just as pleased to talk to any of your old friends as to me. Why, I believe he is just as pleased to talk to you as to me."

"Then why does he come?" said Lady Lester, who was too much accustomed to her daughter's rudeness to notice it.

"Oh, I don't know. Why does any one do anything? One must do something. He is not a man of deep reasons. He finds us pleasant. He meets pleasant people here. We are kinder to him than many. But there is one thing that is quite certain—that I have tried to give him every kind of opportunity, and he has never taken advantage of one of them. On the contrary, his one desire has always seemed to get away."

"Your foolish encouragement of Anderson"—

"It's no good going on like that, mamma," said the girl, blushing suddenly red. "I stuck to Wimberley as long as there was a ghost of a chance, and when I saw there was none and no other man came forward—well, I suppose I love George Anderson as much as a girl like me can. I know we can't marry, but what's the good of going to dances and dancing with useless stick after useless stick all the time?"

"Lord Wimberley is not a useless stick," said Lady Lester, with sudden warmth, which brought a tinge of color to her cheeks and made her look much younger and unusually handsome. "It is you who are such a foolish and frivolous girl that you are incapable of appreciating his talents. His speeches in the house of lords have been much admired"—

"Oh, why don't you have a go in for him yourself if you admire him so much? I will make you a present of my chance, for it isn't worth a straw."

"Alice, how dare you speak to me like that? Remember that I am your mother."

Alice had not seen her mother angry for years. She was amazed and a trifle alarmed at the unexpected ebullition of the wrath of the dove.

"Of course I was only joking," she said sulkily. "You gave it to me, and I thought I might have a little one back. Of course he is not likely to think of you. He is a great deal too wise to make such a—er—um—well, you know what I mean. a—er—um—well, you know what I mean."

"You are an exceedingly insolent girl," was the mother's reply to this polite apology, "and I terribly regret crippling myself in this way in order to give you a chance that you have wasted."

"I never asked you to."

"Yes, you did. You were always saying that you never had a proper chance like other girls and what you would do if you had. Well, now you have had it, and what good has it been?"

In this dialogue of "I never did" and "I wish I hadn't" there was no doubt a great deal of truth on both sides. Lady Lester had been foolish. Alice had been unsuccessful. Both had concurred in this folly with their eyes open, and success, after all, does not depend solely on the desire and need of the seeker. It would have been better if the ladies had accepted the inevitable without recrimination, but they had both been ground to such a sharp edge by the continual stress of poverty that the slightest contact was liable to wound. Doomed as they were by nature to fill the greater part of their time with talk, whether it were well or ill, it was inevitable that their conversation should recur again and again with increasing sharpness to the topic which they had most at heart equally whether it were well or ill.

There was a ball that night, and the Lesters went. Lady Lester was queer, distrait, sharp, but distinctly looking her best. Alice was thoroughly "down" and conscious that she was by no means in her most attractive form. Nor did any special success attend her entrance to raise her spirits. Pretty, penniless girls with sharp tongues are a mere drug in the London ballrooms. George Anderson was, of course, faithful, and she danced several dances with him. "It is better than sitting out all the evening," she said defiantly when Lady Lester remonstrated.

"That seems a nice young man," he said in his kind, friendly, unloverlike way. "Not well off, is he? It is a pity he hasn't some clever woman to push him along."

"Why, what could a woman do?" demanded Alice, surprised and interested.

"Oh, lots of things. Women can push and ask when men can't. They are sure to be treated politely even when they are refused, and very often they get what they want simply because it is difficult to refuse a woman. Besides, they can stick to the subject. Don't you remember that the unjust judge gave way to the importunate widow solely to get rid of her, whereas he would have ordered a man to be thrown out. Well, now, what Mr. Anderson wants is that a woman should find out some comfortable berth vacant and never rest until she has pushed him into it."

"But how does a woman begin?" said Alice, with deepening interest, for there was something fascinating in the picture which Wimberley drew so lightly.

"Oh, she talks to people and finds out. Now, it happens, oddly enough, that I know of a post worth seven hundred a year which is practically in my gift and which any gentleman who was also a man of the world and disposed to stick to his work could fill"—

"Why don't you give it to Mr. Anderson?"

"Well, you see, I don't know him, and I am not a general philanthropist. If a friend of mine whom I wished to oblige were to ask me— But none has. Apropos, I want you to do me a favor."

Alice's heart beat at this abrupt announcement. Was it possible that he could mean to propose after this extraordinary beginning? If so, would she be glad? Would she be—

He made his request in plain, straightforward language, and she gazed at him, at first mystified, then a prey to mixed emotion, anon aware of a rose colored future before her. Her face wreathed in smiles as she gave her consent.

"Well, now, is there anything that you want from me, little girl?"

Whereupon Alice, smiling and blushing, told him what she wanted most.

In the following afternoon Lord Wimberley called on the Lesters and found them at home. Soon after his arrival Alice left the room on some excuse. Then she put on her hat and went out for the afternoon, telling the servant to say "Not at home" to any callers.

When she returned, she found her mother sitting in the drawing room, musing profoundly. As Lady Lester's hour for dressing was past, and her toilet was a long and important function, Alice felt that something had happened. She was a trifle anxious, but she did not dare question her mother.

The latter opened the ball.

"Don't you think, Alice, it was rather rude for you to go away when Lord Wimberley was here?"

"No," replied Alice boldly. "He asked me to. It was arranged last night that I should."

Mother and daughter looked fixedly at one another.

"He is such a young man," observed the former vaguely. "He cannot know his mind."

"He is not such a young man," replied Alice gravely. "He is a good deal older than many men of more age. Besides, he is serious, devoted to politics, much admired as a speaker, as you yourself said, and he certainly knows his own mind. He practically, and very tactfully, offered me a place for George with seven hundred a year, so that we may be able to marry and be out of the way if I would help him, and a man doesn't do that unless he means business."

"He told me that he thought you would marry," murmured the widow, "and spoke very generously about you."

"He is very rich," pursued Alice. "It would be a mere flea bite to him. Wimberley is a lovely place, and there is the coach, and no doubt there would be a house in town and carriages and every luxury and no more worry and trouble, and you know, darling, that when you really take trouble you don't look much more than half—quite young, in fact, especially to people who are a little short-sighted, as he is"—

"And I should be free from your tongue," interposed the widow sharply, by no means grateful for these compliments. "Yes, you are right. Lord Wimberley proposed to me this afternoon. I told him it was sudden, and I would give him an answer tomorrow. I have thought it over, and I shall say 'Yes.' He swears that he loves me and has never loved any one else"—

"And you must love him, too, mother, dear," observed Alice, with catlike softness, "or you wouldn't marry him."

"Of course I love him—devotedly—have from the first. There is no other reason why I should marry him, is there?"

But, reviewing the circumstances of the case, Alice felt that this answer might mean anything.—London World.

German Teachers.

The German man is often a "teacher by the grace of God," and when he brings all his patience, pedagogical training and innate sympathy with children to bear upon his task of teaching he is undoubtedly a success. I have been told by educational authorities in Germany—men, of course; the German women are not authorities—that women have neither the ability nor the necessary knowledge to rank with men in the teaching profession, and one often looks in vain for women teachers in the schools until one penetrates into the needlework classes. This practice of having men teachers in girls' schools has probably largely influenced the girls' answers. German men have conspired to discourage in every way female aspirations beyond the four walls of her own home and to exalt as the ideal of womanhood the meek and docile housewife.—National Review.

Electric Light in a Coal Mine.

A big colliery in Lanarkshire, Scotland, is to be lighted by electricity throughout. The electric light plant, as proposed, is divided into three parts. In the first the dynamo will run 800 lamps in the colliery itself, to be distributed both throughout the pit and above ground. Another is devoted to the lighting of thirty-four workmen's cottages, which are about 700 yards from the colliery, there being three lights in each cottage, or a total of 102 lamps in all. The third consists of a complete electric pumping plant, capable of delivering 100 gallons of water per minute from the adjacent river to the colliery. The dynamos for the lighting of the pit and the workmen's cottages are being so constructed that each dynamo can be used for either purpose. Both machines are designed to give a constant pressure of current at the cottages; that is, no matter what demand for current there may be at any time in other parts of the plant, there will never be a dim light in the workman's cottage.

BIG STRIDES FOR CANADA.

Exports and Imports Increased Last Year $50,856,028—Shippers Warned.

Ottawa, March 14.—The annual report of the Department of Trade and Commerce for the year ending June 30 last was issued yesterday. Mr. W. G. Parmelee, the Deputy Minister, in his report says: "The imports show a total value of $189,622,513, as against $162,764,308 during 1899; and the exports $191,894,723, as against $158,896,905, a total increase of imports and exports of $59,856,028. The percentage of increase is much the same in the imports and exports."

"This thus indicates a general and healthy growth, rather than being due to any special cause," continues Mr. Parmelee, who goes on to say: "It will rest largely with the producers and exporters whether the notable advance made in the past few years be increased, or even maintained. In order to do so no pains must be spared on the part of the producers in keeping up to the standards of excellence our chief productions, and on the part of exporters in prompt attention to correspondence and strict compliance with the requirements of foreign buyers and consumers as to packing and shipping. Continued and frequent complaints reach the department of such lack of promptitude and of careless packing, resulting in too frequent instances in the loss of promising connections and much prospective advantage, which is instantly seized upon by foreign competitors, who more fully appreciate the consequences. The usual statement showing trade figures, unrevised, up to the latest practicable date, viz., to December 31, 1900, is given. The six months' aggregate trade covered by this statement amounts to $211,852,236, as against $208,491,615 in the corresponding period of 1899."

Guarding Her Teeth.

It is easy to misunderstand and easy to be misunderstood, and sometimes, happily, it is easy to give and to accept an explanation.

"I did think I would never come to see you again," said a cousin of the prominent society woman who had come to the country to visit her and was about to start homeward. "It's kind of you to ask me, of course, but I remember that when I was at your house in the city, two years ago, you did not seem glad to see me. You were kind and hospitable, of course, but I remember you did not smile once during the entire two weeks of my stay."

To her astonishment, her city cousin burst into a fit of laughter.

"Maria," she said, "just before you came I had the misfortune to break the porcelain 'crown' from one of my new front teeth, and as my dentist was out of town on his vacation I had to wait for his return. I didn't dare to smile when any one was looking at me, for fear of showing the ghastly metallic 'back' to which the porcelain had been attached. It was a strain, Maria, but I was equal to it, and I did not want to have to explain."

Why She Wept.

Among the Mainotes, descendants of the Spartans, thieving is considered a very honorable employment. An English traveler, being entertained at the house of one of the mountaineers, took some silver articles from a packing case he had with him to eat his dinner with. At the sight of such coatliness an old woman began to cry, the Englishman having asked what affected her so much:

"Alas, my good sir," she replied, "I weep because my son is not here to rob you of those beautiful things!"

No Gentleman.

"Mama," said the girl in the red shirt waist and plaid skirt, "ain't he just a prince?"

"Oh, rats!" replied her lady friend, with dignity. "Any one kin see that he wears a celluloid collar, and them trousers is 33 ones."

Blacksnake in a Bureau.

Recently Mrs. W. H. Stoutimore told her little son Joe to get her some article from a bureau drawer, and when he pulled the drawer out a large black snake lay coiled up in it. The little fellow called his mother, and she killed the snake which was over four feet long. After carrying it outdoors she noticed a large lump or swelling on the animal's body, and, thinking it had perhaps swallowed some article in the drawer, Mrs. Stoutimore decided to investigate, and seizing a hoe she severed the body, and was very much surprised when the operation revealed the remains of her pet canary bird. How the snake got into the house, which is thoroughly screened, is a mystery, and after getting in it is still more puzzling to understand how it got at the bird, the cage being suspended from the painted side of a stairway, almost as smooth as glass. Mrs. Stoutimore had the bird nine years, and both she and her little boy felt very badly over its unfortunate death. —Polo (Mo.) Post.

PERSONAL.

Miss Alice Scott was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital to-day. It is feared that she is suffering from an attack of appendicitis.

A West Superior exchange says: Mr. John Crowe, formerly of Superior, now a physician of Chicago, was recently held up and robbed. Can it be he was taken for the noted Pat?

The Bishop of Toronto has offered Rev. W L Armitage the Rectory of Uxbridge. Mr Armitage does not state whether he will accept or not, and, while the Examiner is desirous of congratulating him on having the refusal of the incumbency, still it would be with deep regret that we would learn of his decision to leave Peterborough and the work in the South End, where his face and voice are familiar and welcome in almost every home. Although acting ostensibly as Curate of St. John's, Mr. Armitage has devoted himself almost entirely to the south and southwest portions of the town, and the great prosperity attending the financial and spiritual condition of affairs in connection with All Saints' church, can be traced directly to his zeal and faithfulness in the Great Cause.

The Examiner has completed arrangements for having a new plant installed by the latter part of the week and will by that time be in a position to fulfil all advertising contracts and orders in job work. A telephone has already been placed in position in our new premises. 411 George St. No. 57 will find us as usual.

NIFFS DEFEAT BIFFS

YOUNG LADIES PLAY AN EXCITING GAME OF HOCKEY.

The Attendance was Quite Large and the Enthusiasm was Great—The Score was 6 to 2.

It is seldom indeed that Charlotte street rink contains such a crowd, as it did last night, excepting, of course, when an out-of-town hockey team is trying conclusions with one of the local teams. But, there has sprung up in Peterborough in hockey circles an attraction which is unique in its variety, and interesting and exciting beyond measure. This is the keen rivalry that is existing at the present time between the two ladies' hockey teams, the Niffs and and the Biffs, and which is determined periodically by fierce engagements between the two aggregations. Last night the second of the series of matches between the two teams was played, resulting in a victory for the Niffs by a score of 6 goals to 2. As a result there is great jubilation in the camp of the Niffs, and an air of despair hovers amongst the members of the Biffs.

As previously stated, the game was watched by a great many, who throughout were keyed up to the top notch of excitement, nor did they at any stage of the proceedings attempt to conceal their emotions.

The crowd was about evenly divided, and they all had their favourites. They were impatient for the puck to be faced, and no way anxious for the "time's up" whistle to be blown.

The teams lined up as follows:

Niffs, (6)—Goal, Miss Allison Hamilton; point, Miss Cora Lightfoot; cover point, Miss Lillian Rush; forwards, Miss Winnie McFarlane, Miss Madge Davidson, (captain) Miss Helen Davidson and Miss Gwen Hall.

Biffs, (2)—Goal, Miss Jean Scott, (captain); point, Miss E Nickle; cover point, Miss Estella Thornton; forwards, Miss Florence Scott, Miss Lain Scott, Miss Pearl Fitzgerald and Miss Florence Hamilton.

As will be noticed, there was a slight change in the teams from the last occasion, owing to sickness having penetrated the ranks of both sides. Miss Alice Scott, one of the swift forwards of the Biffs, was unable to play, but this loss to her team was counterbalanced by the absence from the Niffs of Captain Miss Pearl Lundy, who is also indisposed. However, the two teams went at it with determination. The Niffs attired in immaculate white sweaters, defended the northern end, whilst the Biffs, in their blood and fire attire, of course defended the nets to the south. The game was characterized by all those features that are in evidence in a match of greater moment.

It was not long until the Niffs scored, and their backers cheered ferociously. They were not certain until Umpire King Dillon's face gave way to a pleasant smile, and his right hand raised gently up above his shoulder. Once again the Niffs scored before the Biffs rallied, but it was only a matter of a few minutes until something good was in store for the Biffs. Umpire Rush's knuckles were heard to come violently in contact with the beams above—the puck had struck the netting from the inside; the score was now 2—1. At half time it stood 3—1, and at full time 6—2 in favour of the Niffs. There was plenty of reason to cheer, to laugh, and to sigh, throughout the proceedings. When Miss Gwen Hall, one of the Niffs' swift little forwards came sailing up the ice, dodging and bodying most everyone, then passed to Miss Madge Davidson, who scored, amid wild jubilation, there was evidence of combination play. When one of the fair puckers from the Biffs shot violently on the nets and to the disappointment of the crowd the hand of Umpire Rush (who had mosey up on the game, it is said) did not respond, there were evidences of a riot. A little "tot," who occupied a position to the east of the rink, and who slammed a hockey stick with deafening effect upon the board siding, at intervals throughout the match, started the cry "Put him off," which was taken up by the crowd and re echoed throughout the building. He was not removed, however, but was politely called down by the side which thought they were cheated, and the game went on. Then there was another trying moment, which tried the patience of the spectators and the modesty of the referee, Mr. "Bill" Cavanah. One of the Biffs took a cramp, how severe is not just known, but it necessitated the customary line of treatment. Was not this evidence that the game was hard fought, and never dying throughout? But, when the girls "bodied," they bodied bodily, when they shouldered, they shouldered heavily, and when they fell, they fell most gracefully. For the Niffs the work of Miss Gwen Hall and little Miss Helen Davidson is deserving of special mention, whilst Miss Florence Scott and Miss Pearl Fitzgerald were the shining lights on the Biffs' aggregation.

Another match between the same two teams will arouse great interest.

THEY MUST NOT DRINK.

Great Western Railway Employees are Forbidden to Use Spirituous Liquors, and the Rule may be Adopted by the Grand Trunk.

(Toronto Telegram.)

Railroad employees were somewhat startled to-day at a rumour that was going the rounds, that a new order would be issued regarding how men should conduct themselves on and off duty. Over on the Chicago Great Western a notice was posted up yesterday prohibiting the use of intoxicating liquors in any form or at any time by their employees. This notice prohibits them from entering saloons or using liquors, and the penalty is instant dismissal. This order applies to all employees alike. It is said that the rule will be adopted by the Grand Trunk It is, however, understood that the Grand Trunk have the rule in force, or at least it is understood they will not tolerate the use of liquor among their employees.

MORE CONDOLENCES.

Stratford Beacon:—The sympathies of his confreres in the press and many others besides, will be extended to the Hon. J. R. Stratton, Provincial Secretary, in the loss by fire of his fine printing establishment, that of the Peterborough Examiner. The plant, which included a book bindery and box making factory, was one of the finest in the country, and the loss totalled $35 000, with an insurance of only $16,000. The Daily Examiner is an excellent journal, and we are pleased to see that through the courtesy of its local contemporary, the Review, it is being issued from that office. Mr. Stratton has given an order for a complete new plant, which will be installed in a few days.

SOLD AT $1,300.

Mr J. J. Hutchinson is Peterborough Market Clerk for the Year 1901.

To-day at 11 o'clock the annual sale of the market tolls took place, the purchaser being Mr J J Hutchinson at $1300. There was not much competition in the bidding, only three persons taking part in the same. These were Messrs John Hayes, J J Hutchinson and John Sawers. The bidding opened before a crowded council chamber, Auctioneer Chas Stapleton wielding the hammer. The bidding started at $600, and, as stated, closed at $1,300, just $200 less than that which was paid for the tolls last year.

The following were the bids:

Hayes	$500
Hutchinson	600
Sawers	700
Hayes	800
Hutchinson	900
Hayes	1 000
Sawers	11,00
Hutchinson	1,200
Hayes	1,250
Hutchinson	1,260
Hayes	1.270
Hutchinson	1,280
Hayes	1,290
Hutchinson	1,300

SMALL FIRE

At Mr. P. Grady's Residence on Simcoe Street Last Night.

At about six o'clock yesterday evening fire broke out in one of the bedrooms of Patrick Grady's house opposite the Lock Works on Simcoe street. The fire evidently caught from the stove pipe just where it entered the chimney, and was making rapid progress when noticed by Mr Grady's family. The blaze was almost extinguished before the brigade arrived, and only the chemical engines were put to work. Considerable damage was done to the bedroom furniture.

SHOT A WILD CAT.

Mr Thomas LaPlante had a Rather Exciting Experience Yesterday.

When Mr. Thomas LaPlante was driving in from Dummer last night, he had a rather thrilling experience, and as a result, a huge wild cat is on exhibition to-day, at Dr. Robinson's livery, Charlotte Street. It was on the 8th line, Dummer, that Mr. LaPlante says he came across his strange and unexpected enemy. It was not noticed by him until it sprang from a tree, alighting between the horse and the cutter. It became somewhat stunned, and in an instant Mr. LaPlante drew his revolver and emptied the contents of same into the wild cat. It died almost instantly. Mr. Wild Cat is a large one, measuring four feet in length, two feet in height, and weighing, 65 lbs. Had Mr. LaPlante not had his revolver with him, he might have had lively time of it—at least that is what he says.

APSLEY-NORWOOD RAILWAY.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Reading in the Daily Examiner the report of the Board of Trade last night, I was a little surprised at some of the discourse and the resolution to send Messrs. Burnham and Harrison to the Legislature in favour of a railroad to Apsley from Norwood The idea that a railroad from Norwood to Apsley is going to benefit Peterborough is a farce. If we want to get to Apsley by railroad, would it not be better to go direct from Peterborough or from Lakefield, so that we could still retain the tourists which have been in the habit of coming to the Northern Lakes via Peterborough, making the county town, as it should be, the junction rather than Norwood. Peterborough should have done what Norwood is now doing years ago, and if we allow Lindsay and Norwood to isolate us by tapping our north country, and eventually tapping the C. P. R. to the north instead of Peterborough, we will find ourselves after a while very much in the soup. The Norwood people are very clever especially when they are likely to get the Town of Peterborough to help them to build a railroad from Norwood to Apsley, instead of from Peterborough to Apsley.

JOHN BELL,
March 13th, 1901. Peterborough.

"CANADA UNDER BRITISH RULE."

This is the title of a most interesting book just issued by the Copp. Clark Company, limited, Toronto. The writer is that now celebrated historiographer, Sir John Bourinot, whose contributions on constitutional and kindred subjects have so enriched this class of Canadian literature. This work, after devoting a chapter to a concise sketch of the French regime in Canada, presents a series of chapters dealing with the chief events that have exercised the largest influence upon the political development of the Dominion of Canada and the several provinces to the extent of over 300 closely printed pages. While devoting considerable attention to the political conditions evolved, the graceful writer becomes neither didatic or dry, and a style which concedes a good deal to the inherent romance of Canadian history prevents even the consideration of political influences and conditions from becoming prosy or dull. The book is brought up to date and an interesting comparison is parallel columns of the main provisions of the constitutions of Canada and the newly-created Australian Commonwealth, together with brief biographical notes, constitutes an instructive appendix to the main work. There are eight maps, chiefly illustrating changes in boundaries from time to time; and an unusually complete index greatly facilitates the use of the book for reference. Every Canadian who wishes to be intelligently seized of the most important points in the development of our history should become possessed of this book.

NEWS NUGGETS

—There is a sum of money at the police station requiring an owner.

—The Board of Education is making a tour of the schools.

—Riverdale Sunday School will conduct the lesson in the Y.M.C.A. to night. Rev. Mr. Symonds will take the normal lesson.

AN ORDINATION AT BRIGHTON.

REV. DAVID CATCHPOLE, PASTOR OF BRIGHTON AND CRAMAHE.

Peterborough Representatives Present—Pastors and Deacons Hold Their Quarterly Conference.

Thursday was a red-letter day among the Baptists of Brighton and vicinity, the occasion being the ordination of Mr. David Catchpole, who for the past several months has been acting as pastor of the churches at Brighton and Cramahe. The churches of the Peterborough association, twenty-two in number, had been invited to send representatives, and, with few exceptions, every field was represented. The purpose of an ordination council among the Baptists, is to examine the candidate as to his conversion and call to the ministry, and also regarding his views on the great Christian doctrines, and if on these points he is found to be worthy of the fellowship of the denomination, he is set apart to the work of the gospel ministry. This action of the ordaining council gives the one so set apart, his standing as a minister in the denomination. The examination in this case was a very searching one, lasting almost three hours. The council then retired and after due deliberation decided to proceed with the ordination of the candidate and arranged the program for the evening service.

The church building was well filled in the evening and after a service of song and praise conducted by pastor A. W. Torrie, of Norwood, assisted by Rev. J. D Marshall, of Cobourg, the moderator of the Ordaining Council, Rev. P. K. Dayfoot, M.A., of Port Hope, took the chair. After devotional exercises Rev. C. E. Pinco, of Stirling, preached the ordination sermon, from John I, 4, and was listened to with rapt attention. At the conclusion of Mr. Pinco's address all the ministers gathered around the candidate, who was kneeling, and laid their hands upon his head, while Rev. Thos. Watson, of Colborne, offered the ordination prayer. This was a very impressive scene, and will not be soon forgotten by those present. Rev. O. C. Elliott, of Peterboro, then in a few well chosen words gave the charge to the candidate, reminding him of the necessity of giving attention to the mental, social and spiritual phases of his own life as a pastor. Rev. Wm. Peer, of Norwood, in a brief and witty speech welcomed the new minister on behalf of the Peterborough Association. The charge to the church was given by Rev. W. A. Gunton, of Gilmour Memorial Church, who exhorted the churches to love and honor their minister and give him their hearty support in the work of the Lord, to which he was called. At the conclusion of Mr. Gunton's practical address Rev Mr. Wilson, pastor of the Methodist church of the town, who had been present at the afternoon and evening services, gave a brief address, in which he wished the newly ordained minister every blessing in his work. The meeting was brought to a close by the singing of the doxology and the pronouncing of the benediction by the Rev. Mr. Catchpole.

PASTORS AND DEACONS MEET.

The pastors and deacons of the Peterborough Association of Baptist Churches, held their quarterly conference at Brighton, on Friday, March 8th, the day following the ordination of Rev. Mr Catchpole.

Rev. W. A. Gunton occupied the chair, and after a brief devotional meeting, called on Rev. J D. Marshall, B.A., of Cobourg, who gave an excellent address on "Books and their Helpfulness to the Ministers' Life," pointing out how a pastor could enrich his mental and spiritual life by the careful reading of the best books. A general discussion followed Mr. Marshall's very helpful address, in which very many helpful suggestions were made. "Improved Methods of Church Financing" was the subject of an address by Rev. O. C. Elliott, of Peterborough, in which the need of teaching that giving was an act of worship, and scriptural plan of giving weekly and regularly were emphasized. This was also followed by a general discussion, the remainder of the session was devoted to the consideration of the "Preparation and Delivering of Sermons" in which a number of five minute addresses were given by several of the pastors present. Owing to many of the pastors having to leave for home in the afternoon, the evening service was dispensed with, and the conference adjourned to meet at Lakefield, in connection with the associational meeting.

SPORTING PASTIMES.

CURLIANA.

When in the rink the other night Geordie Fitzgerald fell to recounting some of his old-time exploits on the curling ice, and delivered a spiel to the effect that the curlers of the present day were not equal in prowess to those of other years. The conversation wound up in a match being arranged between "Geordie" and Skip Knapman, the former agreeing to pick up a rink composed of men who had not curled this season. The result showed that the hands and eyes of the old curlers had not lost their cunning. The rinks were composed as follows:—

J D Baptie,	T Brightman,
Duncan Cameron,	A Blade
J B Pentland	T Rutherford,
G Fitzgerald, skip 20	J S Knapman, sk. 10

HOCKEY.

The Pig Iron Tigers will send the following team to Lakefield Tuesday night to play the team of that village: R K Brown, E Isaacs, W Ballen, T Thornton, B Stewart, T H Burnham, B Hutchinson. The following backers will accompany the boys: Digby Hobbins, Dagger McAuliffe, W Higgins, B Matchett, M Comstock.

The West End Juniors wish to play the combined teams of the Jewellers and the Druggists, with Watt and Wasson barred.

An important meeting of the Executive of the Peterborough Hockey Club will be held in the rink parlours to-night at 8 o'clock when the business of the season will be wound up.

Belleville girls are playing hockey and it has been suggested that the Biffs and Niffs amalgamate and challenge the Belleville's for a game.

The scratch matches, especially among the younger boys, are developing a lot of good material.

Many are anxious to see the Junior Colts play. They have some star stick handlers, one of the best being Robbie Hall.

Winnipeg Victorias developed a new hockey star in their game with the Montreal Shamrocks. He was put on to fill Bain's place, and here is how he is described in the Montreal Star's report of the game:—"It was Cadham's first great game, and his marvellous play from start to finish, inspired by the fierce zeal of youth and determination to win his spurs or die, has never been equalled in Winnipeg, not even by the great achievements of Bain or the equally magnificent Tribey. He was by all odds the most sensational and the greatest player on the ice, and marks the opening of a new era in hockey, an era in which youth speed, brain, nerve, and that mysterious divine inspiration characteristic of young souls will win over everything else. He is eighteen, and weighs 120 pounds, yet the cold fact remains that he turned the old players, by whom he was surrounded, dizzy, scored two goals unaided, and carried and passed the puck to the men who scored the other two, a record it is safe to say never equalled in such swift company. The biggest men on the ice could not body him, for they couldn't touch him.

Daniel J. Tolland, 38 years old, a cigarmaker, committed suicide at Meadville, Pa., on Thursday by shooting. His home was originally in Toronto, where his father, James Tolland, now lives.

The writer of the financial article in The London Times Thursday morning says he is able to confirm the report that the Government has authorized the Chamber of Mines at Johannesburg to start 350 stamps.

The London Times on Thursday said it believed that in addition to a sugar tax and the re-imposition of the registration duty of a shilling on corn, the income tax will be increased by two-pence or four-pence on the pound.

"We understand," says The London Daily Chronicle, "that immense quantities of foodstuffs are reaching Pretoria by way of Delagoa Bay, which are destined to feed the Boers when the final surrender shall be made."

Owing to the increasing gravity of of the outbreak of the bubonic plague in Cape Colony, the authorities propose confining the soldiers to camps and barracks. The number of European cases is increasing, four having been officially reported on Thursday.

The London Times asserts that the Government's proposals for the civil list show a total of £470,000, being £100,000 for His Majesty's Privy purse, and the rest for the expenses of the Royal household. The Queen Consort's allowance is £50,000.

Lord Cranborne, Under-Secretary of the Foreign Office, replying to questions on Thursday in the House of Commons concerning Great Britain's negotiations with the United States relative to Russia and Manchuria, said the Government was in constant communication with the powers concerned on every phase of the Chinese question, but that it would be contrary to public interest to enter into particulars at the present moment.

Catarrh.

Called an American disease, is cured by an American medicine, originated and prepared in the most catarrhal of American countries.

That medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. It cures radically and permanently, in that it removes the cause, cleansing the blood of scrofulous and all other impurities. It overcomes all the effects of catarrh, too, and builds up the whole system.

OUR ADVERTISERS.

During the present disturbed relations with our advertisers, on account of the disastrous fire in the Examiner buildings, we are compelled to ask the indulgence of our patrons for a few days until we can pull ourselves together again. Hard and earnest work is being done to instal an entirely new printing plant in our present temporary premises at No. 411 George Street, a few doors south of the burned building, and by the end of the week, we hope to resume our contracts with our advertisers. In the meantime, in order to keep our advertisers as much in touch with our readers as possible, we will be able to insert short local notices of their business announcements.

LeBrun & Co's Early Spring Fashions.

We are pleased to announce to the gentlemen that we are ready bright and early for Spring business. Have you seen our swell coloured lithograph posters? They are the attractions of the street, being the largest illustrated fashion plates, showing the nobbiest Spring styles for gentlemen's wear in suits, overcoats, hats, etc. Our immense stock of cloths will afford an unequalled selection of choicest Spring suitings, overcoatings, trouserings and vestings. The patterns are exceptionally stylish, correct in every particular, and ought to meet with the ready approval of all good dressers. Our new Spring styles in gentlemen's hats are correct duplicates of best English and American standard makes. We are showing the finest as well as medium qualities in black and coloured derbys and fedoras, and invite your early critical inspection.

H LEBRUN & CO.

The Alarm Clock Wen.

The man who tried to sleep after one of our "Early Risers" started in to do its work didn't have a ghost of a show. On the fourth round, he had to tumble out, slightly profane, but grateful. Makes no difference how heavy a sleeper you are, or how late you went to bed, our alarm clocks never disappoint.

CLARKE & GIBSON.

Spring Shoes.

The fastidious man or woman, the ladies and gentlemen who court exclusiveness in the style of their shoes, will be interested in looking at our early spring shapes. We show many different kinds, and have the sizes asked for. For evening wear, for Sunday wear or for everyday wear, our shoes make you feel well dressed and up-to-date in appearance.

R. McWHINNIE.

The Peterborough Bookstore.

Our store will necessarily have to be closed for a day or two longer before the insurance men will be able to adjust the losses and we are in a position to put the stock in shape for doing business. The daily papers will be delivered to customers as usual, and may also be obtained at the Examiner's temporary premises, 411 George Street, where business orders may also be placed in the meantime.

A. H. STRATTON & CO.

Quite a Fad.

It's a great fad some people have of buying watches from perambulating peddlers. They apparently like to be taken in, or to indulge in risky speculations If you come to Schneider's and buy a watch you don't have to take any risks. If the watch we sell you don't suit you, we're here to give you your money back for the asking.

F. SCHNEIDER.

Retiring from Business.

There have been enough bona fide bargains handed out to the ladies of Peterborough, during the first seven days of our closing-out sale, to go around the town like wild-fire. There's not a home in town but what has been talking about our sale. Let it be distinctly understood that the whole stock must be cleared out without delay, and that means almost at your own prices. We can't afford to dilly-dally over sales. With the same object in view, we trust all those indebted to us will be kind enough to pay their accounts promptly.

MISS K. RUDKINS.

Routley's Magic Prices.

The great sale of the Toronto Bazaar stock, bought at a fraction on the dollar, is a bonanza to Peterborough citizens. The goods are moving with such rapidity that special lines advertised one day are very often completely sold out the next. There are many lines, however, such as Wall Papers, Window Blinds, China, Crockery, etc., that can stand a month's heavy selling before being cleared. Another thing is certain—that no matter what you buy here you can count on securing wonderful bargains—bargains such as can be obtained nowhere else in Peterborough or any other town in Ontario.

C. B. ROUTLEY.

Gentlemen's New Spring Hats.

We are showing all the new and stylish shapes in gentlemen's black and coloured hats for early spring wear. The styles are the correct English and American makes in Derby and Fedora hats, and to be right in line with this year's fashions you should let us fit you. Our hats are all fine makes, who have guaranteed records.

W. LECH & SON.

To Our Friends and Patrons:

We invite your attention to our stock of choice groceries and provisions, fruit, fish and vegetables, and everything to be found in a well equipped store at prices to suit everyone. This is Lent and we have a fine assortment of fresh, salt, smoked and canned fish, consisting of Haddock, Pike, Cod, Haddie, Digby and Labrador Herrings, &c. In Fruits we have fine Oranges and Lemons, Apples in different kinds, Figs, Prunes, Dates, &c. Our stock of Provisions, Cheese, Butter, Eggs, Hams and Bacon, Head Cheese, Poultry, Vegetables &c, are fresh and good. Potatoes, Parsnips, Beets and Carrots, Cabbages, Onions and Garden Seeds. The stock of Groceries is the most complete and best that we have ever had, consisting of Teas and Coffees of the choicest kinds, Sugars, Tapioca, Rice, Spices, Essences, &c., Baking Powders, Canned Goods, Tomatoes, Corn and Peas, Jams and Jellies, Maple Syrup, &c. In confectionery we can give you a grand treat, Biscuits, mixed, stick and fancy Candies, at the place where you get the good things to eat

SITUATION SERIOUS.

British and Russian Troops Are Confronting Each Other.

BRITISH WITH FIXED BAYONETS

The Russians Are Entrenching in the Coveted Place of Ground the Two Nations' Representatives Are Disputing About—The News Was Confirmed in the House of Commons.

Tien Tsin, March 15.—The British and the Russians are disputing over the limits of railway property in the Russian concession, and the guards of the two nations are in close proximity to each other. The British have been strongly reinforced, and trouble is imminent unless the Russians retire.

Russia Claimed the Land.

London, March 16.—A question in the House of Commons yesterday in regard to the despatch from Tien Tsin, announcing friction between the Russians and British there, elicited a confirmation from Lord George Hamilton, the Secretary of State for India, who said Russia had claimed the land in dispute by virtue of a concession alleged to have been granted by China since the disturbance commenced. The authorities on the spot were dealing with the matter. The Government had not sent special instructions, as throughout the Chinese operations, the British officers had shown a spirit of excessive conciliation.

Russians Are Entrenching

A despatch received here from Tien Tsin by Reuter's Telegram company, dated from that city yesterday, at 3.20 p. m., says:

"The Russians are now entrenching in the disputed territory. A company of the Hong Kong Regiment, with fixed bayonets, is in front, while two companies of the Madras Pioneers, under the command of Major Johnson, are held in reserve.

"Both the Russians and the British are awaiting instructions from their Governments."

FORTY PEOPLE IN PERIL.

Steamer Indiana of Goodrich Line Helpless Off Racine, Wis.

Racine, Wis., March 16.—Forty persons, 15 of whom are passengers, are in great danger aboard the Goodrich Line steamer Indiana, which lost its rudder off North Point, outside this port, early yesterday. The steamer was within 100 feet of the shore, when tugs succeeded in getting a line aboard and towed it out. No further trouble was apprehended. The anchor was run out, and, for a time, the vessel rode the heavy sea. Soon, however, the anchor began to drag, and the steamer gradually drifted southward, under a strong gale from the northeast, and it is feared that before nightfall the rocky shore will be reached.

Assistance at Hand.

Chicago, March 16.—Officials of the Goodrich Line in this city say that the steamer Atlanta is ready to assist the Indiana, in case that vessel cannot manage to keep off the rocks south of Racine. The officials express entire confidence in the safety of the vessel.

THE LAST STEP TAKEN.

Manitoba Railway Bargain Made Law by Assent of Lieut.-Governor.

Winnipeg, March 16.—The Lieutenant-Governor came down to the Legislature yesterday afternoon and gave his assent to the bill empowering the Government to lease the N. P. R., also to the Supply bill.

Disallowance Asked For.

Lastevening there was an immense mass meeting of citizens called to discuss the Act, and by a vote of 6 to 1, according to Conservative chairman Mayor Arbuthnot, it passed a strong resolution asking the Dominion Government to disallow the bill.

THE ROYAL JOURNEY BEGUN.

Duke and Duchess of Cornwall Left London Friday.

London, March 16.—The Duke and the Duchess of Cornwall and York started yesterday afternoon on the first stage of their tour of the four quarters of the globe. King Edward, Queen Alexandra and other members of the Royal family, accompanied the travelers to Portsmouth, whence the steamer Ophir, with the Duke and Duchess on board, will sail to-day. Small gatherings along the route cheered the Royal personages.

The Guardian of Canadians.

Ottawa, March 16.—Lieut.-Col. Biggar arrived here last evening. He is to be appointed army service officer here. Col Biggar took charge of all matters relating to the Canadians once they fell from their regiments. He looked after them in the hospitals, and as soon as they were were fit for duty got them back; and if they were not fit for duty he arranged to have them sent to England and thence home.

THE ONTARIO HOUSE.

Hon. J. M. Gibson Brings Down the Courts Bill and Explains Its Provisions at Length.

Toronto, March 16.—In the Legislative Assembly yesterday, Hon. J. R. Stratton brought down the correspondence respecting the establishment of a Remount Station in Canada.

Hon. J. M. Gibson introduced a bill respecting legal procedure and County Courts jurisdiction. He explained that County Courts jurisdiction and procedure formed the chief subject of the bill. The jurisdiction of County Courts was enlarged in ordinary damage cases to $400 and in cases of contract or covenant where the damages fixed by act of the parties, to $800. The courts were also given jurisdiction in cases of libel, slander, criminal conversation and seduction. The bill also gave the County Courts jurisdiction in cases of quashing by-laws and conviction. An effort had also been made to simplify procedure. The writ of summons is abolished and actions are to be commenced by the filing of a statement of claim. The block system of costs would be made applicable to County Court actions. The abuses connected with examinations for discovery would be remedied. Jurors summoned to attend court were to be notified in case it was found that their services were not required. As to the Division Court, the judges of the legal profession concurred in the opinion that their jurisdiction was high enough.

Mr. Whitney thought that the bill could not be regarded as a relief in the way of law reform and feared that it might tend to encourage litigation. It gave jurisdiction over a class of questions which were too momentous to be dealt with by County Courts.

Hon. J. R. Stratton, in answer to Mr. Wardell, said that George Wheeler was paying off his indebtedness to the Government. The arrangement was that he was to pay $75 per year. His indebtedness was $600. Mr. W. T. R. Preston had paid the money he owed to the province.

There are no fewer than 27 acts to amend the Municipal Act on the order paper, and Hon. J. M. Gibson suggested that as many of them as possible should be advanced to a second reading, so that the Municipal Committee might get to work on them. The first put through was one by Mr. Barr to rectify a clerical error. Mr. Little explained that his bill was to enable towns which had abolished the ward system to return to it. It was sent to Committee. Mr. Richardson's bill with the object of enabling the inhabitants of tracts of farming land to separate from towns and cities excited some controversy, but was allowed to go through. Mr. Taylor's bill permitted the issue of railway bonus debentures on the sinking fund plan and was approved by the Attorney-General. Mr Duff's bill proposed to number the County Councillors, first, second, etc. It was opposed by Hon. Mr. Davis, but allowed to go to Committee. Other municipal amendment bills which received a second reading were those introduced by Messrs. Dickenson, Duff, Marter, Brown, Smith and Jameson. The machine by this time was running at high pressure and several assessment bills, with a large number of private bills, were rushed through a second reading before adjournment.

GENERALS WILL MEET

Definite Statement at Last Concerning Boer Peace Meeting.

BOTHA, DELAREY AND DEWET.

This Is According to a Despatch to The Times From Kraalspruit, for Lord Kitchener Has No News of Botha—French and Methuen Capture Prisoners and War Supplies.

London, March 16.—According to a despatch to The Times, dated March 15, from Kaalspruit, it is reported there that Generals Botha, Delarey and Dewet will meet March 18 to discuss the situation.

Kritzinger Eludes British.

Adelaide, Cape Colony, March 15.—Kritzinger's commando is working northward and has eluded three British columns. It passed here on both sides of the town without attacking.

Kritzinger's men have carried off all the horses in the Albany district, for which, as they are registered, Great Britain will have to pay £10,000, ($50,000).

The raiders were civil to the inhabitants, though they commandeered horses and food. They did not wantonly destroy property, and in many cases offered cash for food.

NEWS FROM KITCHENER.

French and Methuen Continue to Capture Prisoners and Supplies.

London, March 16.—A despatch from Lord Kitchener, dated at Pretoria Thursday evening, reports as follows:

"Dewet reached Senekal on his northward progress.

"French, in addition to his recent successes, reports 46 Boers killed or wounded, 146 taken prisoners and surrendered, with 200 rifles, 3,700 rounds of ammunition, 2,400 horses, 2,500 cattle, and 400 wagons and carts, besides mules and trek oxen.

"Methuen has arrived at Warrenton from Klerksdorp, bringing in prisoners and cattle.

"The weather is wet, delaying the movements of the columns."

Wires Cut Again.

Cape Town, March 15.—The Boers, having cut the wires, telegraphic communication between the eastern provinces and Natal is interrupted.

Dewet at Senekal.

London, March 16.—A despatch from Pretoria, after noting General Dewet's arrival at Senekal, Orange River Colony, says that though he has only a small following, Dewet is nearing a district where he is likely to receive considerable reinforcements, and probably intends to pick up moving bands of Republicans, who are ever present in the Dornberg and Korannaberg districts.

Gen. French, the despatch adds, has been detained by swollen drifts in the Pietretief district, but is now able to move again.

A despatch from Cape Town reports that Scheeper's and Milan's commandoes have turned southward, and are now within 40 miles of Willowmore, and that the British are following them.

Young Dewet in the Reichstag.

Berlin, March 16.—Young Christian Dewet, the nephew of the Boer general of that name, and other Boer officers, visited the Reichstag yesterday, and had interviews with prominent members of that body.

French Meddlers at The Hague.

The Hague, March 16.—M. Henri Rochefort and other Parisian pro-Boers are here, conferring with the supporters of the South African Republics. They will visit Mr. Kruger at Utrecht.

West Bound C.P.R. Train Derailed.

Montreal, March 16.—Train No. 5, westbound for Toronto, on the Canadian Pacific Railway, which left Montreal at 9 o'clock Thursday night, was derailed at St. Polycarpe Junction about 11 o'clock. The train ran into an open switch, and, as a result, the engine, tender, baggage, second-class and first-class cars left the track. The only person injured was George Lumsden, who was taken out of the wreck in a serious condition. He was brought into the General Hospital at 10 o'clock yesterday. He is badly crushed and may die. He belongs to Smith's Falls.

Essex Lodges a Kick.

Ottawa, March 16.—Two deputations were here yesterday on the question of the export of natural gas. The one from the County of Essex asks that, in view of the fact that the supply of natural gas is not greater than our requirements demand, its export should be prohibited. The other deputation claim that they hold a charter that permits of exportation, and that any interference would be a gross breach of faith.

Mr. Pettypiece Loses His Daughter

Forest, March 16.—Reinette, aged 12 years, youngest daughter of H. J. Pettypiece, M. P. P., for East Lambton, died here yesterday morning. Owing to her illness, Mr. Pettypiece has been prevented from regular attendance at the present session of Parliament.

One Killed and Four Injured.

Washington, March 16. — Electric light wires started a fire at 4 a. m. yesterday in the Merchants' Hotel here, which spread rapidly, causing a panic among the guests, several of whom jumped from the windows. One person was killed and four severely injured.

THIRTY MORE OFFICERS.

Supplemental Appointments to the Constabulary—The Force Will Sail for South Africa About March 20.

Ottawa, March 16.—His Excellency completed the list of supplemental appointments to the South African Constabulary yesterday, and the following are the 30 officers who will be attached to the force:

Captains (12)—Capt. H. E. Burstall, R. C. A.; Major C. C. Bennett, 6th Rifles; Capt. F. W. L. Moore, 4th Regiment, C. A.; Capt. W. T. Lawless, G. G. F. G.; Capt. T. G. Critchley, 3rd Battalion, R. O. R.; Capt. A. H. Powell, P. L. D. G.; Inspector Scarth, N. W. M. P.; Sergt.-Major Reading, R. C. D.; Capt. Pousette, 26th Regiment; Lieut. Beer, Rocky Mountain Rangers; Sergt. A. W. R. Wilby, Strathcona's Horse; W. L. McGiverin, late R. C. R.

Lieutenants (18)—Lieut. T. C. Oland, 63rd Regiment; Lieut. A. B. Irvine, 90th Regiment; C. T. Ermatinger, C. M. R.; D. A. O'Meara, 8th Regiment; J. French, N. W. M. P.; W. D. McCarthy, 2nd R. C. R.; Vet. Capt. Morgan, 5th Field Battery; Capt. Foulkes, 5th Regiment, C. A.; H. A. C. Machia, late R. C. R.; G. Hampson, 5th Royal Scots; R. P. Eaton, Truro, N. S.; Cadet Polgar, R. M. C.; R. R. Thompson, late R. C. D.; F. N. Burritt, late R. C. D.; Cadet Willetts, R. M. C.; F. T. St. George; J. R. J. Atwater; late R. C. D.; Lieut. G. R. Lightbound, 3rd Regiment.

It will be noticed that there are no Majors in the foregoing list, but it is understood that Sir Alfred Milner and General Baden-Powell have recommended Major Jarvis, Strathcona's Horse; Capt. Boyd of the Royal Canadian Regiment, and Capt. Fall, who has been in charge of the enrolment of recruits for South Africa. Capt. Boyd is a lawyer, and his legal attainments will be utilized in the administration of the Pietersburg district, where the Canadians will be stationed. The date of the departure of the police depends upon when the fitting of the Montford will be completed, but it will be about the 20th inst. Three special trains will probably be required to take 900 odd men to Halifax.

DOMINION HOUSE.

Sir Richard Cartwright and Others Resume Budget Debate.

Ottawa, March 16.—The debate on the budget occupied the entire attention of the House, with the exception of a few minutes devoted to the routine business of advancing several bills a stage. Sir Richard Cartwright, who resumed the debate, spoke with considerable vigor. The debate was continued by Mr. Bell (Pictou), Mr. Hyman and Mr. Smith (Wentworth). Mr. Borden moved the adjournment of the debate, and give notice of an amendment which he will move on Monday.

Bills Introduced.

Mr. Hyman—Respecting the McClary Manufacturing Company.

Mr. Logan—To incorporate the St. Lawrence Power Company.

Mr. Monet—Respecting the E. B. Eddy Company.

Mr. Douglas—To incorporate the Hudson Bay & Pacific Railway Company.

Mr. T. O. Davis—To incorporate the Vancouver, New Westminster & Northern Yukon Railway Company.

Northwest Elections.

Mr. Roche (Marquette) introduced a bill to amend the Dominion Elections Act so as to remove abuses in the conduct of elections in the Northwest. The bill seeks to prevent the practice of returning officers furnishing friendly candidates with certificates for scrutineers promptly, sometimes in blank, while refusing them to opponents until the last moment.

Mr. Richardson suggested that a clause be added to the bill to oblige the returning officer to have an office where he might be found. He observed that in his riding he had been unable to find the returning officer for four days.

The bill was read a first time.

The House adjourned at 10.30.

The Conservative Policy.

Mr. R. L. Borden gave notice that on Monday he would move the following amendment to the motion to go into supply:

That in the opinion of this House the welfare of the country requires a pronounced policy of adequate protection and encouragement at all times to the labor, agricultural, manufacturing, mining and other industrial interests of Canada.

That in the opinion of this House the adoption of a policy of mutual trade preference within the Empire would prove of great benefit to the Mother Country and to the Colonies and would greatly promote the prosperity, unity and progress of the Empire as a whole;

And that the present time, when the Commonwealth of Australia is laying the foundation of its fiscal system, is particularly opportune for taking prompt and energetic steps towards the furtherance of this object.

This House is further of opinion that equivalent or adequate duties should be imposed by Canada upon the products and manufacture of countries not within the Empire in all cases where such countries fail to admit Canadian products and manufactures upon fair terms, and that the Government should take for this purpose all such available measures as may be found necessary.

Soo Train of the Track.

Renfrew, Ont., March 16.—It is reported that the "Soo" train going west ran off the track near Haley's Station early yesterday morning. Several are said to be slightly injured, but none seriously. It is not known what caused the accident.

Col. Vidal, A. A. G.

Ottawa, March 16.—Lieut.-Col. Vidal succeeds Lieut.-Col. Cartwright as Assistant Adjutant-General. The latter is made inspector of musketry.

FIGHT IN THE SENATE.

One Man Called Another a Liar and a Blow Was Dealt.

Olympia, Wash., March 16.—Representative Easterday and Senator Ruth came to blows on the floor of the Senate. The troubles arose over Ruth's vote in favor of passing a bill to repeal the present libel laws of the state.

Representative Easterday was on the Senate floor, and, as soon as he saw that his bill was be[illegible], he walked over to Ruth and ca[illegible] him a liar, and accused him of promising to support the bill. Ruth retorted sharply, and Easterday struck him.

The wildest excitement prevailed, and for a moment it looked as though the session of the Senate would wind up in a disgraceful scene. Senator Baker relieved the situation by moving to adjourn until evening. The motion was carried.

The defeat of the libel repeal law is a victory for the newspapers of the state.

Mr. Aronson Shot Himself.

Montreal, March 16.—L. Aronson, the well-known pawn broker, of 601 Craig street, shot and killed himself about 1 o'clock. Two clerks were in the store with him at the time. Mr. J. Hyams, nephew of deceased, was engaged over his books, when he heard the faint report of a revolver that came from the toilet room. On opening the door he found Aronson lying on the floor with a bullet hole in his forehead. The unfortunate man died in a few minutes. For a considerable time Mr. Aronson had shown evident signs of insanity.

Crushed by Rush of Coal.

Shamokin, Pa., March 16.—William Blyler and George Ramsey, both married, were imprisoned by a rush of coal in a gangway at Hickory Swamp Colliery at Shamokin, Pa., on Thursday night. A rescuing party penetrated the workings Friday morning and found Ramsey dead from suffocation. Blyler was alive, but in a dying condition from a fractured skull.

Time Extended.

Washington, March 16.—Protocols were signed at the State Department yesterday by Lord Pauncefote and Secretary Hay, extending the time of ratification of four of the British West Indian reciprocity treaties, namely, Jamaica, Bermuda, Guiana and Caicois Islands. The extension is one year from to-day.

Beet Sugar Bonus Carried.

Wallaceburg, March 16.—A by-law to grant a bonus of $30,000 to the beet sugar factory was voted on here yesterday, and carried almost unanimously, only seven ratepayers voting against it.

Army Estimates Put Through.

London, March 16.—Under a threat from Mr. Balfour of a Saturday sitting, the House sat until 1.30 this morning and adopted the chief items of the army estimates, these amounts being urgently needed by the Government before the close of the financial year.

Mr. Tarte at Guelph.

Guelph, March 16.—The annual meeting of the South Wellington Liberal Association was held in the City Hall yesterday afternoon. The meeting was addressed by Hon. J. Israel Tarte, Hon. D. C. Fraser, H. Guthrie, M. P., and Col. Mutrie, M. P.

SIR EDWIN ARNOLD BLIND.

But He Thanks Heaven For His Unimpaired Mental Powers.

New York, March 16.—The Herald says that a letter just received in New York from Sir Edwin Arnold shows that he has been obliged to relinquish much of his active literary work, owing to blindness.

In his letter he says: "My condition would be a sad one without patience and resignation. I never despair and go on with my work thanking Heaven for my unimpaired mental powers."

Complete census returns give the population of India as 294,000,000, an increase in the last decade of 7,000,000.

WOLSELEY WORSTED.

Ex-Commander-in-Chief's Reply Was a Model of Courtesy.

BUT DID NOT STRENGTHEN CASE

His Motion for Papers With Which to Prove His Assertions Rejected by the House of Lords—Lord Lansdowne's Reply—Lord Salisbury and Lord Rosebery Both Speak.

London, March 16.—The House of Lords was unusually crowded yesterday in anticipation of the reply of Lord Wolseley, the former Commander-in-Chief, to the criticism of the former War Secretary, Lord Lansdowne, now Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

Lord Wolseley, in his opening remarks, said he regretted being compelled to discuss a personal matter. But he could not pass unchallenged the severe comments of Lord Lansdowne on the manner in which he had performed the duties of Commander-in-Chief.

Lord Lansdowne's personalities evidently had been premeditated. His indictments were grave, and it almost seemed as if the personal attack had been made in order to divert attention from the question at issue, and throw upon the Commander-in-Chief blame for the mistakes made by the Government. Until the recent debate he had never had reason to suppose that he did not possess the full confidence of Lord Lansdowne and the Cabinet. Early in 1900 circumstances had occurred which left him no alternative but to resign, which he had done. If he had not possessed the Cabinet's confidence, that had been an opportunity which might legitimately have been used to appoint another Commander-in-Chief.

Lord Wolseley then proceeded to refute the specific charges launched by Lord Lansdowne. He said he had made every effort to improve the auxiliary forces. In February, 1896, he recommended that additional troops be sent to South Africa, and recommended strengthening the Natal garrison and the defensive occupation, not of the Town of Ladysmith, but of the Biggarsberg range, which was 25 miles in advance of Ladysmith. He had never considered Ladysmith and its surrounding hills to be tenable.

Lord Wolseley admitted that in common with all the other authorities he had underestimated the fighting power of the individual Boer.

Three weeks before Mr. Kruger's declaration of war he had urged Lord Lansdowne to send out an army corps, a cavalry division, and five battalions for the line of communication, in addition to the 10,000 troops already in South Africa. Such a comparatively small number of troops, employed early, had often achieved results which five times their number could not produce later. The mobilization of this force at that time would have produced a considerable effect in South Africa. If the country had not been prepared at the outbreak of war, it had not been because he had not urged the gradual and unostentatious reinforcement of the forces.

Lord Wolseley concluded with saying: "I have said as little as possible, consistently with any justice to myself. The noble Marquis made strong personal statements which were not supported. I have made my reply, which is also unsupported. I cannot, however, leave the matter thus. I feel I am amply justified in moving that all the papers be laid on the table. I am prepared to prove by official documents all I have said."

Lord Lansdowne, in replying, said he thought Lord Wolseley had hardly comprehended the purpose of his former speech, when he said it had not been a personal attack on himself (Lord Lansdowne). After thus breaking Lord Lansdowne's windows, Lord Wolseley could hardly expect that there would not be retaliation on his own conservatory.

Proceeding, Lord Lansdowne questioned the correctness of some of Lord Wolseley's statements. He reminded the latter how, after the Glencoe disaster, he (Wolseley)) had suggested that the British should fall back behind the Tugela River. If the suggestion had been given earlier, it might have saved one of the most untoward disasters of the war. Lieut.-Gen. Sir William Butler had written a private letter to Lord Wolseley, suggesting that 40,000 men might be necessary for the campaign. Lord Lansdowne did not wish to excuse himself for underestimating the enemy. But Lord Wolseley should bear his full share. Lord Wolseley had suggested, among other things, the occupation of Delagoa Bay and an appeal to the colonies.

Lord Salisbury said he thought it undesirable that all the papers referring to the debate should be circulated. He was not aware that any personal charges had been made against Lord Wolseley.

Lord Rosebery enumerated Lord Lansdowne's charges against Lord Wolseley, and said they were personal in the judgment of the mass of the House and the man-in-the-street.

SIX MONHTS' TRADE.

The returns for the first half of the present fiscal year show that Canada's imports of dutiable and free goods amounted to $88,768,379, or $37,759,890 more than for the same period of 1894. The increase of dutiable goods, compared with 1894 amounted to $24,511,745, and of free goods to $13,248,145. The total exports of merchandise for the first half of 1900-01 were $119,133,562, as compared with $71,324,223 for the first six months of 1894-95, or an increase in favour of the present year of $47,809, 339. The exports of home produce improved by no less than $40,734,260 in that period, and there was an increase of some $7,000,000 in the foreign produce sent out. The aggregate trade exclusive of coin and bullion was $211,852,236 for the six months ending31st December, or $85,569,229 more than for the same period of 1894. Taking the exports for the two half yearly periods, the exports of mining products has grown from $3,132,124 to $22,663,370 ; forest products from $15,870,488 to $19,666,158 ; animals and their products from $24,606,147 to $36, 973,939 ; manufacturers, from $3,920,487 to $8,063,212.

REJECTED BALLOTS IN CONTRAST.

Among the many good points made by Mr. Preston, M.P.P., for South Brant, in he recent budget debate in the Ontario Legislature, was his comparison of rejected ballots in Ontario, in the Dominion elections under the late Conservative Government in 1896, and the Provincial elections two years later. At the Dominion elections, in June, 1896, there were the enormous number of 3,862 rejected ballots, and in the Provincial general elections, in 1898, with practically the same electorate, there were but 289 rejected ballots.

The Opposition contention has been that in the election of 1898, fraudulent practices characterized the holding of the contest; but this record, if it points to any conclusion, must lead all unprejudiced persons to believe that there was some influence of a most illegal character at work to produce the enormous number of rejected ballots in 1896. The number was out of all proportion to that usually recorded, and it gives point to the exposures of crooked work in Manitoba and elsewhere, as revealed under sworn testimony. The Opposition, being unable to explain away these extraordinary happenings, or to provide a policy of equal attractiveness to that presented to the people of Ontario, by the Government of Hon. G. W. Ross, have banked on the illegalities in one constituency—that of West Elgin—for which the Government can, in no degree be held responsible. But, as Mr. Preston pointed out, such a position as that is untenable in the extreme, and must be easily seen through by the intelligent electorate.

Is Mr. Whitney never going to profit by the defection of Mr. Marter, who has left him because of his sorrowful exhibition of leadership, and will he never make the attempt to give up puerile criticism, and provide some kind of policy for his friends to rally around ?—London Advertiser.

OUR EXPERIMENTAL FARMS.

The annual reports from the officials of the experimental farms throughout the Dominion have been issued, and as usual the volume is replete with reliable and most valuable information for the farmer, wherever his locality or whatever his particular line of farming may be. The knowledge and experience, theoretical and practical, brought into requisition by the superintendents and various heads of departments, the system and care with which the experiments are conducted, and the method and precision with which results are noted and classified, make the information absolutely trustworthy and of the greatest service. It is not surprising therefore to learn from the director, Dr. Saunders, that there is a "large and increasing demand by the farmers of the Dominion for the publications issued from the experimental farms," which he takes as "gratifying evidence of the desire for information among this class of the community, also of the high esteem in which these records of the work of the farms are held."

In his own brief report, Dr Saunders make the following reference to the intelligent progress the Canadian farmer is making in mixed farming. He says:—

"The interdependence of all branches of farm work and a knowledge of how these can best be carried on in conjunction so as to produce the most satisfactory returns under the varied conditions which surround the settler in different parts of the Dominion, are items of information of deep interest to farmers everywhere. The days are passing by when farmers will rest satisfied with the risky position of depending entirely on one crop. With adverse seasons which occur more or less often in almost every country, such men on such occasions lose ground financially and sometimes to such an extent as to take them several years to recover. The best, and happily the system now most generally followed is mixed farming. This is eminently adapted to all parts of Canada, and to the rapid growth of this system of diversified agriculture may be attributed much of the phenomenal increase in the exports of Canadian agricultural products which has taken place during the past ten or twelve years.

"The experience gained but strengthens the opinion that Canadian farmers are well to the front in almost everything, and there is no country where there are so many useful measures in operation designed to assist the farmer in overcoming the difficulties he has to contend with, and to aid him in his endeavours to acquire a better practical knowledge of the important principles which underlie all useful occupation. It is gratifying to know that the farmers of this country are eager for information, and always ready to take advantage promptly of every opportunity of improving their condition. With such a spirit of enterprise abroad and the enormous agricultural resources awaiting development in Canada, the future prosperity of the country is assured."

Strength and Endurance.

Are factors of the greatest success.

No person can do full justice to himself without them.

In no other season of the year are they more easily exhausted than in the spring.

We need not discuss the reason for this here. It's enough to say there is one, and that Hood's Sarsaparilla gives strength and endurance, as thousands annually testify.

FUN FOR THE PLEBE.

A WEST POINT CADET WHO KNOCKED OUT ALL COMERS.

He Whipped Thirty Youths of the Yearling Class and Then Finished Up Every Man of the First Class Who Called Him Out.

The hazers of West Point ran up against a "hard proposition" when they encountered John Patrick Sullivan of Louisiana. He is the youth of muscle and brawn who as a plebe whipped 30 cadets of the "yearling" class and every cadet of the first class who called him out. He was so busy with fights that sometimes he had as many as four in one day, and he never lost a battle. He was the best "scrapper" the Military academy ever saw and as a plebe used to whip upper class men as fast as they appeared before him.

Sullivan was "found in math" in January, 1897. "Found in math" means "found deficient in mathematics." He therefore left the academy, but the remembrance of his prowess still remains there. In his "plebe camp" Sullivan was challenged by every yearling who was of equal weight with him and whipped them all, sometimes meeting as many as four. Then the first class was weighed in and met the "rapid plebe," one by one. Sullivan won all the fights and kept the doctors at the hospital busy. Scarcely a day but some man reported at the hospital with a disfigured face which he had received by "running into a tree." Before July was over Sullivan was no longer the "rapid plebe," but the "terrible plebe."

He was a rawboned youth from Louisiana and eminently built for fighting. He was not a quarrelsome fellow by any means, but his name and his prowess caused him a lot of trouble. It was a case of fight with him as soon as he went into barracks as a "beast." Several yearlings paid Sullivan the customary visits and asked the usual questions. When the festive yearlings found that his name was Sullivan, they asked, "Are you John L. Sullivan?"

"No," replied the candidate; "I am John P. Sullivan."

After the usual instructions about the use of "sir" and "mister" the yearling asked, "Can you fight, Mr. Sullivan?"

"I don't want to fight, sir," was the reply.

"But don't you know that you have got to fight to keep up the reputation of your name?"

Sullivan said he would fight if obliged to do so, and as soon as he had passed his preliminary examination and was in "plebe camp" his fighting days began. The first man who had "deviled" him on his first day in barracks was the first one he whipped. It can be imagined that he fought his first fight at the Point with a good heart. After that it was a matter of duty with him, and he knocked out 30 of the yearling class. After Sullivan had beaten all comers he was not deviled by the upper class men and in the fall was the only man of his class to whom was given a place on the football team.

Sullivan got his share of hazing at first and took it without a murmur. Once they told him to stand at the door of his tent and whistle for rain. He did so cheerfully and whistled long and loud. He never resented any of the usual tests which were applied to cadets, but the readiness with which he accepted a challenge and the rapidity with which he put his opponents out of commission were traits which made the upper class men rather wary of deviling him.

The youth from Louisiana was respected at the Point for his physical qualities, even if the academic board had doubts as to his mathematical ability. Perhaps he would have done better in "math" if he had not had so much fighting to do. It is rather difficult to "bone math" and whip four upper class men a day. Sullivan's name is one which will long be a consoling remembrance among the fourth class men at the academy, for though the days of fighting are over the class feeling is very strong at the Point, and it is always a consolation to plebes to be able to tell tales of the physical prowess of another plebe, even though he has fallen from the ranks. Many officers now in the service also are proud of the fighting ability of John Patrick Sullivan.

Plebe Sullivan was tall, muscular and well built, with not an ounce of useless flesh on him. Every movement of his body denoted strength and agility, and those who felt the grip of his big hands thought their fingers had been in the jaws of a vise.

When he had his first fight, no particular attention was paid to the affair, as the average plebe does not know much about fighting, and it was taken for granted that the yearling who had called him out would get the better of the battle. But Sullivan returned to camp without a scratch, while the yearling, with the help of several of his classmates, went to the hospital for rest, recuperation and repairs. Then it was that the yearling class got together and began to call out the "rapid plebe" one after the other. It was necessary, according to the code, to take the plebe's conceit out of him, and so the series of fights began which resulted so disastrously to the upper class men. After he had whipped every man of his weight in the yearling class it was decided at a class meeting that he should be let alone. It was then that the first class took a hand, with no better results than the yearlings. But, alas, Sullivan could not "get away" with mathematics as easily as he could with "scrapping" cadets, and his career at the Point was brief, though never dull.

Bloomers in Japan.

The all-conquering bicycle has invaded Japan, and is now a familiar sight in the land of the rickshaw. The Europeans take to it kindly, and the little brown men and women are equally enthusiastic.

The Government has equipped many of its postmen with roadsters, especially those who deliver mail in the suburbs or in the country districts.

The Japanese people themselves still regard the wheel as a great curiosity, but are beginning to both master and manufacture it.

Some of the Japanese women, says an unkind writer, have adopted a queer bicycle costume that is a combination of the bloomers with the native dress. It is neither Japanese nor European. Combined with the upper part of the kimono costume the Japanese ladies clothe their nether limbs in what are neither knickerbockers, trousers, zouaves nor bloomers.

The ludicrous effects are heightened by the girl having a national habit of turning the toes in developed to its largest extent. CINCH WENT FISHING

HE USED HIS HOOK AND LINE IN A BIG CLOVER FIELD.

It Puzzled His Comrades to Discover What He Was Angling For, but He Finally Landed the Prize For Which He Was Striving.

Some young men who enlisted during the war with Spain, but never saw any active service, were talking over their days in uniform one night and old, interesting stories of camp life. The young man who had been a hospital steward told this story:

"A month in our camp in Georgia was enough to drive a man to despair, for not only was it hot, but every day increased our belief that the government had no intention of giving us a chance to get into action or to let us go back to our homes. It was a mighty tough predicament for a lot of young men who had left business and everything else in a burst of patriotic enthusiasm and expected to get into a scrap in short order. The men worked every wire they could to get their discharges, but it was at a time when the man with a pull couldn't get any more than the man without a friend. After awhile the boys gave up trying to get their discharges and made up their minds to grin and bear it.

"As a hospital steward I used to hear a good deal about the health of the regiment from the surgeons, and one day I was very much surprised to hear one of them say that he was afraid Cinch of Company C was going to lose his mind. I knew Cinch as a big, good natured fellow, who tried to get a discharge as soon as he learned that we were not going to have a fight. When he failed, he became sullen and moody. The more we watched him the more convinced we became that something was wrong with him. Every time we came around we found him mumbling to himself, and one day a crowd of us found him seated on a stump in the middle of a big clover field, holding in front of him a long pole, attached to which was a piece of cord, on the end of which was a pin bent to resemble a fishhook. He would drop the hook into the long grass and let it stay there for a time. Then he would make a cast and when the hook fell would sit and watch the end of his line intently. Every once in awhile he would jerk the line out of the grass as though he had felt a nibble. Once one of the boys stepped up and said:

"'What are you fishing for?'

"He got no answer. All Cinch did was to turn a pair of hollow eyes on him and then resume his fishing. After that a gang used to go out and watch Cinch every afternoon. They would hide in the grass and almost burst with laughter at the seriousness with which the poor fellow would cast his line of wrapping cord and his pin hook and then sit and wait for a bite. Every once in awhile one of the boys would saunter out and say:

"'What are you fishing for, Cinch?'

"It got to be the regimental saying, and I suppose that the question, 'What are you fishing for, Cinch?' was thrown at the man from Company C a hundred times a day. By and by the news got to the officers that Cinch was going fast. They heard about his fishing in the fields, and one day the surgeon major went out and witnessed the performance. He went back and reported to the colonel that unless Cinch was discharged at once he would be hopelessly insane. The result was that his condition was telegraphed on to Washington and discharge papers were returned at once.

"The colonel in the goodness of his heart went to look up Cinch and give him the news. He found him sitting on a stump in the field fishing away, while around him sat about 50 of the regiment, one of whom would yell, 'What are you fishing for, Cinch?' every few minutes. The colonel stepped up and touching Cinch on the shoulder said:

"'Cinch, we think your health demands that you leave the service, and so we have procured an honorable discharge for you. Here it is,' and he handed Cinch the papers.

"Cinch dropped his fishing pole and grabbed the papers. He gave one look at them, and when he saw that they were all right waved them triumphantly over his head and shouted at the top of his voice:

"'This is what I was fishing for, dang ye all. This is what I was fishing for, and I got it too.' And with that he went dancing over the field, leaving us standing there, the first gleam of the truth creeping into our brains.

"The colonel looked foolish, and by and by we began to sneak away one by one. There was no doubt but what the regimental question, 'What are you fishing for, Cinch?' had been answered and in a most emphatic and surprising fashion. Cinch was as sane as anybody, but when he found he could not get an honorable discharge in one way he tried for it another."

THE CROW'S NEST PASS COAL CO LIMITED

ANNUAL MEETING!

The President Discusses the Proposed Railway to the American Boundary.

At the annnual meeting of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co., in Toronto, a satisfactory report and financial statement were presented by Senator Geo. A. Cox, President of the Company, and adopted by the shareholders. In view of the wide public interest awakened by the great development on which the Company is about to embark, and also by the projected railway from the coal fields to the American boundary, the President thought it advisable to discuss the future plans of the Company at considerable length. The following is the full text of his address:

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

"In congratulating you upon the success of the last year's operations, it may be worth while to refer to the erroneous ideas that have gone abroad with regard to the management and control of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company. We are, in every respect, a Canadian enterprise, with a large majority of Canadian stockholders, under Canadian control and management, and are giving employment to a great force of labor on Canadian soil. We are developing Canada's natural resources in one of the most important economic minerals, and are building up an immense Canadian industry, which is bringing wealth to the Dominion, and which, we feel assured, will constitute a most important factor in the Canadian industrial development of the future, unless our operations are restricted by a limited market and inadequate railway facilities.

"It affords me great pleasure to announce that we are prepared to proceed at once with construction and development work, involving an immediate expenditure of $835,000, and we already have this money in the treasury of the Company for this purpose. This large sum does not include the railway project, to which I will refer later, but will be devoted exclusively to development work, the building of coke ovens, dwellings, offices, and other works in connection with the coal and coke industry of the Company. We intend to build at Fernie, Michel, and at another suitable point, 720 coke ovens, which will involve an expenditure of $540,000 under this head alone. We will then have 1,032 ovens, which will increase our capacity for coke production from over 450 tons per day, as at present, to more than 1,500 tons per day. Our expenditure will also include more than a quarter of a million dollars on mine improvements, offices, and miners' dwellings.

"These expenditures and the extensive mining and coke-producing operations that are to follow will create and maintain two new towns in the coal district as large as Fernie, which now owes its existence to the works carried on by this Company.

"There is a prospective demand, provided we obtain access to the American market, so I shall hereafter mention, for 4,500 tons of coal per day within a year, and in three years we expect to increase our output to about 6,000 tons of coal per day, a large portion of which will be converted into coke in our ovens, and within five years, we expect to have a pay roll of fully $10,000 per day, which will be sufficient to maintain three important industrial centres in the coal district.

"All business men will at once realize how important such a development will be to the country at large, as mining camps are invariably extensive consumers of supplies. Not only will there be the direct employment for several thousand additional Canadian working men, but a new and more extensive demand will be created for the products of Canadian factories in the east, and the food supplies from the Western farms and cattle ranches.

"It is only fair to you, however, to state that the present demand of British Columbia for coal and coke would not justify any such expenditures as we propose to make. This is self-evident when I state that the present demand of British Columbia does not exceed 1,000 tons of coal and coke per day, and we cannot expect this demand to increase in the near future, even under most favorable conditions, so as to justify such expenditures.

"In order that we may proceed with the development it will be absolutely necessary to secure access to the American markets by a route that will put us in a position to successfully compete with the coal and coke producers already in the field. If denied success to the American markets except by roundabout routes if delayed in our operations by legislative obstruction; if prevented in any way from cutting down the cost of production to the narrowest possible margin, our success in the field will be proportionately cramped, and it will be quite impossible to undertake the development now proposed.

"Recognizing, therefore, the necessity of obtaining direct access to the adjacent markets of the United States, an application has been made to Parliament by five of your directors for a charter to build a railway from the coal fields to the boundary, where it is intended to connect with a spur line from Jennings on the Great Northern Railway. This is simply an effort to secure entrance by the best possible route to an almost unlimited market for coal and coke, where we must meet the keenest competition, and without this market any large development of these British Columbia coal fields will be practically impossible.

"The fear has been expressed in some quarters that the establishment of railway connection between the Crow's Nest coal fields and the Great Northern railway system will deprive the Canadian mining and smelting industries of a supply of coal and coke, and that the Company may create a shortage in the Canadian supply to benefit American smelting interests. These fears are groundless. From geological reports it appears that there are over 250,000 acres of coal lands in the Crow's Nest country, containing a supply of coal which is conceded by all authorities to be practically exhaustless, it being estimated that there are in this area 30,000,000,000 tons of coal. This would admit of an output of 10,000 tons per day, allowing 300 working days per year, for over 6,000 years. This is entirely independent of the immense coal areas in Alberta and in other parts of British Columbia.

"We are at present preparing to enter into time contracts with the smelters of British Columbia to supply any quantities of coal or coke they may require; but so far as the local supply is concerned, its safety can be best assured by such development of the Crow's Nest mines as will be made possible by the building of the proposed line of railway.

"Successful operation of the mines on a large scale would be impossible if our market were limited to British Columbia, and it were subject to the fluctuations we have experienced this last year.

"With an immense coal and coking industry in operation, turning out from six to ten thousand tons of coal a day, the British Columbia smelters now in operation would close down or open up without notice as often as they might feel inclined, and the change would not be felt. The smelters now in operation on the Canadian side only require about 300 tons of coke per day. If we are restricted as to markets, there will be higher initial cost, risk of suspension through accidents, difficulty in securing labor, and in meeting any variation in the demand.

"Although there is an immense area of coal in the Crow's Nest country that is of the best quality for coking, we should not harbor the delusion that this district has all the coking coal on the continent. There will be competition from the existing sources of supply—from Coledale, on Puget Sound, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Utah and Colorado. There are also immense coal deposits in Montana, Washington and other places, which may prove, when tested, to be of good coking quality.

"To enter and hold this market, which means from 5,000 to 6,000 tons of coal per day, the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company must have the best railway facilities available, and that is why it is absolutely necessary to build the proposed spur.

"There is hardly any industry so universally beneficial to a country as coal mining and coke-making for export trade. The coal and coke are both brought to the last stage of perfection before being shipped out. All labour is expended on them in this country, and there is nothing further to be done with them except to consume them. Not so with logs, not so with lumber, not so with pulp, with wheat, with wool, with many other products exported. Every dollar that comes into the country in return for coal or coke exports makes the country just that much richer. The farmer, the rancher, the merchant, and the manufacturer, will all profit. There will also be an enormous direct revenue to the British Columbia Government from the royalty that Government is now deriving a revenue of about $100 a day from our present operations.

"In addition to the development of the coal and coke industry, the proposed railway will open up a prospect, and an unusual prospect, of smelting development which will prove, from a public standpoint, of the very greatest importance.

"The success of the smelting industry depends upon the ability to assemble the various materials essential to profitable smelting at the lowest possible cost, and if the proposed line of railway is built, connecting the Crow's Nest fields with the American railway systems, the balance of advantage will be decidedly in favour of the Canadian side as the place for establishing a large and profitable smelting industry. The Canadian people have but to improve their opportunity, to stand out of the way, and let the good fortune in.

"In order to illustrate what I have said, permit me to point out how suitable a place Fernie, or some point adjacent thereto, would be for the establishment of a smelting industry. There we have the coke without any charge for hauling, while, to carry it to any smelting point south of the line would involve a hauling charge, as well as an American duty of 45 cents per ton. The limestone required is to be found at Fernie, with no expense except the cost of quarrying.

"The lead ores of Southern British Columbia are now seeking a market, which is almost impossible for them to find, and those adjacent to the coal fields could, at a trifling cost for transportation, be laid down at Fernie, or some other convenient point. The dry ores necessary to make workable and profitable mixtures and blends are not at present to be found in British Columbia, but are to be found through the adjacent mining States along the lines and connections of the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific railways, and the ore cars taking the coal and coke from the mines at Fernie to supply the railways and establish industries in these states, instead of coming back empty, would, at a low cost for transportation, bring back these dry ores to such a smelter. There is no point south of the boundary line where a smelting industry could so easily or so profitably be established.

"If a smelting industry for Canadian ores were established south of the line, there would be, as above mentioned, the cost of transportation of the coke to the site of the smelting industry, the duty on this coke entering the United States, the cost of transporting the lead ores from British Columbia to the site of the proposed smelter, and the American duties on the lead ores entering the United States, which, upon the quality of ore found in some of the best mines in British Columbia, would probably be about $9 per ton.

"Simply on the items of transportation there would be the serious handicap of the ore cars bringing down the coke and the ore from British Columbia to a smelter on the American side being compelled to return empty, and this would necessarily entail a proportionately higher freight rate.

"Not the least important factor in the situation is the fear in the minds of American capitalists interested in the mining industry of the West that an export duty may be put upon ores by the Canadian Government, and this would cripple any smelting industry established on the American side dependent upon Canadian ores as the source of supply.

"That this is not simply theory, but the mature judgment of practical smelting men, is evidenced by the fact that we have the most positive assurances from a smelting man of large capital and experience that if we obtain the proposed railway connection he will at once commence the erection of a large smelting plant in British Columbia adjacent to the coal fields, and we have assurances scarcely less definite from others, of the establishment of three or four more smelting industries at other suitable points in Southern British Columbia, provided the proposed road is built.

"The prospects, therefore, for Southern British Columbia would appear to be exceedingly bright. Once the charter for the railway is assured, the construction of the coke ovens, the building of the homes for the miners, and the virtual establishment of two new towns in Southern British Columbia will await only the assurances we now have, before more than one large smelting industry will be put under way, and hundreds of thousands of dollars will be invested in developing this important industry in that country.

"With improved transportation facilities, as well as the improved smelting facilities which would be secured, a smelter could secure freight charges and give rates for treatment that are now impossible.

"It is hardly necessary to dwell at length on the resultant benefits to mining and other enterprises in British Columbia. These benefits are self-evident.

"In every lead mine there are masses of ore that will not pay at the present rate for treatment; in every camp there are propositions and mines just too lean to tempt operators or investors. Every dollar taken off the charge for treatment means thousands of tons more of ore available and proportionately swells the pay rolls of every camp. Every dollar reduction in smelter charges widens the pay streak of every mine, and brings new mines within the paying class.

"It would be a great misfortune to British Columbia and to the Dominion at large if this opportunity should be lost through the failure to secure adequate means of transportation. There are rival projects south of the boundary. Immense coal areas in the States of Washington and Montana are in process of development, and if the parties interested in these properties once secure possession and control of the market in these states for coal and coke, I fear the coal and coke of British Columbia will stand a very poor chance of ever taking it from them.

"The promoters of this railway ask no cash bonus or land grant of any kind; they simply desire the opportunity of expending their own money to construct a railway which will be of great public benefit.

"We now have a prospect of building up a city as large as Butte in the Crow's Nest coal district; and I cannot think it possible that either the Parliament of Canada or the Legislature of British Columbia will place any barrier in the way of the industrial development of our country, or will adopt a course which may delay that development half a century. I therefore look forward with confidence to a charter being granted; and this being done, the development which I have outlined will be at once proceeded with; but unless the charter is granted, the development outlined cannot be undertaken."

Mr. Elkan Rogers, Managing Director, gave an interesting address detailing the last year's operations of the company. The usual formal resolutions were adopted, and all members of the Board were reelected for the ensuing year.

The Fate of the Fly.

At one of the English-German schools in the city a teacher recently announced to a class of very young girls that they could have 20 minutes to write a composition on any subject of their own selection. A bright girl, whose head is adorned with a liberal supply of beautiful auburn hair, handed in the following:

"Flies from Flyland.—Mrs. Fly had a very great deal of trouble with her children. They worried the old lady so much she did not know what to do. One little fly—Worst One by name—never did obey his mother. Now, of course, there never yet was a case of disobedience which was not punished in some manner. If you do wrong and nobody is around to punish you, you usually knock against something or fall down and hurt yourself.

"We will see now what little Worst One did and how he was punished. One day he and his brothers had a chat, and in it they spoke of the jam that the cook left standing on the kitchen table, and they all determined to get just the tiniest bit of it, and they went. Now, the mother knew of this, and she went with them, and of course she did not scold. Oh, no! 'Why, every fly eats jam, but you must not go inside the jam jar, as no one knows what will happen to you if you do. Just rest on the top,' the mother said.

"The others were all afraid and did not go in, but little Worst One, he did not care; he was going in, and in he went in spite of what his mother said. And what do you think happened to him? Never before in the history of flies did such a strange thing happen. You think he died and remained there, don't you? You are mistaken. They did get him out, but he had a terrible punishment, and he had to carry it with him ever afterward. His hair had turned red with fright. I believe after that he obeyed his mother."

Stupid Man.

"Men are so dense," said Mrs. Dovey.

"Why, dear?" asked her friend, knowing there must be some personal motive.

"I made him a lovely pair of sofa pillows three weeks ago, and he hasn't even thought about buying a new sofa for them. I feel sure."

THE P.A.A.A. GROUNDS.

They are Being Cut Up Into Building Lots to be Sold.

The P.A.A.A. grounds in Ashburnham, which for years have proved to be the centre of attraction for all kinds of summer sport, will soon pass out of existence as a place of athletic amusement. For several years past the P. A. A. A. grounds has not been on a paying basis to its owners, the Burnham Estate, and it is now the intention to have it cut up into small building lots, which it is believed will sell quite readily in view of the probable land boom in the village. It now behooves the local sporting organizations to look around for new quarters.

I. O. O. F. NOTES.

A very pleasant and profitable evening was spent Thursday evening at the regular meeting of Peterborough Lodge No. 101, I.O.O.F.

Several visitors were present from Havelock, Pontypool and other outside points. The three degrees were conferred in first class style, the second degree being put on by Otonabee Lodge. Speeches and refreshments closed a very pleasant and profitable evening.

SPORTING PASTIMES.

HOCKEY.

The series of games between the Colts and the Fenelon Falls team is off. Fenelon could not promise a return game, but would like to have had the Colts visit their town on Tuesday night next.

The Pig Iron Tigers will visit Lakefield on Tuesday night when they expect to snow under the team of that place.

The proposition to have an amalgamation of the Nifs and Biffs, for the purpose of playing an out of town match, meets with general approval.

The Norwood hockey team are anxious to get the Colts down to that town for a game on Wednesday night. The Colts may go.

The Colts will be photographed early next week.

The Junior Championship trophy is expected to arrive next week.

At a meeting of the executive committee a the Hockey Club held last evening it was decided to banquet the Colts next week at the Oriental Hotel, and if the treasurer's statement showed a sufficient balance on the right side of the ledger, to present themembers of the junior team with hockets. In order that the funds may reach the sum required the club proposes having a comic masquerade hockey match in the rink on Tuesday evening, when the members of the club, including the officials, will appear in regalia of a character which should excite the risibilities of a Red Indian. The band is to be in attendance and fun galore is promised. As the affair is planned to take the form of an ovation to the Colts there should be a big crowd present.

CURLIANA.

MEETING OF LABOUR MEN.

ADDRESSES BY MESSRS. SMITH AND PUTTEE, M. P'S.

A Large Audience Assembled in the Opera House Last Night—Splendid Speeches.

Last night a most successful meeting was held in Bradburn's Opera House, under the auspices of the various Trades and Labour Unions of the town. The addresses in the interests of the workingmen were delivered by prominent speakers. Amongst these were Messrs. Ralph Smith and A. W. Puttee, labor members of Parliament for Victoria and Winnipeg respectively. The addresses were listened to with marked attention throughout. Mr. Smith is a man of commanding appearance, is a fluent speaker and created a most favorable impression.

The chair was occupied by Mr. Robert Macgregor, chairman of the joint committee, who opened the proceedings in a most appropriate speech in which he welcomed those present.

The first speaker was Mr. George Ball, of town, who dwelt on matters of interest to the workingman. He expressed himself as strongly in favor of Government ownership of franchises, appealed to them to have confidence in themselves and insist on legislation for the masses and not the classes. In urging upon his hearers to be more careful about sending members to Parliament, Mr. Ball made a great onslaught on the capitalists of the country

Mr. Brown, an organizer, spoke next. He did not think that labor organizations were as strong as they should be in the town of Peterborough, and hoped that the meeting held would tend to stimulate the Trades and Labour men of the town to action. In the course of his remarks the speaker predicted that from this time forward the Labour Party would prove to be an influential factor in the politics of the country. Mr. Brown closed by giving a recitation, which he applied to the condition of the Labour Party at the present time.

MR. RALPH SMITH, M.P.

Mr. Ralph Smith, the member of Parliament from Victoria, and President of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, was cordially received. After alluding to the pleasure he felt at being present, though a stranger in the town, Mr Smith proceeded to deal with matters pertaining to the workingmen in general. It is a fact, he said, that the farther one goes west the better organized are the labour organizations, and he was surprised beyond measure that the trades and labour people of the eastern provinces have not taken advantage of the opportunity that is afforded them. What the speaker meant by labouring men was not by any means only the men who used a pick and shovel. The speaker's conception was far from this, although many look upon a labouring man as such. After all there are few men in the world who are not labouring men. Every man who contributes in any way to the efficiency and production of wealth is a labour man. The man who digs the coal in a mine is no more a labour man than the superintendent who manages the factory which consumes that coal.

In the course of his remarks the speaker said he was greatly surprised to find so few members of the labour unions in Peterborough, and while he quite understood that many objected to belonging to trades unions through fear of their employers, still this should be no barrier. Years ago this might have been an excuse, but now the average employer of labour does not think the trades unions are antagonistic to his interests, or that the union man is a less faithful employer than the non-union man. He contended that the union men are, as a rule, the more industrious and intelligent class of men. There was a time when the individual industrial concerns were of importance—when each man was depending on himself only, but matters have changed of late years, and we are all, to a certain extent, as capitalists and industries, depending upon each other.

In explaining this the speaker went on to say that no capitalist remained single-handed at the present time, but joined in great enterprises, instancing the immense combines, being floated in the States. If capitalists feel the necessity of organization, why should it not be in the interests of the individuals? His experience with trades unions had been that the men who needed the services of a union least, were the first to encourage its organization. Let no man, however, join a trades union believing simply that he will be helped along, but let him join such an organization believing that he is helping the community at large.

Mr. Smith then went on to explain his position regarding socialism which had of late been so harshly attacked. In doing so he gave a very explicit argument in favor of individualism. Our first and foremost object in obtaining a reformation in the community or nation is a reform individuality. Unless we have pure men we will not have a pure nation. While the Government have not encouraged trades unions in the past they are at last awakening to their proper senses; the trades union influence is beginning to be felt in Imperial, Dominion and Provincial politics. He claimed for trades unionism the present splendid condition of our labour and mining laws. Referring to his past political record, the speaker said that he had been a life long Liberal up until the last general election when he was elected as an Independent Labour member. He believed in giving credit to either political party whenever they did anything in the interests of Labour, and he had to admit that during the past three or four years there had been most important legislation in the interests of the working man, but he could not give the entire credit of this to the present Government, claiming that it was the Labour organizations who forced their hands into such actions. British Columbia, too, had done something, whilst there was still plenty for them to do. The Chinese question was ably touched upon by the speaker, who claimed that what must shortly come, must be the absolute exclusion of the Chinese from this country, as the white labour of British Columbia did not purpose competing with a class of people who can sleep ten in a bed and live on a few cents a day. In closing the speaker mentioned the fact that the working men of the west riding of Peterborough constituted 60 per cent. of the electors; they have matters in their own hands and it remained for them to determine who their member should be. It was important that they should become united, or they would have no guarantee on election day.

MR. PUTTEE.

Mr A. W. Puttee, the Labour Member for Winnipeg, made a carefully worded speech, in which he expressed great surprise that there were only four organized Labour organizations in Peterborough. They were only giving their town the advantage of their citizenship. They received education at the local schools, but, in return, worked from morning to night, and as a rule, took no part in the affairs of the town. Mr. Puttee went on to talk of the necessity of organizing into Labour organizations. He referred to his election in Winnipeg, and the strength of the Labour organizations of that city. He also told of how the city had taken over the ownership of several public franchises with satisfactory results. Mr. Puttee told several amusing stories illustrating his points, and closed by an earnest appeal for energetic organization amongst the labour and trades crafts of the town

A hearty vote of thanks was passed to the speakers, upon motion of Mr. J. H. McClellan, seconded by Mr. J. J. Hartley, to which Mr. Puttee and Mr. Smith modestly replied.

The meeting was one of the largest of the kind that has ever been held in Peterborough. Mr. Robert MacGreggor was chairman of the joint committee, and Mr. Fred Browne, secretary of the same.

SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY.

The Peterborough County Sunday School Council will meet next Thursday afternoon in the Y.M.C.A.

In the evening at 8 o'clock a public rally will be held of all officers, teachers, scholars and friends.

The programme will consist of a Round Table Talk on Sunday School problems, and address from Rev J J Riddell, of Uxbridge, the President of the Ontario Sunday School Association. Suitable music has been arranged. All are welcome.

STOLEN MONEY RETURNED.

About a month ago a purse containing $15.50 was stolen from the residence of Mrs E M Reynolds, Hastings Road, during her absence on Sunday evening. On Saturday, 2nd inst, she found the following note with $10 inside pinned to the gate post:

February 22nd.

"We see by the paper that you know us, so we will send you $10. You will receive the rest in about two weeks, as we have to earn rest"

The balance has not yet been received

CHURCH CHIMES.

ALL SAINTS' CHURCH—March 17th—Fourth Sunday in Lent. Services:—11 a.m., Holy Communion and sermon; 3 p.m., Sunday School and Bible Class; 7 p.m., Evensong and Sermon. Ushers—Messrs. Buller and Oberrill. All seats free.

ST. PAUL'S—Rev. Dr. Torrance will occupy the pulpit in the morning and Mr. Crombie will preach at the evening service.

Library Drawing Class.

It is important that all members of the Drawing Class be in attendance at the Y. W. C.A. on Monday, March 18th, as a thorough review for the examinations is to begin. The class will meet hereafter on Mondays, and but once a week.

Heintzman & Co's Practical Piano Tuner Coming.

Have your piano tuned and put in first-class condition by our expert tuner. Will be in Peterborough last week in March. Leave orders at Mr. C. B. Routley's store, George Street. 60-63.

Life on the Rail.

Mr. Earl M. Cooke, railway secretary, of Toronto, will have charge of the meeting for men at the Y.M.C.A. on Sunday, at 4.15 p.m. His subject will be illustration and suggestion from railway life. All men are invited and a special invitation has been sent to the railway men of the town. A quartette will sing.

The Evangelistic Services.

The evangelistic services conducted by Mr. W. F. Crombie in the Bethel Church, Otonabee, have been most encouraging. Night after night the church has been filled with an attentive and much interested audience. In consequence of the evident tokens of spiritual blessing the meetings will be continued each evening next week. Mr. Crombie will preach in the Bethel Church to-morrow afternoon at 2.30 and in St. Paul's Church at 7.00 p.m.

Special Y. W. C. A. Gospel Meeting.

Miss Carson, late of Christodora House, New York City, now travelling Secretary for our Dominion Young Women's Christian Association, will conduct a Gospel Service at the Y W C A Rooms, 168 Brock street, on Sunday afternoon at 4.15. All women are invited. Read what a Toronto daily once said of her meetings:—"The services at the Y W C A, 18 Elm street, addressed by Miss Carson, of New York, are attracting a large number of young women. Miss Carson has had a wide and varied experience among young women in the Associations and Colleges of the United States, and is one of the most helpful workers at the Young Women's Conference at Northfield, Mass., where Mr. Moody's summer schools are held.

An Interesting Report

We publish to-day a full report of the annual meeting of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company. The most interesting feature of this report is the address of the President, Senator Geo. A. Cox, who deals at length with the proposed railway from the Crow's Nest Coal Fields to the American Boundary. This project has already awakened considerable attention on account of the magnitude of the conflicting interests involved and a statement having the weight of authority is worthy of careful perusal. The leading points in the case are set forth with clearness and the address gives a comprehensive view of the company's aims and prospects.

OUR ADVERTISERS.

During the present disturbed relations with our advertisers, on account of the disastrous fire in the Examiner buildings, we are compelled to ask the indulgence of our patrons for a few days until we can pull ourselves together again. Hard and earnest work is being done to instal an entirely new printing plant in our present temporary premises at No. 411 George Street, a few doors south of the burned building, and by the end of the week, we hope to resume our contracts with our advertisers. In the meantime, in order to keep our advertisers as much in touch with our readers as possible, we will be able to insert short local notices of their business announcements.

LeBrun & Co's Early Spring Fashions.

We are pleased to announce to the gentlemen that we are ready bright and early for Spring business. Have you seen our swell coloured lithograph posters? They are the attractions of the street, being the largest illustrated fashion plates, showing the nobbiest Spring styles for gentlemen's wear in suits, overcoats, hats, etc. Our immense stock of cloths will afford an unequalled selection of choicest Spring suitings, overcoatings, trouserings and vestings. The patterns are exceptionally stylish, correct in every particular, and ought to meet with the ready approval of all good dressers. Our new Spring styles in gentlemen's hats are correct duplicates of best English and American standard makes. We are showing the finest as well as medium qualities in black and coloured derbys and fedoras, and invite your early critical inspection.

H LEBRUN & CO.

The Alarm Clock Won.

The man who tried to sleep after one of our "Early Risers" started in to do its work didn't have a ghost of a show. On the fourth round, he had to tumble out, slightly profane, but grateful. Makes no difference how heavy a sleeper you are, or how late you went to bed, our alarm clocks never disappoint. CLARKE & GIBSON.

Toilet Soap.

See our window of first class Toilet Soaps, —reliable in every respect. We are offering very special value in these fine soaps. Having been bought on very satisfactory terms, we are enabled to sell three cakes for ten cents. This is an usual offer, and buyers in quantities should get a supply at once.

A. H. STRATTON & CO.

Retiring from Business.

There have been enough bona fide bargains handed out to the ladies of Peterborough, during the first seven days of our closing-out sale, to go around the town like wild-fire. There's not a home in town but what has been talking about our sale. Let it be distinctly understood that the whole stock must be cleared out without delay, and that means almost at your own prices. We can't afford to dilly-dally over sales. With the same object in view, we trust all those indebted to us will be kind enough to pay their accounts promptly.

MISS K. RUDKINS.

Routley's Magic Prices.

The great sale of the Toronto Bazaar stock, bought at a fraction on the dollar, is a boon-anza to Peterborough citizens. The goods are moving with such rapidity that special lines advertised one day are very often completely sold out the next. There are many lines, however, such as Wall Papers, Window Blinds, China, Crockery, etc., that can stand a month's heavy selling before being cleared. Another thing is certain—that no matter what you buy here you can count on scoring wonderful bargains—bargains such as can be obtained nowhere else in Peterborough or any other town in Ontario.

C. B. ROUTLEY.

Gentlemen's New Spring Hats.

We are showing all the new and stylish shapes in gentlemen's black and coloured hats for early spring wear. The styles are the correct English and American makes in Derby and Fedora hats, and to be right in line with this year's fashions you should let us fit you. Our hats are all fine makes, who have guaranteed records.

Demand That Government Shall Uphold British Interests.

The Situation Is Serious and Their Is a Possibility That the Russian and British Troops, Now in Hostile Array, May Come to Bloodshed at any Minute—True Story of the Railway Siding Related.

New York, March 18.—The Sun's Sunday special from London says: The exasperation and apprehension of the European Governments over the Chinese situation are now considerably intensified, especially in England, where the newspapers generally to-day do not attempt to disguise their anxiety, and make demands that the Government shall uphold British interests, as it has done heretofore.

The True Siding Story.

London, March 18.—The Weekly Despatch, which foretold the negotiations for surrender between Commander-in-Chief Botha of the Boer army and Lord Kitchener, professed yesterday morning to give the real cause of the dispute between the British and Russians over the railway siding at Tien Tsin. The paper says the quarrel is one of old standing and originated, according to an official despatch, in an order given by a Russian officer to his men to sack a station where a British Indian regiment was stationed.

A young English lieutenant who was the only officer with the Indian troops, declared that if the Russians advanced ten yards further he would order his men to fire. Shots were actually exchanged, but when the matter was reported to the Field Marshal Count Von Waldersee, he ordered the Russians to retire. They obeyed the order but sacked every village on the way. The incident greatly excited and keenly incensed the Indian troops, according to the official records, says The Dispatch, and they are now beyond control. They are chanting their war songs and are eager to fight the Russians.

ARMED TRUCE.

Russian and British Forces Face Each Other in Hostile Array.

New York, March 18.—The Herald printed yesterday the following despatch: Tien Tsin, Saturday, 1.48 p. m.—The situation here could not be more serious. The Chinese are enjoying the spectacle of Russian and English troops, drawn up in hostile array, with the possibility of bloodshed at any minute.

Yesterday the English railway authorities put men to work building a siding near the station. The Russians drove them off for trespassing on their new concession.

The laborers, who were roughly handled, returned, supported by several hundred British troops. The Russians responded by calling out their whole force and preparing for battle. Upon seeing this the British desisted from their position of bringing back the laborers to work by force.

Gen. Campbell, commanding the English, and Gen. Wogack, commanding the Russian force, had a conference, and both sides agreed not to break the peace for 24 hours. Information regarding the situation has been cabled to London and St Petersburg.

Intense anxiety as to the outcome of the affair prevails here. The Russians are entrenching themselves in their concession.

The Strain Continues.

Tien Tsin, March 16.—The Anglo-Russian dispute shows no change, and the disputants are exercising the utmost caution to prevent a collision between the guards during the negotiations. The Russians continue to purchase land in the new concessions.

No Change in the Situation.

Tien Tsin, March 17.—There is no change in the situation developed by the Anglo-Russian railway dispute here. The Russian and British forces are still represented by small detachments, with officers, encamped on opposite sides of the railway siding. The utmost friendliness is exhibited towards each other by the opposing parties, but, as a measure of precaution, the guards have been reduced to 27 on each side, in order to prevent any possible collision during the negotiations. A Russian general arrived from Pekin last evening.

ALEXIEFF MAKES TROUBLE.

And London Standard Indulges in Some Plain Talk.

London, March 18.—The Tien Tsin correspondent of The Standard says: "The railway dispute is another of the attempts of the Russian Admiral, Alexieff, to create trouble, and unless he is removed there will be constant friction, which will eventually lead to hostilities. He loses no opportunity to thwart the English. Commenting editorially upon its Tien Tsin advices, The Standard reminds Russia that "the British fleet is as potent as ever, and Japan is burning to second the efforts of anyone ready to oppose the annexation of Manchuria," adding: "It is a painful task thus to be compelled even to hint at contingencies so vast and disturbing, but the perils of the moment are most likely to be overcome if it is thoroughly realised that we do not shrink from such action as would be best calculated to maintain our rights."

Battle of Ansuling.

Berlin, March 18.—A despatch from Pekin, under date of March 15, received at the War Office, says the strength of the Chinese forces in the battle of Ansuling Pass, March 8, was 3,000. The Chinese fled in the direction of Wu Tai, 25 kilometres west of the Great Wall.

Li Hung Chang Very Ill.

Pekin, March 16.—Li Hung Chang again is seriously ill, and his physician says his life hangs by a thread.

Germany Wants to Get Out.

Berlin, March 18.—The most striking feature during Friday's and Saturday's China debate in the Reichstag was the unanimously manifested feeling of weariness over the "China adventure." It was a regular chorus of "Let us get out from China." The Socialist speakers said: "Get out at any price." The Radical left and centre said: "Get out as soon as honor permits." Even the Conservatives said as much, though all parties recognized the fact that the 123,000,000 marks demanded as a third instalment of the expenses must be voted. Indeed the entire nation is thoroughly tired of China.

THE COLONIAL TRIP.

Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and the Duchess of York Start From Portsmouth on Saturday.

Portsmouth, Eng., March 18.—Amidst the firing of a royal salute by the assembled fleet and hearty cheers from the concourse of people gathered at all points of vantage, the steamer Ophir, with the Duke and the Duchess of Cornwall and York on board, started at about 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon on the voyage which is not to terminate until after their Royal Highnesses have made a tour of the world.

Troops and bands of music playing the National Anthem lined the quays, and all the ships were manned and dressed, brilliant groups of naval, military and civil officials, in full uniforms, with masses of the public, forming a combination showing both the state and the popular character of the send-off. King Edward and Queen Alexandra on board the royal yacht Victoria and Albert, accompanied by eight torpedo boat destroyers, escorted the Ophir a few miles out.

Before the departure the royal party landed at the jetty where King Edward conferred the Victoria medal on the blue jackets of H. M.S. Excellent, who dragged the funeral gun carriage of Queen Victoria after the horses became unmanageable at Windsor railroad station.

After luncheon the King toasted the Duke and the Duchess and wished them a prosperous voyage. His Majesty said that one of the objects of the tour was to express appreciation of the loyal help rendered by the British colonies in the South African campaign.

The Duke of Cornwall and York proposed the King's health. The guests at the luncheon numbered about seventy, including Mr. Joseph Chamberlain.

The last farewell signals were exchanged between Their Majesties and the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York near the Nab Lighthouse, though the vessels remained in sight of each other until the Ophir rounded the end of the Isle of Wight and entered the channel bound for Gibraltar.

Cost of the Trip.

London, March 18.—It is understood that the chartering of the Ophir for eight months for the Duke of York's trip costs the Government £85,000, and the bill for refurnishing and redecorating her will amount to £32,000 more. The Admiralty insisted that the vessel should be manned by naval men, with the exception of the engineer staff. The crew includes 27 officers and 125 blue-jackets, 100 marines, 37 members of the band, 88 engineers and 50 stewards.

ALLEGE A SWINDLE.

Farmers Signed a Contract to Pay If Farms Were Not Sold.

Woodstock, Ont., March 18.—A lot of farmers around here are in distress. Four or five years ago a man came around, who said he was the agent for the Canadian Farm Advertiser of Guelph. He got the farmers to let him advertise their farms for sale. If sold his concern was to get three per cent. of the prices. A lot of farmers signed contracts. Some farms were sold; most were not.

Now another agent is around displaying to the astonished yeomen a paper with their signatures attached, in which they agree, if their farms were not sold in three years, to pay the advertiser one per cent. of the price they put on them. One farmer has a claim of $210 against him. Others are lower.

They all say they never made any agreement to pay one per cent., and claim it is a swindle.

Dr. Brett Dangerously Ill.

Calgary, N. W. T., March 18.—Dr. Brett, proprietor of the Banff Sanitarium, ex-Premier, and a former Opposition leader, is lying dangerously ill with blood-poisoning.

GEORGIAN BAY CANAL CO.

England's Largest Exploitation Co. Have Got Control.

The Rothschilds Are at the Head—Their Representative Now in Ottawa—Said to Have Decided to Go on With the Work as a Private Enterprise Even if the Government Does Not Guarantee $20,000,000 Proposed Bonds.

Ottawa, March 18.—On Saturday Arthur J. Forward, secretary of the Montreal, Ottawa and Georgian Bay Canal Company, announced that "an agreement was signed on the 13th inst. between Mr. McLeod Stewart and the new Dominion syndicate, which has taken over the interest in the charter of the Montreal, Ottawa and Georgian Bay Canal Company, and that he has in consequence ceased to have any further connection with the management of the undertaking.

"The new Dominion syndicate is now in the hands of a powerful financial group, who have been connected with the construction of the North Sea Ship Canal, the Manchester Ship Canal and many other large works of a similar nature. They propose to bring their great experience of such large undertakings to bear upon the Ottawa navigation in the immediate future."

It is understood the syndicate has had the Georgian Bay Canal project under consideration for some time and has almost completed arrangements for a long step towards the beginning of work on the construction of the proposed waterway. There will be important development There will be important developments in a few days.

On the street on Saturday night the information was given that the largest exploitation company in England, made up of bankers of London and Paris, headed by the Rothschilds, had got control of the Georgian Bay Canal Company and had decided to go on with the work as a private enterprise if they cannot induce the Government to guarantee the $20,000,000 of bonds, the money to be spent on the work of construction. It is believed that their representative, who is now in this city, and who has been here for some weeks, has made a thorough canvas of the whole situation and has had detailed engineering reports as to all work necessary, and has had other experts making a careful study of the transportation question, and the chances of making the Georgian Bay and Ottawa Canal the largest and cheapest grain transportation system in America. They believe they can beat out the lakes and river system and the railways. They say they can deliver grain from the upper lakes at Montreal away below the cost of the other competing routes. Practically the scheme is to bring the grain from Chicago and Duluth to the Georgian Bay up the French River to Lake Nipissing and down the Ottawa River to Montreal.

SIX PEOPLE BURNT TO DEATH.

A Wife and Five Children Perished in the Flames.

Campbellton, N. B., March 18.—Six persons were burnt Friday night at Little Cascapedia, Que., as the result of a coal oil explosion in the house of John Gauthier of Gauthier & Arseneau, merchants of the above named place. The accident occurred between 11 and 12 o'clock. The stove exploded on the landing of the stairs. Mr. Gauthier endeavored to remove it, but finding it impossible, on account of the oil being all in flames, he jumped out from the upstairs window to get help, but in doing so he broke his leg. He then crawled to the next house, but everything was in flames before help could be had. His wife, who was sick in bed, and five children were burned.

Four Persons Burnt to Death.

Missoula, Mont., March 18.—At Olive, a station 45 miles west of Missoula on Saturday, a special car containing the Ed. Davis "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Company, was burned, four members of the company losing their lives.

Sixty Men Lose Their Lives.

Mobile, Ala., March 18.—News has just reached here of the burning of a big turpentine camp, across the bay, in Baldwin County, at an early hour Friday morning. Sixty persons, mostly negroes, are supposed to have perished in the fire. So far as is known, only one man survived, and he is so badly burned that it is only with great difficulty that he could tell of his fearful experiences after reaching here.

Still Another Fatal Blaze.

St. Joseph, Mo., March 18.—The Noyes-Norman shoe factory, and the Richardson, Roberts & Byrnes overall and shirt factory, were destroyed by fire late Saturday afternoon, causing the death probably of several persons in the shirt factory. All the victims were girls, and were employed in the shirt factory. Loss, $100,000.

Fatal Fire at Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, March 18.—During the progress of a fire yesterday at the corner of Duquesne-way and Fort street, one man lost his life; three others were badly hurt. The property loss will be fully $250,000, well insured. The dead man is William Miller, driver.

NEW PROPHET ARISES.

His Name Is Muludzi Uganda and He Has Had a Vision.

London, March 18.—Advices reaching here from Mengo Ugunda say there is considerable excitement in that part of Africa owing to the action of the Mohammedan Mehdi, or Prophet, who has proclaimed himself there as the leader of a new doctrine. The new prophet's name is Muludzi Uganda. He is middle-aged, wears a long beard and is of impressive presence. He was the principal Islam teacher of the former Uganda Mohammedan king, who was a well-known Islamite. The new prophet recently spent ten days in solitude in a forest, and declares he was visited by an angel who charged him with a mission. The prophet's new doctrine is mainly on Mohammedan lines, but Muludzi's followers are allowed three new vices in place of those previously permitted.

MR. MULOCK INTERVIEWED.

He Said He Wanted to Develop Anglo-Canadian Commerce.

London, March 18.—The Daily Mail publishes an interview this morning with Mr. William Mulock, the Canadian Postmaster-General, regarding his cable project of a direct and exclusive connection between England and Canada, at half the present rates. Mr. Mulock explains that he had in view the development of Anglo-Canadian commerce, and asserts that "the high American tariff almost prohibits any profitable trade with the United States for Canadian exports."

The Glasgow Exhibition.

London, March 18.—The Glasgow Expedition will be opened at Kelvingrove Park early in May by the Duke and Duchess of Fife. The object of the Exhibition is "to give a full illustration by the British Empire of its defences, its dominions and its colonies, and the progress of industry, science and art of all nationalities during the nineteenth century."

Gen. Harrison's Funeral.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 18.—Surrounded by fully 15,000 of his fellow-citizens, the remains of Benjamin Harrison were yesterday afternoon interred in the family lot in Crown Hill Cemetery. Close by the grave were the members of the family, President McKinley and other visitors of distinction and the more intimate friends of Gen. Harrison.

Engineer Chase Killed.

Scranton, Pa., March 18.—Passenger train No. 4 on the Lackawanna road, jumped the track at Slatersville, near Delaware Water Gap, Saturday afternoon, killing Engineer Lyman Chase and injuring three other trainmen.

Fireman Dumas Lost His Life.

Montreal, March 18.—Montreal has had another big fire, and the brigade has lost a valuable man. The following are the losers:

Hudon Hebert & Co., loss $100,000; insurance $267,000. Leeming, Miles & Co., loss $50,000; fully insured. Sisters of the Hotel Dieu, estimated loss on buildings $25,000; insurance $61,000. E. F. Walter & Co., loss $1,000; fully insured.

At about 5 o'clock Saturday morning a terrific explosion blew the whole of the front of the top storey of No. 58 DeBresoles street out onto the narrow breadth of the roadway. The huge mass of planks and bricks descended in a cloud of dust and smoke on a group of five firemen of No. 2 station, who were busy with the hose on the street. Amede Dumas, a fireman of No. 2 station, was fatally injured. He was still alive when his comrades carried him to the ambulance, but he died 20 minutes after his arrival at the hospital. The other injured man was Pierre Gagnon of the same station, whose hand was badly cut by falling bricks. Dumas was a young man of about 30 years of age, and only recently married.

King Will Receive Catholic Peer

London, March 18.—The King will give an audience next Thursday to Lord Horries, a Roman Catholic peer, who will move an enquiry in the House of Lords into the wording of the accession oath, as to whether the King's Protestantism cannot be asserted sufficiently without hurting the feelings of his Catholic subjects. It is the general belief that the Government has agreed to grant the request. The report of Lord Horries reception, which is made public at the King's express wish, is taken as an indication of the King's feelings in regard to the enquiry.

A Narrow Escape.

St. Catharines, Ont., March 18.—Thomas Slater of Thorold, assistant shipping clerk of the Riordan Paper Mills at Merritton, narrowly escaped being killed while at work on Saturday. A gang plank had been placed from the storehouse to a car on the N., St. C. & T. R. tracks, in the yard, and as the locomotive was shunting the plank struck Slater on the side, and threw him under the moving train. Fortunately, Mr. J. Bassett, head shipping clerk, dragged the unfortunate man from under the moving train. He was much bruised.

THE QUESTION OF SURRENDER.

Boers Discuss It But Continue Making Ammunition.

Boer Commanders Hesitate While Meeting at Pietersburg—Fate of Those Who Have Surrendered is One Matter of Consideration—Leaders in Africa in Communication With the Boer Committee at Amsterdam.

London, March 18.—A special despatch from Standerton says the Boers are massing at the stations on the Delagoa line, and the leaders are conferring daily at each station, and also at Pietersburg. Nothing has transpired except that the fate of the Boers who have surrendered is one of the subjects of the discussion. The leaders are in communication with a view of a general surrender, with the Boer Committee at Amsterdam. It is stated that the manufacture of ammunition is proceeding vigorously.

Boer Commanders at Pietersburg.

London, March 18.—A special despatch from Durban, Natal, says the Boer commanders are holding a meeting at Pietersburg in Northern Transvaal to discuss the position and the advisability of continuation of the war.

NO MERCY FOR DEWET.

He Has Placed Himself Out of the Pale of Pardon.

London, March 18.—Whatever the result of the peace negotiations between Gen. Kitchener and Gen. Botha, it is tolerably certain that the rumors of the inclusion of Gen. Dewet in any form of amnesty are not based on fact. Gen. Kitchener's personal views of the Boer leader are not known in Pall Mall, but if the War Office is consulted the officials there would rather see Dewet killed in action than taken alive.

One of the officials responsible for the direction of the affairs of the army said on Saturday: "I cannot see how Kitchener can possibly accept Dewet's surrender. If he ever gets him he will be obliged to try him for his recent alleged murders of prisoners. I have no doubt that the verdict of a court would be death, and if such a verdict should be carried out there would be a horrible howl on the Continent and in America. And, indeed, one would be sorry to see such a brave fighter meet such an end. Therefore, we can only hope that Dewet will either be let out of the country or shot in battle."

Three Thousand British Troops.

London, March 18.—Nearly 3,000 troops sailed from Southampton on Saturday for South Africa.

Lottery For the Boers.

The Hague, March 18.—M. Henri Rochefort is organizing a big lottery throughout Europe in aid of the Boers.

Boer Bandits in Cape Colony.

Linton, Cape Colony, Friday, March 15.—The Boers passed through here yesterday morning. They looted the stores, seized, foraged and burned what wheat they could not carry off.

Notorious Abel Erasmus Caught.

London, March 18.—A despatch from Gen. Kitchener, dated from Pretoria, March 16, announces that the notorious Abel Erasmus of Lydenburg, has been brought in with his family by Col. Park's column.

Dewet's Commando Broken Up

Cape Town, March 17.—Gen. Dewet's commando has been broken up at Senekal, Orange River Colony.

SHAMROCKS ON QUEEN'S TOMB.

Royal Munster Fusiliers Placed Them There by King's Permission.

Windsor, Eng., March 18.—With King Edward's special permission, a deputation of the Royal Munster Fusiliers, including Gen. Laurie and Col. Johnson, visited the mausoleum at Frogmore Sunday afternoon and laid a beautiful Celtic cross of Shamrocks and lilies upon the tomb of Queen Victoria, in memory of St. Patrick and of Queen Victoria's command a year ago to the Irish soldiers to wear shamrocks.

One Man Was Killed.

Syracuse, N. Y., March 18.—A special to the Post Standard from Cortland this morning says that Edward Fitzgerald was instantly killed and Daniel Shay and his son injured by being run down at a crossing near Truxton late Saturday night by a Lehigh Valley milk train. The boy is believed to be fatally injured.

A Schooner Cut Down.

Atlantic City, N. J., March 18.—Some time during Saturday night a three-masted schooner was sent to the bottom by an unknown craft ten miles southeast of Atlantic City. The crew was either rescued by the vessel which cut the schooner down, or were drowned.

Mr. Mcolin Challenges Mr. Campbell.

Winnipeg, March 18.—Premier Roblin has challenged Isaac Campbell to meet him in joint debate on the railway question. Mr. Campbell intimates a probable acceptance, if conditions can be arranged.

BOER CONVOY CAPTURED.

Boer Invaders Abandon Intention of Going South.

Cape Town, March 16.—A colonial division under Col. Crewe engaged the Boers near Petrusburg (a town not far from the border of Cape Colony and the Orange River Colony). The British captured the Boers' convoy.

The burghers under Commandant Kritzenger, with one pom pom, who are within 14 miles of Fort Beaufort, have been cutting the King William's Town telegraph line. They are being closely pressed by the British under Col. Gorringe.

Some of the Boer invaders have apparently abandoned their intention of coming south, and have passed northeast through Adelaide.

The commando which recently occupied Maraisburg is reported to have divided into small parties with the idea of concentrating again. Some of them passed through Kamastone yesterday. Col. Donald's column is pursuing them.

There were eleven new cases of plague yesterday.

The Plague in Cape Town.

Cape Town, March 17.—Nine new cases of bubonic plague have been officially reported in Cape Town during the last 48 hours. Six of these are colored persons, and three Europeans.

THAT EXTRA 1,000 CANADIANS.

Col. Steele Says He Holds no Commission to Recruit Them.

Ottawa, March 18.—The Citizen will to-day publish a letter from Lieut.-Col. Steele, which sets at rest the question of further recruiting in Canada for Baden-Powell's force. Lieut.-Col. Steele writes:

"I notice an item in Saturday's paper, stating that I am about to commence the work of recruiting another 1,000 men for the South African Constabulary, and that I have the necessary authority from the Imperial War Office to recruit, equip and issue commissions for the proposed force. This is entirely incorrect. I returned to Canada in command of Lord Strathcona's Horse, and have no authority to recruit, equip or issue commission to any force proceeding from Canada to South Africa."

A train of 28 Intercolonial cars, including four dining cars, has arrived here, and is now on the Canadian Atlantic track at the Central depot, ready to receive the 900 men of the constabulary, who will leave for Halifax Wednesday. The supplies for the trip were purchased in Ottawa.

Surgeon Capt. Vaux of Ottawa has received a commission in the South African Constabulary.

MORE CANADIAN SOLDIERS.

Lake Champlain Landed 28 Returning Men and 1,000 Immigrants.

Halifax, N. S., March 18.—The Royal Mail steamer Lake Champlain, which arrived yesterday from Liverpool, brought 28 returning Canadian soldiers and 1,000 steerage passengers. The immigrants were composed of different nationalities, and the majority of them are bound for the Canadian Northwest. Over 500 of them were landed here, and they left for the west on a special train yesterday. The others were taken to St. John. The steamer was detained at quarantine for several hours, owing to some cases of measles being discovered on board.

Baden-Powell Men Barred.

Ottawa, March 18.—Those who enlist in the South African Constabulary will not participate in the Canadian Patriotic Fund. On the other hand, members of the Canadian contingent who remained in South Africa to serve in other corps, have not thereby invalidated their claims upon the fund. This was decided at a meeting on Saturday of the Executive Committee of the fund association, held in the Governor-General's office. The ground taken was that the Constabulary, being distinctly a permanent Imperial organization, its members are not included among those for whose benefit the fund was raised.

BERNIER'S LIFEBOAT.

Toronto May Have a Chance at It if City's Contribution Is Large.

Ottawa, March 18.—Captain Bernier estimates that his expedition to the North Pole will cost $130,000, or $10,000 more than Nansen's. The increase will be due to salaries for the scientists who, he thinks, should accompany the expedition. Captain Bernier has opened a subscription list to supplement the grant he expects to receive from the Government and has sent copies to the Mayor of Toronto, as well as the Mayor of Ottawa. The explorer states that if Toronto gives the best inducement in the shape of a bonus or subscription the vessel will be built there.

Hon. R. R. Dobell, who has great faith in Captain Bernier, heads the Ottawa list with a subscription of $1,000. The explorer will deliver a lecture to the members of the House of Commons on Monday or Tuesday.

Quiet has been re-established in Catalonia, Spain, through arbitration on the part of the prefect.

BUTTER AND CHEESE MAKERS' CONVENTION.

THE SEVENTEENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION HELD HERE ON WEDNESDAY.

Mr. Zufelt, of the Kingston Dairy School, Speaks on Butter and Cheese Making - Mr. James Ryan was Elected President and W. J. Cameron Secretary.

The 17th annual convention of the Cheese and Butter Association of Peterborough and Lindsay was held in the council chamber on Wednesday, March 13th. The attendance was encouraging and those who thus displayed their interest were well repaid by the information received. The president, Mr. F. E. Kline, of Lakefield, occupied the chair. The forenoon meeting opened at 10.30, and the afternoon at 2 30.

The forenoon meeting was addressed by Mr. Zufelt, his subject being "Buttermaking." Mr. Zufelt, in opening, said he had not intended to deal with this subject when he came here, but as he had made butter in his time he would do the best he could to fill the place of the speakers whose place he was supposed to fill. He was glad to see the interest taken in their business by the Peterborough makers, and thought that makers now were on more friendly terms with each other than in years gone by. This, he thought a benefit, for makers to visit each other and see how cheese are made in other factories besides the one in which they work. To make good butter the first thing necessary was good milk. As most of the butter in this locality is made in the winter time it is hard to keep milk free from stable flavours and hairs from the cows. For this reason he would advise pasteurizing, as by this method a very good article can be made. If milk could be got from good healthy cows, produced from the right kind of food and free from taints, it would make finer butter without pasteurizing. The buttermaker should have a good smeller (not necessarily large or small). In cold weather it was hard to detect bad flavour, so would advise a fermentation test. Take a couple of the patrons milk, put it in a small jar and heat up to 98 or 100 per cent. To this may be added some rennet, and when thickened may be cut and run off. The curd will show the flavour. Turnips, he said, should not be fed to milch cows, as this was the most objectionable flavour that we could put on the market.

The next point is good separation. He would advise pasteurizing the whole milk and not the cream only, as it increased the capacity of the machine and returned the skim milk in a better condition. After separating would cool down to about 68° or to whatever temperature gave the best results at the different times of the season. Add starter about noon and when cream shows signs of acid, would cool down churning temperature. This gives a finer, waxer butter, as the fat has time to harden before churning. If churned too quickly, butter is liable to be soft and greasy.

Causes of different churning temperatures:—Cows long in milk. Some kinds of food also breed of cows and thin cream. The latter will break in the churn, but will not gather on account of too much liquid, the fat globules will not unite.

When ready to churn, cream should have a bright glossy appearance, with heavy, body-like syrup, and taste slightly sour. If ripened too far, it will have a dull appearance, and taste decidedly sour. Such cream will make more pounds of butter, but will not keep long. Churning should not take longer than from ½ to 1 hour.

For the English market, it is better to work twice, about three hours apart, or if salted in the churn, let stand for 40 minutes and then work. Packing should be done in 56 lb. boxes lined with parchment paper, the butter packed solid. For shipping, a sack should be used over the box.

At the conclusion of Mr. Zufelt's address the meeting adjourned until 2.30 in the afternoon.

AFTERNOON MEETING.

Upon the president opening the afternoon meeting the secretary read the minutes of last annual meeting, which were on motion confirmed.

Election of officers was the next order of business and resulted in Mr. James Ryan being elected president and Mr. D. J. Cameron, secretary.

Mr. Ryan on taking the chair, gave an appropriate address, after which he called on Mr. Zufelt, he taking for his subject cheese making.

In cheese making, as in butter making, pure milk and clean utensils were essential. The patrons should supply the milk in as good condition as possible and the cheese maker on his part should endeavor to produce as high a standard of cheese as possible. The best of supplies always used.

A great deal of the bad flavors are caused from carelessness either at home or in the factory, from neglect in keeping utensils thoroughly clean. This is one point we try to impress on the makers at the the school to make clean, not only to look clean. Bad flavors caused from bacterial germs may develop in cheese, weeks after it is made, while food flavors are worst when first milked. The instructors at present have to spend too much time in testing milk while their time should be spent in instructing the cheese maker and patrons and trying to raise the quality of milk and cheese. The fault of a great many poor cheese lies with the producers of the milk ; give any average cheesemaker of to-day good milk and he will make a good cheese

The instructors were trying to get the Eastern Dairymen's Association to take up this work and want the cheese and butter makers' support, to apply to the Government for special men for to test the milk.

The Montreal buyers had sent out circulars advising factory men not to make early cheese. It was hard to stop this practice as there was always a buyer to buy and factory men to take advantage of it, although I think Peterborough section does not produce much early cheese. A quick curing cheese may be made by using more rennet ; rennet he said, did not hasten the curing, but it had some effect on the moisture held in the cheese and moisture hastened the curing.

Cut the curd uniformly, as this has a great deal to do with the working of it. The larger you cut the curds, the harder to expel the moisture. The moisture and lactic acid work together. Therefore the more moisture you retain in the curd, the less acid you want to develop. The cheesemaker must use his judgment, and cook the curd to whatever degree of temperature gives the best results. As this will vary at the different seasons of the year, and also in different localities. A great many cheese are spoiled by using too much starter. The acid develops too far before the curd is cooked properly. This is where mistakes have been made in years past. We paid too much attention to the acid and not the cooking.

I would not draw off the whey until the curd is firm. In handling fast working milk, I would set at a lower temperature, say 80°. Use a little more rennet—cut finer, say 4 or 5 times or more. In extreme cases heat up quicker and a little higher. As soon as heated run off the whey until you can see the curds. The weight of curd so close together helps to expel the moisture. When whey is removed you might wash a little with pure water at a temperature of 98 degrees, being careful not to wash out too much moisture. Mill early and wash again, if acid is not checked. Do not salt too soon. Leave mellow down well before and after salting before pressing.

In cooking up a normal working vat, stir for about fifteen minutes after cutting. Before turning on the steam heat up slowly until the desired temperature is reached. For my part I like to work slowly for the first three or four hours and have the curd come along faster later on. I have taken one vat of milk, divided into two vats and set one at once, let the other ripen half an hour and set, and the whey would draw off them both at the same time.

Draw off the whey with one-eight or one-quarter of an inch of acid and stir dry, keep turned over in, the vat after matting until curd showed from one and one half to two inches on the hot iron, then mill and stir occasionly until salted.

After salting leave lie half an hour when it should be ready to go to press. Press for three-quarters of an hour, then dress neatly, and put back to press for twenty hours or more if possible, before putting on the shelves in the curing room. A good curing room was a necessity, as a few experiments carried on at Kingston school showed it a profitable investment. A starter can be made by selecting the best milk that comes to the factory, pasteurize it, take it out in the atmosphere and pour until cooled down to 80 degrees. Then put away in a close can until sour, usually for about thirty six hours, this will give a good acid flavour usually.

The address brought out a great deal of profitable discussion

Mr. J. B. Oke produced a number of letters from English dealers complaining of bad boxes and brittleness in cheese. Butter packages were good, but the salting too high and too coarse in the grain.

At the close, votes of thanks were tendered Mr. Zufelt for his instructive address and the Council for the use of the hall.

The meeting adjourned subject to the call of the president;

Might Be Out of Debt.

"My case is peculiar," remarked the letter B.

"How so?" chorused the other letters of the alphabet.

"Well, when it comes to making 'boodle,' I always lead, and, you will notice, there is absolutely no reason why I should be in 'debt.'"—Exchange.

Higher Education of Women.

Mrs. Alice Freeman Palmer, ex-president of Wellesley college, says that "of the 60 colleges and universities of this country of the highest standing only nine refuse to women their degrees, Princeton being the only university in the United States that refuses to confer honors on women. Every college founded since the war of the rebellion has been founded for both men and women. This naturally affects the condition of life in both the city and country. Practically all schools below the high school are in the hands of women, and 80 per cent of the teachers in New England high schools are women. Formerly if a woman studied the sciences, philosophy or the classics it was said she would lose her health, religion and morals. But time has proved just the contrary."

Men Who Handle Millions.

The government is more trustful of the employees in its financial center than is any private corporation. In the United States treasury the whole output of the nation's currency is handled by men who are under neither surveillance nor bond. The paying teller handles $40,000,000 or $50,000,000 a year. The exchange clerk has every day $60,000 in change at hand. The money in charge of the keeper of the cash-room runs from $170,000,000 upward, and the chief of the issue division handles millions every day. Any of these men could get away with enormous amounts of money and be reasonably secure against detection for a considerable length of time. Nevertheless, peculations from the treasury have been few and small in amount during its history. There is an axiom in the department which runs as follows:

"Wherever money is handled there is a point at which the honesty of the individual must be the main reliance."

And so the treasury dispenses with the services of spotters. However, private business interests involving the handling of large sums of money are not likely to follow this example. Spotters may be an evil, but they are a necessity in the present phase of human development, and until some psychological chemist devises a preparation to make men honest the type is likely to persist.—S. H. Adams in Ainslee's.

A Precocious Baby.

The baby was only 4, but she was an only child and had lived with her parents largely in hotels, and she was a self possessed little maiden. She was always a model of propriety as to manners, so that when one day a young man, a friend of her papa's and mamma's and a great admirer of the little girl, asked to take her out to luncheon all by herself she was allowed to go. A very tiny girl may go without a chaperon sometimes. The little girl was to do the ordering. She undertook this responsibility with confidence and, taking up the menu, studied it with as much gravity as if the letters were not as unreadable to her as Greek would have been to her mamma.

"I will have some meat and some potatoes," she said gravely, "and by and by I may have some ice cream."

The order was given, the cream followed, and the little lady was an altogether charming, dainty and sweet little companion for luncheon. The meal ended with the dignity with which it had begun, the young woman donned her wraps, and as the young man was preparing to escort her to the door she remarked gravely:

"And now I will have some flowers."

It was the last touch of grown upness, and it was the proudest young man in New York who took home a pretty and dignified baby with a big bunch of roses in her arms.

A Patent Hole.

Of the many extraordinary things for which patent protection has been granted a hole seems to be the most useless and impossible. Yet there are many patents for holes, and, what is more, the patents are valid and valuable. One of the best relates to holes in ships' bottoms for the admission and escape of water to the condensers.

Every one who has seen a screw steamer under way will have noticed a stream of water issuing from her side, a little above the water line; that water is pumped into the ship for the purpose of condensing the waste steam that leaves the cylinders and returning it as water to the boilers.

At last it occurred to a genius that if a hole were made in the bottom of the ship forward of the condenser and another abaft it, the water would circulate around the condenser without the aid of a pump. It is for the shape of these holes, so that they will offer less resistance to the water when the ship is traveling fast, that several patents have been granted.

A Testamentary Puzzle.

An Englishman who recently died had three children, one son and two daughters, and he mentioned all of them in his will.

The first clause is, "I leave my piano to Mary Elizabeth, when Arthur has done with it." The other clause is, "To Susan Jane—she may take whatever Arthur wishes to give to her."

There is no doubt of Arthur's standing in the document, but the pointed question is raised, Are Mary Elizabeth and Susan Jane beneficiaries under the will?

THE EXPERT'S THEORY.

It Was Too Inclusive and Weakened Him as a Witness.

One of the older members of the Baltimore bar tells this anecdote of the late Severn Teackle Wallis as illustrating the cleverness and sarcasm of Mr. Wallis:

Mr. Wallis was defending the will of a wealthy testator, and, as the lawyers say, when the estate is large a lawyer "will wrestle with a will with a will." A prominent physician was called to testify for those contesting the will. The doctor became restless under the lengthy and exhaustive cross examination of Mr. Wallis, and finally he petulantly exclaimed:

"Oh, Mr. Wallis, I believe the testator was insane!"

Mr. Wallis kept his temper and said quietly: "Doctor, you are the first person who has ever intimated in or out of court that the testator was insane. Why do you say he was insane?"

"I believe," the doctor replied, "that every man is more or less insane on some one subject."

"Is it your deliberate professional opinion," Mr. Wallis then asked, "expressed here in court under oath, that every man is more or less insane on some subject?"

"Yes," the doctor replied; "I will say here under oath that from my reading, knowledge and experience I believe that every man is more or less insane on some one subject."

Then Mr. Wallis said in that fine tone of sarcasm for which he was noted, "Doctor, has it ever occurred to you that you are insane on the subject of insanity?"

Immediately the doctor fired up and exclaimed, "But, Mr. Wallis, I am not insane!"

Mr. Wallis arose and said: "Doctor, according to your own sworn theory, you must be insane on some subject. I pronounce you insane on the subject of insanity."

Court, jury and spectators laughed aloud, and nothing more was said about the testator being insane.

THE BLACK BEAR.

At rustle of leaf the red fawn leaps;
Its mother trembles while she sleeps.
A whisper breaks the forest hush,
And both are off through the underbrush.

But not a fawn in wild wood born
So timid as he of the coat unshorn,
This mighty one who shuffles along
And never dreams that he is strong;
A cowardly bully, put to flight
By hares that romp in the still twilight,
Barked at by squirrel, by bird cry stung,
Belabored by every forest tongue.

Come—a black flash—ere you can make out
What all in the wood are scolding about.

SCARLET AND GOLD.

THE STORY OF A GIRL AND A BRITISH SOLDIER.

On the line of a modest little turning off from one of the main arteries of London stands a pottery with conical masses of brick pierced near the ground with cabin windows, through which one may see brawny men with bare arms and shirts open to the waist raking the furnaces that never die; powerful fellows are these, and in the fierce heat and dazzling glare the sweat stands upon their brows and breasts and arms until they seem life-like figures cast in redhot gold. Upon the other side is a building which would be pretty anywhere, but which by virtue of the contrast with its opposite neighbor is worthy of being perpetuated on canvas by some master of the brush.

It is a small cottage built of white-washed cob and covered with a steep roof of old tiles. It stands end on to the street, and facing the front door is a barn exactly like the cottage save that it has no windows. The intervening garden space is protected by a wooden fence, home made of odds and ends of timber, so that some of it is of upright planks and some of it of undressed poles laid horizontally, the whole looking unconsidered and naturally artistic. A kissing gate in the middle of the fence—I wonder is there such another gate in London?—gives access to the garden, and the only touch of modern days upon the place is a gas lamp on the cinder footpath.

It was in September, and the westering sun fell upon the place, bringing out all the rich glow in the tiles, tinging the cob walls with a rosy flush and concentrating itself in the scarlet flowers of a hedge of beans and in the reds and yellows of a bank of single dahlias. Already the gas in the lamp had been lighted, but the flame showed wan and sickly against the clear blues and ambers in the sky. An old man in a frayed black coat was sitting in a Windsor chair by the open door, a clay pipe in his nervous fingers and a white mug with a blue band round it standing full of beer close by him on the window sill. And by the gate, with her back to the old man, stood a girl of two or three and twenty listening to what he said, with a sad and tired expression on her face, listening passively, making no reply.

She was a superb specimen of young womanhood, with grandly molded limbs and a head of more than common power borne proudly on the round white column of her throat and neck, a womanly woman, too, with large eyes curtained by soft lashes, and a mouth of which the sweetness softened the determined squareness of the jaw. In the mellow evening light which brought out every color in a marvelous degree, her lilac blouse became a thing of beauty, emphasizing the strong and supple roundness of her arms and falling gently on the soft curves of her bosom. Only the look of apathy marred the perfection of the picture that she made, and when for a moment it vanished at something her grandfather said it was replaced by an expression of disgust, almost of dread.

His voice rose thin and querulous:

"I'm not driving you to it. I'm not putting any what you might call compulsion on you to do it. I'm only asking why you won't do it, and that's what I want to know."

He paused, waiting for the answer he did not seem to expect:

"The rent was paid on Friday, and the club was paid today, and there's five and ninepence left, and that's the last. 'Tisn't for my sake I'm asking you to do it. S'pose it's only fancy that there's any disgrace in going to the Union. But, fancy or not, the mother thinks there is, and she don't want to go. And I don't want her to go. And I can't save her from going. And you can."

The sentences came slowly, punctuated by full stops, but the girl did not move, and the old man sucked at his empty pipe and spoke again.

"Seven and forty years ago she came here, and it's hard that a woman who's lived so long in a place can't live in it for the little time left to her to live anywhere. She feels it, does mother. She don't say so, but she feels it, I know." For the first time there was a note of tenderness in the quavering voice. "'Jess can't bring herself to it,' she said, 'and it's not fair to ask her to try.' That's what she said, but if she only had seven and forty days to spend she couldn't spend 'em here on five and ninepence. I put it to you, now, could she?"

The proposition was undeniable and required no reply.

"When a man can't work, he sets to thinking things out. 'Tisn't for my sake I'm telling you, Jessie, and I've been thinking of this. If so be as mother and I goes to the Union, you can go into service, and then you needn't do it, but it's an ill kindness transplanting such old trees as we, and I makes out that mother deserves some returns for all she's done for you, and if you do do it she can 'bide here along until she's carried out for good and all, and there'll be a bit from Christopher to pay somebody to do the chores for her. He's a man of his word, is Christopher, and he told me so, and mother could accept of it from him. 'Twouldn't be charity if so be as you do it."

Relentlessly and pitilessly the old man hammered the phrase into his grandchild's brain. Fluency came with the speaking, and he drove on with his argument.

"And what is it I'm asking you to do—for mother's sake, mind you, not mine? Marry a man as worships the ground you tread on and a steady man as'll be a good and faithful husband to you. His business is prospering too. He've got another man going round with a pram and bought two more cows only a fortnight ago. It's a sound thing, is milk. I don't say he's a fine figure of a man, but he loves you true, and he'll make it all right for mother." Then suddenly a pitiful vibration rang in his voice. "For mother's sake, Jess."

"I hate him," said Jess, and the quiet way in which she said it carried conviction even into her grandfather's mind, but he carried on the struggle, the poor, frail old man, for love of his even more frail old wife, pleading with the young woman to sacrifice her love on the altar of piety.

"You'd get used to him soon," he said. "He's a steady man, is Christopher."

Then Jess turned round and looked at him, and the setting sun or perhaps the thought within her dyed her cheeks and throat scarlet.

"There's James," she said simply, and the name aroused her grandfather's anger so that he forgot the necessity of diplomacy in such a matter as this, and irritation and scorn strung his voice to an even shriller pitch.

"James!" he said scornfully. "And what's the good of James? You're like all other girls. Go mad on a worthless soldier man because he's tricked out in scarlet and gold that's no more use to him than 'tis to those dahlias by you."

"Jem's a good man," said Jess.

"A good man, and a better lover, I s'pose. Goes away for three mortal years and never sends so much as a postcard to say he's alive or dead! Pretty sort of lover to my thinking!"

"He'll come back," the girl said wistfully.

"And what'll he find? You gone, the Lord knows where, me in the Union and mother in the grave. Don't waste another thought upon him. Take a man who loves you and can afford to keep you. Do it, Jess."

From sheer weariness Jess seemed to give way.

"Go indoors, granddad, and I'll think about it. You'll get chilled sitting there after sundown. I'll think about it, I promise." And, satisfied for the moment, the old man shuffled indoors.

The sun went down, and still Jess stood alone. The rose tints faded from the whitewashed walls, the color of the tiles deepened into madder and brown, and the gas lamp shed a pale light upon the girl's head, making her look white and ill. One shrinks from trying to picture the suffering she endured, as great perhaps as that of Abraham on his way to offer up Isaac as a sacrifice to the Lord. For half an hour she must have remained in the same passionless attitude and then roused herself as firm steps rang from the main road.

Two firm hands grasped her shoulders and turned her quickly round; two steady brown eyes looked squarely into hers; two lips were pressed upon her unresisting mouth. With a little sob of joy and great relief, she put up her hands and hid her face upon his breast, while, for a moment, the big man was too glad, too moved, to speak.

"You've waited for me, Jess?"

No word of reproach for his silence fell from her. Explanations might come by and by. It was enough that Jamie was here.

"You're only just in time," she whispered brokenly, and in answer to the look of inquiry upon his face she said: "They want me to marry Christo Hall, the dairyman, and it would have been the only way to save them from the parish. Grannie's never asked me, but she looks at me till I daren't go near her, and tonight granddad's been begging me again to take him for her sake. He'd have allowanced them, and tomorrow I'd have said 'Yes.'"

The man stroked her hair.

"You don't love him, dear?"

Her answer was a passionate caress.

"And you love me just as much as you did in all my war paint?"

Jess smiled through her tears.

"I love you better without it. It only meant you were the queen's man then. In these clothes you are mine." She laughed at a recollection. "Granddad said just now that the scarlet and gold was as useless to you as it is to these dahlias."

She snapped two from the bushes and put them in his coat.

"Granddad said that, did he?" said James. "Well, I'm off scarlet now; but, thank the Lord, there's more gold than there was. Take me in, Jess, and let me ease his mind."

And presently they went indoors together.—Mail and Express.

Business Is Business.

He is a kind and considerate man, but at the same time he realizes that business is business and that one never knows what may happen. The woman was the man's tenant, and she paid her rent always with notes which her brother indorsed. The notes were good, and the arrangement was satisfactory on all sides. But time went on, and the brother died. Then the landlord, realizing that the woman had been his tenant for some years, thought to himself that it would be only courteous for him to write a note of condolence. This he did forthwith, and it was a kind and sympathetic note, quite after the conventional style until it came to a P. S., which would be unusual in itself, and in this instance was particularly so.

"P. S.," wrote the man, "Whose name will take the place of your brother's on the notes?"—New York Times.

Washington Ghosts.

Ghost stories for some mysterious reason have been revived of late in Washington. It is told again how the face of an old woman was depicted clearly on one of the White House pillars the day President McKinley received word that his mother was dead. Capitol employees entertain their friends with the story of the shadow of a general looking like Washington between pillars in Statuary hall at the capitol. A former senate page, now grown to man's size and employed at the White House, says that when lightning strikes the copper statue of Freedom on the capitol dome it rings loudly and clearly like the famous bell at Philadelphia in the days of the Declaration of Independence.—Washington Letter.

Sienkiewicz.

Sienkiewicz takes tea twice and coffee once during his hours of literary labor, with an occasional extra portion of white wine and raw eggs to stimulate his flagging imagination. It is probably in the wine and egg period that he composes accounts of Nero banquets and similar purple prose matter—"ruddy rhetoric," as Frederic Harrison would call it. The novelist is pictured as an indulgent and affectionate father and a man of strong domestic traits. His chief amusement is boar hunting.—New York Tribune.

A Test.

"Do you think as a dramatic critic that Silcom is conscientious?"

"I know he is. He always has to buy his tickets."—Harper's Bazar.

FOWLS AND THEIR FRUIT.

Dry earth is a good material to apply under the roosts.

The nests should be cleaned regularly to keep them from vermin.

The food for chicks should be placed on boards in order that their feeding places may be kept clean.

Pullets may be kept for laying when the eggs are sold, but for hatching the hens should be kept.

One advantage in raising turkeys is that they can secure a good part of their food from the fields.

Filth will breed lice, and more fowls and chicks die from lice than from all other diseases to which fowls are subject.

Fowls seldom tire of milk. They may eat too much grain or meat for their health, but milk in any form is palatable and healthy.

It is not necessary that fowls should have costly food. In fact highly concentrated food is a positive injury. They should have a certain amount of coarse food to keep them healthy.

The flock of hens kept busy scratching does not contract the vices peculiar to those fowls that have nothing to do, and they keep in good flesh and health. The clean plumage and bright red comb indicate that egg foods are unnecessary

PEN AND BRUSH.

Paul Laurence Dunbar, the negro poet, ran an elevator for two years.

Hall Caine, who has never doubted his ability to outshine Dickens, likes to be told he looks like Shakespeare.

The new Boston home of John S. Sargent, the painter, is largely furnished with things collected by him last autumn during his European trip. The furniture is largely Italian. The studio and dressing room for sitters are described as magnificent.

Mr. Zangwill is not an author who can write fiction in a systematic, businesslike way. He is obliged to wait until the spirit moves him, and when thus moved he works rapidly and persistently until his book is finished. He has been idle for the last three months.

It is not generally remembered that Maurice Thompson, who wrote a number of successful novels, the list extending from "The Tallahassee Girl" to "Alice of Old Vincennes," was a Confederate veteran. He was one of the Indiana writers who are destined, in General Lew Wallace's opinion, to make the Hoosier State the Athens of America.

THE DOMINIE.

There are three Christian Science congregations in Cincinnati.

J. Harvey Howland of Port Deposit, Md., has offered to build a church there for the Presbyterians at a cost of $10,000 if the congregation will erect a fence and furnish the heating apparatus.

The Grace Episcopal church property in Cleveland has been sold to a company of local capitalists. The congregation will seek a new location in a section of the city remote from the business district.

M. Loyson known throughout the world as Pere Hyacinthe, has joined the Greek Orthodox church, the ecumenical patriarch receiving in person at Athens the confession of the faith of the former Carmelite friar.

The Right Rev. James McGolderick, bishop of the diocese of Duluth, who has lived in this country 33 years, took out his second papers only a few days ago. He took out his first papers years ago and was a regular voter until the constitution of Minnesota was changed to require that voters take out their second papers before exercising their rights as citizens.

Association of Ideas.

The 3-year-old son of a flat dweller, who had heard his father complain occasionally because the janitor was drunk and "in no condition to attend to his work," went to the flat above his own last week and rang the bell. When Mrs. Blank answered it, the young man said:

"Please, Mrs. Blank, can't your little girl come down and play with me?"

"Not today," said Mrs. Blank; "she is in no condition to play."

"What's the matter?" asked the boy anxiously. "Is she drunk?"

When the Price Is Paid.

A big indemnity is what
John Chinaman must pay.
The price assures that he will not Forget the proper way
Which he in future years should walk.
His tendencies so rash
The nations now propose to balk
By gathering in his cash.

And who will pay this mighty price?
The empress? Not at all.
She'll have her rice and garments nice
Whatever may befall.
Some Chinaman must feel the touch
Of fierce privation's fang,
But we are certain of this much—
It won't be Li Hung Chang.

It won't be any mandarin
Who life's enjoyment looks
When the authorities begin
To clamor for the tax.
But, oh, ye coolies, sore dismayed,
Ye sad and suffering elves,
When that indemnity is paid,
Prepare to bump yourselves!

Life on the Rail.

Mr. E. M. Cooke, Railway Secretary of Y.M.C.A., Toronto, was greeted with a large audience of men, yesterday, in Association Hall. Much interest was manifested in the address, which was of a decided gospel character, illustrated by incidents from the life of railway men. The quartette composed of Messrs. Watson, Froude, Hendren and Dolge, sang "Where is my Wandering Boy."

Obituary.

The death occurred in Ennismore on Saturday morning of Ellen Twomey, wife of Mr Wm Gifford, of that township. Deceased has been suffering from grippe for only a short time previous to her demise. The late Mrs Gifford was the daughter of the late Patrick Twomey, of Ennismore, and was seventy-four years of age. She had been a resident of Ennismore all her life, residing within one mile of where her death occurred. About 52 years ago she married her husband, who with four sons survive her. These are Wm and Larry, of Ennismore, James, of Chinook, Montana, and Thos, of British Columbia. The funeral took place at 8 a.m. Monday morning, March 18th to Ennismore Cemetery.

Grand Trunk New Fast Trains.

Official announcement is made by the management of the Grand Trunk Railway that it has been definitely decided to put on two new fast express trains between Chicago and and New York early this summer. The trains will run solid, leaving Chicago at a convenient hour in the morning, arriving at Buffalo early the following day and New York early in the afternoon; they will leave New York in the morning, reaching Buffalo early in the evening, and Chicago before noon the following day. These trains, which will consist of combination baggage and smoking cars, standard Grand Trunk coaches, the finest Pullman cars that this well known establishment turn out and the popular cafe-parlor cars, put into service some time ago on the "International Limited" and "Eastern Flyer" are now being constructed. The large ten-wheeled Morse-type engines will be used to haul them.

These trains will, without doubt, become popular, operating as they will through a country full of beautiful scenery, and passing over the Grand Trunk single-arch, double-track steel bridge over the Niagara Gorge, from which the view of the falls and the whirlpool rapids is something magnificent; then passing through the "Land o' Lakes" in Central Western New York, giving a glimpse of the captivating view of one of America's most aroadian spots and the Wyoming Valley, thence through Mauch Chunk, which has been called the Switzerland of America.

Y.W.C.A. BIBLE READING.

There will be a Bible reading given by Miss Carson, of New York, at 3.30 to-morrow afternoon at the Young Women's Christian Association, 163 Brock street. All women welcome.

Yesterday afternoon a very interesting and able address was given by Miss Carson from the great bread chapter John, 6, 1-14. There was a very large attendance, the rooms being full.

TWO STRATHCONAS.

They Say That Peterborough Ben was Left in England by Mistake.

Troopers McCullough and Cook, of the Strathcona Horse, are in town for a day or two, both having relatives residing in this vicinity and both having lived near Peterborough some years ago. When asked concerning "Peterborough Ben," the dog presented to the Strathconas by Mr. R. S. Davidson, of town, the troopers stated that the dog had been taken as far as London on the return trip, but missed the boat on which the troopers were leaving England. A trooper was sent back for him, but missed the boat himself. Both man and dog are expected on the next liner.

JEWISH EVANGELIST.

He Speaks in St. Andrew's Church in the Morning and in the Murray Street Baptist at Night.

Rev. Mark Lev, a Christian Jew and missionary to the Jews in Cleveland, Ohio, gave a most interesting address in St. Andrew's church yesterday. Rev. Mr. Potter read the Scripture lessons in Isa. lxii and Romans xi, which are worthy of careful reading by all Christians.

Mr. Lev preached from Ps. cii, 23-28, a very forcible and intensely practical exposition of the Scripture in its application to the great movement that was now going on among the Jews throughout the world.

In the evening the Rev. W. W. Wagg, of Charlotte St. Church and Rev. J. E. Potter, of St. Andrew's, exchanged pulpits.

The choir sang with excellent spirit "Bow Down Thine Ear," Mr. Frank Sollitt taking the solo parts in strong voice.

Mr. Lev preached in the evening at the Bethany Tabernacle to a large congregation. He spoke on Ezekiel 37, proving that the dry bones of the house of Israel are now shaking throughout the world, indicating thereby that the time is near when the Jews will be restored to their land and to Christ their Messiah. He will speak this evening at the Y.P.C.E. Murray St. Baptist Church, and Wednesday evening at the Charlotte St. Methodist Church.

PERSONAL.

Miss Lillie Fitzgerald, Ashburnham, is home, after visiting with friends and relatives in Lakefield.

Mrs F E Walden will be at home to her friends on Thursday and Friday this week at No. 595 George street.

Mr and Mrs Will Tapson, of Bowmanville, spent Sunday in town, the guest of Mr Sherlock, Stewart street.

Mr Norman Bell's many friends will be pleased to know that he is recovering from his recent illness at his home in Toronto.

The engagement has been announced of Dr Victor McWilliams, of town, and Miss Josephine Shepherd, daughter of Mr. O. B. Shepherd, of Toronto.

The Examiner is pleased to be in a position to state that Rev. W. L. Armitage has decided not to accept the offer of the Rectory at Uxbridge.

Pauline has returned to Peterborough, to play a return date, having yielded to the pressure brought to bear, by those interested in his wonderful work in mind reading and hypnotism. He opens on Tuesday evening, in the Opera House, and holds the boards for the remainder of the week. Crowded houses should greet him.

The Minden Echo says.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Boswell of Peterborough, have returned to Minden, where we understand Mr. Boswell is purchasing a home in which he intends to reside.

The Lakefield News in referring to Mr. Hartley's fancy skating in the village last week says:—The spectators were greatly interested in the fancy skating, and were given a rare treat in that line. Mr. Hartley is a figure skater of the first order, and he has the many different movements down fine. His specialities are something out of the usual, and requires a steady head and great skill to perform them. Mr. Hartley is the professional champion figure and trick skater of Canada, and his exhibition that night fully sustained his reputation.

The Examiner has completed arrangements for having a new plant installed by the latter part of the week and will by that time be in a position to fulfil all advertising contracts and orders in job work. A telephone has already been placed in position in our new premises. 411 George St. No. 57 will find us as usual.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

How the Feast was Observed in Peterborough.

Sunday was St. Patrick's day, and the sons and daughters of Erin, as well as their descendants sported the sprig of shamrock or its equivalent, a piece of green ribbon.

At St. Peter's cathedral the feast was observed at the different masses by the introduction of Irish melodies as instrumental selections, together with the rendition of that soul stirring hymn, "All Praise to St. Patrick."

At 8 o'clock mass the boys' choir, under the direction of Miss Maggie McCabe rendered the hymn to St. Patrick, the solo being admirably taken by Master Morrow. Miss Lottie Bell, violinist, also assisted in the musical portion of the service, and her selections of Irish melodies during the service were delightfully rendered.

The pupils of the Convent constituted the choir at 9.15 mass and hymns arranged to Irish melodies were the feature of the service, as well as voluntary and recessional arrangements of Irish airs on the piano.

At 10.30 mass the choir under the direction of Miss Hurley sang the hymn to St. Patrick, and instrumental selections of Irish melodies by Miss Hurley were also introduced.

At vespers Ven. Archdeacon Casey preached a sermon on behalf of the charitable funds of St. Vincent de Paul Society.

The reverend gentlemen's discourse was of course in reference to the great work of the Apostle of Ireland. He began by referring to the advent of St. Patrick to Ireland, how eagerly the Irish embraced the faith, and who tenaciously they clung to it in spite of centuries of persecution, until to-day it is one of the bright gems in the church's diadem. In eloquent terms he described the trials and tribulations which the Irish submitted to for ages, and in concluding trusted that Almighty God, who had sent them their blessed Apostle, St. Patrick, would by His divine power bless them by the restoration of the rights and liberties of which they were robbed.

The collection taken up during the service was a liberal one.

SICK BENEFIT ASSOCIATION.

Formed Amongst the Employees of the C. G. E. Co.

At a representative meeting of the employees of the Canadian General Electric Co on Saturday evening last, it was considered advisable to form a Sick Benefit Association in connection with the factory, and a committee was appointed composed of Messrs R E Layfield, M Mowry, R E Harding, A Morrison E E Lord, W H Smith Joe Begley and C B Robertson to frame a constitution and bylaws, and lay out a scheme for such Association.

Mr McGill, Mechanical Supt, gave the meeting some very good advice regarding the matter, and also gave a general idea of how such societies were conducted in other factories.

The committee expect to have all arrangements completed in a few days, when a further report will be submitted.

A SUGAR BEET FACTORY.

Another New Industry May be Established in Peterborough.

On Saturday afternoon the committee recently appointed to deal with the matter of the Beet Sugar Industry, met with the following members present:—Messrs. D. W. Dumble, Board of Trade; G. W. Fitzgerald, Warden of the county; T. H. G. Dunne, Mayor of Peterboro; and E. M. Elliott and Wm. Collins of the Farmers' Institute.

Mr. Collins was elected chairman and Mr. Elliott secretary of the committee, and it was resolved that a mass meeting be held during the first week in April, when addresses will be delivered by speakers sent by the Provincial Minister of Agriculture. The object is to so arouse interest as to result in the establishing of a factory here.

NEWS NUGGETS

The postponed meeting of the Ashburnham Reading Circle, will be held this evening, at 7.30, at Miss Fair's residence.

—Mr. R. H. Leary and R. B. McGill, are the sureties for the new market clerk, Mr. J. J. Hutchinson.

—The Sunday School Rally, under the auspices of the County S. S. Association, has been postponed from Thursday of this week, till Friday 29th, on which occasion they will join with the town association.

—Next summer it is likely that telephone connection will be established with Mount Julian, Stony Lake. Mr Chas. Armstrong undertakes to furnish the poles and the Telephone Co. will do the rest. A number of the cottagers are giving financial assistance.

The Rev. A. W. MacKenzie, of Lakefield, will read a paper on "Charles Kingsley" at the next meeting of the Fortnightly Club, which will be held in the Y.M.C.A. Hall on Tuesday evening, March 19th, at 8 o'clock. Mr. MacKenzie's paper is sure to be very interesting, and as this will probably be the last Fortnightly Club meeting for this season, it is hoped that there will be a large attendance.

Return Engagement.

Read what a St. Thomas paper says of Pauline, the renowned hypnotist: "At the Duncombe last night Pauline held forth with great success, the house being exceptionally well filled. His most important feat was the breaking of a large stone on the body of one of his subjects. Selecting a well built young man Pauline placed the subject under his influence. The rigid form was then suspended in the air on the backs of two chairs, and six powerful men lifted the 500 pound stone on the body. Three cracks from the sledge hammer in the hands of a powerful blacksmith, and the stone fell to the floor broken in two places. The mind reading tests were executed satisfactorily." Opera House, three nights and Saturday matinee, commencing Tuesday, March 18th. Admission 10, 15 and 25 cents.

CHURCH CHIMES.

Rev. Mr. Potter occupied the pulpit at Charlotte Street Church, last night.

Mr. Crombie preached at St. Paul's yesterday evening.

DIED.

BELL—At 193 Aylmer Street, Peterborough, on Sunday, 17th March, 1901, Typhena, relict of the late William Bell, M.D.

HOCKEY.

The following letter from Mr. Donald Hogarth, of Sault Ste. Marie, to Mr Harry King, of town, may prove interesting. Mr. Hogarth, it will be remembered, attended the Peterborough Business College, and was a tower of strength on the Peterborough lacro se team, along with his friend Mooney, to whom he refers in his letter. Mr Hogarth says:—

SAULT STE. MARIE, ONT.,
MARCH 9TH, '01.

DEAR HARRY—

I see that the Colts landed the Junior Championship and am just dr poing you a line to express my joy and to extend my congratulation, for, Harry, I have a pretty soft spot in my heart for old Peterborough. You fellows want to keep t gether and go in for higher honors next year. We have a pret y good hockey team here. It includ s an old Peterborough graduate—Sam Adams. He has been out of the game for a number of years but you will probably remember him. We brought Varsity up from Toronto last Monday night and while they beat us 8 to 6, I think we are a better team than they are. We had them beat 6-3 in the first half but could not stand the pace. Our rink has only been open four weeks and some four team we can turn out against. We have a cverpoint that can di-count anything in the O H A., so the Varsity boys say any way.

We are trying to get up a good lacrosse team here and are getting in players. If any of the Peterborough boys are looking for jobs you might drop me a line and I will try and place them. We purpose forming a league between Sudbury, Copper Cliffe, Soo, Ont., and Soo, Mich., and have the winners play off with the Western champions.

Mooney and I are both working for the Clergue's and have good jobs, Mooney especially has a soft thing. We are both going down your way for a trip next summer so look out for me. I started once before but only got as far as Ottawa and there fell off the Christmas Tree.

Let us hear from you, Harry. Regards to all the boys.

Yours,
D. HOGARTH.
Care Leland Hotel.

The banquet to be tendered to the Peterborough Colts, will take place in the Oriental hotel, Friday night.

The committee in charge of Tuesday night's masquerade hockey match is to be complimented on the energy with which they have thrown themselves into the work. The teams and officers have already been chosen, and the costumes are to be of the freakish possible nature. A football is to be used instead of a puck, and the other innovations introduced into the promise to provide a rare night's fun.

LACROSSE.

The Vatican Lacrosse Club organizes tonight at the Oriental hotel. A full attendance of players is requested.

GOLF.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Golf Club will be held at the office of Messrs. Hatton & Bradburn, this evening at 8 o'clock. Business to be enacted: the election of officers for the ensuing year; the dealing of such reports as may be presented and the general business affairs of the club requiring consideration. Owing to the removal from town of two of the chief officers of the executive, it is hoped that as many members as can make it convenient will be present, that the votes of the majority of club members may be recorded on the selection of the executive.

REAL ESTATE.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—An article in your morning contemporary under the caption of "A new swindle or how a real estate agent worked a fraud upon farmers" appears to us as being a reflection, and certainly detrimental to the interests of honest and honourable real estate dealers. We deny any say connection with the charge, and think the writer should give the name of the guilty party.

Yours, etc.,
T. HURLEY & Co.

COAL STRIKE TO COME.

Joint Conference Suggested, But if Not Held Miners Go Out April 1.

Hazleton, Pa., March 18.—The United Mine Workers' Convention adjourned shortly before noon on Saturday. The convention, after an all-morning conference, adopted a resolution instructing the National Executive Board to negotiate for another joint conference with the operators, failing to secure which the board has authority to declare a general strike in the anthracite fields, probably to go into effect April 1.

Consternation Caused.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., March 18.—The action of the Hazleton Convention caused much consternation in business circles here. The operators here say it does not seem possible that the coal companies will consent to meet the miners in joint conference.

Rev. Elijah Kellogg Dead.

Harpswell, Me., March 18.—Rev. Elijah Kellogg, author and preacher, whose fame rested on his books for boys, and his composition, "Spartacus to the Gladiators," which nearly every schoolboy has learned at some time, died at his home, of bronchial pneumonia, in his 88th year.

A substitute for Welsh rarebit may be made by melting half a pound of rich cheese on a hot plate over hot water, meanwhile toasting four slices of bread. This should be buttered, and the cheese, seasoned with salt and cayenne, poured over it.

Cauliflower should be placed head down in cold salted water for 10 or 15 minutes before cooking to draw insects. In boiling slightly salted water should be used, and the head should be placed downward in the kettle.

OUR ADVERTISERS.

During the present disturbed relations with our advertisers, on account of the disastrous fire in the Examiner buildings, we are compelled to ask the indulgence of our patrons for a few days until we can pull ourselves together again. Hard and earnest work is being done to instal an entirely new printing plant in our present temporary premises at No. 411 George Street, a few doors south of the burned building, and by the end of the week, we hope to resume our contracts with our advertisers. In the meantime, in order to keep our advertisers as much in touch with our readers as possible, we will be able to insert short local notices of their business announcements.

A. H. STRATTON & CO.

Retiring from Business.

There have been enough bona fide bargains handed out to the ladies of Peterborough, during the first seven days of our closing-out sale, to go around the town like wild-fire. There's not a home in town but what has been talking about our sale. Let it be distinctly understood that the whole stock must be cleared out without delay, and that means almost at your own prices. We can't afford to dilly-dally over sales. With the same object in view, we trust all those indebted to us will be kind enough to pay their accounts promptly.

MISS K. RUDKINS.

Moth Bags.

Just the thing for storing away and preserving fur garments and all classes of fine woollen goods. They are made of fibre chamois in various sizes and supplied with wire hangers for suspending the garments in proper shape.

Routley's Magic Prices.

The great sale of the Toronto Bazaar stock, bought at a fraction on the dollar, is a bonanza to Peterborough citizens. The goods are moving with such rapidity that special lines advertised one day are very often completely sold out the next. There are many lines, however, such as Wall Papers, Window Blinds, China, Crockery, etc., that can stand a month's heavy selling before being cleared. Another thing is certain—that no matter what you buy here you can count on securing wonderful bargains—bargains such as can be obtained nowhere else in Peterborough or any other town in Ontario.

C. B. ROUTLEY.

Gentlemen's New Spring Hats.

We are showing all the new and stylish shapes in gentlemen's black and coloured hats for early spring wear. The styles are the correct English and American makes in Derby and Fedora hats, and to be right in line with this year's fashions you should let us fit you. Our hats are all fine makes, who have guaranteed records.

THE SAME OLD POLICY

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Replies to the Conservative Leader.

THE BRITISH PREFERENCE.

Mr. Borden and the Premier Continue Budget Debate—Why, in the Light of Mr. Chamberlain's Explanation, Conservative Protection and Free Trade Within the Empire Could Not Mix.

Ottawa, March 19.—Mr. Borden delivered his attack upon the Government's trade policy yesterday, and concluded by moving a double-barrelled amendment affirming the necessity for adequate protection for Canadian industries and declaring that the time was opportune for endeavoring to secure a mutual trade preference Rithin the Empire. The Opposition leader endeavored to make as strong a case as he could, but met with indifferent success. Although mysterious hints had been circulated that a brand new policy was to be propounded, it soon transpired that the Opposition had no departure to suggest from the program it has all along followed. Mr. Borden, although a shrewd lawyer, appears unable to see that the position he assumes is entirely illogical. In one paragraph of his amendment he suggests that Canadian industries do not at present receive adequate protection, thus refuting the assertion so commonly made by Conservatives that the Government has adopted the policy of its predecessor. The very next paragraph of the amendment calls for a trade preference, which, according to Mr. Chamberlain, is possible only on the basis of free trade within the Empire. So that in the resolution which he presented yesterday Mr. Borden advocates high protection, and at the same time favors a proposition involving free trade. Sir Wilfrid Laurier in a clever speech exposed the weakness of Mr. Borden's position, and then proceeded to spike the hon. gentleman's guns. He pointed out that the Opposition leader was not proposing anything new, but simply recommending the old National Policy, with its deformities heightened instead of lessened. The Conservatives were never tired of declaring that the Government had appropriated the policy of the former Government, and yet here they were asking for "adequate protection," thus suggesting that the present tariff did not give protection enough. As to the question of a mutual preference, the effect of Sir Wilfrid's argument was that the Colonial Secretary had laid it down that such a policy involved free trade within the Empire. Such a policy the Conservatives are not willing to adopt. Their desire, rather, is that the British citizen should tax himself for Canada's benefit, but when the latter asks what there is in it for him, the answer is nothing. The Premier's speech was on the whole argumentative, but there was a happy blending of humor and sarcasm which gave it piquancy.

The Conservative Leader.

Mr. R. L. Borden (Halifax) was heartily applauded by his followers when he arose to resume the budget debate by moving the resolution of which he had given notice. He resented Sir Richard Cartwright's sneers at the speeches of the Conservatives who had spoken, when Sir Richard said there was nothing in them, and then spent an hour trying to answer them. Sir Richard in days gone by had posed as something of a Diogenes. He went about with a lamp looking for an honest man, and a great many were inclined to place a great deal of confidence in his assertions in that role. In the discussion of the budget Sir Richard had not preserved very well the role of a Diogenes. Let us compare for a moment a few of the things he said the other day with what he said in days gone by. He told us that everything is very comfortable and very lovely in this country, and asked why there should be any change. He admits that there is a probability of depression in the future, as the Minister of Finance admits that probability, but Sir Richard says: "We have it clearly before our eyes, and we design to regulate our future conduct in accordance therewith." Just, Mr. Speaker, as if someone standing on thin ice and being warned of the danger would say: "I clearly realize the danger, and as soon as I fall in I will govern myself accordingly." That is the position of Mr. Fielding. Instead of preparing for the future in these years when our revenue is large, he advocates spending all the money we can get out of the pockets of the taxpayers, spending some $6,000,000 more, and saying: "When the hard times come we will regulate ourselves accordingly."

Speaking of his own resolution before the House, Mr. Borden said: "In its main essential features, it is the policy which was laid down by Sir John Macdonald in 1878-7. It is a policy intended to give work to the workingmen of Canada; it is a policy designed to protect the industrial interests of Canada, to prevent our factories being closed, to prevent our people being forced to work in the United States, and to assist in developing the industries of this country; it is a policy, at all events, whether it is wrong or right, by which the Liberal-Conservative party is prepared to stand, and I shall ask the Minister of Finance and the Minister of Trade and Commerce to tell us where they stand with regard to this protective feature of the tariff, as now presented to the country by the Government. I shall ask them to frankly and clearly say whether or not the Government has now abandoned its policy of free trade and revenue tariff, and believes in protection, or whether, as the Minister of Trade and Commerce has told us, the ship's head is still pointing towards the open sea.

"The next branch of the resolution deals with the preferential tariff. In 1897 our chances were temporarily thrown away by the right hon. gentleman who leads the House, for a certain phrase which he used. He spoke of granting an advantage to Great Britain on account of the splendid freedom which she granted us. Well, we all realize that Great Britain has granted us a splendid freedom, but did not the right hon. gentleman, when he promised the people of this country that he would obtain for them preference in the British markets, did he not know then that Great Britain granted us a splendid freedom? Had that fact dawned on him when he arrived in London? And did he not remember the words of the Minister of Trade and Commerce, who said that he owed Great Britain nothing for the wrongs she had committed against us by blundering? We had in 1897 a magnificent opportunity to obtain from England some advantage in her markets. We did not obtain that, and, of course, it is too late for us to discuss with advantage what might have been. The practical question now for us, is what can be. The Hon. Minister of Finance is very ready to fling across the floor of the House the question whether or not we are prepared to repudiate the policy of British preference. Well, it is very difficult, sometimes, and might be regarded very offensive sometimes, to ask or to take back that which has been given away.

"The Liberal-Conservative party have never said that they proposed to repeal that preference, but they have said that they would never rest satisfied until, in addition to that, and as compensation for that, we had attained a preference in the British markets. (Cheers.)

"Suppose, as some business men throughout the country think may be the case, that the additional preference which he last year gave to the British goods should result in destroying some of our industries, in closing up some of our factories, in paralyzing a portion of the business of the country, the only thing that we can say is that we shall have to deal with those difficulties as best we may, but deal with them in such a way as not to offend or to lessen the sentiment of unity of the Empire, which is so strongly impressed, not only upon the people of the country, but throughout the entire British possessions. Now, I do not want any misunderstanding. So far as the Opposition, or the party I have the honor to lead in this House, is concerned, I am prepared to stand for the unity of the Empire, as strongly as any member of this House. I am prepared, for the purpose, to advocate and support the claims of any Government that will spend its last dollar and send its last man in support of the integrity of the Empire against any foe that may threaten disruption. (Cheers.)

"But, sir, I do not attach so much importance to some things that have been said in this House with respect to the effect of sentiment in the Mother Country on matters of that kind, as has been expressed by some hon. gentlemen opposite. Why, they would have one believe that the British workman forgets his pipe and his beer every evening in order that he may go out on the streets to find some goods of Canadian produce or manufacture that he can buy. (Cheers.) But the extraordinary part of it is that when you turn to those hon. gentlemen and say: If sentiment has such a remarkable hold on the minds of the British consumer as that, how is it that Britain will refrain from giving us a preference in her markets. Then these hon. gentlemen turn to you and say: It is of no use to talk about that; the Briton, in matter of trade, is absolutely cold-blooded and devoid of sentiment." (Cheers.)

Mr. Borden went on to discuss the possibility of obtaining preference in the British markets. He quoted opinion in its favor, and then passed on to a discussion of the Australian, the West Indian and the German policies with reference to Canada and the preferential idea.

Mr. Borden closed as follows: Just one word in conclusion. The Hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce has twitted us that we are likely to remain in Opposition, as he says, for the next 25 years. Well, I do not know that the hon. gentleman (Sir Richard Cartwright) is in much better position to form an opinion in regard to that than the rest of us; but I would like to say this: I am sorry that the Minister (Mr. Cartwright) did not see fit to put any higher ideal before members of this House, and before any political party in this country than the obtaining or retaining or power. I understood the hon. gentleman to suggest that such is the greatest possible good to any political party at any possible cost. There are, Mr. Speaker, things of more importance to any political party in this country than to obtain power, or even to retain power. I think, surely, that an honorable direct adherence to honorable principles, professed in Opposition or in power, is a thing more to be regarded than even the obtaining of power itself. I think the upholding of the standard of public opinion in this country, the upholding of the standard of public life in this country, is of more importance to any political party than the obtaining or retaining of power. I think that to stand for the unity of the people of this country, and to suppress any cry of race or creed that may be raised, is a matter of greater importance to any political party in Canada than is the effort to obtain or retain power. For my part, speaking for the party, I have the honor to lead in this country, I say that we shall endeavor to carry out the principles which we have professed in this resolution, and the principles which we have at all times professed in the past.

Sir Wilfred Laurier.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier rose to reply at half-past 5, and was greeted with loud cheers from the Government benches, which were frequently renewed. He spoke for about fifty minutes, the Speaker remaining in the chair after the usual hour for recess, in order to enable the Premier to conclude his remarks without interruption. Sir Wilfrid said: From the first day of this session there have been rumors whispered from ear to ear through the corridors of this House, and sometimes heard also in the streets of this city, that the new Opposition of His Majesty, when once constituted and organized, would spring upon us a surprise in the shape of a new fiscal policy. As time went on statements were made in the press that this new policy would surprise the Government and stagger the Liberal party as soon as it was announced. We have it now, fresh and brand new, made from the lips of my hon. friend, and, lo and behold, it is the same old N. P.—(hear, hear)—the same old N. P. with a few adornments, which, instead of taking from it its native deformity, only add to it. (Cheers.) It is the same old N. P. which we have fought in past elections, and which, after an experience of some twenty years, have been twice rejected by the people at the polls. There was nothing new under the sun some three or four thousand years ago, so there is nothing new in the Conservative party to-day. (Laughter.) I take the motion of my hon. friend, as you have just had it from his hands, and it reads as follows: "That in the opinion of this House the welfare of this country requires a pronounced policy of adequate protection and encouragement at all times to the labor, agricultural, manufacturing, mining and other industrial interests of Canada." I take up the famous resolution which was moved in this House twenty-two years ago, and it reads as follows: "This House is of the opinion that the welfare of Canada requires the adoption of a National Policy, which, by a judicious readjustment of the tariff, will benefit and foster the agricultural, the mining, the manufacturing and other industries of the Dominion; such a policy will retain in Canada thousands of our fellow-countrymen now obliged to expatriate themselves in search of the employment denied them at home." This is the policy repeated in the resolution of my hon. friend, the new leader of the Opposition, and he tells us, and apparently seriously, that the policy which he now announces, and reaffirms, has had a great success. But he forgets that it was designed to keep our own people at home. Yet in his own Province the result of that policy was that it lost one representative in this House. He also tells us that he wants to go back to the principles of the National Policy and have them reenacted and placed again before the Canadian people. Sir Wilfrid then with facts and figures showed the failure of the N. P. in the old days.

The Premier combatted the idea that there could ever be mutual trade preference between Canada and Great Britain under protection. The Conservatives wanted to retain their protection and at the same time get a perference from Great Britain. The policy of the Opposition was protection against Great Britain, and this being so, there could be no mutuality of preference.

Sir Wilfrid quoted Mr. Chamberlain and said that so long as Canada adhered to protection, such a zollverein could not be discussed, with free trade within the Empire and protection against foreigners. If such a zollverein were created as Mr. Chamberlain had referred to, it would be the greatest commercial policy the world had ever seen.

The Premier said the Canadian tariff would not be elevated to the American standard. It would be determined by the Canadian people themselves.

Sir Wilfrid continued to say that before such matters as the effect of the German tariff were thrown down for angry discussion before the House and the people, they should first be made matters of confidential treatment between the Canadian and Imperial Governments.

MONDAY IN THE HOUSE

Members' Day in the Legislature Passed Away Quietly.

ALFRED BOSSARD'S AFFIDAVIT.

The Premier Censures Mr. Carscallen's Remarks Anent the Reading of Partisan Affidavits in the House, and the Latter Withdraws His Motion—Committee on Agriculture and Colonization.

Toronto, March 19.—In the Legislative Assembly yesterday the following bills were read a third time and passed: To authorize the Rector and Churchwardens of Christ Christ Cathedral, Hamilton, to sell land used as a cemetery; respecting the town of Petrolea, respecting the Supreme Court of the Independent Order of Foresters, respecting the Incorporated Synod of the Diocese of Huron, respecting the Sisters of St. Joseph of the Diocese of Huron, and respecting Les Reverends Peres Oblates de L'immacule Conception de Marie.

A number of private bills were adopted in committee and ten others received a second reading without amendment.

Mr. Carscallen asked concerning the fulfillment of their obligation by the Sturgeon Falls Pulp Co., under their agreement ratified by the House on March 29, 1899.

Hon. E. J. Davis explained that they had spent a considerable sum of money in erecting pulp mills. They had entered into negotiations with an extensive British Company for the sale of their concessions, but litigation had arisen and as a consequence the operations of the company were now at a standstill. The amount of $8,948 had been paid to the Government for pulp wood cut. In reply to other questions by Mr. Carscallen with regard to other pulp wood concessions, he gave details showing the progress made by them.

Mr. Carscallen moved that the affidavit of Alfred Bossard, sworn to on June 27, 1900, together with the two promissory notes therein referred to read by Mr. Graham on March 7th, be impounded and deposited with the Clerk of the House. He strongly condemned the practice of reading affidavits from irresponsible parties by both sides of the House, which enabled members to bring accusations against other members on the floor of the House that they dare not make outside on their own responsibility.

The Premier entirely concurred in this expression. He thought the practice was to be deprecated. He read a letter from Harry A. Brenton, of St. Thomas, referring to an affidavit by John Vail, recently read by Mr. Jameson, which he (Brenton) characterized as false and fraudulent and the rankest perjury so far as he was concerned.

After some further discussion in which Messrs. Whitney, Gibson and Pattullo took part the motion was withdrawn.

Mr. Carscallen secured a return of papers with reference to the compliance or non-compliance with the Factory Act during the years 1898-1900.

Mr. Fox's bill for the better protection of Drainage Works; Mr. Bridgland's bill to amend the Agricultural and Arts Act; Mr. Lucas' bill to amend the law respecting the liability of trustees, and Mr. Wardell's bill to amend the Municipal Act, were read a second time.

Premier Ross moved the appointment of the following Committee on Agriculture and Colonization: Hon. Messrs. Dryden and Davis, Messrs. Barber, Breithaupt, Brown, Burt, Caldwell, Carpenter, Charlton, Dickenson, Douglas, Farwell, Guilford, Hill, Hislop, Holmes, Leys, Loughrin, Lumsden, Malcolm, Mutrie, McKee, Pardo, Pattullo, Richardson, Smith, Truax, Taylor, Allen, Brower, Beatty (Leeds), Carnegie, Crawford, Dempsey, Duff, Eilber, Fallis, Fox, Jessop, Kidd, Little, Macdiarmid, Montieth, McLaughlin, Reid (Durham), Reid (Addington), Robson, Tucker and Whitney.

HALIFAX GARRISON.

Only About Half of the Men Sign on For Another Year.

Ottawa, March 19.—Only about one-half of the Halifax provisional battalion have rejoined for another twelve months. The remainder have been given their discharge. Of the company of 95 men which has been stationed in British Columbia only 12 men re-enlisted; the rest were given their discharge. The 12 under the command of Lieut.-Col. McKay and Captain Clarke will return to headquarters at Halifax forthwith.

It is not yet known when the recruits for the South African constabulary will leave here. They may not start until Thursday or Friday, or perhaps Saturday. Dr. Gorrell of this city, who has been acting medical officer to the force, will accompany it to Halifax. There he will be relieved by Dr Vaux, who will accompany the men to South Africa. Out of the 925 men enrolled here only four have been found unfit for duty, and this was on account of ailments which developed after enlistment. Each man has been served out with a suit of blue overalls, overcoat and toque, which will last him until he reaches South Africa.

BRITISH INFLUENCE

Has Not in the Least Decreased in the Yangtse Provinces.

RUSSIA'S GRIP HAS LOOSENED.

A Check Given to the Diplomats of the Czar — Arbitration May Eventually Settle the Claims of Britain and Russia in the Tien Tsin Affair — Waldersee Interferes.

London, March 19.—Replying to Sir Ellis Ashmead-Bartlett, (Conservative) in the House of Commons yesterday, Mr. Balfour, the Government leader, said the Government did not possess any information indicating any decline in British influence in the Yangtse Provinces.

Russia's Grip Loosened Some.

London, March 19.—Dr. Morrison, wiring to The Times from Pekin, says: "Chinese officials say they have been informed from St. Petersburg that Russia abandons her claim to exclusive rights in Mongolia and Turkestan and consents to modify the stringency of her control of the civil administration of Manchuria, agreeing that the convention shall be published as soon as it is signed in St. Petersburg, a fortnight hence.

"This is the first check inflicted upon Russian diplomacy in China since Lord Salisbury was cajoled into the withdrawal of the British troops from Port Arthur in 1898; and it cannot fail profoundly to modify the situation by convincing the Chinese that there still exist international combinations capable of maintaining the equilibrium of the far east."

ARBITRATION.

Von Waldersee Has Inaugurated a New Phase of the British-Russian Difficulty in China.

London, March 19.—The Times this morning makes the following announcement: "We learn that Count Von Waldersee has interferred as Commander-in-Chief of the allied forces in China to put an end to the mutually hostile attitude of the British and Russian troops at Tien Tsin."

A semi-official statement was issued this evening to the effect that the much talked-of assurances of the Russian Foreign Minister, Count Hamsdorff, to Sir Charles Stewart Scott, British Ambassador at St. Petersburg, were made Feb. 6, and evidently referred to the Russo-Chinese agreement, concluded at Port Arthur last November, and not to the Manchurian convention.

Inquiries at the Chinese Legation yesterday afternoon were rewarded by the reply: "His Excellency has gone to bed," which was presumably the celestial equivalent of an assurance that the Chinese Minister preferred to say nothing as to the most recent developments. The Japanese was equally non-committal.

It is understood that one official view is that the dispute may eventually be referred to arbitration.

DAUGHTERS OF ERIN.

Held a Most Successful Entertainment in St. Andrew's School Room.

The anniversary of Ireland's Patron Saint was fittingly celebrated last night by the Daughters of Erin, in connection with St. Andrew's Church.

The affair was one of the most unique, yet appropriate, that has been given in town in some time, and it was the universal opinion that a more fitting manner of celebrating the day which is so dear to every Irishman's heart, could not have been attempted by a society such as had last night's arrangements in hand.

The Sunday School room in which the entertainment was given was elaborately decorated with flags, evergreens, etc., the green of Ireland and the shamrock being particularly in evidence. The school room was arranged in an "At Home" manner, the chairs being grouped around a little table, and each group being allotted its supply of decorations. The programme was an enjoyable one, and contained a number of real old Irish numbers, such as those rendered by Mr C N Brown. In fact every number was encored. During the time refreshments were being served, Mr. Gliddon's Orchestra furnished music whilst the company ate Irish red hot potatoes.

The chair was occupied by Mr. Wm. Thompson, and everything passed off without a hitch. The attendance was very large, every available chair being occupied.

The bill of fare was as follows:

Potato Scones — Spud Croquettes
Boiled Murphies — Roasted Praties
Scolloped Potatos — Potato Salads,
Oaten Cakes and Variety Cakes
Buttermilk and Tea — Head Cheese and Crobeens.

The progamme was as follows:

Chairman's Address ..... Mr Thompson
Piano Solo ..... Miss Grant
Recitation ..... Miss Aggie Patterson
Solo ..... Mr J Dawson
Reading ..... Mr C. Brown
Address ..... Rev Mr. Bennett

MR. P. CAMPBELL IS THE PRESIDENT

OF THE GOLF CLUB FOR THE ENSUING SEASON.

The Annual Meeting Last Evening Was Very Largely Attended—Other Officers Elected.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Golf Club was held last evening for purpose of reorganization, and the election of officers for the ensuing year. The members of the club assembled in the office of the president, Mr. Geo. W. Hatton, and the attendance was so large as to augur an even increased interest in the royal game this season.

The chair was occupied by Mr. Hatton and amongst the members present were Messrs C F McGill, A A Smith, J Crane, E H D Gall, H R H Renner, A A Hollingshead, E C Complin, C B McAllister, J W Garvin, Fred McGill, Peter Campbell, H D Barnett, Robt Fair, E W Holst, S Ray, A E Moseley, Dr Neill, C H Bradburn, Dr Young, Alf Terrill, E Granger, Dr Eastwood, W D Parker, A G Parker, R S Davidson, Ed Brown, D Walker, A H Stratton, A L Davis, E C McHarrie and S Dickson Hall.

Mr C H Bradburn was asked to act as secretary pro tem, and the yearly reports were called for. On behalf of Mr. Denistoun, the chairman, Mr Complin presented the report of the House committee, which recommended the building of twelve new lockers, the erection of bicycle stands, the purchase of additional awnings and the building of a summer kitchen in connection with the club house.

The report was received and referred to the incoming executive with power to act in regard to the recommendations.

The reports of the other committees, as well as that of the auditors, will be received at a subsequent meeting.

On motion, the secretary was instructed to draft votes of thanks to be forwarded to the members of the club, who assisted in giving the amateur theatricals which were so successfully staged at the opera house during the winter, and also to Hon. J. R. Stratton and to Mr Jas. Kendry, M.P., for trophies given the club.

The election of officers was then taken up, resulting as appended:—

Hon President—Hon J R Stratton.
President—Mr Peter Campbell.
Captain—Mr R Myles Hamilton.
Sec-Treas—Mr C H Bradburn.
Green Committee—Messrs C F McGill, S Ray, W D Parker, J H Burnham and R M Hamilton.
House Committee—Messrs R M Denistoun, A G Parker and C B McAllister.

The Executive Committee will be composed of the officers and the members of the Green and the House Committees.

The president will hereafter be the chairman of the Entertainment and Reception Committees, the members of which will be selected by him.

Mr. Complin brought up the matter of the manner of play on the links. He referred to the overcrowding occasioned last year and the liability of accidents occurring if the same state of affairs was allowed to exist this season. His suggestion was that the ladies be allowed the use of the links on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, all day, in addition to being allowed to play every morning and on Tuesdays and Thursdays until 3 p.m.

The Executive was given power to deal with the matter.

Mr. C. F. McGill urged that the north, or school house field be leased in order to do away with the nuisance of having cows on this portion of the links.

The Executive was authorized to acquire a lease of the field in question.

A vote of thanks to the retiring officers was passed, after which the meeting adjourned.

LAST NIGHT'S FIRE.

A Vacant House on Brock Street is Badly Wrecked.

At about twenty minutes to eleven o'clock last night fire broke out in the vacant house between Dr. Caldwell's and Dr. Boucher's on Brock street. The building, a frame structure, was quickly enveloped in flames, and although the fire brigade responded promptly and soon had several streams playing on the fire, still the house is a total wreck. The fire was a very pretty one and was watched by many as the fierce looking flames, at intervals, shot heavenward.

The building up until a month ago was owned by Dr. Goldsmith, of Belleville, but had been recently bought by Mr. C. A. Kelly, of Toronto, father-in-law of Mr. Myles Henry, town. It has not been occupied for the past two weeks and there is little doubt as to the origin of the fire, as it certainly looks like incendiarism. The amount of insurance, if any, was not ascertained.

The lot on which the old building was situated is a most desirable one and it is said that it is Mr. Kelly's intention to erect a handsome residence.

OVER THE OCEAN.

It is the prevailing opinion among continental observers that Austria is about to be disrupted, with the immediate result of severing the connection with Hungary.—Baltimore Sun.

The affair drags along dangerously in Peking, a menace to the peace of the nations involved and little less than a scandal to our boasted civilization and sense of right and justice.—New York Herald.

Will the British emperor try to teach his nephew how to be an emperor without being a soldier, or will the German emperor try to teach his uncle how to be an emperor and a soldier?—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The advantage of an alliance between England and Germany is that the former supplements the splendid army of the latter with her powerful fleet, thus forming a combination too formidable to be rashly attacked by any power or alliance.—

Valuable Farm

AND TWO PARK LOTS

For Sale by Public Auction

The Administrator of the Estate of the late WILLIAM FORSTER, will offer for sale by Public Auction, at MUNRO'S HOTEL, in the Town of Peterborough, on

Saturday, 23rd day of March, 1901

at the hour of Two O'clock p.m., all the Real Estate of the said deceased, namely:

PARCEL No. 1—Being the north-east quarter of Lot No. 8, in the 11th Concession of the Township of North Monaghan, containing 50 acres more or less.

PARCEL No. 2.—Being part of Lot No. 11 in the said 11th Concession of the said Township, and being Lots Nos. 8 and 9, as laid down and described in a plan of the same made by Provincial Land Surveyor Geo. A. Stewart, and registered in the Registry Office of the County of Peterborough as Plan No. 17, for the Township of Monaghan, containing 30 acres more or less, save and except thereout that portion thereof heretofore conveyed to the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The farm is situated about two miles from the Town of Peterborough. It is nearly all cleared and in a good state of cultivation. The soil is principally of a sandy loam and well adapted for crops generally. On the premises there are a good orchard, a large frame house with kitchen and woodshed attached, and a good cellar. The outbuildings and fences are in a good state of repair. The barn is a double frame one with stone foundations, containing cattle byres. There is a spring creek running across one corner of the farm.

The Park Lots are situated about half a mile from said town and are well adapted for market gardening and building lots. There is a small dwelling house with stable and driving shed on Lot No. 8. The fences are in a good state of repair. The soil is principally sandy loam. There are on the premises a small orchard and some small fruit bushes.

There will be a reserved bid on each parcel fixed by the Official Guardian.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS OF SALE—Ten per cent. of the purchase money to be paid at the time of sale, and the balance thereof within thirty days thereafter without interest. Purchase money to be paid into the Canadian Bank of Commerce to joint credit of Administrator and Official Guardian. Further particulars will be made known at time of sale or may be had on application to W. J. Green, the Administrator, or to

J. GREEN, Vendor's Solicitor. JOHN HAGGART, Auctioneer.

Dated the 27th day of February, 1901.

THE ACT OF A HERO.

He Snatched a Life Out of a Pool of Molten Metal.

Taree men came up carrying a long iron shaft, which had been cut in two, so that an iron ring could be inserted between the two halves. An empty crucible a foot wide and deep hung in the ring. The forward end of the pole held a crossbar, making it, as it were, a huge T. Two men held the T part of the pole; the third grasped the rear end. The crucible hung between. The remainder of the molten metal from the caldron was tipped into one crucible, and the men trotted off with it, the two in front with strained faces, the man behind driving them complacently, the oddest team in the world. He steered them through a doorway, and they emptied their crucible into a small mold. As they went they kept step in an unusual manner. Instead of stepping out right foot with right foot the left man's right leg and the right man's left leg went forward together, knee with knee, foot with foot. We asked why.

"That," said our guide, "is to prevent them from tripping. If they should fall, you know, that metal would pour over them."

"Of course such a thing never happened?"

"Yes, it did once. One of the men went down. The other jumped clear, but the fellow on the floor swam in it."

"Horrible! Of course he died instantly, poor man?"

"No; the foreman of the carrying gang, taking in the situation, made several terrific leaps for him, jumped right into the middle of it, picked him up and threw him out of it bodily. Then he jumped clear himself, with the stuff dropping from his shoes. They both went to the hospital, but they are all right now. Heroic, wasn't it? By the way, that's him, the foreman, Jim H., over there now. He is still looking after those fellows."

We looked over to where a big muscular fellow was directing a gang of men manipulating molten metal. He was not disfigured, and he did not look like a hero, but thereafter the grime that covered him seemed noble indeed, and he would not say a word of his feat when we sought to talk with him about it. But Jim H. will probably never want for a job as long as Baldwin's is working.—From an Article on the Baldwin Locomotive Works in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

ONLY AN OLD SONG.

But It Illustrated the Curiosity of a New York Crowd.

It was only a song, and an old one at that, but it came near causing a block on the Broadway surface line the other day. The singer was as black as the coal in the cart he was driving, but that fact cast no shadow on his exuberant spirits. As he swung his chariot from Broadway into Cortlandt street he raised his voice. Then the trouble began.

When the notes of "Old Black Joe" rang out high and clear above the din of traffic, expressions of blank amazement overspread the faces of the hurrying pedestrians who thronged the sidewalks. Necks were craned in a vain search for the location of some newly patented phonograph. Crowds collected and gazed vacantly upon the air, as if they expected to locate the sound in some office window; teams were drawn up until a long line of trucks extended up Cortlandt street to Broadway, barring access to the street, that their drivers might ascertain the cause of the crowd's curiosity. Suddenly a newsboy cried:

"Ah, rubber! Dontcher see it's only de nigger a-singin?"

The crowd laughed. The darky, now lustily holding forth on "The Suwannee River," turned sharply into Church street, totally oblivious to the excitement he had caused. The crowd then dispersed, and the long line of wagons began to move once more.

"Well," exclaimed a Jerseyman on his way to the ferry, "New Yorkers call country people curious, but"— He shrugged his shoulders and passed on.

Treasures of the White House.

There are doubtless in every large city in the country larger and more valuable collections of bric-a-brac and art furniture than that to be found in the private apartments of the executive mansion, but it is a question whether there is in the length and breadth of the land any other half so interesting. Rarity is, of course, a universal characteristic of the artistic gems scattered through the home of the presidents, but better than that is the fact that almost every piece is fraught with memories and associations that make it a prized possession. Of the whole number probably half are the gifts of kings and rulers, tokens of appreciation from friendly nations, and the remainder, having been fashioned especially for the White House, have no duplicates anywhere else in the world.—Woman's Home Companion.

Very Like a Scandal.

"This dollar that I hold in my hand," he said, "reminds me of a deep, dark, scandalous secret."

"Oh, George!" his wife exclaimed, dropping her hands in her lap and bending forward eagerly, "tell me about it."

"Yes," he went on, "it reminds me of a secret of that kind, because it's so hard to keep."

And then she refused to speak to him for three hours.

There will be five stakes amounting to $35,000 for 3-year-old trotters in 1901.

The much touted George Alex, 2:23¼, will be in the string of George Spear in 1901.

Phil J. Liegh is training a 2-year-old by Rocky P., 2:10½, in Atlantic City that is said to be a good one.

Garderna, 2:17¾, and Timberlake, 2:19¼, are driven on the Boston roads by Peter B. Bradley, the well known breeder of Arabs.

One of the best pacing prospects in Ohio is a brother to a couple of Joe O'Neil's former pupils, Jack, 2:11¼, and Jack's Brother, 2:15¼.

The old gelding Fleetwood, 2:28¼, that took his record in 1895, is owned by Isaac Shreve of Atlantic City and can still throw sand at many younger ones on the beach.

Charles Donnelly of Pittsburg, the new owner of Joe Watts, 2:10¾, has three other good matinee horses in Dick Hubbard, 2:09¾; Little Edgar, 2:10¼, and Curta, 2:18¾.

The get of the French trotting sire Fuchsia won about $100,000 on European tracks in 1900. This is far more than the get of any American trotting sire won in this country during the same period.

Harry Wilkes, 2:13¼, a veteran trotter, whose whereabouts were unknown to most horsemen, has turned up in the hands of A. M. Weaver of Milford, N. J., who is driving him on the road. Harry Wilkes is now 25 years of age.—Horseman.

Mrs. Langtry has secured a new comedy called "A Great Lady," by Laura Trowbridge and B. C. Stevenson.

A report was circulated recently that Clara Morris was dead, and it gained considerable ground before Miss Morris was able to contradict it.

Booth Tarkington, the novelist and dramatist, acted the name part in "David Garrick" in an amateur performance in Indianapolis recently.

Maclyn Arbuckle is to play the leading role in "Under Two Flags," in which Blanche Bates will star. Francis Carlyle will be in the company.

Russ Whytal writes from Demerara, British Guiana, that the tour of himself and Mrs. Whytal in that country is successful beyond his anticipations.

It is said that William Gillette, the playwright, has been asked by Dr. A. Conan Doyle, the novelist, to collaborate with him in editing the "Sherlock Holmes" memoirs.

At the classical Court theater in Weimar, Germany, no actor is now permitted to answer a curtain call. The manager announces to the public that such appearances before the footlights are "inartistic and obsolete, foolish and in bad taste."

ODD ENGAGEMENT RINGS.

Some lovers choose queer tokens of troth to give their fiancees, and the tendency nowadays is toward rings of an unusual design.

An Egyptian ring which was taken from the hand of a mummy is worn by one woman whose tastes run to the bizarre and antique.

Another iron ring was a section cut from the barrel of a pistol which was a family heirloom and had figured in more than one affair of honor.

A black pearl surrounded by tiny white pearls was given to another woman who scorned superstition. Pearls mean tears in the lore of gems.

Opals, which used to be considered unlucky for engagement rings, are now coming into favor. One superstition defying lover had 13 of these milk and fire gems set into a ring for his fiancee.

Another beautiful and unique engagement ring is a large pink pearl surrounded by diamonds. When the bride to be saw this, her superstitions vanished forthwith, and it is her boast that she has never wept since it was first put on her finger.

One young man recently had a ring made out of a horseshoe for the girl of his choice. He had long owned the horseshoe and, believing it had brought him good luck, thought a bit of the iron made into a ring would be a happy omen for the engagement.

Curious Bit of History About Maceo and Campos.

In connection with Maceo there is a curious bit of unpublished history well worth the telling. Marshal Martinez Campos and Antonio Maceo bore the relationship of consanguinity of the blood in the second degree. Campos' father was a colonel in the Spanish army and military governor of the one time district of Mayari, Cuba, where Martinez was born. His mother was of Cuban Indian-African blood and first cousin to the mother of Antonio Maceo. The father took the infant Martinez to Spain, where under Spanish law a man takes his nativity from the place of his church confirmation or baptism, and there the child was legitimatized and educated for military life.

Both Campos and Maceo were aware of the relationship between them, and, although bitter contestants on the field of battle, they held each other in great personal esteem, Campos having the highest admiration for the military genius of his cousin, for after the treaty of Zanjon, when even Gomez had accepted the peace terms, Campos wrote to the war department at Madrid that "while Antonio Maceo is still in the field the war cannot be considered as ended." Later, after pursuing Maceo for nine days, Campos captured the stretcher or hammock in which the revolutionary chief, with nine wounds in his body, had been carried for 36 hours. But the stretcher was empty. Maceo had eluded his pursuers. But when the Castilian field marshal began to retrace his steps to Santiago his troops were harassed by Maceo's men all along the road, and before they got out of the mountains Maceo in person led an attack upon them. Yet some weeks later when, through the British consul at Santiago, Campos solicited an interview with Maceo, which was accorded him, such was his confidence in the latter's good faith that he went alone to meet his cousin in La Sabana.

Maceo, who came with his immediate personal staff, was much taken aback to find the commander in chief of the Spanish forces there without a single attendant and immediately dismissed his own men. They talked for two hours, but Maceo would not surrender. Finally, however, he agreed to leave the island, disbanding his men and burying his arms, provided the British consul would come out for him and provide him with transportation to Jamaica under the British flag. Maceo never surrendered to Spain.

Trials of a Career.

"In that denunciation scene you must raise your hand to high heaven," said the stage manager.

"But if I do," protested the leading lady, "the calcium light will not strike my diamond rings."

A Business Transaction.

An Unaccepted Invitation.

The Rochester Post-Express says that when Edward VII, as Prince of Wales, was about to visit Niagara Falls Blondin had a rival, one Signor Farini, who was a character. He issued an advertisement urging that the prince make his initial entrance to the great and glorious United States in a striking manner. Accordingly he proposed that he should wheel the prince in a wheelbarrow over a tight rope across the gorge to the United States, an entrance that would be unparalleled. Then the notice adds, "Should any accident happen to his highness whereby he should happen to be precipitated to the gulf below (of which I assure you there is little danger), the money taken from the spectators shall be refunded."

Miss Olivia Pierson of Windsor, Conn., has given $4,000 to the public library of that town to aid in the erection of a building.

Mrs. Tue Laer, an American born woman, was one of the skilled workers chosen to do Wilhelmina's wedding embroideries.

Mrs. Alexis E. Frye, the Cuban wife of the former superintendent of schools of Cuba, said of the teachers' trip to this country last summer, "The Harvard excursion set Cuba's women free."

Mrs. Catherine Yates appeared on the platform with her son when he was recently inaugurated governor of Illinois. It was just 30 years since she had sat there with her husband, the famous war governor.

Bernhardt is reported to have been delighted with the Chicago stockyards, where she saw live stock transported from the hoof to the can while she waited. "It is horrible, but beautiful," said Sarah as she sniffed at her bottle of lavender salts.

It is said that Miss Mollie Woodward, who was one of the women who spent many weeks within the besieged walls in Peking, will marry Lieutenant Frederick Bismarck, a grandson of the famous chancellor. Lieutenant Bismarck was a member of the German legation.

Jenny Lind's letters to a woman friend living in Italy from 1845 to 1874 will soon be published by an Italian firm. The letters, it is reported, number over 100 and give the prima donna's outspoken and unconventional opinions about the music and many of the musicians of her time.

Mrs. John W. Mackay, who has just saved the Church of St. Joseph from sale in Paris by paying an indebtedness of 20,000 francs, has been long known as one of the most generous benefactors of Roman Catholic institutions in Europe. The present gift is in memory of her son, John W. Mackay, Jr., who lost his life in 1895 by a fall from his horse in Paris.

Susan B. Anthony intends to test the woman suffrage question by refusing to pay taxes on some property she owns in Rochester, N. Y., basing her objection on the point that taxation without representation is unconstitutional. Twenty-five years ago Miss Anthony began a similar effort, but it ended in a compromise. Now she proposes to fight to a finish.

Mrs. Alexander M. Brown of Philadelphia owns a silver bugle which she says was presented to her grandfather, Captain Francis Johnson, by Queen Victoria many years ago. The queen always manifested an interest in the negro race, and when Captain Johnson took his band of negro musicians to England he was summoned to give a concert at Windsor castle. Queen Victoria, the Duchess of Kent and many other members of the royal family attended the concert, and the queen was greatly pleased.

THE REVIEWER.

HIVE AND BEE.

All the work that is to be done with bees in winter must be done on warm days.

Drones are male bees, and their only usefulness extends simply to the fertilization of queens.

If signs of moth appear on the empty combs, they may be fumigated with burning sulphur and should be placed in tight boxes.

Italian bees are generally admitted to be superior to the black bees. They are better workers and are more easily controlled.

All unfinished comb honey in supers should be carefully removed from the hives and placed away securely and kept clean and bright.

Bees do not swallow honey, as some suppose, but place it as gathered with their bill in their honey sack, which is in front and entirely outside

JERSEY JOTTINGS.

Truthful to the last, a New Jersey man who committed suicide left a note saying that he did it with "his own free will and a cord."—St. Louis Star.

With a Paterson man a grandfather at 36 and a Trenton woman cutting teeth at 35 New Jersey hopes that she will be given credit for other things than mosquitoes.—New York World.

A man in New Jersey had a habit of always carrying pins in his mouth, a habit on which local bets were made. The other day he died of the practice. It is better to remain in dignified obscurity than to seek notoriety by such pitiful means. Yet many men and women otherwise possessed of sound sense cultivate such queer traits simply to be talked about.

MUNICIPAL MATTERS.

New York city is to widen One Hundred and Tenth street where it faces on the upper end of Central park.

Cincinnati is already busily preparing for her next fall festival, which is expected to be gorgeous beyond anything in the past.

The total number of persons arrested in Boston last year was 33,655 against 39,760 the preceding year, being a decrease of 6,105.

One Way of Getting Even.

"There is a fellow in our office who is a chronic borrower," said a young man employed in a large Market street establishment recently. "He got into nearly everybody in the place before we all made up our minds to stop lending. He has owed me $2 for nearly a year, but I'm nearly square, although he has never paid me a penny of it. That sounds queer, but it is the truth. I'll tell you how I've worked it.

"Every once in awhile one of the fellows will say, 'I'm going to make So-and-so give me what he owes me next pay day or know the reason why.' That's my chance, and I casually remark, 'I'll bet you a quarter you don't get it.' Usually the fellow takes me up, and when pay day comes he loses his bet, for So-and-so never pays. In small bets of quarters and dimes, luncheons and cigars I have nearly got back the amount I originally loaned to the chronic borrower."

He Certainly Was a Fiend.

The stage was rolling along the canyon trail when suddenly the horses reared back on their haunches as a lone highwayman with a Winchester appeared on the scene.

"Step out of the hearse, gentlemen, and hands up!" he ordered.

One by one they climbed out, with elevated hands.

The highwayman relieved the party and several times was forced to remind one nervous little man to keep his hand from his pocket.

"What's the matter with you?" he finally roared. "You make another move like that, and I'll pump the slugs in you!"

"Please let me," pleaded the little man as his hand again slid toward his pocket.

"Please let you!" roared the desperado. "Please let you perforate me? You're imposing on my generosity, sonny. Look out! Look out! Keep your mit away from that pocket, or by the Eternal!"—

"But it won't hurt you!" protested the little man. "It won't hurt you at all! Stand just as you are now and keep your rifle leveled. There! That's it!"

And while the highwayman was recovering from his astonishment the little man had flashed his kodak and snapped the button.

Love and Thrift.

The late Professor Shuttleworth of London was particularly fond of telling how, when he once acted as locum tenens in Devonshire, he had to proclaim the banns of marriage of a young yokel and a village maid. A fortnight later the young swain called at the professor's lodgings.

"You put up the banns for me," he said.

"Yes, I remember," replied Mr. Shuttleworth.

"Well," inquired the yokel, "has it got to go on?"

"What do you mean?" asked the professor. "Are you tired of the girl?"

"No," was the unexpected answer, "but I like her sister better."

"Oh, if the original girl doesn't mind, you can marry her sister."

"But should I have to be 'called' again?"

"Certainly, that's necessary," answered Mr. Shuttleworth.

"But should I have to pay again?"

"Yes, it would cost you three and sixpence."

"Oh, would it?" rejoined the yokel after reflection. "Then I'll let it remain as it is." And he did.—London Telegraph.

Seen at the Wrong Time.

Employer—Mr. Redink, you got off yesterday afternoon under the plea of being ill. I saw you afterward going to the races, and you didn't appear to be at all unwell.

Clerk—You ought to have seen me after the second race, sir. I was bad enough then.

It is folly to attempt to please everybody. It matters not in which direction a man faces he must of necessity turn his back on half the world.

THE MODERN TYPEWRITER.

Some of the Ingenious Schemes From Which It Has Evolved.

"The history of the typewriter would make a volume full of intense human interest," said an expert who was recently in the city. "There is no other mechanical appliance in the world upon which so much diversified inventive genius has been lavished and so many strange and cranky ideas advanced. When you know that over 300 different kinds of typewriters have been constructed and abandoned since the date of the first experiment, and over 100 are in use now, you can form some conception of the magnitude of the problem and the activity of the inventors.

"Many of those queer early models bear no resemblance to any variety of machine familiar to us today. One of them was half as large as an ordinary piano and weighed 600 pounds. It did pretty fair work, by the way, if the operator wasn't pressed for time, and is now preserved as a curiosity in the office of one of the big firms in the north.

"Another strange specimen was made like a globe—in fact, I think it was called 'The Writing Globe'—and had the type raised on its surface. It swung around on a universal joint, and a very ingenious contrivance stopped and depressed it at exactly the proper place over the paper. It worked perfectly, but it was impossible to write more than two or three words a minute on it, and how the inventor could possibly have imagined it would ever be a practical success is something I am unable to understand.

"Nearly all the modern typewriters now on the market are evolutions, rather than inventions. They have been gradually built up and perfected and are the fruit of scores of brains. I call one machine to mind in which fully 200 patents of different kinds are incorporated. One small part, that could be held in the palm of the hand, has been changed and improved a dozen times since the first model came out of the shop.

"Most of these inventions are made by the workmen at the benches, and the company buys and develops them. As a rule they are small, and the mechanic gets from $5 to $50 for his idea, but occasionally some bright fellow stumbles on to something much more valuable. One big hit in that line was a device for cutting typewriter type from a continuous roll of wire. It was designed by a young chap in one of the large manufactories, and his own firm paid him $40,000 in cash for the exclusive rights. He has quit work since and set up an automobile."

LONG ISLAND SMITHS.

So Numerous That They Sometimes Need Labels to Distinguish Them.

A good story is told at the expense of the Long Island Smiths by a census enumerator. Years ago, before so many new settlers had come in, he fell into the habit of asking at each place he stopped the name of the next householder beyond and invariably met with the response, "Smith."

"Bless me!" said he at length to a long, lank old inhabitant. "Are you all Smiths down here?"

"I'll tell you how 'tis, squire," said the old man. "There is a pretty considerable lot of us Smiths on the island and no mistake. There was Tangier Smith, that the British government thought so well of they gave him a grant of pretty much all the present town of Brookhaven. Then there was Bull Smith, who made a swap with the Indians of a few beads and red coats for all the land his brindle bull Sam could trot round in a day. One family of us is known as the John Rock Smiths, because its ancestor used a big bowlder for the rear wall of his house. Another line is called the Jonathan Black Smiths because its ancestor was as dark complected as an Indian. Still another family is known as the Block Smiths, from the fact that their founder had a big horse block before his door, and another as the Weight Smiths, because their ancestor owned the first set of weights and measures in the settlement.

"But, bless you, we're nothing as bad off as they were in Patchogue a few years ago. There were actually five William Smiths living there at one time, not a mile apart either. But the people got around that too. One of them owned a peacock, the only one of the five that did, and he became 'Peacock Bill' Smith. Another invented an improved kind of wheelbarrow with three wheels, and he was known all his days as 'Wheelbarrow Bill' Smith. The third lived on a point projecting into the bay, and he was called 'Point Bill.' A fourth was a famous diver, and he was called 'Submarine Bill,' and the fifth was allers called 'Eleven Dollar Bill' for this reason:

"He was clerking in a store, and when one day a woman gave him a two dollar bill to pay for her trading he gave her back $10.50 in change. The boss got on to it, and he said he mistook the two Roman numerals II in a corner for the figure 11."

A High Class Criminal.

Not long ago an exhibition of historical portraits was held in London for the aid of some charity. These portraits were, of course, of fabulous value, and the collection was jealously guarded by detectives. Toward the end of the exhibition one of these detectives went to a member of the committee, begged his pardon, but desired to know if he might ask about one of the pictures. He was told, of course, that he might, and so, begging pardon again, he desired to know "who was the female" in a picture he pointed out.

"Why do you ask?" his listener inquired, interested and amused.

"Because, sir," said the detective, "that female is what we would call in Scotland Yard 'a high class criminal.'"

The portrait was of Mary, queen of Scots.

He Knew.

"Pat, do you know what is the greatest barrier to the habit of drinking?"

"Oi do, sor."

"Oh, you do, eh? Well, what is it?"

"An impty bottle, sure."

Who Takes It?

"Do you take any particular paper?" asked the visitor.

"No; we merely subscribe for one," answered Mrs. Toodore. "The janitor takes it."

BILL OF THE PLAY.

Robert Loraine, the English "masher" actor, is coming to this country.

Alice Nielsen will have a new opera next season called "The Chaperones."

Maude Adams' season in "L'Aiglon" has been a triumphal march for the popular little actress.

Marion Crawford's "A Cigarette Maker's Romance" is to be acted next season by Martin Harvey, the English actor.

Julia Marlowe is considering a London engagement in "When Knighthood Was In Flower" as soon as her season closes here.

About 1,700 actors and actresses accepted Beerbohm Tree's hospitality at the professional matinee of "Herod" in London.

Henry Guy Carleton, the playwright, suffered a stroke of apoplexy recently and is seriously sick, but is reported to be slowly recovering.

Joseph Jefferson has paid more than $50,000, it is said, for property at West Palm Beach, Fla., where it is intended to build a $100,000 hotel.

Mme. Modjeska is making her farewell tour of the south and is apparently enjoying almost the largest financial receipts in her long and varied career.

M. G. Curtis, the Hebrew comedian who made "Sam'l of Posen" famous, will after a couple of seasons in vaudeville go into the fruit raising business in California.

It is said that William Gillette has engaged to write a libretto of an opera on life on the plains, the music to be done by a European composer whose name is not yet made public.

A Brooklyn theater manager who tried to defeat ticket speculators by going on the sidewalk and selling tickets himself at box office prices was rewarded by being arrested for acting as a ticket speculator without a license.

THE WHIRL OF FASHION.

There are few striking novelties in the display of either fashions or fabrics for the coming spring and early summer.

Black and black and white effects are to be quite as dominant as ever in the spring fashions, and certainly nothing can be much more useful or appropriate for a greater variety of purposes.

The variety in embroidered silk hosiery is beyond detailed description, but one of the special novelties shows an eagle embroidered in yellow silk, while another is dotted over the front with single violets.

One of the pretty new fancy waists is made of white chiffon over white silk and partially covered by a bolero and short upper sleeve of Irish lace. The belt and collar band are formed of silver braid and black taffeta ribbon.

The soft, glossy silk called fleur de soie—uncommonly durable for silk, closely woven, light in weight and delightful to the touch—is much used for tucked and plaited fancy waists, dancing dresses, tea gowns, blouse vests and dress trimmings of various kinds.

The best gowned woman is ever the woman who selects what most exactly suits her individually. This is the golden rule of well dressing, the followers of which never make any serious mistake in the important solution of the old but ever new question, "Wherewithal shall ye be clothed?"

Plaitings and tuckings of every width, length and style, in inserted fan clusters, in vertical rows stitched a portion of their length, in crossing diamond and trellis forms and in many odd modes of adjustment both on skirt and bodice, will be as much in vogue on summer gowns as though the season of 1901 were the initial one of their favor.

An Old New Jersey Schoolhouse.

The pupil of today would think his opportunities very great if he could see the school equipment of a hundred years ago. A Morris county (N. J.) school of that period is thus described in an old letter of one of its attendants:

The building was constructed of logs, and instead of glass for windows, sheepskins were stretched over the apertures made by sawing off an occasional log. The windows had one merit—they prevented pupils from being interrupted in their study by what was going on outside. The time was regulated by an hourglass, and the pupils drank water from a tumbler made of a cow's horn or from a ground shell.

In spite of these differences of equipment, the schools of a century ago resembled those of today in one notable respect—they had for the most part the same great literary works that are the standards of our language now. The greatest literature is fortunately the possession of many centuries.

OBITUARY.

Demise This Morning of Mrs W J Overend.

The death occurred this morning shortly before noon of Lucy Hudson, beloved wife of Mr W J Overend, Simcoe street.

The deceased suffered since the first of the year to a greater or less extent from inflammation, and two weeks ago her condition became so much worse that hopes of her recovery were almost abandoned. Since that time she gradually grew weaker, until, as stated, she passed away this morning.

Mrs. Overend was born on Regent Street, London, Eng., and was a daughter of Sir Frederick Hudson, of Constantinople. She came to Toronto twenty-eight years ago, where she met and married Mr W J Overend. Since residing in Peterborough Mrs. Overend has been prominently identified with the numerous charities conducted by the ladies of St. Peter's Cathedral, and was much beloved in a large circle of friends.

Eight children survive, all of whom reside at home.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, Simcoe street, on Thursday morning at 9 o'clock.

PERSONAL.

Mrs W Blanchette is confined to her room through a severe cold.

Mr W Henderson, Superintendent of the Peterborough Waterworks, is able to be out again after an attack of bronchitis.

Mr. Hartley, the champion skater, gave an exhibition of fancy skating for a number of ladies this morning. The freedom and grace of his movements called forth unbounded admiration. His lightning flat-foot spins, toe movements and rolls were all executed with consummate ease and beauty.

AT THE RINK.

The hockey season will be brought to a close to-night by a grand burlesque match between two picked teams. The affair promises to be one of the greatest attractions of the season. Many exceedingly funny costumes will be in evidence and the spectators are promised a splendid night's sport. Admission 25 cents. Performance commences at 8.15 o'clock.

T. A. S. ENTERTAINMENT.

A Crowded House is Attracted—Programme Presented.

The St. Patrick's Day concert under the auspices of St. Peter's T.A.S. in Bradburn's opera house, attracted an audience that completely filled the hall.

The production presented this year was a light Irish military drama from the pen of a young American playright, who, by the way, is at present doing military duty in the Philippines.

The play was only fairly well put on. There was a disposition however, on the part of performers to hurry through their lines and as a result the most important passages of the play lost the force the playright intended they should produce.

The drama is somewhat different from the stereotyped Irish play. True, there was the usual number of red coats, but the hero and the heavy and low villain were all "sojer boys" and members of the same corps.

Of the actors it is only fair to state that Mr. Joseph Guerin was conceded by competent critics to be the most natural actor of the evening. His delineation of the role "John Reddy," the sneaking corporal, was a credit to Joe, who has certainly profitted from his connection with the local opera house.

Miss Lillian Simons' potrayal of Molly Moore showed careful study on her part, and her acting was very natural and life-like. Miss Simons worked hard instructing the young people in last night's production.

There was some twenty young people in the production, and the cast of character was as follows:

Phillip Swift	Mr Sam Houlihan
Kelly	"
Col. Dixon	Mr F Derocher
Ralph Forbes	Mr Jas Hickey
Sir Richard Forbes	Mr John Gorham
John Reddy	Mr Joe Guerin
Jim Nolan	Mr Frank Pope
Daniel Moore	Mr Jas O'Brien
Gerald O'Brien, Tom Reardon	Messrs J [Doris and J Roach
Lady Forbes	Miss F Houlihan
Mrs Moore	Miss A Simons
Helen Dixon	Miss Maggie Moher
Molly Moore	Miss Lillian Simons

The specialties introduced were the best feature of the programme, Little Nellie Hallihan and Carrie White being the stars. The specialties comprised a vocal duet by Misses F and L Hallihan; little Carrie White and Nellie Hallahin in the Bogey Man song; vocal solo, Miss F Houlihan; dance, Messrs Houlihan and Guerin; recitation, Miss Lila Bell; the Fairy Band by 12 little children; character song, little Nellie Hallihan; descriptive song, Jack Roach; recitation, Miss Lily Simons; comic song, Joe Guerin; little Carrie White in character song and recitation; solo, Jas Brown; solo, Moore's Farewell, Miss Annie Simons.

In little Nellie Hallihan child wonder was introduced, and she proved to be the darling of the evening. She has a bright future before her as a vocalist. Little Carrie White is still a very warm favourite and well deserved the ovation accorded her.

Between the acts Miss Maggie McCabe, pianiste, and Miss Lottie Bell, violiniste, rendered several beautiful arrangements of Irish airs, which proved to be a veritable treat.

The accompanistes of the evening were Misses A Doris, N. Lewis and Mr Schneider.

SPRINGTIME MILLINERY.

Miss Delaney's Elaborate Preparations—Patterns and "Studies" From the Greatest Milliners of New York.

Easter is hurrying along and many women are now thinking of Easter millinery. It is certainly high time to talk of spring fashions,—for, although the Lenten season is not supposed to be given to the contemplation of one's wearing apparel, everyone knows that Eve's daughters never put thoughts of hats and gowns very far out of their mind.

In a short interview with Miss Delaney, of No. 1 George street, it was gleaned that the new styles from New York and other fashion centres, are nearly all opened out. A few first hints, which are always most interesting, can now be given as a preliminary to state to the regular spring openings, which are expected to take place about the middle of next week.

New York has been called upon to contribute her best for Miss Delaney's patrons. From a feminine standpoint, a review of the exquisite creations which she has taken weeks to select, will be of charming interest. Everything that is latest and newest is provided. Such a display of art and elegance in millinery models it would be difficult to describe. The New York pattern hats are the finest creation in spring head-gear as they will prevail for the season in the fashionable metropolis. Some of the most artistic hats have been imported as "studies" for Miss Delaney's own workroom, where they will be successfully reproduced.

In ready-to-wear hats and bonnets, Miss Delaney's stock includes a larger and more varied line than ever before and in numerous exclusive ideas and designs. Untrimmed hats are in great profusion. The patterns are original and artistic, susceptible of rare beauty by the manipulative skill of the modiste in transforming them to the most "becoming" tastes.

A rich and unique selection of millinery trimmings gives an added charm to the displays. Every worthy novelty—every wanted style in laces belts, neckwear, flowers, foliage, etc. A showing so extensive and comprehensive as to well merit the attention of prospective buyers.

NEWS NUGGETS

—Miss Carson, of New York City, will speak at St. Andrew's tomorrow night.

—Constable Cochrane brought an insanity case in from White Lake yesterday. The prisoner was remanded until Friday.

—Rev. Mark Lev, leader of the Hebrew Mission work in Cleveland, Ohio, will speak in Bethany Tabernacle, George Street, to-night, at 8 o'clock. All are invited.

—The Daughters of Erin of St. Andrew's Church, desire publically to thank all who so generously assisted in making the celebration of the anniversary of their Patron Saint, so pronounced a success, last night.

The Rev. A. W. MacKenzie, of Lakefield, will read a paper on "Charles Kingsley" at the next meeting of the Fortnightly Club, which will be held in the Y.M.C.A. Hall on Tuesday evening, March 19th, at 8 o'clock. Mr. MacKenzie's paper is sure to be very interesting, and as this will probably be the last Fortnightly Club meeting for this season, it is hoped that there will be a large attendance.

A public meeting will be held under the auspices of the Young Women's Christian Association, of Peterborough, at eight o'clock tomorrow night in St. Andrew's Church, when Miss Carson, of Christodora House, New York City, will speak. Miss Carson is the guest of the Y.W.C.A. and her reputation in connection with College Settlement Work and the work of the Young Women's Christian Association throughout the United States and the Dominion is well known. All are welcome.

TRENT VALLEY WATERWAY.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE ASSOCIATION.

MANY RESOLUTIONS PASSED.

Hon. J. R. Stratton Re-elected President The Other Officers—Deputation to go to Ottawa.

The annual meeting of the Trent Valley Waterway Association was held in the Town Council Chamber on Monday afternoon.

Amongst those present were Hon. J. R. Stratton, president, in the chair; W. T. C. Boyd, Bobcaygeon, first vice-president; S. R. Armstrong, secretary; His Worship Mayor Denne, Aldermen Rogers, Rush, Batten and Edgecumb, R. B. Rogers, H. T. Strickland, T. E. Bradburn, Peterborough; Reeve Gerald Fitzgerald, J. M. Kilbourn, R C. Strickland, Councillor W. H. Casement and T. H. Benson, Lakefield; Mayor W. R. Phillips, Alderman J. H. Dickey and J. Fussel, Trenton; J. P. Secord, chairman Canal Committee Board of Trade, Orillia; Dr. Wood, Kirkfield; Warden Graham, Victoria; Warden Fitzgerald, Peterborough; Warden County of Simcoe, Warden County Northumberland and Durham, Warden County of Hastings; T. A. Harvey, R S Jupp, T. Shepherd, Mayor James Tudhope, Orillia; Mayor Chew, Midland; J. H. Lavalle, Orillia.

The chairman in opening the proceedings expressed his pleasure at seeing so many present. He then gave a brief review of the progress of the canal construction since the last meeting of the association, and urged upon the meeting united and vigorous action in the further prosecution of the work. It was necessary, however, to have funds and he hoped that they would duly consider this. In closing Mr. Stratton thanked the association for having done him the honour of electing him to the position of president of the association, but desired that they should make a change for the ensuing year.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The election of officers was then proceeded with and notwithstanding Mr. Stratton's desire that the honour of the position should be passed around, he was re-elected to that office.

The election of officers resulted as follows:—

President—Hon. J. R Stratton.

1st Vice President—W. T. C. Boyd, Bobcaygeon.

2nd Vice-President — Mayor Phillips, Trenton.

Secretary-Treasurer — S. R. Armstrong, Peterborough.

Executive Committee—Comprised of the Wardens of the Counties, the Mayors of the Towns, the Reeves of the Villages along the route of the Canal, with the addition of Mr. Kilbourn, Manager of the Lakefield Cement Co.; Mr. Stuart, Manager in Canada for the American Cereal Co; Mr. W. J. Shepphard, of the Georgian Bay Lumber Co.; Mr. David Gilmore, President of the Gilmore Lumber Co; John Carnegie; Dr. Wood, Kirkfield; A. L. Davis, President of Trent Valley Peat Fuel Co.; Mr. Tate, President Huntsville Lumber Co.; Mr. Tudhope, President Tudhope Carriage Co., Orillia; E. W. Rathbun, Rathbun Co., Deseronto; A. McPherson, Longford Mills.

MR. CASEMENT'S RESOLUTION.

It was moved by Mr. W. H. Casement, seconded by Mr. Kilbourn, that the Trent Valley Waterway Association desires to recognize the practical interest that Hon. A. G. Blair, minister of railways and canals, has shown in the prosecution of construction work of the Trent Valley Waterway, an interest no doubt largely developed as the result of his trip over the route, which gave an excellent idea of the feasibility as well as the advantage of the work and interest showed by his colleague, Hon. J. I. Tarte, whose energy and broad views upon the transportation problem have given an impetus to the improvement of transportation facilities, which has directly and indirectly promoted the public interest in the Trent Valley Canal, and expresses the hope that there will be no relaxation of this active interest this side of the completion of the route from Georgian Bay to tide water.

EARLY COMPLETION.

The next resolution was moved by Mr. Boyd, seconded by Mr. R. C. Strickland:—

"That whereas the completion of the Trent Valley Waterway, now under contract and construction, will open up a navigable course from Lake Simcoe to Healey's Falls, or Harwood, a distance of about 100 or 130 miles respectively, leaving a comparatively short distance to be constructed to open up the waterway to Lake Ontario waters, and thence by the St. Lawrence to tidewater; and whereas the bringing of this section to a navigable condition will be of very great benefit to the large area of country served by the waterway, by promoting the more favourable export of its varied products, and facilitating the import of a large quantity of raw material required by the many important manufacturing industries on the route, existing and contemplated; and whereas the surveys and plan for the remaining uncompleted section on the southern division are well under way, or completed, and warrant their immediate completion, or the calling for tenders; it is unanimously resolved by the Trent Valley Waterway Association that the Government of the Dominion and the Department of Railways and Canals be respectfully urged to take immediate steps for placing under contract the remaining southern sections, so that by their completion the country may be put into a position to realize much more largely the benefits from the great expenditure already made, as represented by the very largely increased navigation facilities, the completion of these sections will produce, and the important step thus taken towards the completion throughout of a waterway that means so valuable addition to our national transportation facilities."

ANOTHER RESOLUTION.

Mr. Kilbourn of Lakefield, moved, seconded by Reeve Fitzgerald, of the same village, the following resolutions:—

That in view of the great interest manifested in Parliament and out in providing increased facilities for water transportation of the products of the Great West to the seaboard, and of the manufactured goods of older Canada into the West, the time is opportune to lay before the public some of the salient facts relating to the Trenton and Georgian Bay Waterway.

That this waterway of 200 miles in length can be completed for $3,500,000,

That when complete it will give continuous barge navigation of 50) tons burden—and of twice the capacity of the Erie Canal—from Montreal to Sault Ste. Marie.

That it will shorten the distance between all the great western lake ports and Liverpool by 737 miles.

That it is capable of being operated during a season of seven months in the year, and of transporting two hundred million bushels of grain per annum.

That by means of the numerous lakes and rivers which it utilizes and intersects, it will give a shore line of 1,000 miles and lay under tribute six million acres of agricultural, forest and mineral lands capable of yielding from 50 to 100 tons of freight per acre.

That it will utilize the finest continuous system of water powers on the globe.

That it will build up cities all along its route to manufacture the hardwood timber into furniture and the iron and steel of Midland, Deseronto and Sault Ste. Marie into conveying things of which these things are transferable, and also develops more lands for the manufacture of Portland cement, the lime quarries for lime, and building stone, the mica mines, the lithographic stone quarries, the granite quarries, the peat fuel beds, etc., to say nothing of the agricultural products of the rich counties traversed by its southern ends, each bushel of which will have an added value owing to cheaper transportation of 5c per bushel.

That it will act as a feeder to the railways which now very imperfectly serve the district, and render valuable an immense amount of material now only encumbering the ground, and valueless save for the pittance in labour which the unfortunate possessors get for it when cut into cord wood or burned for potash.

That 160 miles of this waterway is now completed, but bottled up at both ends, yet it is giving employment for internal commerce and tourist travel to 45 steamboats, besides numerous smaller craft.

In moving the resolution, Mr. Kilbourn spoke enthusiastically of the possibilities of the Trent Valley Canal. He thought that it was not surprising that the work in the past had not been more rapid, in view of the opposition it has received from the Railroad Coys. and larger cities, but he hoped to see the work go rapidly forward from the present time.

OUR RESERVOIRS.

The following resolution was moved by Mayor Denne, seconded by Mr. Boyd:—

That this Association take steps to bring to the notice of the Government the great necessity that exists for a better organized system of utilizing the great reservoirs from which the canal is fed. These reservoirs being at present under an imperfect dual control, the waters are imperfectly husbanded. Whereas, if placed under one control the flow of the streams would be more than doubled and the water kept at a constant height through out the year.

That a copy of this resolution be sent to the Honourable, the Minister of Railways and Canals and to the Honourable, the Minister of Public Works, for Ontario.

Mr. Boyd considered that if the waters were properly managed there should be no fear as to the supply from the north during the summer months.

Hon. Mr. Stratton explained that what prompted the resolution, was the outcome of a slight conflict between the Ontario and Dominion Governments, as to their responsibility in the matter, and it was necessary that some one body should have absolute control of the dams, etc.

Mr. Poussette told the meeting that if the waters were regulated in the spring time the power at the Dickson Co's raceway here would be doubled. The resolution could not be worded too strongly.

Mr. Secord enquired if it were in the interests of the Association that such a resolution should pass. It was something apart from the objects of the Association. He suggested that the Boards of Trade of the various towns take up the matter.

The resolution carried.

Mr. R. C. Strickland considered that it was most important that the large cities should be interested in the Canal. He therefore moved, seconded by Warden Graham of Victoria, that the President, Vice-President, 2nd Vice-President, E. W. Rathbun, Deseronto, J. M. Kilbourn Lakefield, and John Carnegie Peterborough, be a committee to meet the Board of Trade of Montreal, and impress upon them the great advantages that would accrue to Montreal if the waterway were completed.

The matter of finances for the association to conduct its business with, came up next. It was agreed that the Secretary of the Association make application to the Counties of Victoria, Peterborough, Northumberland, Hastings, Simcoe; and the Towns of Peterborough, Trenton and Orillia, for grants of $100 each towards the funds of the Association.

SOUTHERN TERMINUS.

Mayor Phillips, of Trenton, brought up the matter of the southern terminus of the canal. He desired an expression of opinion from the meeting as to the two proposed routes, i e, Trenton and Port Hope. After referring briefly to the advantages to be gained by having the southern terminus at his town, he asked the support of the association to that end and urged the necessity of sending a deputation to Ottawa.

Mr. Kilbourn thought that in view of the fact that the Government had not placed any appropriation in the estimates this year for the work on the southern section, it looked as if they were holding back and considering the Port Hope route. He thought that it was highly desirable that something should be placed in the estimates this year, and urged the necessity of a deputation going down to press their views upon the Government.

Warden Graham, of Victoria, also spoke favorably of placing in the estimates a sum of money towards the early completion of the southern section of the Trent Valley Canal.

Upon motion of Mr. P. C. Strickland seconded by Mr. Dickie, a resolution was passed appointing the Executive Committee, a delegation to go to Ottawa to urge upon the Government the advisability of complying with their wishes.

Mr. Kilbourn moved seconded by Mr. Casement a vote of thanks to the President, Vice-Presidents, and the Secretary-treasurer for their services to the Association in the past.

The meeting then adjourned.

WEDDING BELLS.

Nuptials of Miss Minnie Nicholls and Mr. Joseph Harvey.

A pleasant event took place at the residence of Mr. Wm. Nicholls, Smith township, on Wednesday, March 6th, when his daughter Miss Minnie, was united in marriage to Mr. Joseph Harvey, of North Smith. The ceremony was performed at 6.30 p.m., by the Rev. E. J. Bridgeman, B.A., pastor of the Lakefield Baptist church, in the presence of the near relatives of the contracting parties. The bride, who was gowned in a very charming costume of blue gray ladies' cloth, was attended by her pretty little niece, Miss Olive Darling, who carried the wedding ring in a basket of flowers. After the ceremony congratulations were liberally bestowed on the happy couple, the guests then repaired to the dining room, where the tables were beautifully decorated with flowers and bountifully spread with that which pleased the eye and satisfied the appetite. When ample justice had been done to the good things provided, a very enjoyable evening was spent, after which the happy couple left for their home, followed by the best wishes of their friends.

Ladies' Belts.

The Port Hope Knitting Works are showing a great variety of the very latest ideas in Ladies' Belts. Many of the prettiest patterns are gilt trimmed this year—from 10c, 15c, 25c, 40c, etc., etc. Be sure and ask to be shown them.

THE FAMOUS BROGDIN TRIAL

RECALLED BY THE APPROACHING TRIAL OF ALEX. SHARP

What Might be Called a Parallel Case—Peculiar Condition of Canadian Law in Regard to Adultery—Many Old Residents Will Recall Brogdin's Trial.

The Examiner had the privilege of seeing an old file of the Port Hope Guide, the property of G. M. Furby, Esq., of Port Hope, containing an extended account of the famous Brogdan murder trial, recalled now by the approaching Sharpe murder trial. Thomas Henderson, a lawyer, of Port Hope, won the affections of George Brogden's wife, and when their guilty relations were discovered they ran away together. Young Brogden was a rising lawyer, also practising in Port Hope. He pursued the pair with the intention of shooting Henderson, but could not find him. Over two months elapsed, when, hearing that Henderson was passing through Port Hope by steamer, Brogden armed himself with a revolver, and, going to the steamer's wharf, he chatted with friends until her arrival, when, on seeing Henderson, he immediately shot him. He soon afterwards delivered himself up. The trial, which took place in 1857, was possibly the most famous one of its kind in the country, as, owing to the high social standing of the parties, it attracted public attention to a very great extent. The evidence for the Crown was given by Thomas O'Reilly, George Hughes, John Burnham, Dr. Evatt, Gummon, Brown, Wallace, and David Marshall, well known as chief constable of Port Hope for many years. The most prominent witnesses for the defence were N. Kirchopper, barrister, Port Hope, and G. N. Clarke, now Judge Clarke, C.P.R. solicitor. Chief Justice Robinson presided, and he charged strongly against the prisoner. The defence was conducted by Messrs. Galt, Philpot, Kerchopper, Weller and Clarke, the speech of Mr. Galt (now Sir Thomas Galt) being described as "one of extraordinary eloquence." The Crown was ably represented by Solicitor-General Smith. The evidence was strongly against the prisoner, but the jury returned a verdict of not guilty. There will be few of our readers, especially among the old-timers, who will not have heard mention of this very famous case.

The Brogden trail brought out the peculiar state of Canadian law, which provided no punishment whatever for adultery, although, under the Mosaic laws, and among the Jews, it was punishable with death. The Grand Jury strongly recommended that the criminal law should be amended by providing punishment for men who wrecked the homes and destroyed the happiness of others. Still the law remains exactly as it was, and it seems high time that the Canadian Legislature enacts legislation providing for the punishment of adultery as a crime.

SPORTING PASTIMES.

HOCKEY.

The Junior Colts went down to Campbellford yesterday and last night played the second team of that place. They were beaten by 2 to 1, but judging from the score the game must have been pretty even throughout. The teams were:—

Junior Colts (1)—Goal, Holly VanEvery; point, Bert Stewart; cover point, James Hamilton; forwards, N. Graham, Bert Parker, T. McGrath (captain), W. Kennedy.

Second Campbellfords (2)—goal, Shaw; point, Thompson; cover point, Tate; forwards, Shea, Shannon, Lavery, Blnett (captain).

Referee, W. Harrison; umpires, McCoy and Pollard.

The score at half time was 1–0 in favour of Campbellford. The playing of VanEvery in goal for the Colts was a prominent feature of the game. O'Shea did the scoring for the home team and Kennedy for the visitors. The return game will be played here to-morrow night, when the Junior Colts should reverse the score.

The hockey season in Peterborough will be formerally wound up to-night, by a burlesque match between two picked teams. The affair promises to be quite unique and should be largely attended. The two teams will be dressed in very odd costumes, whilst the goal umpires, the referee and other officials will be attired in keeping with the rest of the "bunch." A rugby football will be used instead of a puck, and the public may rely on being treated to barrels of fun.

The Pig Iron Tigers will leave at 7 o'clock to-night for Lakefield, where they will play the seniors of that town.

LACROSSE.

A meeting of the Vatican Lacrosse club will be held in Clancy's hotel on Wednesday evening. All members are requested to be present, as business of interest is to be transacted.

Routley's Magic Prices.

The great sale of the Toronto Bazaar stock, bought at a fraction on the dollar, is a bonanza to Peterborough citizens. The goods are moving with such rapidity that special lines advertised one day are very often completely sold out the next. There are many lines, however, such as Wall Papers, Window Blinds, China, Crockery, etc., that can stand a month's heavy selling before being cleared. Another thing is certain—that no matter what you buy here you can count on securing wonderful bargains—bargains such as can be obtained nowhere else in Peterborough or any other town in Ontario.

THE SUGAR BEET BILL

Second Reading Unopposed in the Ontario Legislature.

$75,000 FOR THREE YEARS.

$225,000 in All Set Apart to Bonus the Industry in This Province—Hon. John Dryden's Lucid Explanation of the Measure—The House in Committee of Supply.

Toronto, March 20.—In the Legislative Assembly yesterday, Mr. Conmee moved the suspension of the rules of the House to allow of the introduction of a bill to legalize debentures of the town of Rat Portage. The Attorney-General objected to the suspension of the rules, as he understood that a number of the ratepayers were opposed to the measure and Mr. Whitney took the same ground. Mr. Conmee explained the special circumstances which had rendered a suspension of the rules necessary. A plebiscite in favor of the expropriation of the electric light company, for which purpose the debentures were to be issued, was carried by a majority of 415. The motion was withdrawn.

Hon. J. R. Stratton introduced a bill amending the Act respecting the licensing of corporations, defining the class of corporations to which the Act was intended to apply, and removing doubts as to the status of companies incorporated under Dominion law.

Hon. R. Harcourt's educational bills were considered in committee and progress reported.

Hon. J. R. Stratton's bill respecting Sanitary Regulations in unorganized Territory was adopted in committee.

Hon. John Dryden moved the second reading of his bill respecting the encouragement of the Sugar Beet Industry. He reviewed the steps taken to ascertain the feasibility of growing sugar beets in Ontario and to determine the best varieties. The highest tonnage per acre so far produced in the course of experiments was 30 tons produced at Aylmer, the second highest being 25½ tons produced at Newmarket. The average was 16 tons. The highest percentage of saccharine matter was 17 per cent. and the average 14½ per cent. The average cost of producing sugar beets per acre was estimated at $30, and the average profit at $43. It would cost five or six hundred thousand dollars to erect a beet sugar manufacturing plant. No one would risk the expenditure of so much capital without being sure of a plentiful supply of raw material. He gave the results of the investigation carried on the State of Michigan, where there was general satisfaction with the results on the part of the farmers engaged in this industry. The experience of the manufacturers, however, had been more varied. Some had done well, but others had lost. They generally lost money the first year or two, but if they had sufficient capital to keep on the experience they gained usually enabled them to succeed well. A good location and an abundant supply of beets with a large percentage of sugar were main essentials. He pointed out how the development of the industry would benefit the country commercially. Ontario could produce 100 million pounds of sugar annually, which would keep in the country the money now sent abroad for this article. The bill proposed to set apart $225,000 or $75,000 for three years, to be given to the manufacturers who were to receive one-half cent per pound for sugar made during the first year and one-quarter per cent. per pound during the two following years, provided that the farmers were to be paid not less than $4 per ton for beets. The bill received a second reading.

Premier Ross moved the second reading of the bill to amend the Supplementary Revenue Act, 1899, explaining that it repealed the "scrap iron clause" embodied in that measure. Carried.

Some discussion arose over Mr. Stratton's bill to amend the Ontario Companies Act, which among other provisions, permitted companies whose shareholders resided outside of the province to hold their meetings beyond its limits. Mr. Carscallen strongly opposed the provision, and Mr. Stratton intimated that it might be reconsidered. In the meantime the bill received a second reading.

Hon. J. M. Gibson, in moving the second reading of the bill to amend the Ontario Election Act, explained that it was aimed at those who personated returning officers or their deputies.

After recess the House went into Committee of Supply. The item of immigration, $4,825, was first taken up. Col. Matheson complained that Ontario did not get its fair share of the tax imposed on Chinamen. The Premier explained that the province had nothing to do with the immigration of Chinamen. The money was collected by the Dominion. After some further discussion, Mr. Stratton stated that each Chinaman on entering made a declaration as to where he intended to settle, and 25 per cent. of the tax was distributed among the provinces in accordance with these statements. Mr. Hoyle favored striking out the whole item for immigration. Hon. E. J. Davis pointed out that the department was doing good service in proportion to the money expended, as would be seen by the report shortly to be issued. The item was allowed to stand over.

When the item for special grants for agricultural purposes $148,950 came up, Mr. Kidd questioned whether the money now devoted to distinct agricultural societies might not be better expended. Hon. John Dryden said that while in some cases agricultural societies might fall short of the objects in view, for the most part they were doing excellent work in the education of the people. It was a matter of difficulty to discriminate between those which were worthy of a grant and the others. The tendency to horse-racing at some of the exhibitions was complained of, but he thought that many societies were beginning to find out that it did not pay. The item passed.

The usual criticisms on the Guelph Agricultural College and Experimental Farm were passed by the Opposition. Mr. Little thought the farm should be run to pay, and Mr. Kidd considered that the teaching was not sufficiently practical. Mr. Dryden, in reply, said that there was nowhere in the country a more thoroughgoing, practical farmer than President Mills. It could not be expected that an educational institution would ever pay in dollars and cents. If young men left the college knowing little about farming, it was their own fault.

Assembly Notes.

The Temiscaming Railway survey motion by Premier Ross is expected at an early date, possibly to-day.

The Legislature will hold a night sitting this evening.

The Good Roads Committee at the Legislature yesterday appointed Mr. A. Pattullo chairman. The committee will meet again at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The Municipal Committee yesterday elected Hon. E. J. Davis chairman, and approved the special expenditure of money by municipalities for the reception of the Duke and Duchess of York, also several other municipal act amendment bills.

G. P. R. STOCK SELLING.

Hill and Morgan Buy and It Goes Up With Sharp Turn.

Toronto, March 20.—In this city and in Montreal and New York yesterday nearly $3,000,000 worth of Canadian Pacific Railway stock changed hands. Half of this was bought on Wall street.

A special from New York says: "Hill and Morgan were active factors in to-day's stock markets. Canadian Pacific received much attention, and it is believed Hill and Morgan were buyers."

Convicts Mutiny and Hold Hostages.

Leavenworth, Kas., March 20.—In the Kansas State Penitentiary coal mine at Lansing, 284 prisoners, who went down into the mine on Monday morning, have mutinied, and are holding 15 guards as hostages. They refuse to let the guards come to the surface until Warden Tomlinson promises to give them better food. They threaten to kill the guards if their demands are not complied with.

Later—The prison strike is ended. The convicts surrendered.

A Duel to the Death.

San Bernardino, Cal., March 20.—A. P. Elliott, manager of a local copper mine, and James Neville, another well-known mining man, after a quarrel at Daggett, fought a duel in the streets with knives. The entire population witnessed the fight, and not until Neville fell mortally wounded did they interfere. Elliott was also wounded, but not seriously. He is in jail.

Only One Pipe Line.

Detroit, March 20.—J. C. Donnelly of the United Gas Company declares that the company's first pipe line franchise granted in Ontario is perpetual, and that the Provincial Government controls only the second pipe line. He says the company has not yet received the necessary three months notice that the Government intends to shut off the second pipe line.

Naples Dockmen on Strike.

Naples, March 19.—Twenty-five hundred dock laborers here have struck, refusing to discharge the French steamer Massilia, which arrived at Marseilles, March 14, from New York, and was sent on from Marseilles to Naples, on account of the strike at Marseilles.

Old Lady Burned in Her Bed.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., March 20.—Margaret McQuade, 90 years old, was burned to death yesterday. Her daughter's family, with whom she resided, had gone to church, leaving the old lady in bed. She attempted to light her pipe, and set fire to the bed.

Four new cases of smallpox were reported to the New York Board of Health on Monday.

KITCHENER'S PEACE REJECTED.

Botha Prefers Taking His Chances in the Field With His Generals, Who, With His Government, Entirely Agree With His View—General Bruce Hamilton Finds Wepener Intact.

London, March 20.—General Botha has rejected the peace proposals.

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, the Colonial Secretary, yesterday informed the House of Commons that General Botha had rejected the peace terms offered.

General Botha, Mr. Chamberlain said, had conveyed the information in a letter to General Kitchener, in which he announced that he was not disposed to recommend the terms of peace General Kitchener was instructed to offer him to the earnest consideration of his Government. General Botha added that his Government and its chief officers entirely agreed with his view. Mr. Chamberlain added: "I propose to lay the papers connected with the negotiations on the table to-night."

During the discussion of the composition of the Transvaal Concession Commission, Mr. Arthur B. Markham, Liberal, asserted that the commission was made up of persons affiliated with several great South African companies.

Mr. Chamberlain replied that, while he would not be influenced by South African capitalists, he was not to be precluded from using any man who happened to be connected with some capitalist in South Africa.

Bruce Hamilton at Wepener.

Mafeteng, Basutoland, March 18.—Monday—General Bruce Hamilton's force, which is sweeping over the southeast portion of the Orange River Colony, has reached Wepener (on the frontier of Basutoland), where the troops found heavy stocks of grain and cattle. They carried away as much as possible, but had to destroy 20,000 bags of grain. The houses at Wepener were found to be intact.

Sail on March 26.

Ottawa, March 20.—The steamship Montford, carring 1,200 Canadian recruits for the South African Constabulary, will sail from Halifax on March 26. The 900-odd men here will leave by special train for Halifax in the morning or afternoon of Saturday next, 24th inst.

BLOODY RIOTS IN ST. PETERSBURG.

Police Fired Revolvers Into Crowd of Students and Five Were Killed.

St. Petersburg, March 20.—Serious riots occurred in St. Petersburg yesterday on the occasion of a solemn mass in the Cathedral of Our Lady of Kazan for the repose of the soul of M. Bogoliepoff, the Minister of Public Instruction, who was shot and fatally wounded by Karopvitch. The police fired their revolvers and it is rumored that five students were killed and 80 others either seriously or slightly injured. Wholesale arrests, including many women, followed the rioting.

Alarm at St. Petersburg.

St. Petersburg, March 20.—Alarm pervades high circles here. The police have notified house owners to have their Dvorniks, or house police, report for duty and hold themselves in constant readiness. The student troubles are the causes.

H. M. S. Plover Ashore.

Shanghai, March 20.—The British gunboat Plover is ashore in the Yangtse River below Kiu Kiang.

THE DOMINION HOUSE.

The Budget Debate Was Continued by Dr. Russell (Hants) and He Was Followed by Others.

Ottawa, March 20.—The budget debate was continued yesterday by Messrs. Russell (Hants), Kemp (Toronto), Guthrie (South Wellington), Bennett (East Simcoe), Heyd (South Brant) and Roche (Marquette). Mr. Charles Marcil moved the adjournment of the debate, and the House rose at 11 p. m.

Mr. Demers introduced a bill to incorporate the Yukon Railway Company.

Mr. Morrison introduced a bill to change the name of the Algoma Central Railway to the Algoma Central and Hudson Bay Railway Company.

The Budget Debate.

Dr. Russell (Hants) led off with a suggestion that Mr. Clarke Wallace should visit North Bruce in the capacity of a peacemaker, to set at rest all racial and religious differences. He argued at length that Mr. Chamberlain is an unbeliever in the idea of preferential arrangements between England and the colonies. The Imperial preferential bag, as he put it, is empty. There is absolutely nothing in it under present conditions.

Mr. A. E. Kemp followed. He took the Premier to task for his remark that the Conservative policy of to-day is the same old National Policy. He objected to the application of the words "tariff tinkers" to the manufacturers of Canada who had asked for relief. The present preferential tariff he contended was a wrong to the workingmen of Canada and placed an unjust burden upon their shoulders. The German trade and the transportation question on the lines of Mr. R. L. Borden's speech formed his concluding paragraph.

Mr. Bennett went extensively into the issue of the tariff and claimed his facts showed that it was a protective and not a revenue tariff.

Mr. Heyd continued the debate and was followed by Dr. Roche (Marquette), who dealt with the immigration policy.

Charles Marcil moved the adjournment of the debate and the House adjourned at 10 minutes to 11.

The Senate Wants Mr. Cook.

Ottawa, March 20.—The Senate Committee appointed to investigate the Cook charges met yesterday. Sir Mackenzie Bowell was in the chair, Mr. J. A. Ritchie, K. C., Toronto, was appointed by the committee as its counsel. Another motion was passed summoning Mr. Cook to appear on Tuesday next with all papers, correspondence, etc., in relation to the charge that he made. It was also decided to send a copy of the proceedings of the committee to the Premier. The committee then adjourned until Tuesday.

WHAT IS CIVILIZATION?

Mr. Wu's Lecture to Chicago Students—What Will Be the Result of the Clash?

Chicago, March 20.—Wu Ting Fang, Chinese Minister to the United States, delivered the convocation address of the University of Chicago at the students' theatre yesterday afternoon before the faculty of the institution and an audience that packed the theatre to the doors. Mr. Wu took for his subject "Chinese Civilization." His defence of the civilization of his native country in comparison with that of the civilization of the occident was much applauded. He said: "True it is that China's isolation has served to strengthen the nation's character and give it a marked individuality, but this has not been gained without great losses. The most serious is that the nation has not been able to profit by the trials, experiences and achievements of the rest of the world. This is especially true with scientific knowledge and mechanical inventions. It must be admitted that China is to-day centuries behind the age in her knowledge of chemistry, electricity, steam navigation, rapid transit and other arts and sciences. But does civilization consist of railways, telegraphs, telephones, electric light, battleships, rapid fire guns, magazine rifles and a thousand and one things which are regarded as necessary for a progressive nation? This would be a very narrow interpretation of the word. Civilization has, I believe, a broader meaning, with intelligence, order, morality and refinement for its essential elements. Such a civilization China undoubtedly has—a civilization different, to be sure, from that of the west, but a civilization nevertheless. Chinese ways are not necessarily bad because they often seem strange to western ways. It is merely a question whether one is accustomed to them or not. When the old Oriental civilization meets the new occidental civilization it is to be expected that there will be a clash. Which will have to give way to the other is by no means certain, for 'the race is not always to the swift, nor the battle to the strong.'"

A Tin Can Trust.

Trenton, N. J., March 20.—Articles of incorporation were filed yesterday for the American Can Company, authorized capital $88,000,000, to manufacture cans, receptacles of all kinds and metal ware.

CHINESE INTEGRITY.

It Is to Be Maintained Under Anglo-German Agreement.

MANCHURIA IS INCLUDED IN THIS

Lord George Hamilton Says No Disturbance Is Anticipated at Tien Tsin, Although the Russians Have Orders to Shoot British If They Attempt to Start Work on the Disputed Railway Siding.

London, March 20.—Some of the afternoon papers say the Tien Tsin row has been arranged. China granted the same concession to two nations. The arrangement allows Great Britain to proceed, but the earliest concession must be acknowledged.

The Foreign Office claims that the original concession was given up by Russia, and that therefore Russia has no claim at all.

In the House yesterday Lord George Hamilton said no disturbance was anticipated at Tien Tsin. No instructions had been sent to the British officers not to resist the seizure by the Russians of the siding.

Lord Cranborne stated yesterday that the Anglo-German agreements applied to Manchuria, and both countries agreed to maintain the integrity of the Chinese Empire.

Prof. Douglas of the Museum says the only way to stop Russian aggression is for America, England and Japan to combine in firm resistance.

Russians Have Orders to Fire.

Tien Tsin, March 20.—Excitement re the siding still exists. British troops are encamped facing Russian troops. The latter have orders to fire if the British start work on the siding.

The Anglo-French tiff is described by Gen. Campbell as a childish outbreak due to French insults.

Russia Will Not Recede.

Paris, March 20.—An official of the Foreign Office said yesterday: "Russia will not recede from the siding. She will not advance. She will act slowly and only by force. I expect to see England yield."

What a Russian Says.

St. Petersburg, March 20.—A competent official said yesterday: "No representations re Manchuria have been made by the powers. Russia will hear of no interference in her negotiations with another power." He declared the power rebuffed was Great Britain, and that Russia desired to safeguard the railroad and her 10,000 kilometer frontier. He ridiculed the idea of a conflict at Tien Tsin, and said the misunderstanding regarding lands could be settled by diplomacy or arbitration.

Where Germany Stands.

Berlin, March 20.—Chancellor Buelow, in the Reichstag, said yesterday that it was naturally his desire that China should not too seriously diminish her capacity for satisfying the just claims of the powers for compensation. The Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs had expressed satisfaction with this statement. The Chancellor did not propose, however, to have Germany's interests in the Orient disputed by any power.

Russians Shoot a British Subject.

Victoria, B. C., March 20.—The steamer Kinshiu Maru, just arrived from the Orient, brings news from Newchwang of an outrage by Russians there which may cause more friction between Great Britain and Russia.

While the watchman of the British Consulate was purchasing some cakes at the Consulate gate, three Cossacks rode up and, after buying some cakes, refused to pay. The watchman backed up the demand of the dealer and the Russians threatened both with their bayonets. They fled inside the Consulate and the watchman bolted the gate.

Unable to follow the fugitives inside one of the Russians mounted his pony and fired through the pailings at the watchman, killing him. The British Consul made a complaint to the Russian authorities and reported the matter to his Government.

Appeal Goes Over Till May.

Ottawa, March 20.—In the Supreme Court yesterday a motion was made in the West Durham election case, to hear the appeal from judgment on the preliminary objections to the petition against Thornton. McPherson, for the motion, urged that if the appeal were heard this term, one of the candidates might sit at the present session of Parliament. The court refused to make the order, and the appeal goes over to the May session.

May Be Taken by Government.

Ottawa, March 20.—Mr. Cowan's bill respecting the Canada National Railway and Transport Company was taken up yesterday in the Railways and Canals Committee. Hon. Mr. Blair stated that he would consider the advisability of inserting a clause in the bill providing that in certain events the railway should be taken over by the Government.

Archbishop Lewis Still Very Ill.

New York, March 20.—The condition of Archbishop Travers Lewis of Kingston, Ont., who is ill in this city, was reported last night to be still critical.

THE PETERBORO' BILL WAS PASSED.

AMERICAN CEREAL COMPANY'S ASSESSMENT FIXED.

There was a Sharp Debate on the Matter Amongst the Members.

(Special to the Examiner.)

Toronto Ont, March 20. After a sharp debate Peterboro Bill to give a fixed assessment for forty two years to the American Cerial Company, which is starting a big industry there, passed the Private Bills Committee of the Legislature this morning. Andrew Pattullo who led the opposition to the measure said the town had given special privileges and the railways specialities and the result would be to freeze out the independent millers of Province who had none of these things. Hon. J. R. Stratton warmly championed the Bill and Hon. J. H. Gibson said he would support it because it would give a steady market for the Cereals of the farmers of the Midland District.

BIG FIRE IN KEENE.

Dr. Harrison's Premises Destroyed Yesterday.

(Special to the Examiner.)

Keene, March 19th, 1901.

As the result of a fire, which broke out here yesterday, Dr. Harrison's houses, stables, and contents we completely destroyed.

SONS OF ENGLAND.

Several Grand Lodge Officers Visit the Local Lodge.

Mr. John Aldridge, Supreme Grand Vice-President of the Sons of England, John W. Carter, Supreme Grand Secretary, and Harvey Furs, Supreme Grand Auditor, of the same society, paid a visit to the local lodge last night, and discussed matters of great importance to the Sons of England. At the close of the regular business meeting, the members repaired to the dining room where a sumptuous repast was served in excellent style, by Bro. Wm. Taylor. The evening was spent in songs, speech making, etc., and at the close of the banquet the supreme grand Vice assisted the local brethern in initiating four candidates in the second degree. During the evening Bro. H. L. Seal was presented with a past president's Jewel in recognition of his five years service as Secretary of Lansdowne Lodge. The Supreme Grand officers went to Lindsay where they addressed meetings last night.

WEDDING BELLS.

Nuptials of Miss Minnie Nicholls and Mr. Joseph Harvey.

A pleasant event took place at the residence of Mr. Wm. Nicholls, Smith township, on Wednesday, March 6th, when his daughter Miss Minnie, was united in marriage to Mr. Joseph Harvey, of North Smith. The ceremony was performed at 6.30 p.m., by the Rev. E. J. Bridgeman, B.A., pastor of the Lakefield Baptist church, in the presence of the near relatives of the contracting parties. The bride, who was gowned in a very charming costume of blue gray ladies' cloth, was attended by her pretty little niece, Miss Olive Darling, who carried the wedding ring in a basket of flowers. After the ceremony congratulations were liberally bestowed on the happy couple, the guests then repaired to the dining room, where the tables were beautifully decorated with flowers and bountifully spread with that which pleased the eye and satisfied the appetite. When ample justice had been done to the good things provided, a very enjoyable evening was spent, after which the happy couple left for their home, followed by the best wishes of their friends.

HAVELOCK HAPPENINGS.

The Drain Block was badly damaged by fire last week. For a long time the total destruction of the building appeared to be inevitable, but through the heroic efforts of the voluntary bucket brigade, the flames were subdued. How the fire started is a mystery.

The building is owned by Mr. T. Drain, of Norwood, and the damage will be about $300, insured in the Gore Mutual for $1,600. The occupants of the block were Messrs W. T. Curtis, P. Shulman, P. Lancaster and Mrs. C. Lancaster Mr. Curtis' loss is about $350 00, insured in the London Mutual for $400.00. Mr. P. Shulman puts his loss at $1.000, caused by smoke and water, with insurance in the London Globe of $2.000.00. The Standard office escaped lightly, the damage being estimated at $25.00, with insurance of $500.00, in the Phoenix. Mrs. C. Lancaster's damage to household effects will amount to $100 00, insured in the Phoenix for $250 00.

PERSONAL.

Miss Eliza Eastland has returned from a pleasant three months visit to Elora, Fergus and Toronto.

Mr. Bert Belleghem, of the Ontario Bank, Cornwall, is in town.

Mr. James Saulter, of Toronto, formerly of Peterborough, was in town to-day looking up old friends and gave the Examiner a pleasant call.

—Mr. Wm. Fanning, of the Strathcona Horse, and brother of Mr. John Fanning, arrived in town yesterday.

Mr. Geo. A. Cox jr., accompanied by Master Gordon Cox, drove to Colborne, yesterday.

Mr. C. B. McAllister has shipped three collies and two Russian wolf-hounds to the Dog Show at Toronto.

Mr. Sidney Mitchell's name was unfortunately omitted from the list of those who participated in Monday evening's entertainment, under the auspices of the T.A.S., in the Opera House. Mr. Mitchell sang "The Lakes of Killarney" in a splendid voice, and as an encore gave "Tim Toolin."

THE MAN UNDER THE BED.

BY M. QUAD.

Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Lewis.

I had been in Paris for a couple of months, living at a family hotel and knocking about at my leisure, when I made the acquaintance of Felix Duchene, as he called himself. He was a man of about 30, and, though a Frenchman from head to heel, he spoke English fairly well. He was not a man whom I should have selected as a friend, and yet there was a something about him which interested me. He had traveled extensively, met with many adventures and was a good talker. I came to know him as a man of nerve and courage, and, though I feared he would turn out to be a parasite, nothing of the sort happened. He seemed to have plenty of money of his own and never asked for the loan of a franc.

I had known Duchene for three or four weeks when we visited a dance hall on one of the outer boulevards one night. The place was a resort for tough men and bad women and promised a phase of Parisian life I had not yet met. We found a rough crowd indeed, and the evening was not half over when a burly big fellow deliberately picked a quarrel with me. I was giving him the worst of it when he drew a knife and rushed upon me. Duchene, who was standing quietly by, knocked the scoundrel senseless, and, to my surprise, we were not molested by the half dozen friends of the victim who had been urging him to finish me. I came to know later on that the whole thing was a put up job, but I looked upon it then as a brave action on the part of my acquaintance and told him my gratitude and friendship. I had never questioned him as to why he was in Paris, where or how he lived or what aim he had in life, and he had never dropped a hint. I had a secret belief that he was a gambler and a sharper, but to me he was as straightforward as could be hoped for. About two weeks after the event at the dance hall Duchene told me his story, or a part of it. He was a professional gambler, or had been up to a few months before he met me. Then his eyesight had gone back on him and he had been obliged to abandon the business. I had observed that he was nearsighted and had been obliged to favor his eyes.

A year before meeting me Duchene and a partner had "roped" a rich young fellow into a game and skinned him out of what would be about $50,000 in American money. They were then occupying rooms in a certain house he indicated, and, fearing trouble from the victim, who had declared himself defrauded, the money had been hidden under the floor. Trouble came. Both men were arrested, and, while Duchene got a year in prison, the other man died of pneumonia while waiting his trial. On leaving prison Duchene at once took steps to secure his money, but found the floor in possession of an artificial flower maker who held a lease. The place could not be entered and searched, and the $50,000 still rested beneath the floor of the front room. It would take $1,500 to buy the lease and oust the flower maker and another $500 to put in a stock of something to throw the police off the scent. Duchene could not raise the money, nor had he yet met a man he dared trust. His proposition to me was that I furnish the $2,000 and receive $10,000 of the bidden money as my reward. Had he offered to go halves I think I should have looked upon it as a "plant" and thrown it over, but in offering me a sixth portion he seemed to show good business tact. It was a big return on the investment—big enough to satisfy any one—and I gave him a favorable answer at once. He had already sounded the flower maker as to the lease, and if my money was raised the papers could be signed three days later. I had a good bit of cash at my bankers, and on the second day after hearing Duchene's story I drew out $2,000 in gold and placed the bag in my trunk. Next day the papers were to be signed, and a week later the floor would be in our possession.

That night the two of us attended the theater and afterward had supper, and I haven't the slightest doubt that my wine was drugged. While I was not made helpless, my head seemed as big as a barrel. I could hardly keep my eyes open, and if Duchene had not put me in a cab and instructed the driver I should never have found my way to the hotel. I had to be helped to my room, and I fell upon the bed, dressed as I was, and was instantly asleep. I had been asleep two hours when I awoke as keen as a fox. The effects of the drug had vanished, and as I got out of bed to undress I found my legs all right again. I was fully undressed and ready to get between the sheets when my ear caught a sound from under the bed. I at once stooped down for a look, and my eyes rested upon a man lying on the broad of his back. I had him out in a second. It seemed to me as if I had five times my ordinary strength, and, though the fellow struggled furiously and cut my arm with a knife, I grasped his throat and choked him till he lay like one dead. It was only when I had struck a light that I found the intruder to be Duchene. He had come in through the window which opened on a veranda. He had been working at the lock of my trunk when I made some noise on awakening, and he had rolled himself under the bed. He had come for that bag of gold, and he had meant to do for me if necessary.

I alarmed the house, the police were sent for, and the fellow was taken away, but it was a good hour before he recovered his senses. His story was entirely false, and he had put up a job to rob me. It was my testimony that gave him five years in prison, but after it was all over and he had been sent away I was a bit sorry for him. He could tell a good story, had a laugh which made you laugh with him, and few men of his class in Paris or elsewhere could order a better dinner. He was not a grasping man withal. He had planned to rob me of $2,000 where another would have raised the figure to $5,000.

Animals That Bloom.

Anemones, sponges, the sea cucumbers and certain other growths which bloom and apparently behave in all respects like plants are really animals.

The petals of the anemone, resembling those of a chrysanthemum, are really tentacles to catch food and put it into the hollow tube which forms the stomach, where it is digested. The sea cucumber has a flattened body. It occasionally moves at a snail's pace over the mud or sand, digging its petals, or arms, into the sludge for food, to obtain which it swallows a fair proportion of mud. It has power to sting and so keeps away its enemies.

The sea lily so exactly resembles the common lily that it is difficult to realize that it is an animal and belongs to the starfish family. It has a stalk two feet long, with a disk for a body. The tentacles close round the disk, which has a mouth, and completes the deceptive likeness. They are the oldest form of animal life on earth, and their fossils are called "stone lilies."

These creatures were believed to be plants and many people still refuse to believe otherwise.

Milk.

An English physician, commenting on the tendency of London bred persons to die young, says that they drink too little milk. Even in the country "milk is not such a common article of diet as it was in past years, and children are not nourished according to hygienic laws."

A new virtue is ascribed to milk by The Practical Druggist, which says it is the best general preventive of the absorption of poison by the human system.

THE MOUTH BREATHER.

Why He Is Always Tired and Depressed In the Morning.

Few people realize what an important organ the nose is. It is the first of the organs of respiration, and unless its functions are well performed the whole breathing process is deranged. The nostrils are not open cavities with smooth walls through which the air passes in and out, as it would through a rubber tube. They are divided into several compartments by bony projections covered with mucous membrane, and the volume of air in entering is broken up into several streams, so that all of it comes in contact with the lining membrane.

This warm and moist membrane catches the dust and other impurities and warms the air so that it will do no harm when coming in contact with the more delicate membrane in the bronchial tubes and lungs.

When the nose is stopped up from any cause, one must breathe through the mouth, and if this is continued for any length of time the general health will inevitably suffer.

The mouth itself suffers first. The mucous membrane loses its moisture and becomes inflamed. The air is neither warmed nor purified, and it irritates the lining membrane of the air passages all the way down to the lungs, so that a condition of sluggish inflammation is excited.

But the general effects are more serious than the local. One who is a mouth breather never gets enough air. During the day he suffers less in this respect, for the nerve centers are more active and force the respiratory muscles to act more energetically, but at night this vigilance is relaxed, the amount of inspired air is greatly reduced and all the tissues suffer for want of oxygen. For this reason the mouth breather always feels tired and out of sorts in the morning.

The mind suffers as well as the body, and mouth breathing children are almost always backward in their studies.

The question of the cause of mouth breathing, or rather of nasal obstruction, on which the mouth breathing depends, must be reserved for another article. As a rule, it is easily found on examination by the physician and can be removed without difficulty. What we would insist upon here is the absolute necessity of its early removal.

A child who always breathes with open mouth and whose voice has a nasal twang should be examined and treated at the earliest possible moment, for the longer the trouble exists the worse it is for the child mentally, morally and physically.—Youth's Companion.

THEATRICAL SALARIES.

What the Stage Favorites of a Century Ago Were Paid.

What were the favorite actors of a century ago paid? In 1801 there was only one theater of consequence in New York city, the Park theater, which was located on Park row near Beekman street, in the vicinity of what is now the entrance to Brooklyn bridge.

The Park theater then had a stock company of 25 members, and, if historians of that day are to be relied upon, performances of a very high grade of merit were given. These performances attracted all the fashionable world of that day. Here are the names of the players and their salaries:

Mr. Hodgkinson	$60	Mrs. Hodgkinson ...	$30
Mr. Cooper	32	Mrs. Melmoth	25
Mr. Hallam	25	Mrs. Hallam	25
Mr. Jefferson	25	Mrs. Seymour	16
Mr. Martin	25	Miss E. Westray....	15
Mr. Tyler	25	Mrs. Hogg	14
Mr. Fox	18	Mrs. Brett	14
Mr. Hallam, Jr.....	18	Miss A. Brett.....	14
Mr. Hogg	14	Miss Harding	10
Mr. Perkins	12	Mrs. Perkins	10
Mr. Lee	12	Mrs. King	6
Mr. Seymour	9	Miss Hogg	6
Master Stockwell ...	4

What would the matinee idols and popular comedians of today think of such compensation for their labors?

John Hodgkinson, who was one of the first lessees of the Park theater, which was opened on Jan. 29, 1798, had been a member of the John Street theater stock company. He was born in Manchester, England, in 1767. Hodgkinson appeared with success in England before he came to this country. Low comedy was his forte, but he was a remarkably versatile actor and great favorite. Ireland says:

"He played tragedy, genteel and light comedy, opera and pantomine with almost equal ability, and his desire to monopolize the heroes in almost every department caused many and bitter quarrels with his professional brethren."

Mrs. Hodgkinson, who was formerly Miss Brett of the Bath (England) theater, was the daughter of a singer at Covent Garden. She was a soubrette and, according to Ireland, "an excellent and versatile actress."—Exchange.

Royal Treasure and Trash.

Probably the queerest aggregation of treasure and trash is in the shah's palace in Teheran, Persia. Here, in the gallery of art, side by side, are hung a picture issued by thread manufacturers whose trademark has gone all over the world and a beautiful painting by a well known Italian artist, the gift of a sovereign. On a sideboard in the peacock throneroom are exhibited a dozen nickel plated knives, forks and spoons. In this room, on the right of the famous peacock throne, which was valued by the late Sir Richard Burton at $25,000,000, stands a splendidly carved mahogany table. On the table reposes, with an air of oriental elegance, an empty cognac bottle. No one knows what the bottle means or who put it there—that is, no one but the shah, and no one is asking him about it.

The Minister's Answer.

A certain editor who went on a vacation left a minister in charge of his paper. A day or two later a letter from "a wayback" subscriber came which read: "You know well I paid my subscription the last time I was in your town. If I get any more such letters, I will come down and maul hell out of you."

The minister answered, "I have been trying to maul that thing out of the editor for ten years, and if you really come down and maul it out of him then, my dear sir, I have 20 members of my church who can operate on."—Exchange.

SUBMARINE WORK OF SPIDERS.

A Species That Carry Along Air In Their Journeys Under Water.

A certain kind of spider is capable of forming a bubble, taking it down through the water and discharging it into its nest, so that the eggs—and later on, the young—are kept dry and are supplied with air.

Although the water spider lives on land, where it needs plenty of air to breathe, it is really hatched under the water and spends a great deal of its time there beneath the surface. Its body is covered with hair, which holds the air like drops of water, and when the body is charged with these air particles the spider dives down under the surface, forming a bubble which it holds between the hind legs and carries with it. It is only in this manner that it can furnish air for the interior of its nest, keeping it dry until the eggs are hatched.

First, the mother spider builds her nest. This is placed some distance down in the water and is a sort of cell spun in the shape of an egg, having an opening on the underside. When this is completed, she rises to the surface and there charges her body thoroughly with air. Then once more she dives under the surface, the water forming a bubble which gradually swells out from the body. This she skillfully holds between her furry hind legs firmly and yet gently, so that it won't break and escape.

Swimming to the nest, she discharges the bubble in it. This, of course, crowds out some of the water, leaving the top filled with air. As the nest is large, requiring a great deal of air the spider makes another and yet another trip, until the whole interior is free from moisture. By this simple process she keeps the eggs dry and furnishes air for the young until they are large enough to swim out and get it for themselves.

But as much as the spider lives under water it is always dry. No matter how long it may have been swimming around under the surface, the moment it comes to the top there is no trace of moisture in it. The reason of this is that the air particles that cling to its hair keep off the water and prevent it from soaking through the skin. Another strange thing about it is that it can swim with great speed in spite of its balloonlike burden.

The best way to watch the water spider is to place one in a vessel filled with water and containing some water plant. There it will quickly spin its web and if fed on flies and bugs, lead its aquatic existence.

The eggs of this spider are laid in a cocoon, shaped something like the top of a round dish. It generally contains a hundred or more eggs.

The strength of wood increases with its density.

HUMOROUS TIPSTERS.

Quick Returns For Bright Ideas. The Other Half of the Cartoonist.

Caricaturists' ideas for funny pictures often run low. They say that their hands do not lose their cunning, but that their minds refuse to frame comical scenes and situations. They must turn out a certain amount of grist, however, and on such occasions have recourse to the humorous tipster. He is usually a literary free lance, with some knack of humor. The most successful are those who contribute funny paragraphs, stories and sketches to the humorous weeklies or the humorous columns of daily papers and magazines.

In New York there are at least 50, of whom probably one-half sell tips or enter into business relations with the artists. Where tips are sold they bring from $1 to $3, and they average $2 each. It is generally a cash transaction. Equally common is the practice of going halves upon an idea. In this case the tipster makes a schoolboy sketch and on a separate sheet writes the reading matter to accompany it. The artist thereupon makes a finished picture. If the publication uses black and white and no color, the drawing is purchased and the artist absolved of further responsibility. If, however, the publication has a color press, the artist is often called upon to oversee the press arrangements as to the distribution of the various inks. In the former case the artist and tipster equally divide the price paid. In the latter the artist receives a somewhat larger share.

The business pays fairly well so far as the time consumed is concerned. A man with grotesque fancies will often conceive a dozen tips in an hour, but it may be several days or weeks before he can do it again. The most successful tipster is said to clear $1,000 a year. An ordinary tipster makes one-half or one-third as much. During a political campaign there is a big demand for cartoons, and prices go higher. Tips for these cartoons will often bring $5 and $10, and when they have been worked out upon the partnership principle they have netted as high as $100.

Not as a Rule.

He had been trying all evening to make a good impression. He had told all his humorous stories and had given one impassioned speech from "Cyrano," but was still unconscious. Thick skinned, he failed to perceive all her efforts to get rid of him. Finally there was a deep silence. Fidgeting, he grew nervous and cast about for something to say.

"Do you wear that sort of collar as a rule?" he stammered foolishly.

"No," the haughty maid replied frigidly; "as a collar."

Then he fled.

ME.

Through many, many summers
I look, as through a glass,
And see a world of showers and flowers
And laughing children pass;
And in her big blue sunbonnet
One other little lass—

A lass who watched the swallows
Skim just beyond her hand
And where the flickers fled and sped
And nests of hang birds fanned
And felt those birds were fairy folk
On wing to fairyland.

In her warm fist she carried,
Trudging o'er hills and dales,
In tiny papers laid and weighed
As if in fairy scales
The salt that catches bobolinks
When sprinkled on their tails.

A little lass and wistful,
Who gazed up the far sky,
And reached for fairy things and wings
In vain and wondered why;
Poor little lass, I wonder still,
Could she be really I?

ALLAH AND AMERICA.

A Persian Legend About the Creator's Visit to Earth.

In Persia, on a morning after the vermin had been particularly vigorous, I said something caustic about getting back to God's country. An Armenian who had reposed in utter comfort in the same caravansary heard it and smiled. Being an Armenian, he hated the Persians, probably. Incidentally the Persian reciprocates.

Well, this Armenian, rubbing his hands and with his head skewed over on one side, said: "The Persians have a legend for everything. They have a legend for what you said just now. It is this:

"Allah—that is God—once said to his angel, 'I will see this world which I made.'

"And so Allah and the angel descended invisible in a cloud to the earth, and the first place at which they arrived was France—that is, in Ferenghistan. And there they saw the railroads, and the tramways, and the theaters, and the great picture galleries. And Allah looked in disappointment and said: 'Alas, no! This is not the world which I made. I made none of these things.'

"So they journeyed to Ingleistan—that is, England—and there were mighty ships in the harbors and huge mills which make all sorts of things and food in plenty. And again Allah said: 'Alas, no! This is not the world which I made.' And everywhere they traveled in the cloud Allah looked upon the land and said, 'No; this is not it.'

"At last, in despair, the angel led the way to Persia, and Allah sat himself down upon a very high mountain, and, looking far on every side, he saw neither railroads nor tramways nor theaters nor picture galleries nor ships nor mills nor schoolhouses nor plenty to eat.

"And Allah said: 'Yes, at last. This is the world which I made. Not a thing is changed. The people whom I put there have done nothing.'"

"Why didn't he come to America?" I asked.

"Sir," answered the Armenian, "in Persia they had not even heard of America."

SOME VICIOUS ANTS.

SPECIES THAT HAVE NEARLY EVERY BAD TRAIT OF HUMANITY.

They Are Lazy, Greedy, Tyrannous and Covetous—Some That Reduce Their Captives to Slavery and Put Them to Queer Uses.

Science is, after all, your real iconoclast. Not content with toppling the busy little bee off her pinnacle of virtues, it goes on to attack the ant, for so long held a pattern and moral of thrift.

Ants, say the wise men, have about every bad trait of humanity—they are lazy, greedy, tyrannous, given to conquests and coveting the territory of their neighbors. Along with the territory they oftener than not take the neighbors themselves, holding them ever after in slavery.

Just how this comes to pass is something of a puzzle. There are seven hundred odd species of ants duly classified.

Several of these species, say observers, must possess hypnotic power, since they attack, subjugate and reduce to slavery other species which are much bigger, stronger and more populous in the nests.

After they have got their slaves many other queer things happen. The slaves in some nests are classified—so many told off as soldiers to defend the gates, so many for domestic duties, foraging, the care of eggs, and so on. The soldier ants are further subdivided. The larger number, by constant exercise, develop fierce nipping jaws and poison stings. The others in some curious fashion increase the size of their heads, especially if they happen to be considerably bigger than their masters. The big heads enable them to block a passageway against an invading foe.

Exceptionally elastic slaves are transformed into living honey bottles. They are found with abdomens enormously distended and full of the honey dew the working slaves bring in. Honey dew, be it said, is a secretion of the aphides, or plant lice, which the ant swarms keep in herds within the nest.

Ants are passionately fond of honey—indeed, of all sweet juices. They are, further, fond of mushrooms and grow them within their nests. They also cultivate certain species of orchids and bring about distinct modifications of the plant form, stinging the young tender stems so fiercely that they will become almost globular and distill a thin semisaccharine juice, which the ants no doubt regard as rare wine. One particular species of orchid, indeed, is so infested with a virulent stinging ant that the collection of it is very dangerous. The minute the plant is touched all the ants swarming over it rush to the point of attack. That is, however, less curious than the fact that the orchid will not flourish without the ants, but withers away after a feeble, straggling year's growth.

Some few among slaveholding ants remain capable. The most part become utterly demoralized. They cannot build nests, care for their young, or even feed themselves. Not a few, when the slaves have chosen and built a new nest, ride to it upon a slave's back. One species is noteworthy for having only slaves for workers, yet never containing within the nests any slave eggs or young.

As with bees, the queen ant is the mother of the swarm. Unlike bees, however, there are often several queens in the same swarm. The workers are rudimentary females. In slavemaking the victors kill all the perfect ants and take home the others.

Perfect males and females have wings, which they drop as soon as the marriage flight is over. Worker ants have no wings. Worker ants, or, rather slaves, and the aphis cows by no means exhaust the list of ant dependents. They keep various smaller insects as men keep domestic animals. Just why is not yet clear. The fact remains, though, that in the crannies of some nests herds of a thousand almost invisible small creatures have been found.

A year is the average span of ant life, but some species live five years and exceptional individuals as much as seven. All species show the liveliest concern for their eggs, lugging them up into sunshine upon fair days and scuttling back with them the minute the sky is overcast. Upon a fickle April day the eggs may be moved a half dozen times. They are nearly as regardful of the aphis eggs. Indeed, throughout they protect their milk kine, shelter them well and take pains in rearing their young.

Hospitality is not unknown among ants. A stranger guest receives distinguished consideration. But woe to the stranger ant that comes uninvited. He is hustled and pummeled and finally hurt mortally unless he saves himself by showing superior fighting power or possessing a clean pair of heels. After he is down a mere squirming trunk, bereft of legs, unable to bite, the slaves lay hold on him and drag him outside the nest to die. Possibly it is an ant superstition that bad luck follows a stranger's death in the house.

Formic acid, the distinctive ant product, is one of the greatest vegetable stimulants known. The earth of a nest becomes so saturated with it that some people explain the famous Hindoo mango trick by supposing that the mango seed which comes to flower and fruit before your eyes is planted in a pot of ant heap earth.

However that may be, it is established beyond cavil that ants of some species cultivate and presumably fertilize their favorite food stuffs. Cases in point are the trimmer ants and the harvesting ants, both of which abound in the state of Texas. The trimmers prune a sort of weed which is to their taste so that it shall grow strong and sturdy. The harvesting ants go even beyond that. They clear disks several yards across roundabout their nests of all manner of vegetation, then plant the disks with ant rice, which they watch and tend until it ripens, letting no vagrant or alien twig show its head.

The Inhumanity of Man.

"Ah," the beautiful girl cried as she took the roll of manuscript that the hard looking old fellow with the glasses had handed back, "I don't believe you have any poetry in your soul!"

"No," he replied, looking at the waste basket. "I suppose I haven't, but if you need any in your business you can find a lot of it in there."

Supremely Restful.

"I wonder if there's any easier occupation than fishing."

"Well, yes—looking at people fishing."—Brooklyn Life.

SKILL OF THE SPIDER

THE WEAVING OF ITS WEB IS A VERY WONDERFUL WORK.

Almost Human Intelligence Displayed by It In Solving Engineering Problems In Constructing Its Dainty, Lacy Domicile.

The spider is the original telegraph lineman. Indeed he is something more. After his lines are stretched he establishes a "central," to which he runs as soon as any sort of vibration tells him that prey is entangled anywhere in his web. Once at central he listens a minute; then, having gathered the direction, glides away, to weave still further netting of silken web about the luckless wasp or fly that has fallen into his clutches.

"He" would more properly be written "she," as, in case of so many insects, the female spider is ever so much bigger, more powerful and more resourceful than the male. Spider courtship is, in fact, a perilous process for the wooer. Unless he shows himself both brave and nimble he is in danger of being eaten before he gets the ear of his fair one. By way of evening matters, after marriage he shows himself a most heartless parent, seizing upon the clutch of eggs as soon as laid and devouring them before the eyes of their agonized author. Thus it is that the agonized mother spider keeps a death grip upon her bag of eggs. It is the daintiest fairy silken pocket, varying in shape and size according to species, but always exceedingly handsome and well spun. At the first hint of attack the mother seizes it and hurries away, often spinning a thread as she goes in the effort to escape. She will lose a leg, two legs even, cheerfully in its defense. That is not, however, so wonderful as the fact that the lost legs very quickly grow again.

The name spider runs back to the Saxon, spinan, to spin; also the root of that austere word spinster. The Dutch name for the insect is cop or cob, a head; hence cobweb, head or cobwoven, is lingually allied to the so famous Spion-Kop. But cobweb is by no means so expressive as gossamer or sommerwebben, the summer woven.

In substance spider web is nearly identical with silk. But the spinners of it are far too wise to reel it up into cocoons, which may be plundered by men to feed the desire of the eyes and the pride of life. Web spinning is very wonderful work. The workers indeed deserve high rank as civil engineers, and often deal with knotty problems in ways bespeaking almost human intelligence, as, for instance, when they spin loose threads so deftly and with such nice calculation of wind force that the loose ends are carried exactly to the chosen spot, often a couple of yards away, and there anchor themselves of their own motion. It is thus the fairy cables which net trees and boughs and stretch across all summer paths are set in place. They are invisible save where the full sun glints upon them or else when a misty morning strings them with dewdrops. None the less they hold firm and serve as aerial passageways along which the spiders run to and fro safely and swiftly, or else they serve as guys to brace the main web. In spinning the spider shows architectural genius to match her engineering skill.

First she surveys a site, then stretches across it a strong thread. She is not particular about having this first thread very taut. All that can be managed later. She spins another thread from the end of this diagonally to another point, whence she goes to a third anchorage, a fourth, even a fifth. Now she has a clear central inclosed at irregular angles. The inclosing threads have been spun of pure silk.

The next thing is to go over them with a viscid exudation which will make whatever touches them stick. When that is done, she spins the web proper, running from side to side, with a thread trailing behind her, until all the web spokes are in place. Before she weaves the rays together with crossing threads she must know that both they and the anchor threads are dependable. So she runs about, stretching, straining every one, and if it breaks spinning it over. Where there is pronounced slack she either takes it up by splicing a new thread near the center and fastening it outside or by attaching light weights, pebbles, bits of stick, and so on, to the web's lower edge.

Now begins the last work—running round and round. The crossing threads are spun double, first very fine, then with a coarser ply. At the middle, where the ray threads meet and cross, she either builds herself a snug station or after everything is done cuts away the tangle and leaves a small, clear space. This is the parlor into which the traditional fly was invited, with disastrous results, but Mme. Spider does not habitually sit in it. Instead she lurks out of sight, ambushed at the foot of a ray thread. When vibrations tell of prey, she seeks the parlor, locates the disturbance and straightway goes to see about it. A strong winged insect, as a wasp or bumblebee, left to himself will soon break out of her flimsy toils, though he may so entangle his wings in doing it that he never flies again. So she takes no chances. Nimbly she runs down the nearest ray thread, spinning as she runs. When she is a little beyond her victim, she dexterously loops her new cable round him, draws it taut and fastens it.

When this has been repeated half a dozen times, the prey, bound wing and foot, is ready for removal. She fastens a new thread at the parlor, loops it around the fly or wasp, carries it back and pulls it as tight as she can. Sometimes she moves her prey a whole half inch with one thread. The next thing is to cut away all the outer threads that hold him. This she does quickly, then spins a new cable from the parlor. Thus spinning and cutting, unless the prey be disproportionately big, she brings it at last to the parlor or very close about it and there sucks its juices in leisurely content, but if it is too big to be moved she gnaws off a leg at a time, sucks them and after awhile attacks the carcass. Sometimes, with fierce stinging insects, she bites them just back of the neck so as to paralyze them.

HER HISTORY.

It Wasn't Just What the Clerks Expected.

It was 5 o'clock, and in the big teahouse the office force was very busy indeed. The typewriter clicked rapidly, and the heavy pens scratched over the thick leaves.

In the height of the rush a woman entered the office. She carried a fox muff, and a graceful automobile reached to her feet.

"A stunner!" breathed several of the office force, and then the young man nearest left his stool and said:

"What can I do for you, miss?"

She seemed a bit confused.

"I have a great secret," she whispered, but somehow every clerk heard.

They surrounded her.

"Yes," she continued; "I am a woman with a history."

After this you could not have paid those clerks to return to their stools.

"Are you interested?" she asked.

"Interested?" roared the tall pen scratcher. "Why, a statue would be interested in your history."

"And you will not discourage me?"

"Never! Do not fear to tell us all. Now for your history."

She drew a flat volume from the folds of her automobile.

"Here it is; a complete history of the Boer war to date; 2,000 pages, 500"—

In confusion the office force retreated.

"Run, woman, run!" shouted the clerk.

"What is it?" she gasped.

"The great water tank on the roof has burst!"

With a long shriek she rushed down to the street.

"When they spring those gags, you have to take heroic means," grinned the tall pen scratcher. "Women's histories ain't what they are cracked up to be."

A Plausible Story.

Lady—Why are you wandering around the country, I should like to know, instead of staying at home and taking care of your family?

Tramp—You see, mum, my wife had a very good servant girl, a regular jewel, mum.

"That doesn't seem possible."

"There never was but one perfect girl, and my wife had her, mum."

"Mercy! What a lucky woman!"

"Yes, mum, so my wife often said. But, you see, mum, the girl didn't like me."

"She didn't?"

"No, mum. She said my wife would have to discharge her or me, so she discharged me."

"Oh, I see. Here's some money."

The Fault of the Invitation.

Mrs. Blomarket cannot understand why Mrs. Upstreet did not accept her invitation. This is what the invitation said:

"My Dear Mrs. Upstreet.—I am going to entertain a few people on Thursday evening, the 27th, and this is to ask you to be one of the number. I know you do not care for society functions, but you will feel perfectly at ease at this one, as nobody of any consequence is invited."

Then Why?

"So the doctor won't let you smoke, eh?" said Browne as he applied a match to his weed. "Sorry for you, old man. I can't imagine any greater pleasure than a good cigar after dinner."

"So?" replied Towne, sniffing. "Then why do you deny yourself that pleasure?"—Philadelphia Press.

It's an Ill Wind.

"Yes; it is terrible," moaned the weeping mother. "It is terrible to think of our little son in the hands of the kidnapers."

"But," said the sympathizing friend, "think of the social prestige it gives you."

Barriers to Education.

"I'm afraid our son is too delicate to take a collegiate course."

"Can't you regulate his studies so he won't overwork?"

"Oh, what we think he wouldn't live through is the hazing."—Indianapolis Journal.

A MARCH WEDDING.

Dr T Herbert Prust, of Michigan, Weds Miss Vina Belleghem, of Town.

A very interesting event took place at the residence of the bride's father, Hunter street at noon to-day, when Miss Vina Belleghem, eldest daughter of Mr Daniel Belleghem, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Dr T Herbert Prust, of Easton, Mich, and son of Mr R Prust, of Blackstock, Ont. The ceremony was performed by Rev J G Potter, of St Andrew's Presbyterian church, assisted by Rev J P Wilson, of George street Methodist church, in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties.

The bride was becomingly gowned in white organdie, trimmed with valenciennes lace, and carried a bouquet of crimson roses. She was given away by her father, and was attended by her sister, Miss Laura, who was attired in a costume of white organdie over pink, and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The groom was ably supported by his brother, Mr. Morley Prust. The wedding march was played by Mr F W Walden, organist of George street Methodist church.

After the ceremony was performed, the wedding party sat down to a sumptuous repast prepared by Long Bros. At 4.45 they left on the C.P.R. for their future home in Michigan, followed by the good wishes of their many friends.

Amongst the many beautiful presents were a handsome clock from St. Andrew's choir, of which the bride was a valued member, a silver milk pitcher and sugar bowl from the young men's guild of St. Andrew's church, and a beautiful fruit dish from the employees of Mr. Belleghem's establishment. The groom's present to the bride was a lovely pearl crescent, and to the bride's maid a pearl and diamond ring.

Mr. Prust is a graduate of Trinity Medical College, Toronto, and is well and popularly known here. The bride is one of Peterborough's most popular young ladies, and has prominently identified in local musical circles. The Examiner joins in extending congratulations to the young couple and in wishing them a long and prosperous married life.

ANNUAL MEETING OF ST. JOHN'S AUXILIARY.

The annual meeting of St. John's church branch of the Woman's Auxiliary to missions was held in the Guild room on Monday afternoon, 18th inst., at half past three, Mrs. R. M. Dennistoun presiding. There was a large attendance.

The minutes of the last annual and monthly meetings were read and confirmed.

The treasurer's report that receipts were $365.41 for the year, and expenditure $277.76, was received and adopted.

Mrs. Best reported for the Dorcas work, and Mrs. Stone for the Children's Mission Band.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:—

Hon President—Mrs Vernon.
President—Miss Errett.
1st Vice-President—Mrs J C Davidson.
2nd Vice-President—Mrs Hammond.
3rd Vice-President—Mrs Best.
Treasurer—Mrs Clark.
Secretary—Mrs John Manning.
Librarian—Mrs F J Rogers.
Supt of Mission-Band—Mrs R M Dennistoun.
Assistants—Mrs Stone and Miss Mericke.
Dorcas Committee—Mesdames Best and Comstock with Miss English as secretary of same.

A vote of thanks was given to the officers of last year for their untiring efforts on behalf of the work.

The rector spoke a few words of congratulation to the branch, after which Mrs. Hamilton, who has returned from Japan after six years in the mission work there, gave a most interesting talk on life and work as she found it in her field of labor.

JEWISH EVANGELIST.

He Spoke Monday Night in the Murray St. Baptist Church.

Mr. Mark Lev, the Jewish Evangelist, of Cleveland, spoke Monday evening to a large and an attentive audience at the Murray St. Baptist church. He took up the subject of the Y.P.S., "Jesus, Our High Priest," and showed that Jesus is not merely an High Priest, but a Kingly High Priest after the order of Malchi-Zedek, that is God's Righteous King, as the meaning of the name Malchi-Zedek implies. Him our High Priest, now sitting at the right hand of the Majesty of God the Father, God has set or anointed to be King on Zion His holy mountain, and He will soon come to take up His place there as King of Kings, and Lord of Lords. The signs of the times are ominous, and especially so in Israel, the mystical fig-tree is putting forth her branches reminding us that summer is nigh (Matt. 24, 32). Mr. Lev, therefore urged his hearers to watch and pray and work, and thus be ready to meet the King when He comes. The pastor of the church asked Mr. Lev several questions regarding the present religious state of the Jews, and Mr. Lev gave very satisfactory answers throwing altogether new light on the attitude of the Jews towards Christ their long expected Messiah. At the close of the service the president of the Y.P.U. expressed in the name of the union their thanks for the new light in which Mr. Lev. has brought before them the subject of the evening. This evening he will speak at the Charlotte Street Methodist church.

THE PROPOSED DAIRY FARM.

THE SPECIAL COMMITTEE REPORTED LAST NIGHT.

MR. H. P. KENNEDY'S OFFER.

Says He Will Supply 1000 Quarts of Pure Milk Each Day From His Farm—Will the Project go Through?

The adjourned public meeting to consider the advisability of establishing a dairy farm on a large scale was held in the town council chamber last night, to receive the report of the committee, which was appointed some time ago to gather data and information regarding the feasibility of such a project. Amongst those present were Messrs. A. P. Poussette, F. H. Dobbin, H. P. Kennedy, C. H. Moore, C. A. Wood, W. Hooper, W A. Head, T. A. S. Hay, and W. Rose.

The chair was occupied by Mr. T. A. S. Hay, who called upon Mr. Poussette to explain the object of the meeting which he did, reviewing the circumstances which lead up to the calling of the meeting. He read the report of the special committee which was as appended.

THE REPORT.

The committee consisting of the undersigned and Dr. Halliday, and Messrs. Davidson, Dobbin, H. P. Kennedy, C. H. Moore and Poussette, appointed to enquire into the pure milk supply, beg to report as follows:—

Shortly after their appointment they proceeded to Toronto and first visited the farm of W. E. H. Massey, Esq., known as "Dentonia," situated about five miles east of Toronto. They were treated most courteously by the Superintendent, who gave them every facility for making a thorough examination into the system there pursued. A large herd of thoroughbred cows supplied the milk which is treated in the approved up-to-date method, but without sterilization. The cows are examined by a veterinary surgeon once a fortnight and all the employees are carefully watched to avoid the germs of disease being conveyed to the milk. The milk after being strained, which is done immediately after milking, is at once passed over coolers to get rid of the animal heat, and is then put into bottles which have been thoroughly sterilized, and afterwards properly sealed. By this system the milk is as nearly free from impurity as it is possible to make it without separation and sterilization and as the latter is objectionable on account of not only changing the flavour but rendering the milk less digestible, its adoption is not considered advisable.

The Committee then visited the extensive and magnificent works of "The City Dairy Company (Limited)," on Spadina Crescent, Toronto, where the same purifying process as that at "Dentonia," is in use but in addition a separator is used to remove any imparities that may have passed through the strainer, but here the milk is supplied by numbers of farmers under rigid contracts providing for inspection of the herds, stables and sanitary conditions generally, particular regard being had to the water supply. The absolute cleanliness with which these works are conducted is admirable and a visit to this company's premises will amply repay anyone taking an interest in this subject, the importance of which cannot be better realized than by seeing the immense care that is now being devoted to it.

Subsequently in view of a proposition made by Mr. H. P. Kennedy which will be referred to later, the Committee visited his farm in Otonabee about a mile and a half from town. His place is well adapted to dairy farming and his stables can be readily extended to accommodate one hundred cows. The stables, with some slight improvements can be made quite satisfactory and Mr. Kennedy has already adopted the system of using none but carefully selected cows which are kept thoroughly clean. Being thus situated, and being engaged in the cattle business which gives him exceptional opportunities for purchasing the best breeds of cows, Mr. Kennedy has made a proposition to enter into a contract with any company that may be formed to supply the milk of one hundred cows per day say 1,000 quarts at a figure equal to about the estimated cost of production, which would be delivered at the company's works erected on Mr. Kennedy's farm and there purified and delivered by the company. The contract with Mr. Kennedy would provide for the same care and attention, particularly with regard to cleanliness, as are to be found at "Dentonia" and also for inspection of the cows, examination of employees and other details considered necessary.

The Committe, after full consideration, have come to the conclusion that the capital required to purchase, equip and stock a farm such as would be necessary to carry on the business with any degree of success would be greater than could be obtained in this neighbourhood, while the amount required for the purchase of plant and erection of a suitable building would come within the means available. The Committee have looked pretty thoroughly into the question of the cost of plant and building as well as the expense of carrying on the business, and are satisfied that on the lines suggested by Mr. Kennedy, not only can a supply of pure milk be given, to the great benefit of the community, but also a reasonable return obtained upon the investment.

Respectfully submitted,
JOHN CARNEGIE,
Chairman.

Peterborough, March 15th, 1901.

In addition to the above report Mr. Poussette said that the great advantage of having the plant near the town is that it becomes possible to get rid of the animal heat almost immediately, a most important fact. He also thoroughly explained other details in connection with the matter. The plant required according to the arrangements that would be made with Mr. Kennedy, would be about $5,000, while to put in an entire plant of their own would cost at least $35,000. The committee was quite satisfied that there should be a step in the direction proposed. He pointed out that the committee was not in any way casting any reflection on the milk supply of the present time, which is as pure as is possible under existing circumstances.

Upon motion of Mr. Dobbin, seconded by Mr. Kennedy, the report was adopted.

Mr. Hooper, one of the local milk vendors, thought that there was nothing contained in the report which the milk men did not know before. They well knew the importance of the cleanliness of milk, and the only improvement that could be made on the present arrangements, was that they might have an inspector appointed who would make known the milk dealers who were really supplying a good article to the public.

Dr. Halliday emphasized the object the medical men had in bringing the subject before the public. It is well-known, he said, that the supply of milk was not as pure as it should be, and it was desirable that the possibilities of germs getting into the milk should be lessened to the greatest possible extent. The speaker then went on to show the necessity of milk in time of sickness, etc.

The chairman motioned the obligations they were under to Dr. Halliday and other medical men, and to the committee for their interest in the matter.

Considerable informal discussion took place, in which a number of the milk dealers participated. The latter contended that the public were not careful enough in the condition of their milk vessels and the care of the milk after it was delivered.

Dr. Halliday admitted that there was something in this.

The meeting then adjourned and it now remains the duty of some public spirited men to go ahead with the establishment of a dairy farm on the lines suggested in the report.

BURLESQUE HOCKEY MATCH.

Though Not Largely Attended, it Was Quite a Success.

The burlesque hockey match which took place last night between two picked teams, proved to be one of the most laughable affairs of the kind that has been put on in some time. Whilst the attendance was not large as the management might have desired, still the line of entertainment was good. The costumes were not only original, but very comical looking, and the weapons used in the prosecution of the play were outlandish in the extreme. Tennis racquets, golf clubs, in fact almost every line of instrument from a tooth pick to a saw log, were in evidence. Throughout the evening it kept the audience guessing as to who was who, and what was what. The lady costumes were antique in the extreme and were rudely criticized by the fair spectators.

The teams were: Goal, Armstrong; point, Watt; cover point, Whitcroft; forwards, Lynch, Wasson, Comstock and Glover. Goal, Cavanah; point, Morgan; cover point, King; forwards, McPherson, Scott, Robinson and King Dillon.

Referee—H R H Kenner.
Umpires—H Rush and A N Other.
Time Keeper—Wm Bunton.

The score at half time was 1—0 in favour of Capt. Glover's team, and at full time 7—5.

The nets, it might be said, were reversed, and the football took the place of a puck.

NOTES.

Billy Bunton created a favourable impression as he stood in full costume in the timekeeper's stand.

Andy Scott should have been taken up as a vagrant. He had no visible means of support.

Umpire Rush's costume was much admired by the ladies.

Referee Kenner, costumed as a soldiers produced much applause as he started on the ice.

King Dillon's weapon was a tennis racquet.

The Pig Irons went up to Lakefield yesterday evening and were defeated by a score of 12 to 8.

The hockey season is not yet quite over in Peterborough. This evening the Junior Colts will play the Campbellford Seconds, and the Senior Colts will try conclusions with the Norwood Seniors. The Campbellford vs. Junior Colts game will take place at the Charlotte Street Rink, at 8.15 o'clock and should prove to be hotly contested. The Senior Colts vs Norwood match will take place in the latter place. Besides there are several scratch matches on the tapis this evening. One from 7 until 8, and another between 10 and 11 o'clock.

SERVICES APPRECIATED.

The Toronto Savings and Loan Co. Give the Firemen a Cheque.

Mr. T. Rutherford, chief of the Peterboro Fire Brigade, received the following letter from Mr. W. G. Morrow, manager Toronto Savings and Loan Co.:—

DEAR SIR,—I enclose herewith a cheque for $100, to be applied to the funds of the brigade, as a small token of appreciation for services rendered by the brigade in connection with property owned by this company.

Yours very truly,
W. G. MORROW,
Manager.

The Brigade, through Mr. Rutherford, desire to publicly thank the Toronto Savings & Loan Co, for their kindness in presenting them with so handsome a cheque.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

We regret to hear that our new Dr. Keath lost a very valuable horse, can't say the cause of death.

H. J. McLean has just received his Spring Stock of goods. Suits made to order on short notice.

The sad news of the sudden death of Mrs. Thomas Weir of Cavanville was told by the Rev. Mr. Coon on Sabbath last; we sympathise with Mr. Weir in his bereavement. This in another warning saying to us "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."

Mrs. Edward Sanderson is visiting with her friend Mrs. James Sanderson of this town.

Miss. M. Argue and her sister was visiting at the homes of Mrs. Geo. Jamieson and J. McLean, Esq.

The new steam saw mill east of the village is doing a rushing business.

We desire to express our sympathy with the Hon. J. R. Stratton in his great loss by fire. We hope out of the ashes will spring up a paper equal to the one that has been so long in circulation and has been so highly valued by all classes.

Our town was highly favored by a visit from Mr. Walter Cook one of Strathcona's Horse returning from South Africa, A. P. McLean accompanied him from Peterboro, they were the guests of J. Mclean, Esq. We extend a hearty welcome to Walter on his visit to the town of his birth, and his former home. He has many relics to remind him of his travels in South Africa, he goes from here to Victoria B. C.

An Open Door Policy.

The open door policy of the Social Bible Club, at the Y.M.C.A., will be well illustrated to-night, when the members of the Club will entertain all the members of the Intermediate Department. It will be the best night yet in the history of the Club, and any Intermediates who have not received a formal invitation, are expected as well as those who have.

LIBERAL CONVENTION AT NORWOOD

The Liberals of East Peterborough are reminded of the convention to be held in the Town Hall, Norwood, on Saturday, March 23rd, to nominate a candidate to contest the representation of the riding in the interests of the Liberal party and the present Liberal Government of the Province at the general elections. The present is an important period in the history of the country. The Liberal Government, which has to its credit a long and splendid record of good government, will at the forthcoming general elections appeal to the people for a renewal of confidence. It is plain to any person who has the interests of the Province sincerely at heart that those interests will be best served by the return of the Liberal Government to power. Since the Liberals came into power in 1872 they have expended nearly a hundred millions of dollars on the public services. While the public service has been efficiently administered with generous expenditure for every legitimate public enterprise, and to the lessening of the burdens of the people, it is quite worthy of remark that not one dollar of this large sum has gone astray or been subject to a charge of improper expenditure, while the balance has been so carefully held that at the end of 28 years, in spite of the large outlay, there is a balance of receipts over expenditures of a million dollars. The province stands to-day, after all these years of Liberal rule and liberal expenditure, in a position occupied by no other country in the world—without a dollar of public debt presently payable, and with a surplus of interest bearing assets of $2,850,000, of which one million is cold cash, in the bank. The Ross Government will appeal to the people, not only on the strength of a magnificent record, but on the strength of a big broad progressive policy, looking to the development, of the new portions and the improvement of the old—a policy worthy the most progressive province of the Confederation, a policy that must meet the approval of the enterprising people of Ontario.

East Peterborough must remain in line, and at the convention on Saturday next a candidate should be selected who will keep up the record. It is desirable that the very largest representation possible be present, so that the candidate chosen will enter the contest with the widest measure of approval of the members of the Liberal party.

OBITUARY.

The late Mrs Washington Morse removed from Peterborough with her husband and son from the Maritime Provinces, who settled at Muskoka in the autumn of '99.

During her long and useful life, contemporary with that of our lamented Queen, Mrs Morse developed a character unique and almost peerless. The fertile inventive mind and skilful industrious hand quietly planned and executed great things, and this continued until within six days of her decease, notwithstanding the closing years were burdened with almost total blindness. To the last her life was an illustration of the "Wise Man's" encomiums: "She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness. Her children arise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her; and let her own works praise her in the gates. Favour is deceitful and beauty is vain, but a woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised."

The enemy, death, brought no terror, no suffering of mind or body. The "Everlasting Arms" supported; and the finale came as comes a same and lustrous sunset.

The grief-stricken husband, five sons and two daughters, survive the severance of the closest and dearest of earthly ties: F W Morse, of Muskoka; Mrs H I Farnum, of town; Rev G W Morse, of Melbourne, Australia; W A Morse, barrister, of Minneapolis, Minn; C A Morse, real estate dealer, of Sauk Centre, Minn: Frank W Morse, artist, of Mankato, Minn, and Mrs Eva O., wife of editor Morrison of the Mankato Journal. The venerable bereaved husband takes up residence with daughter at her home on College street.

OBITUARY.

Died at her home at "Morse's Cove," Muskoka, Ont. on Feb. 12, 1901; Olive Buzzell, beloved wife of Washington Morse, in the eighty-third year of her age.

OUR ADVERTISERS.

During the present disturbed relations with our advertisers, on account of the disastrous fire in the Examiner buildings, we are compelled to ask the indulgence of our patrons for a few days until we can pull ourselves together again. Hard and earnest work is being done to instal an entirely new printing plant in our present temporary premises at No. 411 George Street, a few doors south of the burned building, and by the end of the week, we hope to resume our contracts with our advertisers. In the meantime, in order to keep our advertisers as much in touch with our readers as possible, we will be able to insert short local notices of their business announcements.

Routley's Magic Prices.

The great sale of the Toronto Bazaar stock, bought at a fraction on the dollar, is a bonanza to Peterborough citizens. The goods are moving with such rapidity that special lines advertized one day are very often completely sold out the next. There are many lines, however, such as Wall Papers, Window Blinds, China, Crockery, etc., that can stand a month's heavy selling before being cleared. Another thing is certain—that no matter what you buy here you can count on securing wonderful bargains—bargains such as can be obtained nowhere else in Peterborough or any other town in Ontario.

MR. BENNETT'S MOTION

He Asks That an Import Duty on Lumber Be Levied.

THE VIEW OF THE LUMBERMEN.

The Needs of the Northwest Show That the Settlers on the Prairies Should Have Cheaper Lumber—Mr. Edwards and Mr. Holmes Oppose the Motion—The Discussion Ended at Six.

Ottawa, March 21.—The House devoted yesterday afternoon to a discussion of Mr. Bennett's resolution calling for a duty on American lumber. The question was under discussion at 6 o'clock, and as the order changed after dinner the resolution lies over indefinitely. Last evening the House sat for fifteen minutes.

The following bills were introduced and given first readings:

Respecting the Rathbun Company—Mr. Russell.

To incorporate the Kootenay Central Railway—Mr. Morrison.

Respecting the Trans-Canada Railway Company—Mr. Malouin.

The Doukhobors' Petition.

Replying to a question, Mr. Sifton said "a petition was received from the Immigration Commissioners at Winnipeg, under cover of a letter, dated July 10, 1900, purporting to be signed by 29 of the Doukhobors, making certain objections to the land, marriage and registration laws.

The department sent a copy of the petition to Mr. Maude in order that he might communicate with the signers of the petition and remove this misapprehension in regard to Canadian laws.

"The department is not aware that Doukhobors issued an appeal to all the nations of the world, asking if they would be given a refuge from Canadian tyranny. The department is informed that a Russian (not a Doukhobor) named Bojianski undertook to make trouble with Doukhobors. He got up the original petition referred to and has now caused to be printed a document to which reference is made in a Winnipeg paper, known as The Voice.

"The department has no reason to believe that the utterances of Mr. Bojianski represent the views of the 7,500 Doukhobors who are settled in the Northwest or any substantial portion of them."

Lumber Duties Proposed.

Mr. Bennett moved "That in the opinion of this House, duties should be levied upon lumber imported into Canada, corresponding with those now existing upon lumber entering the United States."

After Mr. Fielding's announcement that no changes would be made in the tariff, Mr. Bennett said he supposed his remarks would be ineffective, but it was a duty he owed to his constituents to press the matter upon the attention of the House. Canada took the last year $387,274 worth of oak, $398,211 of pine, $199,000 worth of creosoted timber, besides a considerable quantity of staves from the United States. In view of the heavy duty levied upon Canadian lumber by the United States and the abundance of wood in Canada, this importation should be taxed.

Mr. T. O. Davis opposed the resolution as a free trader. Cheap lumber, he said, was one of the attractions to immigrants offered by Manitoba and the Northwest.

Col. Prior supported the motion in the interest of the lumbermen of British Columbia.

Mr. Charlton.

Mr. Charlton declared himself in favor of an import duty on lumber at least to the extent of the American duty. He pointed out the results of the Ontario policy, which had established a number of sawmills on the north shore of Lake Huron. These manufacturers naturally felt that having brought their industry into Canada they were entitled to some consideration. Their competitors on the American side sent manufactured lumber free into Canada. Though the Canadian mills did not fear the competition in high grade lumber, there was a plethora of low grade lumber in the United States and this was dumped into Canada to the serious damage of the lumber industry.

Mr. Charlton continuing, said: "In our dealings with the United States, what we want to do is to try to secure their respect. We can never secure their respect without showing proper care of our own. We should take care of our interests in the same lines that they take care of their interests. If we take care of this industry as they take care of it on their side, we will secure the respect of the Americans, and secure also the operation of an influence on future negotiations, which will be of an important character. In addition we will be doing an act of justice to our own people. We should make it clear to the American people that Canada at last intends to stand on its own rights and protect its own industries.

"This theory of free trade is one thing. Its application, in many instances, works most injuriously to the interests of Canada. As a matter of sentiment alone, I believe in meeting the Americans with this duty. If for no other reason, I would believe in it; but I have offered strong reasons aside from the sentimental reason. I say, if we adopt this duty, we will confer a benefit upon an important Canadian interest; that it will produce a salutary influence upon future generations. We will do what must have the approbation of nineteen-twentieths of the people of this Dominion. I say, if the Government do this, it would redound to their credit for all future days."

Mr. Edwards.

Mr. W. C. Edwards, speaking as a farmer who incidentally sawed a small quantity of lumber—(laughter)—was diametrically opposed to the views advanced by Mr. Bennett and Mr. Charlton. He was one of those who believed that Ontario had not benefited by the fact that sawlogs are cut up into lumber in Canada instead of on the other side of the line. Unless conditions had greatly changed, the round sawlogs were worth more on the Georgian Bay than the sawn product. He was entirely opposed to protection. Protection was the curse of lumbermen, the curse of agriculturists, the curse of the miner, the curse of the fisherman and the curse of every man who was engaged in producing the natural wealth of Canada. (Liberal cheers.) The iron miner of Canada was the only man producing natural products who received any real protection. He was strongly opposed to the imposition of any duty.

Dr. Sproule appreciated Mr. Charlton's change of conviction upon the tariff issue.

Mr. Schell (Glengarry) said that the demand for duty came from pine lumbermen, who were small enough to ask a duty for their own benefit.

Mr. Scott (West Assiniboia) announced himself as opposed to the principle of protection, although not an out-and-out free trader.

Mr. Cargill said the lumbermen and the agriculturists of Canada were with Mr. Charlton in the views he had expressed to the House this afternoon.

Mr. Holmes.

Mr. Holmes said that if the Government received any mandate from the people in the last election, it was that there should be a reduction of duties rather than an increase. He was not a lumberman, but anyone who listened to the discussion would be struck by the coolness of the argument offered by the advocates of the motion, that the whole country would be benefited; they said nothing about the selfish motive which prompted the request. He was not surprised at the position taken by the members from the Northwest, where it was necessary to have cheap lumber. It was also of the utmost importance to the manufacturers that they should get their raw material at the lowest possible price, in order to hold their ground against the keen competition which they had to meet. After all, the farmer had to bear the brunt of it all, and to say that he obtained benefit from the protection was to throw dust in his eyes. The policy that should be adopted in the House was to make the cost of living as low as consistent with the requirements of the revenue, and our tariff legislation should be based upon the requirements of the country and not guided by the legislation of the United States. He congratulated the Government that they had not yielded to the representations of the deputations of woolen and lumber industries asking for increased duties. The duty asked for was in the interests of the lumbermen, and not for the country at large. He was sorry to see so many gentlemen upon that side of the House inclining toward protection theories, and thought the note of warning by Mr. Edwards had not been sounded too soon.

At recess the Speaker left the chair and the debate was adjourned indefinitely.

After a number of second readings of bills at the evening session, the House adjourned.

A SIGNIFICANT MOVEMENT.

Russian and Japanese Warships Getting Near Each Other.

Shanghai, March 20.—A despatch to The China Gazette from Tokio, March 20, says that all the Russian warships in Japanese waters have sailed for Corea, and that the Japanese squadron is mobilizing for an immediate departure to the Corean coast.

The King Met Deputations.

London, March 21.—At St. James' Palace yesterday afternoon, King Edward, wearing a field marshal's uniform, received between 40 and 50 deputations from various parts of the Kingdom, bearing addresses of condolence and congratulations. His Majesty made an acknowledgment to the general body, but made separate replies to the Free Masons and to the Deputation from Trinity College, Dublin.

THE COUNTY COUNCILS' BILL.

The Government Could Not Accept the Principle of Mr. Tucker's Bill, and Consequently the Motion for Second Reading Was Defeated—Speeches Pro and Con—The Division List.

Toronto, March 21.—In the Legislative Assembly yesterday, Premier Ross introduced a bill amending the Act respecting the auditing of the accounts of the Province. It enables the Chief Clerk of the audit office to act in the absence of the auditor.

Hon. J. R. Stratton, in reply to Mr. Fox, detailed the action taken by the Provincial Board of Health to prevent the spread of smallpox in the lumber camps, showing that the danger had been promptly grappled with. Seventy lumber firms had been ordered to have their men vaccinated and ten lumber camps had been quarantined.

Hon. E. J. Davis, replying to Mr. Beatty (Leeds), stated that it was the intention of the Government to make the 2,200 square mile timber reserve known as Temiscaming Park a permanent timber reserve, and to dispose of timber growing there from time to time as the conditions rendered it advisable to do so.

Mr. Joynt secured an order for a return respecting tenders for supplies for the Brockville Asylum during 1900.

Mr. Fox moved for a return of correspondence with reference to the recent outbreak of smallpox. He urged that the Provincial Board of Health had not done their duty in checking the outbreak.

Hon. J. R. Stratton said that the Department had acted with the greatest possible promptness and done everything possible in the way of vaccination, quarantining, etc., to prevent its spreading. When the correspondence was brought down he was sure that the mover would be satisfied that the Government had done all that it could do in the matter. He did not know that there had been even a single fatal case.

After some further discussion, the motion was withdrawn.

Mr. Barr obtained an order for correspondence between the Government and Public School Inspector Gordon of Dufferin County, respecting the Government grant to school section 7 Melancthon Township.

Mr. Monteith secured an order for the list of parties who obtained permits in 1900 for killing insectivorous birds.

Mr. Joynt moved that Government should adopt some means of collecting information as to the different soils and climate of the Province and the effect they have on the percentage of sugar in the sugar beet and that seed should be forwarded to different localities for testing.

Mr. Dryden said that the proportion of saccharine matter in the beet depended on other matters besides the soil. The Department was doing just what Mr. Joynt proposed in the distribution of seed and the beets grown for test purposes would be subjected to a proper analysis at the Agricultural College. A great deal depended upon the manner in which the beets were grown and whether the directions were followed closely.

The resolution was withdrawn.

A large number of measures received second reading.

Mr. Tucker moved the second reading of his bill to amend the Municipal Act which provides that the council of every county shall consist of the reeves of all villages and townships and mayors of all towns not separated from the county for municipal purposes, and that each County Councillor shall have one vote for every 500 of the population of his constituency. He advocated the measure on the ground that since the County Council Act was passed, it was difficult to get the right class of men to enter the Township Councils, which were no longer in touch with the County Councils.

Hon. E. J. Davis opposed the bill which he feared would undo the good effect of the County Councils bill. That measure had been adopted after full consideration to remedy abuses which would no longer be tolerated, and the change had been found to be generally advantageous. The measure ought not to be permitted to go to the committee.

Mr. Russell said the country was well satisfied with the present state of the law. Messrs Kidd and Barr strongly denounced the present act as having destroyed the harmony that formerly existed between county and township councils. Hon. John Dryden urged that the bill contravened the principle that the majority should rule.

After Mr. Monteith had favored the bill, Attorney-General Gibson urged that so important a question should not be legislated on spasmodically. If the old principle were to be reverted to the fullest information from all parts of the Province as to the working of the system should be obtained. Mr. Hislop defended the present system. He hoped the Legislature would not sanction a bill under which one representative would have several times as much power as another.

Mr. Whitney said there were some things in the bill he did not agree with, but it should go to committee, where it could be amended. The former County Council system was preferable to the present.

Premier Ross said that if it should appear that the County Council bill had not worked well it could be modified, but the House should not move hastily. It had been on the whole a useful measure, but no doubt was susceptible of improvement in some particulars. They could not, over, accept the principle of Mr. Tucker's bill, and therefore should not go to the committee.

After several other members had spoken, the second reading was declared lost on the following vote:

Yeas—Allen, Barr, Beatty (Leeds), Brower, Carnegie, Carscallen, Colquhoun, Crawford, Dempsey, Duff, Eilber, Fox, Jessop, Joynt, Kidd, Little, Marter, Matheson, Monteith, Morrison, Macdiarmid, McLaughlin, Powell, Pyne, Reid (Durham), Tucker, Wardell, Whitney—28.

Nays—Auld, Aylesworth, Barber, Beatty (Parry Sound), Blezard, Breithaupt, Bridgland, Brown, Burt, Caldwell, Carpenter, Charlton, Conmee, Davis, Dickenson, Douglas, Farwell, Gibson, Graham, Croat, Guilbord, Harcourt, Hislop, Holmes, Latchford, Loughrin, Lumsden, Malcolm, Munro, Mutrie, McKay, McKee, Pattullo, Preston, Richardson, Ross, Russell, Stratton—38.

Paired—Dryden and Hoyle, Harty and Foy, Ferguson and Reid, Bowman and McDonald, Pardo and Jamieson, Hill and Gallagher, Pettypiece and Boyd, Taylor and Robson, Pardee and Lucas, Clarke and Fallis, Smith and Kribs, Leys and Thompson, Truax and Miscampbell.

ONE MINE AT WORK.

Three Traitors Shot at De Aar For Treason and Murder—Kritzinger's Force Defeated.

Johannesburg, March 20.—One mining company has restarted crushing ore and four others are preparing to begin.

Sir Alfred Milner, Governor of the Transvaal and Orange River Colonies, expects to stay here three months.

Three Traitors Shot.

Cape Town, March 20.—J. P. Minaber, S. Minaber and J. A. Newwoudt were shot at De Aar yesterday evening for treason and murder, in pursuance of the sentence of a court-martial. The death sentence was passed a week ago in connection with the wrecking of a train near Taasbosch, by which five men were killed. Gen. Kitchener confirmed the verdict. The garrison was paraded and the prisoners were led out at sunset. Death was instantaneous. A Dutch minister and relatives remained with the prisoners till the end. Two others concerned in the train wrecking were sentenced to five years penal servitude.

Kritzinger's Force Defeated.

Cape Town, March 20.—A despatch from Cradock, Cape Colony, says Col. Corringe's force engaged Kritzinger's force of Boers March 15. The latter lost nine men killed and had seven men wounded. The British loss was one man killed and ten men wounded.

Approve a New Weapon.

Cape Town, March 20.—The military authorities her approve the new invention of a Maxim gun mounted on an automobile for immediate service.

Campbell's Column Had Fighting.

Durban, March 20.—Owing to the Klip River being flooded, Gen. Campbell's column has been unable to return to Standerton, from which point it went to bring away the garrison at Vrede, which the British evacuated. The column had heavy fighting going to and coming from Vrede. Gen. Campbell has about two hundred sick and wounded. There are many bands of roving Boers in the neighborhood of Standerton.

To Buy Canadian Horses.

Montreal, Que., March 31.—A Star special cable from London says: Major Dent, who has been appointed Imperial Remount Officer in Canada, with rank of lieut.-colonel, sailed today on the Teutonic, to purchase more remounts for the army, especially in the Northwest. Major Hon. Ormsby-Gore of the 11th Hussars accompanied him as assistant officer.

Steel Shipbuilding in Canada.

Montreal, March 21.—The first meeting of the Provisional Directors of the Steel Shipbuilding Co. of the Lower Province, took place here yesterday. Amongst those present from St. John were: J. H. Thomson of the well-known shipbuilding firm, George MacAvity and Harvey Harding. The capital of the company will be $8,000,000, and it promises to be a success. During an interview Mr. Thomson said:

"During the last five years we have put afloat nine steamers of the Battle Line, and the next twelve months will see five more built. Each of these steamers represents a capital of $200,000, or very nearly $3,000,000 in all, and 95 per cent. of this has been Canadian money."

Archbishop Lewis no Better.

New York, March 21.—There is no change in the condition of Rev. Travers Lewis, Archbishop of Ontario and Metropolitan of Canada, who is ill in this city. From the report given out it is believed that the worst is feared.

REFUSED MEDIATION.

Von Waldersee's Arbitration Not Acceptable to Russia.

THE RUSSIAN ASKS AN APOLOGY

British General Refuses to Apologize—Russia Now Aggressive—She Will Increase Her Demands in Corea—More British at Tien Tsin—Reinforcements From Pekin and the Taku Forts.

London, March 21.—"Gen. Wogack has refused to accept Count Von Waldersee's arbitration at Tien Tsin," says the Pekin correspondent of The Daily Mail, wiring yesterday, "and demands that the British not only withdraw, but apologize for removing the Russian flag.

"Gen. Barrow refuses to do either, and in so refusing has the support of the British Government. British reinforcements are being sent."

"Russia's proceedings in Corea," says the Kobe correspondent of The Daily Mail, "are now openly aggressive, and it is believed she is about to make further demands in connection with Ma San Pho."

British Under Arms.

Tien Tsin, March 20.—In addition to the Australians, outposts from the lines of communication are coming in to be ready in case of necessity. The British are under arms to prevent the settlement being rushed, but they do not anticipate such extremes.

MARINES REPLACE INDIANS.

But Only to Keep French Troops From Breaking Out.

Tien Tsin, March 20.—A dust storm prevented Count Von Waldersee, who arrived here yesterday, from proceeding for Pekin until this morning.

Ninety British marines arrived here last night from the Taku forts, to replace the Indian guards on the disputed land. This is a precautionary measure to prevent French troops breaking out. The Fusiliers are expected to-day. A second train, bearing reinforcements of Australian troops, left Pekin for Tien Tsin at 10 o'clock this morning. One French, an Italian and a German warship are outside the bar.

Gen. Lorne Campbell, the English commander, and Gen. Wogack, commanding the Russians, met Count Von Waldersee upon his arrival here. Learning that both had received instructions from their Governments, Count Von Waldersee said it was useless for him to give even an opinion regarding the matter at issue.

It is the general feeling in Tien Tsin that the trouble is not likely to reach a point where blood will be shed. Both detachments on guard have orders to do nothing aggressive unless forced to do so by the other.

Except the army and camp followers, the only Russians now residing here are the members of the Consular staff, two clerks and two Jews, who are running stores, and who left Russia in order to save their lives. These are now being offered inducements to move to the Russian concession. The French concession is quiet. French gendarmes are on duty at the British concession to prevent the soldiers from trespassing, and Australian naval brigade men are preventing the Sikhs from invading the French concession.

Russia Is Not Alarmed.

St. Petersburg, March 21. — The Russian press is not alarmed about the Tien Tsin affair. There is no mention of it in the official agencies' despatches, but the London correspondent of The Novoye Vremya characterizes the dispute as unimportant. Another London correspondent quotes a French diplomat as saying that an Anglo-Russian war is impossible, as Russia need only threaten to support the Boers in order to bring Great Britain on her knees.

Two London Thieves Sentenced.

London, Ont., March 21.—Joseph Caughtrey and Joseph Roberts, the two young men who were found guilty of the wholesale theft of lead pipe and brass fixtures from several vacant houses in the north end of this city, were yesterday morning sentenced to four years in the penitentiary at Kingston.

Ontario Sunday and the Pan-American.

Toronto, March 21.—Premier Ross told a Lord's Day Alliance deputation yesterday that the Ontario Pan-American exhibit would be closed on Sundays. He referred the deputation to the Railway Committee regarding Sunday cars.

No Beer For Boys Hereafter.

London, March 21.—The House of Commons yesterday passed the second reading of the bill prohibiting the sale or delivery of intoxicants to persons under 16 years of age. The vote stood 372 to 54.

Lockjaw From Vaccination.

Harrisburg, Pa., March 21.—Bruce F. Dunbar, aged 35 years, is dead in this city from lockjaw, caused, it is said, by vaccination. The young man became ill Sunday night.

CLOSE IN NORTH BRUCE.

The Probabilities Are in Favor of Mr. Halliday, Conservative Candidate—Liberal Wins in Queen's, P.E.I.

Wiarton, March 21.—The Dominion bye-election in North Bruce yesterday proved to be a very close contest, and the result is still in doubt.

The returns received up to 11 o'clock last night give Halliday, the Conservative candidate, a majority of one, with three places to hear from. These places went Conservative last fall, and are expected to give Halliday about 20 majority.

The country roads are blocked with snow, and full returns could not be obtained last night.

Returns received show that Mr. Campbell had a majority of over 200 in Elderslie, and Arran gave Halliday a majority of 228. Wiarton was very close: Campbell 252, Halliday 255.

East Queen's Is Liberal.

Charlottetown, P. E. I., March 21.—The election in East Queen's yesterday resulted in the return of D. A. McKinnon, Liberal, over Alex. Martin, Conservative, the same candidates as at the general election. The contest was quite vigorous.

Sir Louis Davies took an active part, speaking at large meetings in the principal centres.

Mr. McKinnon's majority is 371, with nine polls to hear from.

CONSERVATIVE CONVENTION.

Ontario Delegates Met, Adopted Constitution and Elected Officers.

Toronto, March 21.—The organization of the Conservative Association was completed yesterday at the convention of delegates held in Victoria Hall. There were nearly three hundred members of the Conservative party from all parts of the Province present. After the adoption of a constitution, the following officers were elected:

Hon. presidents, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, R. L. Borden, M. P., J. P. Whitney, M. P. P., R. Shaw Wood; president, J. J. Foy, M. P. P.; vice-presidents, Richard Blain, M. P., Brampton; G. F. Marter, M. P. P.; Dr. Beattie Nesbitt; secretaries, A. W. Wright, T. W. Leavitt; chairman Executive Committee, E. B. Osler, M. P.

Resolutions were passed expressing confidence in Dr. R. L. Borden, M. P., and Mr. J. P. Whitney, M. P. P., and there was also a resolution congratulating King Edward upon his accession to the throne. No resolutions of policy were adopted.

The Lt.-Governor Has Assented.

Winnipeg, March 21.—Lieutenant-Governor McMillan yesterday afternoon assented to the Canadian Northern Railway bill. This is the one which has given rise to so much controversy.

Fire at St. Boniface yesterday destroyed three residences, including those of John B. Levique and Joseph Herbet. Loss $7,000.

Miss H. M. B. Roger died yesterday while under chloroform to permit of a minor operation upon the nose.

The Canadian Roses Won.

Brampton, Ont., March 21.—The H. Dale estate of Brampton exhibited samples of their famous roses at the American Association of Florists, held at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York. In spite of the fact that the estate was in competition with some of the most famous rose growers in North America, they swept everything before them, winning five first prizes, diplomas and a magnificent silver cup. This is, indeed, an honor to the Dale estate and to Canada.

Put Off the Train.

Toronto, March 21.—Richard Taylor, an Indian Head, N. W. T., merchant, has caused a writ to be issued against the Grand Trunk Railway, in which he claims unstated damages for alleged assault and trespass. Mr. Taylor was put off a train last month at Thornhill, not having conformed to a regulation printed on his ticket, requiring the local passenger agent here to affix his signature to the ticket.

East Ontario Orangemen.

Belleville, Ont., March 21.—The Orange Grand Lodge for Ontario East commenced their annual session yesterday afternoon in the City Hall, with a large attendance, and Grand Master R. H. Holland in the chair.

The Provincial Grand Black Chapter concluded their session yesterday morning.

Accused of Forgery.

New York, March 21.—On the steamship Oceanic, which arrived here yesterday, was Sigmund Hertz, who is accused of forgery, while employed as a confidential bookkeeper by Steifel, Sachs & Co. of this city. It is said the forged paper aggregated between $50,000 and $60,000.

Government Wins.

Toronto, March 21.—The Michigan lumbermen have definitely abandoned their suit to test the power of the Ontario Government to pass legislation requiring timber to be sawn within the Province. The Court of Appeal decided in favor of the Government and the lumbermen intended carrying the case to the Privy Council.

FORTNIGHTNY CLUB'S CLOSING MEETING

REV. A. W. MACKENZIE'S INTERESTING PAPER ON CHARLES KINGSLEY.

A Discussion of Kingsley's Life, Work and Character That was Decidedly Interesting.

The Fortnightly Club held its last meeting for the present season on Tuesday night in the Y.M.C.A. hall, when Rev. A. W. Mackenzie read a most interesting paper on "Charles Kingsley." Sheriff Hall presided and the evening's enjoyment was greatly enriched by the singing of four of Kingsley's songs by Mrs. A. G. Parker, who was in splendid voice.

The lecturer began by quoting with approval Mr. J. M. Ludlow's opinion that "God made Kingsley to be a poet." Although he did many things well, his temperament was essentially that of the poet. So great an authority as Chevalier Bunsen thought Kingsley might, had he devoted himself to the task, have worthily continued the series of Shakespeare's historical plays.

Kingsley was born in his favorite County of Devonshire, and with his first breath enhaled the daring spirit of the men of Devon, whose deeds of adventure and bravery he pictured so graphically in the pages of Westward Ho.

After describing his early life and education the lecturer passed on to the consideration of some of his most characteristic writings, "Yeast," "Alton Locke," and other social works. The condition of the poor both in rural England and in city centres, was about the middle of the century deplorable. Kingsley's impulsive, earnest temperament was stirred to its depths by the injustices of tyrannies under which they labored. He closely associated himself with the Christian Socialism movement of which F. D. Maurice was the inspiring centre, and there can be no doubt that the influence of both "Yeast" and "Alton Locke" was very great. Kingsley was greatly interested in the Chartist movement, which he sought, probably with some success, to divert from tendencies to violence. For a time he was exceedingly unpopular with his brother clergy, and on one occasion his teaching was openly denounced, immediately after he had preached a sermon to workingmen, by the vicar of the church.

Kingsley spent the whole of his clerical life in the little village of Eversley. He found it spiritually in an evil condition, and wrought in it a great change for the better.

There was in him a complete and wholesome absence of clerical officialism, of ecclesiastical snobbery. "Let us," he said in a letter, "make our people feel that we speak to them and feel towards them as men to men." There can be no doubt that this was one secret of his universal popularity amongst and wholesome influence over men.

Kingsley along with most men of his day, was greatly interested in the Oxford Movement of Pusey, Newman and others, but he with all his customary energy, denounced the ascetic and reactionary principles which underlay it.

The lecturer said that Charles Kingsley's books were excellent works to put into the hands of the young. Their earnestness and manliness, combined with their glowing faith in God, render them wholesome mental tonics in an age such as our own.

Kingsley's life was written by his wife, and has had and still has a very large circulation. She prefixed to it the following beautiful dedication:—"To the memory of a man who loved God and Truth above all things; a man of untarnished honor, loyal and chivalrous, gentle and strong, modest and humble, tender and true, pitiful to the weak, yearning after the erring; stern to all forms of wrong and oppression, yet most stern towards himself; who bing angry yet sinned not, whose highest motives were known only to his wife and children, his servants and the poor; who lived in the presence of God here, and, passing through the grave and gate of death, now liveth unto God for evermore."

On resuming his seat the lecturer was loudly applauded, and the chairman on behalf of the meeting, expressed the warmest thanks of all present to the lecturer and to Mrs. Parker for the delightful evening they had enjoyed.

Best Sealing Record For Years.

St. John's, Nfld., March 20.—The sealing steamer Southern Cross arrived here. She is loaded with 26,500 seals and is the first of the fleet to return home. The Southern Cross reports the 15 remaining ships of the fleet to be off the Labrador coast among the seal herds. All are doing well and likely to get full cargoes. This is the best record for seal fishery of modern years.

Whole Family Burned to Death.

Wellston, Ohio, March 20. — The charred bodies of Jeff Hill and wife and five children were found Monday night in the smoldering embers of their burning house.

Heavy Loss at Port Huron.

Port Huron, Mich., March 20. — Fire early yesterday destroyed the Jenks Ship Building plant, entailing a loss of over $175,000.

Fierce Snowstorm in England.

London, March 20.—A fierce snowstorm swept over Lancashire yesterday afternoon.

Rough Weather For Royalty.

Gibraltar, March 19.—The steamship Ophir, which left Portsmouth Sunday afternoon, with the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York on board, has probably been caught in the southeasterly gale that has driven several small vessels ashore, and detained the Peninsular and Oriental liners and the Werra at Gibraltar. Rain has fallen steadily for five days, and the stand upon which the Duke of Cornwall will review the garrison troops is now the centre of a lake.

A $1,000,000 Fire at St. Louis.

St. Louis, Mo., March 19.—Fire, supposed to have started in the ice house of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Association yesterday, was fanned into a great conflagration and spread over five acres of buildings. Among the buildings reported burned are the Missouri Car and Foundry Company and a row of flats. Shortly after 3 o'clock it was reported that the fire was under control, after having burned property estimated in value at $1,000,000.

P. E. Island Legislature Opened.

Charlottetown, March 20.—The Provincial Legislature was opened yesterday afternoon by the Lieutenant-Governor. After the presentation of the new speaker, Mr. S. E. Reid, His Honor read his speech, which reviewed abundant crops, good markets, made reference to the death of the Queen, and gave an expression of loyalty to King Edward VII. The war in South Africa was reviewed, and a bill respecting agricultural matters promised.

Austria Goes For Protection.

Vienna, March 20.—At a meeting of the Manufacturers Club, held yesterday, and attended by representatives of the Ministry of Commerce, a resolution was unanimously adopted urging the necessity of putting Austro-American relations on a basis of complete reciprocity and equality in regard to the customs tariff and its administration.

Eight Men Killed by an Avalanche.

London, March 20.—A special despatch from Rome says eight soldiers and customs officers have been killed by an avalanche near Lake Como.

Ada Gray Dying.

New York, March 20.—Ada Gray, the actress of East Lynne fame, is reported to be dying at a hospital in Fordham.

The Opposition Meeting.

The meeting here last night in opposition to the railway deal, was attended by prominent business men and several representatives from the country. J. H. Brock, W. E. Perdu, and, probably, Isaac Campbell, will be sent to Ottawa to oppose the deal before the Dominion House. Other delegates will also be sent from Provincial points.

Gen. Diocino Captured.

Washington, March 20.—Gen. MacArthur, at Manila, yesterday, informed the War Department of the capture of the insurgent general, Diocino.

American Tourists Like London.

According to the London correspondent of the Paris Figaro, American summer tourists are evincing a preference and predilection for London. The number of Americans who went last summer to Europe, where they left so many thousand dollars, is estimated at from 150,000 to 200,000. So many had never been seen in the old world in a year when there was no exposition or anything else to attract them except the pleasure of seeing Europe. It would be interesting, says the Figaro's correspondent to know whether France and Paris have had their fair share of the millions of American dollars. Formerly Paris was the promised land and the destination of any good American; but for the last twenty years London has taken much pains to attract and amuse Brother Jonathan. He finds there hotels built especially for him, and theaters which, naturally, do not require the knowledge of a foreign language. It has been noticed, therefore, that many Americans have sojourned in London much longer than formerly, that they have made short visits to Paris, and that some of them have not gone there at all. There was a time when the American who visited England without also going to Paris was considered a phenomenon; but that time has passed, and, observes the Figaro, "this is very regrettable." It is asserted that each American in Europe spent on an average last season 5,000 francs, or $1,000. Admitting that 150,000 of them spend only $500, that would make 375,000,000 francs. Has Paris gotten its due share of it?

EVENINGS AT HOME.

INNOCENT FUN FOR OLD AND YOUNG.

Winter Evenings' Recreation For All in the House -- Fortune-Telling—Theatricals--Shadowgraph.

What to do in the long evenings that are coming is the question just now agitating the home, and it is a pertinent one, taken in connection with the fact that the old Norman law of ringing the curfew is actually revived as a means of discipline in America. The children are to be rung off the streets, to which they are consigned by the indulgent or too careless parents, and brought into the family jurisdiction. They need amusement to keep them off the streets, but so do the parents, who only eat, sleep and work in the home. If you wonder at the fascination of the streets after dark, look into the rows and rows of unlighted homes where there is not a ripple of amusement from June to January. In that semi-twilight of false economy, the children are tolerated until bedtime, when they are hustled off in a spirit of thankfulness on the part of their elders that at last they—the elders—can have some peace. And the good-night thought of Willie or Sammy is of the good time they might have been having with "Jimmy the Lark" in the alley. Life is formal and dull to the more respectable child, because he is debarred the pleasures of Bohemia, and the charm of Bohemia is its spirit of amusement.

"Laugh, and the world laughs with you."

A book has been published which gives a programme of twenty-five evenings of fun and instruction, the latter being of the kind that produces amusement and is not tiresome. It deals with all ages, and has a scope which includes every member of the family—one being known as "Invalid's Evening," when a spirit of unselfishness is fostered by all contributing to the pleasure of one. Then there are "Mother's Evening," "Father's Evening," and a "Go-as-you-please Evening," when the fun is general and rules are suspended. Also an "Educational Evening," including historical games, or such amusing exercises as that old one known as "bout-rhymes," to which Horace Walpole contributed a characteristic verse:

THE GENTLE SHEPHERD.

"I sit with my toes in a ——
And if any one asks me for ——
I hits him a rap with my ——
And 'tis sentiment kills them, not I."

Much hilarious fun ensues before the rhymers furnish the final rhymes, "brook," "why," "crook," and the evening can be passed in this way, during which time a new idea of rhymes and rhyming may be gained.

Myths, fables and legends form a programme for a whole evening which passes all too quickly. The subtle distinction between the words offers a subject for debate, which is well illustrated by a story:

In Western Arkansas there is a village called Scullyville. A stranger asked for a definition of the name, and why such an one had been bestowed on the place. He was informed by an ignorant stage-driver that the name was derived from the number of skulls that had been found there by early settlers, while the truth was, that the word Scullyville was an Indian name for "money town." The only mythical thing about it originated in the mind of the driver. People with an appetite for recreation will find much amusement and instruction in "hunting the myth."

Another is an evening of dancing. In families where dancing in its social form is prohibited, physical culture can take its place. A prize may be given the one who can enter the room gracefully, or fall on the floor in a faint without injuring a limb, or jarring the furniture. The master of ceremonies will see to it that suitable reading matter has been provided to give illustrative examples.

Where dancing is allowed one evening in the week could be pleasantly disposed of by rehearsing new steps and practising at home the airs and graces kept for public display. Jack would not be the stupid boy he is if he were allowed to learn his deportment in the way of home amusement.

Home theatricals can be carried through an entire winter, a special entertainment being given for some worthy charity. Instructive historical plays can be given, and parts found for every member of the family. No expense need attend those shows, as they can be played without costuming, and the part well acted will atone for any lack of accessories.

Home fortune-telling is one of the amusements included in the programme, and those who object to fortune-telling on principle will find it a useful way to disenchant the credulous. The "Sybil" dressed in gaudy calico with an old broad-brimmed hat tied down over her ears, will ask to have her palm crossed with silver. She will then recite this doggerel verse:

"If foky kek jons bute
Ma sal at leade,
For sore mush kina dromany
That tute kek jins."

This is supposed to be the Romany Rye tongue, and translated reads to the effect that "the hearer is warned to listen to every one, for every one may know something which he has yet to learn."

Teacup fortunes may be used to vary the entertainment, and at the same time furnish light refreshment to the family. Those who tell the fortunes can learn from books on fortune-telling so that the apparently wonderful feat of telling you all you know and much that you do not know, becomes a very simple scheme.

The shadowgrapher can delight old and young for another of the twenty-five evenings. This has been a popular diversion since the days of Nebuchadnezzar, and just enough superstition enters into the sport to make it interesting. It does not require much practice to throw the most diverting shadows upon the wall, and a flexible hand can soon become expert, and furnish no end of amusement. Beginning with a donkey, the fingers will evolve shadows of different figures, until a whole army is marching on the wall.

A CONJUROR'S MISTAKE.

He Performed a Trick on the Queen of Madagascar to His Sorrow.

A French conjuror, doing a performance at the court of Madagascar, asked the Queen through an interpreter if she would taste a glass of wine. On her refusal the conjuror, with simulated anger, emptied the glass over her, and the contents dropped in the shape of a rose into Her Majesty's lap. The court functionaries were so indignant at his proceeding that they jumped up from their seats, insisted upon the Queen's leaving the apartment, and charged the performer with high treason. The unfortunate man had to be protected by the native troops from the fury of the populace, and was compelled to leave the capital before daybreak.

Her Opinion of Compliments.

"No," said Miss Cayenne, "I don't care for people who continually pay compliments."

"But it shows an amiable disposition."

"Perhaps, but the habit reminds me that some people are willing to pay only what costs them nothing and what they don't really owe."

Instead of buying an article you do not need of an agent, pay what you owe.

AND TWO PARK LOTS

For Sale by Public Auction

The Administrator of the Estate of the late WILLIAM FORSTER, will offer for sale by Public Auction, at MUNRO'S HOTEL, in the Town of Peterborough, on

Saturday, 23rd day of March, 1901

at the hour of Two O'clock p.m., all the Real Estate of the said deceased, namely:

PARCEL No. 1—Being the north-east quarter of Lot No. 8, in the 11th Concession of the Township of North Monaghan, containing 50 acres more or less.

PARCEL No. 2.—Being part of Lot No. 11, in the said 11th Concession of the said Township, and being Lots Nos. 8 and 9, as laid down and described in a plan of the same made by Provincial Land Surveyor Geo. A. Stewart, and registered in the Registry Office of the County of Peterborough as Plan No. 17, for the Township of Monaghan, containing 31 acres more or less, save and except thereout that portion thereof heretofore conveyed to the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The farm is situated about two miles from the Town of Peterborough. It is nearly all cleared and is in a good state of cultivation. The soil is principally of a sandy loam, and well adapted for crops generally. On the premises there are a good orchard, a large frame house with kitchen and wood-shed attached, and a good cellar. The outbuildings and fences are in a good state of repair. The barn is a double frame one with stone foundations, containing cattle byres. There is a spring creek running across one corner of the farm.

The Park Lots are situated about half a mile from said town and are well adapted for market gardening and building lots. There is a small dwelling house with stable and driving shed on Lot No. 8. The fences are in a good state of repair. The soil is principally sandy loam. There are on the premises a small orchard and some small fruit bushes.

There will be a reserved bid on each parcel fixed by the Official Guardian.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS OF SALE—Ten per cent. of the purchase money to be paid at the time of sale, and the balance thereof within thirty days thereafter without interest. Purchase money to be paid into Canadian Bank of Commerce to joint credit of Administrator and Official Guardian. Further particulars will be made known at time of sale or may be had on application to W. J. Gross, the Administrator, or to

J. GREEN, Vendor's Solicitor. JOHN HAGGART, Auctioneer

Dated the 27th day of February, 1901.

A Warning.

To feel tired after exertion is one thing; to feel tired before is another.

Don't say the latter is laziness—it isn't but it's a sign that the system lacks vitality, is running down, and needs the tonic effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

It's a warning, too—and sufferers should begin taking Hood's at once.

MEN AS THEY PASS.

The shortest biography in the new Congressional Directory is that of Representative Allen Langdon McDermott of Jersey City. It takes up only 3½ lines.

The Earl of Wemyss has married again at the age of 82 years. He lost his first wife four years ago, three years after they had celebrated their golden wedding.

Robert J. Gamble, who succeeds Pettigrew as United States senator from South Dakota, is a native of New York and began life as a teacher and lawyer in Wisconsin.

General Bate of Tennessee is the only senator who saw service during the Mexican war. Senator Pettus of Alabama was in the army of that period, but never got to the front.

Glenn P. McKinley, the speaker of the Idaho house, is the youngest member of that body, being only 22 years old. He is attending the law department of the University of Idaho.

William Smith, who died at North Attleboro, Mass., the other day, was quartermaster of the Kearsarge in the war of the rebellion and had charge of the pivot gun that sealed the fate of the Alabama.

Dr. John P. Wood of Coffeyville, Kan., who has just celebrated his ninety-ninth birthday anniversary, has closed a contract for a series of lectures on "Longevity." He still actively practices medicine.

Speaking of the wit of the late Senator Davis, Senator Hoar uttered an epigram which deserves to be remembered. "No spark from him," said Senator Hoar, "was ever a cinder in the eye of his friend."

Ex-President Cleveland has accepted election as an honorary member of the Mercer County (N. J.) Fox Hunting association. He evidently takes a humorous view of his new honor, for he says in his letter of acceptance that he does not believe that honorary membership will "endanger the life or limb of an old man."

Alexander Beaubien, the oldest person now living in Chicago, being born on the site of the city, celebrated his seventy-ninth birthday on Monday, Jan. 28. There were only three or four log houses there when he was born, and the place was called Fort Dearborn. His early playmates were all Indian boys. The first frame house was built by Mr. Beaubien's uncle in 1826.

Daniel R. Magruder, former judge of the Maryland court of appeals, is a constable at Annapolis. To the protest of the citizens that constables had not been appointed the board in charge of the matter replied that men could not be found to accept the office. When Judge Magruder stated that plenty of good men could be found, it was suggested in banter that the judge should accept, and he did.

Ex-Senator William M. Evarts is no longer the champion framer of long sentences. He frequently made a record of 500 words, but has been far outdone by Rastus S. Ransome, a New York lawyer, who in a will case recently put a hypothetical question 4,000 words in length. Boiled down all this means, "Assuming the testimony to be true, was she sane or insane when she made her will?" It took just 30 minutes to ask the question.

TOWN TOPICS.

Chicago has straight streets. Boston has crooked ones. The comparison is the other way on police.—Boston Advertiser.

Mrs. Carrie Nation announces that she would clean out all of the saloons in the United States. She can't touch the Philadelphia speak easies, however. The police wouldn't let her.—Philadelphia Press.

Can it be true that the Ralph Waldo Emerson club and the James Russell Lowell club are pulling off prizefights in Boston? Yes, verily it can and is. We have the indignant word of the venerable Boston Journal for it.—Minneapolis Times.

Over in Cleveland a determined effort is being made to elect a first class council this spring, and the newspapers are pleased at the progress of the movement. Some of the best citizens in the city are [illegible] to be used as candidates. The same thing should be done here in Toledo.—Toledo Blade.

It is agreeable and encouraging to learn that Speonk, N. Y., is greatly flourishing and increasing in population, business and renown since its righteous refusal to give up its time honored and attractive name for some "burst" or "burg" or "ville." Long may it flourish, and ever as good old Speonk!

THE PEDAGOGUE.

Every public schoolhouse in Cincinnati is to be supplied with a telephone.

Money is being raised in England to present a bust of Max Muller to Oxford university and establish a fund for research in the subjects in which he worked.

Professor Jackson of Columbia is one of the two American gisours—the other being Professor Lanman of Harvard—whom the high priest of the Parsees honors with an occasional correspondence. Professor Jackson is now on his way to Bombay to add a little to his store of oriental learning.

The authorities of the University of Chicago desire to adorn the campus of that institution with 50 big elm trees similar to the one presented to the university by the class of 1900, and Secretary Goodspeed has announced that the trustees are willing to pay $5,000 for the lot, $100 each. The trees are to be placed in symmetrical arrangement inside the quadrangle.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

Three simple helps to health: Hold the body erect if standing, sitting or walking. Fill the lungs full of breath at constant intervals, which improves the circulation. Masticate all food thoroughly and slowly.

A Frenchman has discovered an instantaneous remedy for the horrible burns caused by oil of vitriol. It is a soft paste of calcined magnesia and water, with which the parts are covered an inch deep. It alleviates the pain almost instantly and when the paste is removed no scar is seen.

ADVERTISING.

Newspapers are the best of all advertising mediums.

Never use involved language or sentences hard to understand.

Write not to fill space, but buy enough space to use up the writing.

The proper amount of reading and display in conjunction is the best thing.—Advisor.

The Coronation Oath.

London, March 20.—In the House of Lords yesterday Lord Salisbury, referring to the question raised by the "No Popery oath," taken by the King, said he must regret very much that language of such indecent violence had ever been placed in the King's Anti-Roman Catholic oath; but if it was modified or repealed, a great many people, perfectly sincere, though not very wise, would say that such action meant supporting transubstantiation. He proposed on behalf the Government that a committee be appointed to consider the declaration required of the Sovereign on his accession, and whether its language could be modified advantageously without diminishing its efficiency as security for the Protestant succession. The matter will be considered Thursday.

SPECTACLES FOR ANIMALS.

Horses May Wear Them For Special Purposes, but Not to Aid Vision.

In response to an inquiry an optician said that he had never known himself of any animals wearing spectacles, but he had read of a horse in London that had been provided with a pair of spectacles, which, the account said, "the horse seemed to find delight in wearing." He had no reason to doubt that this was a true story, though certainly the statement that the horse seemed to find delight in wearing the spectacles did seem a little florid.

As a general proposition the fitting of any sort of spectacles to the eyes of any wearer would require the exercise of intelligence on the part of the wearer as an aid in the fitting. Intelligent assistance would be given by the human animal, man. But this could not be expected of horses and dogs.

Some defects of vision in their eyes might be determined without the aid of the subject examined, but intelligent cooperation in the fitting could not be had in their case even if it were desirable for them to wear spectacles or practicable for them to do so. At any rate, he had never himself known of an animal that did wear spectacles or of spectacles being made for animals.

A veterinary surgeon said that he had never heard of a horse wearing spectacles, though it would not be impossible to provide them if that were desirable.

Horses sometimes wear over the eyes blinders with colored glasses. These are intended to prevent the horse from discerning shadows. Such blinders are sometimes put on trotting horses in races.

There are trotters that shy or break at the shadow on the track of the wire over it marking the starting and finishing point, or at the shadow of a building or of some projecting point of one, just as they would at a pool of water or some actual object on the track. A skip or a break might mean enough distance lost to lose the race. These blinders are used so that the horse won't see the shadows.

There are also put on trotting horses sometimes for the same purpose leather blinders so made and adjusted that the horse can look out over them and upward, but not downward over them to the earth in front of him. Some thoroughbred horses shy at mud or sand thrown in their eyes by horses ahead of them, and for these there are sometimes provided what are in effect spectacles, blinders covering the eyes for their protection, but having glasses of ordinary glass.

Horses and dogs were sometimes provided with glass eyes to improve their appearance.

A SOLDIER'S THOUGHTS.

It Wasn't the Pursuing Bullets That Worried Him.

Winston Spencer Churchill, who was war correspondent during the campaign in Africa, says that once, in the interests of the London Post, he promised to follow the scouts for a day. The English had made a rapid advance into the heart of the Boer position, disturbing and alarming their adversaries, who attempted to outflank the outflanking cavalry, and rode into the open to make for a white stone kopje on the British right.

An English soldier rode up to his general.

"Sir," he asked, "may we cut them off? I think we can just do it."

The scouts pricked up their ears. The general reflected.

"All right," he said. "You may try."

It was a race from the beginning. They reached the kopje to find a squad of Boers there before them.

"Too late!" said the British leader steadily. "Back to the other kopje! Gallop!"

"Then," says Mr. Churchill, "the musketry crashed out, and the swish and whir of bullets filled the air. I dismounted. Now I put my foot into the stirrup. The horse, terrified at the firing, plunged wildly. The saddle turned, and the animal broke away.

"Most of the scouts were already 200 yards off. I was alone, on foot, at the closest range, a mile from cover of any kind. I turned and ran for my life from the Boer marksmen, and I thought as I ran, 'Here at last I take it.'

"Suddenly as I fled I saw a scout. He came from the left across my track, a tall man on a pale horse. 'Give me a stirrup!' I shouted.

"To my surprise he stopped at once.

"'Yes,' he said shortly.

"In a moment I found myself behind him on the saddle. Then we rode. I put my arms about him to catch a grip of the mane. My hand dabbled in blood. The horse was hard hit; but, like a gallant beast, he extended himself nobly. The pursuing bullets piped and whistled overhead, but the range was growing longer.

"'Don't be frightened,' said my rescuer. 'They won't hit you.' Then he groaned. 'My poor horse! Oh, my poor horse! Shot with an explosive bullet! Oh, my poor horse!'

"'Never mind,' said; 'you have saved my life.'

"'Ah,' he rejoined, 'but it's the horse I'm thinking about!'

"That was the whole of our conversation."

Fishes That Live For Centuries.

There seems to be hardly a natural limit to the life of some kinds of fishes. There are in the royal aquarium in Russia several carp which are over 600 years old according to Professor Sueiso, and he believes that the ordinary carp lives to at least 500 years if not interfered with. Ordinarily goldfish have been known to live for 100 years. In the museum in Mannheim, Germany, is preserved the skeleton of a pike which was caught in 1497. It was nine feet long and weighed 350 pounds. In the gills was fixed a ring bearing this inscription in Greek, "I am the fish which was first of all put into this lake by the governor of the universe, Frederick II, the 5th of October, 1230." The pike was therefore at least 267 years old when caught.

An Obstacle.

She—I can only be a sister to you, Henry.

He (with repressed emotion)—How old are you?

She (curiously)—Twenty, last October.

He—Well, you can't be a sister to me. I've got a sister at home who was 20 last August, and you see that sort of relationship won't work. Try something else.

A TRANSFORMATION.

Although Jones Shot a Deer, His Friends Are Skeptical.

Jones would like to meet the man that did it. He says that if the party who took the deer will disclose his identity he may keep the animal for his trouble. But it is not likely the guilty wretch will come forward, as he dislikes to attract attention. Jones returned day before yesterday from northern Michigan, where he had been on a hunting trip. He claims that he shot a deer while he was there and brought it home with him. At any rate, he had one with him when he got back. This much the neighbors are willing to testify to, as he was careful to hang the deer on the back porch where the whole neighborhood could not help seeing it.

One neighbor has been unkind enough to insinuate that one of its legs was broken and that there were other indications to prove that the deer had been caught in a trap and clubbed to death. Unfortunately this point must always remain in doubt unless the guilty person comes forward and adds his testimony regarding the facts in the case.

Jones, after seeing that the deer was hung where the neighbors could see it, went down down, collected a party of friends and lured them up to the house by promising them some of the venison. On their way there they were vastly entertained by his vivid account of how he killed the deer by making a shot that was next to impossible. He took them around to the rear of the house, only to find that some one had substituted a dead calf in its place. It is hard to tell which makes Jones the maddest, the loss of the deer or the doubt that his friends express whether he really did kill a deer as he says.

A majority of persons take years off their lives through eating too much while all the time they are under the impression that they are indeed being strictly moderate.

The Examiner's Temporary Business Office will be at No. 411 George Street, a few doors south of the burned premises. Telephone 57.

Obituary.

The death occurred at 11.30 o'clock yesterday morning of Henry Dundas, at his residence, 510 George street, after an illness of about 6 or 8 weeks. Death was due to a general breaking up of the constitution. Deceased was about 50 years of age, and had been a resident of Peterborough for the past 18 years. He was a harnessmaker by trade and at one time conducted a harness making establishment in town, but recently was in the employ of B. F. Ackerman. He was a member of George street Methodist church. A widow and three children, two sons and one daughter, survive him. The former are Messrs. William and John and the latter is Miss Annie, all living at home. The funeral will take place to-morrow to Little Lake Cemetery.

SERVICE AT ST. JOHN'S.

REV. MR. LANGFELDT, OF OMEMEE, PREACHED.

His Subject was "Christ and Our Life in the Church"—Many Present.

The regular weekly Lenten address in St. John's church was delivered by Rev E A Langfeldt last evening. Considering the stormy night the congregation was extremely large, as has been the case on other occasions during Lent.

Mr. Langfeldt is always a welcome visitor to St. John's, and his addresses always give much pleasure. The subject was "Christ and our Life in the Church. His text was Eph. 4—17. He began by referring to the human body as a singular and accurate emblem of the Church of God, illustrating its structure and action. As in the natural body life, vital energy and motion come from the head and vitality depends upon it, so does the Church depend similarly upon her Head, the Lord Jesus Christ. As in the human head, the connection between Christ and the Church is vital and constant, likewise every part and member of the body is in such intimate connection with the others that the vital principle originating in the head is being transmitted continually from one to the other. In the text the nature of the Church is described as beginning with Christ and ending in love. Between these two points lies all individual Christian life, and all real church action and fellowship. The first point of importance then, was, that the place of Christ should be practically recognised as the head, without Him the church would be a headless dead thing, and it is for every member therefore to realize in the church his personal connection with Christ. The speaker next referred to the means by which a constant union with Christ is maintained. Prayer, love, the Sacrament, etc. He then went on to discuss the relationship of the different members, which resulted from their connection with Christ and the church. No individual stood, only in our relationship to God, we are all knit up together, in a wonderful order. It is not a matter of chance or indifference where each one is placed, as each is given his own place and function which he is to exercise as his contribution to the whole body. If his usefulness to that body ceases the limb becomes worthless and is removed. Therefore there was no place for shyness or refusal, as each one is expected to do a definite work. There was no room for failure because each one is divinely supported. No room for boasting because we are only channels. The end of all this is the church—a church cemented together by the holy spirit, a holy church, and a catholic Church, which accomplished its mission in love.

BROKE HIS COLLAR BONE.

Russell Pearce, of Norwood, Met With an Accident When Playing Against the Colts.

The Peterborough Colts went down to Norwood last night to play their return game with the team of that place. It can be scarcely said that it was the Colts' team that went down to our eastern village, as Brundrett, Armstrong, Smith and Whitcroft were not among the number. The game was played in a sheet of slush, but must have been fierce while it lasted, as Russell Pearce of the Norwood boys had his collar-bone broken. The score at the finish was 4-3 in favour of the visitors. The Peterborough team was composed of Comstock, goal; Dillon, point; Cavanah, cover point; Lynch, Morgan, King and Robinson, forwards.

SCHOOL INSPECTION.

The Property Committee Have Made a Very Complete Investigation.

Mr. Robert Fair, Chairman of the Property Committee of the Peterborough Board of Education, was seen this morning as to the inspection that is being made of the various schools, regarding their sanitary conditions. Mr. Fair to the Examiner said that the Property Committee have made a careful and thorough examination of all the ward schools, in some cases with the aid of an expert, and they are taking every precaution to prevent any unsanitary conditions arising. In the South Central School, where so much disease is said to have existed, they have taken extra sanitary precautions.

HE WILL NOT GO.

Mr. Williamson Received a Message Regarding his Appointment.

Mr Willihmson, Secretary Y.M.C.A, today received a message from the Provincial Committee of the Y.M.C.A., which decided the matter in reference to his proposed trip to Africa with the Mounted Police, which will leave in a few days. The message read as follows:

"The Governor-General and the Minister of Militia have been interviewed, and will not give their consent for a man to go. The Provincial Committee appreciates your readiness to enter the door of opportunity—W H Symonds, Provincial Secretary.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS

To the Town Clerk's and Town Treasurer's Office.

The town clerk's office and the office of the town treasurer have of late been undergoing extensive repairs, and when completed they will present a most attractive appearance.

Mr. Brownscombe, the town treasurer, is moved across the hallway from his old quarters, to a very prettily fitted up office.

The wickets are finished in an elegant manner, and altogether the improvements reflect much credit upon the chairman of the property committee, Mr. Joseph Batten, who personally superintended the improvements.

The firemen's apartments too, above the fire hall, have been carefully looked after. The interior has been entirely remodelled. The large sitting room has been transferred to the centre of the second flat, with sleeping apartments very handsomely finished to the front and rear

OFFERS IN WRITING

Will be received by the undersigned up to noon of the 23rd March, 1901, for the purchase of 9 shares of paid up stock of the Peterborough Water Company, of the par value of $900, and of 8 shares of paid up stock of the Peterborough Light and Power Company Limited of the par value of $800. Each lot of stock will be sold separately. The sale is for the purpose of winding up an estate.

THE SOCIAL BIBLE CLUB

Gave a Demonstration of Their "Open Door Policy."

A jolly crowd of Intermediates filled the Bible Club room at the Y.M.C.A. last evening, it being the monthly social meeting of the Club. Mr. John Manning, the popular leader, conducted the lesson: "Ideal Friendship," based upon the story of David and Jonathan, after which Mr. Arthur Upton as chairman of the Social Committee took charge of the programme.

Mr. Will Staples rendered a number of instrumental selections and also accompanied Mr. A. Seward who gave several cornet solos. Mr. Vernon Morphet sang and each time was warmly applauded. Mr. Harding's readings added much to the humor of the evening. The most interesting feature of the evening was the debate between Louis Johnston and Hamil Hall (affirmative) and Harold Daly and Robt. Hall (negative) on the subject, Resolved: "That a trade is more to be desired than a profession." Decision was given in favor of the affirmative.

A good supply of tasty refreshments concluded the enjoyment of the evening and the gathering dispersed with a hymn and prayer.

PERSONAL.

Miss Delaney is in Toronto to-day, securing some of the more recent millinery novelties for Spring.

Mrs. Warde, who has been absent for a few weeks in Montreal and New York, is in town on a visit to her parents

Mr. Jos. Batten is in Belleville attending the annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Black Chapter of Ontario East. He has been elected a standard bearer of the Grand Lodge.

The Campbellford Depatch says: Mrs John McCarthy has returned home after spending two months with her daughter, Mrs T J McDonough, Peterborough.

NEWS NUGGETS

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

HOCKEY.

The Campbellford Herald has the following to say concerning the Junior Colts game in that town on Monday last.—The "Colts" hockey team of Peterborough,—seven active boys who play an excellent game, and carry off the laurel every time, suffered defeat in Victoria rink on Monday night, by the Seconds of Campbellford, an inferior team as regards age, size and weight. The score was 2 to 1. Campbellford secured one goal in the first half of the game, and one in the second, and were within a close shave of scoring 3 to 0. The Peterborough boys worked well throughout the lively game, and took their defeat in a way that was creditable to them. A much smaller number of spectators were present than on former occasions. The Campbellford team was composed of the following boys: Ernest Shaw, Tom Blute, Harry Lowery, L. Shea, Patrick Shannon, Walter Tait and Harry Townsend.

My, Oh My! What ignorance this sporting editor must be in! Does he not know that it was the Junior Colts that visited their town? Had the Colts gone down, they would have rubbed it it just a little worse than the Fenelon Falls did with the Campbellford Seniors.

The Campbellford Seconds were to have come up to Peterborough last night, to play their return game with the Junior Colts, but owing to the soft condition of the weather, they did not put in an appearance.

The B. F. Ackerman team defeated the Wm. Hamilton's, last night.

The Pig Iron Tigers will play the Lakefield seven, here on Tuesday night.

GOLF.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Ladies' Golf Club, will be held in the Y.M.C.A parlours, on Monday evening, March 25th, at 8 o'clock. It is hoped that every member will be present.

KEENE.

March 19th, 1901.

A most disastrous fire occurred here yesterday, when Dr. Harrison's stables, barns and out-houses were completely destroyed by fire.

The fire broke out from a burning chimney of caretaker's office, and spread to the hay loft. In a few moments the entire buildings were in a blaze. These were connected to the dwelling house by a woodshed and wash-house and although in a remarkably short time ample help was on hand with buckets, it was feared that the dwelling was doomed. However, the men worked heroically, and although a strong gale was blowing and fire at several times broke out in the gables, the house was saved. Despite the intense heat from the burning barns, the slippery roofs, and falling debris, the workers never ceased and performed their work in such unison and efficiency that the flames were held in check. While the men were battling the fire the women and children removed the entire contents of the house, expecting at any moment to see all swept by the fire.

The cows, horses and vehicles were saved, but the harness, tools and all belonging to the stables were destroyed.

The caretaker, Thos. McIntyre, lost all his personal belongings, clothes, watch, purse and a rare collection of curios.

A great deal of the doctor's instruments were injured, his medicines destroyed, and the household effects were damaged in the hurry to remove them.

The men of Keene and vicinity deserve praise for their prompt response to the call for aid, and a good deal of credit for the efficient manner in which they controlled the fire.

We sympathise with the Dr. and Mrs. Harrison in their great loss, and hope to see their pretty home soon restored to its former attractiveness.

POPULAR ADMINISTRATION.

(Bobcaygeon Independent.)

There is to be another session of the Provincial Parliament before the general election takes place. The election will, therefore, be held in 1902. This gives to Premier Ross and his colleagues a chance to strengthen themselves in public opinion, there can be no doubt that the Ross Government is increasing in popularity. Mr. Ross carefully studies the drift of public opinion and as soon as he ascertains clearly in which direction it is running, he trims his policy to the stream, and floats along picking up popularity as he proceeds. The subject which has been most discussed of late is the public ownership of railways, and Mr. Ross has given it his careful attention, and is prepared to lend the proposal a reasonable support. He will take steps to establish railway communication with Lake Temiscamingue, and will probably make the new railway public property, leasing it to the G.T.R. for such a rent as will pay interest, and perhaps a little more, on the cost of construction. Which route will be selected for the railway remains to be seen, but in thus giving practical life to the public idea of Government ownership of a railway, Premier Ross has gained much popularity.

* * * * *

While the Premier is properly credited with the policy of the Administration, there can be no doubt that the influence of Mr. Stratton has very decided weight towards the adoption of a progressive and popular policy. No member of the Local Cabinet is so thoroughly in touch with the spirit of today as Mr. Stratton. Though not an advanced theorist, still he is fearless of the old-fashioned bogeys, and being eminently practical, and keen after the interests of the present, he is enabled to catch the public pulse to a half beat, and adopt the treatment most pleasing to the people's taste. The administration of Mr. Ross is decidedly improving in popularity, and his chances of success at the next election are increasing. There is nothing against him. Mr. Whitney has not sustained a single charge of the least consequence against the Ross Government, nor has he proclaimed a policy for his party varying in the slightest degree from that of his opponent. The next election will therefore be a mere contest of party. It will simply be a struggle between the Ins and the Outs, and Mr. Ross will have the advantage of possessing many friends, and being more than ever in touch with popular opinion.

Ottawa Free Press.—The recent outbreak of smallpox in the north has impressed the authorities with the necessity of taking measures in the interests of the public safety owing to the danger of disease being propagated in unorganized territories. Mr. Stratton has prepared a bill which will compel the regulation of "industries" such as lumber camps, with the object of preventing the outbreak of disease and for the enforcement of sanitary regulations therein. It also makes provision for inspection of houses and premises, and the employment of duly qualified medical practitioners by employers of labor in lumbering camps and in mining camps and on railway construction works and other works where labour is employed, and for the erection of permanent or temporary hospitals for the accommodation of persons so employed. And the government, though it calls the music, means to make the firms whose establishments are benefitted by the law, pay the piper. And very properly. The bill should have been on the statute book long ago. It will, when in operation, greatly tend to reduce to a minimum, if not wholly remove, danger of such outbreaks as has recently been witnessed, and prevent the recurrence of such "scares" as that witnessed in Ottawa and elsewhere.

SOUTH BURLEIGH.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Hales and family, who have been residents here for several years, are leaving the Mt. Julian farm, and going to live in North Burleigh. While wishing them prosperity in their new home we regret their departure very much.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Lauder entertained their relatives at an oyster supper on the occasion of their wooden wedding, March 11th. Amongst the presents received were a handsome arm chair and a rocking chair.

The Telephone Company are expected to extend the line to Mt. Julian this summer. The poles are to be furnished and put up by subscription. Quite a number of poles and money have been subscribed.

Mr. W. Langford and S. Stone, of Percy, were visiting relatives here last month.

Mr. Warren Windover, of Percy, was visiting his brother for a few days.

We expect to have our new sawmill in working order soon.

Miss Theresa Armstrong has been visiting friends in Warsaw, Lakefield and Peterborough, and also getting subscriptions for the telephone, in which she is succeeding very well.

Vaccine.

In consequence of the outbreak of smallpox in different parts of the Province, and the liability of the disease approaching into this district, Ormond & Walsh have just received a liberal supply of fresh vaccine of reliable quality.

Sale of Magazines.

The annual auction sale of magazines and periodicals will be held at the Y.M.C.A. on Saturday evening, March 23rd, at 9 o'clock. All persons who wish to secure any of these for the year at a small cost are requested to be present.

WEDDING BELLS.

Nuptials of Miss Lizzie Stewart and Mr. Walter Fleming.

A very pleasant event took place at the home of Mr. Hugh Stewart, in the Township of Manvers, on Wednesday evening 13th inst., when his eldest daughter, Lizzie, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony with Mr. Walter Fleming of the Township of Ops. The marriage was witnessed by a large number of invited guests. Mr. Albert Fleming, brother of the groom, and Miss Maggie Morton, of Fraserville, a friend of the bride, acted as attendants. The nuptial knot was tied by Rev T. Brown, of Bethany.

A large collection of presents evidenced the popularity of the contracting parties, and they heartily appreciated the gifts. The evening was spent in playing a variety of games and social chat, after which all partook of an excellent tea.

The whole neighborhood join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Fleming a very happy and prosperous life.

HAVELOCK HAPPENINGS.

The Standard says—On Wednesday of last week our village was visited by Messrs. VanAllen and Shortall, of Toronto, who after negotiating with Mr. Wm. Mathison, purchased from that gentleman, 85 acres of land, south of the C.P. R. track allowance. The Toronto gentlemen, however, did not state for what purpose they were purchasing the property, and the town has been rife with suggestions as to their intentions. A representative of the Standard has obtained some inside information on the matter which places the future prospects of our town in a very roseate hue. The land has been purchased for two large manufacturing concerns who expect to begin building operations before spring. There is also a bright outlook for a third establishment locating on the property.

It was the intention at first to ascertain what inducements would be offered by the municipality, but it was finally decided to go ahead, regardless of bonuses. The concerns will count on friendly treatment from Havelock, though, in regard to taxation and minor affairs, which we are sure will be only too readily granted, if the prospects are as stated.

LAKEFIELD.

Mr Alex Franklin, of Burleigh, was in the village this week.

Rev Mr Peer, of Norwood, delivered a lecture on "Mission Work at the Temiscamingue District" in the Baptist church on Monday evening.

Rev W J Stone left Tuesday for Mission City, B C, going by way of Salt Lake City and California.

Miss Mundle, of Toronto is in charge of R Graham & Son's millinery department.

Mr Jas Saulter, of Toronto, was in the village last week adjusting Mrs Tate's insurance for the London, Liverpool and Globe Fire Insurance Co.

Mr John Dinwoodie was in Campbellford last week visiting friends.

Messrs J M Kilbourn, R C Strickland and Gerald Fitzgerald, Reeve, of Lakefield, was in Peterborough Monday attending a meeting of the Trent Valley Canal Association.

R Graham & Son will hold their spring millinery opening on Thursday, March 28th and following days.

Miss Mundle will have a very fine assortment of pattern hats and bonnets, flowers, ornaments, straw trimmings &c., &c., which she will be pleased to show everybody. Come and see.

The medals for the winning rinks of the Lakefield Curling Club, donated by Mr. E. R. Tate have been exhibited in Mr. Tanner's window for the last week. There are four, each a beautiful gold monogram, L.C.C., 14k gold, made by Ryrie Bros., Toronto.

The Massey-Harris Co. had a big delivery of their implements here on Wednesday of last week, over $7,000 worth of implements being distributed by their local agent, Mr. Batten. A procession was formed, parading the front street, after which the whole party was photographed at the station by Mr. Green.

It is with very great regret that we announce the retirement of Dr. Bell from the office of village clerk, a position he has filled for the past seventeen years. During his years of faithful service he has proved himself one of the best clerks in the province. It will be a hard matter to find a successor who will fill his place in such an able manner.

The council will hold a special meeting on Tuesday night to appoint a new village clerk to succeed Dr. Bell. A number are making application for the position.

OUR ADVERTISERS.

During the present disturbed relations with our advertisers, on account of the disastrous fire in the Examiner buildings, we are compelled to ask the indulgence of our patrons for a few days until we can pull ourselves together again. Hard and earnest work is being done to instal an entirely new printing plant in our present temporary premises at No. 411 George Street, a few doors south of the burned building, and by the end of the week, we hope to resume our contracts with our advertisers. In the meantime, in order to keep our advertisers as much in touch with our readers as possible, we will be able to insert short local notices of their business announcements.

In our hands. First-class workmen, who devote their special attention to adjusting fine time-pieces and replacing worn or broken parts. Jewely repairing is promptly and carefully done by skilled hands, who can be trusted to carry out your wishes in the minutest detail.

CLARKE & GIBSON

Retiring from Business.

There have been enough bona fide bargains handed out to the ladies of Peterborough, during the first seven days of our closing-out sale, to go around the town like wild-fire. There's not a home in town but what has been talking about our sale. Let it be distinctly understood that the whole stock must be cleared out without delay, and that means almost at your own prices. We can't afford to dilly-dally over sales. With the same object in view, we trust all those indebted to us will be kind enough to pay their accounts promptly.

MISS K. RUDKINS.

Laidlaw's Spring Fashions.

FIRE SALE AT BARRIE'S.

To get rid of the damaged goods resulting from our late fire we are offering all lines at from 30 per cent to 50 per cent off in prices. Furs, Furnishings, Hats and Caps, Waterproofs, Robes, Underwear, Hosiery and Gloves. All share in the reduction. The store is crowded, but if you have needs we can supply you. Come along. The opportunity of the year. Our loss is your gain. Fire sale now on. THOS. BARRIE, corner George and Simcoe Streets.—dtf wtf.

Quite a Fad.

It's a great fad some people have of buying watches from perambulating peddlers. They apparently like to be taken in, or to indulge in risky speculations. If you come to Schneider's and buy a watch you don't have to take any risks. If the watch we sell you don't suit you, we're here to give you your money back for the asking.

F. SCHNEIDER.

Gentlemen's New Spring Hats.

We are showing all the new and stylish shapes in gentlemen's black and coloured hats for early spring wear. The styles are the correct English and American makes in Derby and Fedora hats, and to be right in line with this year's fashions you should let us fit you. Our hats are all fine makes, who have guaranteed records.

W. LECH & SON.

Routley's Magic Prices.

The great sale of the Toronto Bazaar stock, bought at a fraction on the dollar, is a bonanza to Peterborough citizens. The goods are moving with such rapidity that special lines advertised one day are very often completely sold out the next. There are many lines, however, such as Wall Papers, Window Blinds, China, Crockery, etc., that can stand a month's heavy selling before being cleared. Another thing is certain—that no matter what you buy here you can count on securing wonderful bargains—bargains such as can be obtained nowhere else in Peterborough or any other town in Ontario.

C. B. ROUTLEY.

Moth Bags.

Just the thing for storing away and preserving fur garments and all classes of fine woollen goods. They are made of fibre chamois in various sizes and supplied with wire hangers for suspending the garments in proper shape.

THE BUDGET DEBATE.

Mr. Brook Says the Preference Injures Canadian Trade.

HE DRAWS A DISMAL PICTURE.

Woolen Manufacturing Business in a Bad Way—Germany's Advantage and How She Reaps It Through England—Mr. Ross of South Ontario Shows the Growth of Trade in Reply.

Ottawa, March 22.—Another day has been devoted to the debate upon the budget, some seven members having spoken yesterday. Several of the speakers made their maiden addresses to the House, among them being W. R. Brock, who in a vigorous speech advocated a repeal of the preferential tariff, and asserted that unless the Government reconsidered its position upon this question the manufacturers would be compelled to cut down wages by at least one-third. Mr. Ross (South Ontario) replied in his maiden speech, and made a most favorable impression on the House

Before the orders of the day were taken up, Mr. Monk wished the Government to make a statement with regard to the equipping of a polar expedition under Capt. Bernier. The proposal had been made to the Government, and it was expected that the result of the consideration which the Government had given to the matter should be made known to the House in a short space of time.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier—Are you in favor of it?

Mr. Monk—Personally, I am.

Mr. E. F. Clark—Certainly, everybody is.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier—The matter has been under consideration by the Government, but I am not prepared to say what the result of that consideration may be. It will, however, be made known at an early date.

The Budget Debate.

The budget debate was resumed by Mr. Marcil (Bonaventure). He said that he was a free trader in theory, but to carry out such a policy in Canada at present was practically impossible. He advocated an extension of the preference clause beyond the bounds of Britain, and advocated efforts to bring about closer trade relations with Germany, France, Belgium and other European countries. He believed that permanency of the tariff is a guarantee alike to the manufacturer and the workingman.

Mr. W. F. Maclean, who followed, said if followers of the Government continued to espouse protection after the manner of the representatives of South Wellington, North Norfolk and Bonaventure, they would all soon be on the Conservative platform. The Premier, said Mr. Maclean, is either a bogus free trader or a protectionist who is ashamed to stand confessed.

The debate was continued by Mr. Roche (Halifax).

Mr. Brock, Toronto, eulogized the party to which he belonged, and said it was strange if the country was sick of the National Policy, as the Premier had said, that he retained so much of that policy. He said Sir Wilfrid Laurier had missed the opportunity of his life in not getting a better trade arrangement with Britain than was indicated in the preferential tariff. He said many manufacturers were sick of the preference, which he claimed had brought about a critical condition of affairs in connection with some of the manufacturing industries of Canada. He characterized its effects as a brutal stroke at Canadian workmen. He stated that as it stood it was a foreign and not a British preference. For instance, German goods were sent into Yorkshire, where they were weighed up an ounce or so, and sent to Canada. Seventy-five per cent. of the preference in that case was given to Germany. The same might be said of Swedish and Norwegian granite, brought into Aberdeen, touched up a little and brought into Canada as Aberdeen granite. That was the practical working out of the preference, which he believed was never intended to benefit the Empire. It represented the feathers and fringes which they had heard from the Premier; as a business man be believed in doing away with it.

Mr. William Ross.

Mr. William Ross (South Ontario) said that he was very sorry he could not agree with Mr. Brock; they agreed on everything else except politics. He had the pleasure of knowing him as a gentleman and a friend, and he was a good friend, but he must confess he did not admire his politics, and in that they agreed to disagree. When Mr. Brock said that this Government had been faithless, that they had not kept their promises, that the party they represented was not worthy the consideration of this country, he disagreed with him entirely. Mr. Brock told about the Conservative party having the same old policy. It was the same old policy, and it was likely to remain the same old one. Considering the wonderful development of the country for the last four years, it was likely to have the same old policy for many years to come. Mr. Brock had told about the method adopted in the last election in canvassing for votes in Ontario. He had said that the Liberals went to the factories and promised that if the Liberal party was returned to power there would be an increased protection, or something of that kind. Mr. Ross said that he had gone through factories in his constituency, and had the pleasure of being permitted to interview the workmen. The question of tariff changes had never come up at all. He had addressed these same people in other places, and the question of preferential tariff came up, and he supported it with all his might, conscientiously believing that the preferential tariff would be good for this country, good for trade, good for all. Then he asked if there were no other classes in this country besides the manufacturers. Were there no farmers, no merchants, no laborers, no consumers, in this country? He said there were, and that these classes needed protection as well as the manufacturers of the country, and a great deal more. Mr. Brock must have been thinking of his factories while advocating protection. In answer to Mr. Brock he said he was proud of his party, proud of the Government and of their policy, and he would give figures of our trade that would justify that pride. He did not agree that the preference meant the displacing of a corresponding amount of Canadian goods. That did not necessarily follow. Mr. Brock had spoken of the tariff as injuring the woolen industry. Constant tariff-tinkering was a menace to trade, and if a stable tariff could be had it was a benefit to trade. He had yet to learn that there was a general complaint from the manufacturers of this country. We had in the last four years the most wonderful development of trade ever seen in this country, and he hoped it would continue for a long time. As to the statement that German goods were coming in in disguise, that should be looked into, as Mr. Fielding had said that the preference was intended to benefit only British goods. Mr. Ross concluded by quoting a series of figures which strikingly illustrated the recent development of Canadian trade.

After Messrs. Vrooman (South Victoria) and George A. Clare had spoken, the House adjourned at 11.05.

The Senate.

Ottawa, March 22.—In the Senate a number of petitions against the Bell Telephone Company being allowed to increase their rates, and asking that they be bound to supply telephones to persons whose premises are adjacent to their lines were received.

Hon. Mr. Macdonald (B. C.) asked the Government for information respecting matters in the Yukon district.

Hon. David Mills said Mr. Ogilvie was desirous of being relieved. Hon. James Hamilton Ross succeeds him. He was for many years connected with the Government in the Northwest and possesses the confidence of the people. The revenue had been $1,504,026. The royalty had been reduced to 5 per cent.

THE TERMS THAT FAILED

To Woo the Boers From Their Fight Against the British Army in South Africa.

London, March 22.—The Daily Chronicle, professing to be able to give an outline of the negotiations between Lord Kitchener and Gen. Botha, says:

"The chief obstacle to a settlement was Lord Kitchener's refusal to grant complete amnesty to the leaders of the rebels in Cape Colony. He offered self-government on the lines of Jamaica, immediately on the cessation of hostilities, with legislative bodies partly elected by the burghers.

"The Government agreed to provide £1,000,000 to compensate the Boers for property destroyed and articles commandeered by the Boers on commando, provided the signature of the officers who commandeered the goods were forthcoming. He also offered to grant loans on easy terms for rebuilding and restocking farmsteads.

"Moreover, he agreed that children should be instructed in English or Dutch, at the discretion of their parents. The Government undertook to make no claim on church property or funds, or upon hospitals or hospital funds, or upon private investments.

"No burgher of either State was to be allowed to possess a rifle, except by special license.

"Gen. Botha was generally in favor of these conditions, but he dissented strongly from a proposal to give the full privilege of citizenship to properly domiciled and registered blacks. He was also greatly concerned about the position Jewish capitalists would occupy in the country, and was told that Jews and Christians would enjoy equal rights, no distinction being made in the matter of concessions.

The Parliamentary papers on the subject are still delayed, but will probably appear to-day (Friday)."

MARKET FOR HORSES.

Hon. John Dryden's Remount Station Resolution.

BRITAIN WANTS OUR HORSES.

Their Quality Was Proved in the Boer War—Signs Looking Towards the End of the Session—Veterans Will Get Minerals and Hardwood—Bill Respecting the University.

Toronto, March 22.—In the Legislative Assembly yesterday, bills were introduced by Hon. Mr. Latchford to amend the Ontario Fisheries Act, and by Attorney-General Gibson to amend the Registry Act.

Hon. Mr. Stratton's bill respecting Sanitary Regulations in Unorganized Territories was read a third time.

Hon. John Dryden moved an address to the Imperial Government respecting the establishment of a Remount Station for the purchase of horses for the British service. He asserted that during the past the horse breeding industry had not received the attention it deserved. There had been a revival of activity in recent years, but the market for horses had been lessened by the introduction of electricity for traction purposes. The United States did not take as many of our horses as formerly, and it was advisable to look to Britain for a market where our own horses were highly appreciated. The experience of the South African war sufficiently demonstrated that we raised a good class of horses for military purposes. We might, perhaps, also be credited with a patriotic spirit in desiring in this manner to contribute to the strength of the Empire. As, however, the same class of horses desired for war purposes were also well suited for agricultural, no loss would be involved.

Mr. Whitney thought that some explanation should be made as to the memorandum received on the subject from the British Government. Moreover, as the terms of the address had not been set forth in the order paper, the House should have further time to consider it.

The subject was accordingly allowed to stand over.

Premier Ross moved that on and after Monday Government business should have precedence over all other business except private bills. He made the announcement that all Government measures were now before the House, except their railroad bill.

Mr. Whitney was willing to cooperate with the Government with a view to prorogation before Easter, but that opportunity would be afforded to give all measures full consideration. If that could not be done in the time set, he would prefer that the session should be extended. The motion was adopted.

Hon. R. Harcourt's bill to consolidate and amend the act respecting Public Schools was adopted in committee.

The House went into committee on the bill to appropriate lands in New Ontario for the volunteers who served in South Africa and the veterans of 1866. Numerous suggestions were made for the extension of the scope of the bill so as to include other classes. Attorney-General Gibson said that the original idea of the bill was to recognize the services of the South African volunteers, but if the proposals now made were to be considered there was no reason why the man who had been a member of the volunteers for 25 years without being called out should not be included. Mr. Carscallen urged that the next of kin of men who had been killed or died as the result of the Fenian Raid should receive the grant. Mr. Whitney supported the proposal. Hon. E. J. Davis said it was necessary to draw the line somewhere or all who were members of volunteer companies and were ready to go might put in a claim. Mr. Little urged the claims of those who did garrison duty on the frontier during the Fenian agitation. Hon. E. J. Davis said that the clause providing that the volunteer must have been on "active service" would be liberally construed. Mr. Dempsey asked whether the volunteers who were called out in 1865 would be included. Mr. Davis intimated that their claims would be considered. Mr. McLaughlin hoped the Government would also see their way clear to include the veterans of 1837.

When the eighth section was reached the Commissioner of Crown Lands announced that it had been changed so as to give the settler the minerals, but the reservation of the pine was retained. Mr. Carscallen thought the settler should have the timber subject to the performance of settlement conditions. Hon. J. M. Gibson said that principle would be a new departure and moreover would introduce endless troubles and jealousies, as a well-timbered lot would be much more valuable than one without pine. After several others had spoken, Mr. Davis pointed out that the settlers would be at liberty to take pine for buildings, etc., under the Government regulations. It must be borne in mind that the timber other than pine was continually growing more valuable. The clause was allowed to stand and the committee reported progress.

Hon. J. R. Stratton's measure amending the Ontario Companies Act was before the committee for some time and a disagreement as to some of its details was the occasion of a lively passage at arms between the Provincial Secretary and Col. Matheson, the former of whom accused his opponent of showing his entire ignorance of the principles of the bill and of business methods, while the colonel retorted in a hot tirade, during which he characterized the Provincial Secretary as a "Tammany boss." The committee reported progress, which was imperceptible to the naked eye.

Hon R. Harcourt introduced a bill respecting Toronto University and University College. The prominent feature of the bill is that all matters of money and property are kept distinct from educational affairs. The Board of Trustees are given full power over property and income. Hitherto the Senate possessed this power and the Board had no legalized existence, but the bill gives it a recognized status. The Board is to have four ex-officio members, the Chancellor, Vice-Chancellor, President of the University and Principal of the University College. The remaining five will be appointed by the Government, so that in financial matters the Government retains its influence. The trustees under the new Act have the right to appoint all officials excepting those who teach. Some sections as to property and income are modelled after similar sections in the Upper Canada College Act of last session, by which that institution was freed from Government control. The Government as heretofore will appoint professors and teachers as advised by the Chancellor. What is called the corporation of the University and University College, no longer exists. Formerly the Senate fixed the fees to be paid by students which will in future be fixed by the Board of Trustees. The Board will also deal with matters of retirement and superannuation. The most important provides that the Government shall pay the salaries of instructors and the cost of maintenance in the departments of chemistry, physics, geology and mineralogy. No fixed sums are specified, but the amount for the first year will be in the neighborhood of $20,000, which will be increased from time to time. The first payments will be made this year. The Academic Government will be vested in the Chancellor, Vice-Chancellor, President and Principal and the members of the Senate and Convocation. The composition of the Senate is changed in an important respect, as there will be no longer any appointments made to that body by the Government.

The House went into Committee of Supply and passed the remaining estimates with the exception of the three items of Immigration, the Oxford Reformatory and "Miscellaneous," which were allowed to stand.

ASSEMBLY NOTES.

Smallpox is now reported at Barrie's Bay, Renfrew County, and Richmond Square, Lennox County. Dr. Lynd and Dr. Sheard urged the Provincial Secretary yesterday to have the law changed to compel negligent municipalities to pay the cost entailed by any negligence regarding the spread of smallpox.

The Railway Committee, by a vote of 15 to 8, cut out clause giving the H. G. & B. Electric Railway power to run cars on Sundays on its proposed link from the terminus to St. Catharines. Mr. Carscallen said he would fight it out in the House, as the committee's action would prevent the link being constructed.

GENTLEMEN OF THE PRESS.

The 43rd Annual Meeting of the Canadian Association Held.

Toronto, March 22.—The 43rd annual meeting of the Canadian Press Association is being held in the Council Chamber of the Board of Trade, with Mr. J. S. Willison in the chair. The meeting opened at 10 o'clock yesterday.

At the morning session a resolution was passed to the effect that, in the opinion of the association, a Dominion Press Council should be created, to take the matter up and solicit the co-operation of the other associations. Should such a council be formed, the Canadian Press Association will be represented thereon by the past president, president and secretary.

The chairman made a most important announcement, that in the near future a movement would probably be made to nationalize our system of telegraphs.

The secretary presented his annual report, showing receipts amounting to $741.70, of which $421 came from fees; while the disbursements were $520.31. The number of certificates issued was 191.

Captain Macdonald of Alexandria was elected president; D. McGillicuddy of Goderich, first vice-president, and John A. Cooper, secretary-treasurer, all by acclamation. The Executive Committee will be elected to-day.

Interesting papers on technical subjects were read by E. B. Biggar, Canadian Engineer; Mark Sauvaile, Montreal; Andrew Pattullo, M.P.P., Woodstock; John A. Ewan, Toronto, and Col. Maclean, Montreal.

A report was presented on the proposed excursion to the Maritime Provinces.

END OF THE FRICTION.

British and Russian Generals Agree on Terms.

DIPLOMATS TO HAVE A CHANCE.

Leaders in the Lords and Commons Make Statements Confirming the News of the Mutual Withdrawal of the British and Russians Until a Diplomatic Settlement Is Reached.

Pekin, March 22.—(2 a. m.)—Count Von Waldersee, General Barrow and General Wogack, have been in consultation and General Wogack has agreed to withdraw the Russian troops from the disputed ground at Tien Tsin, provided the British also withdrew.

He insisted also upon a guarantee that work on the railway siding should not proceed until the matter had been diplomatically settled.

This disposition and stipulation was satisfactory to Gen. Barrow and was accepted by him.

Consequently the British and Russian troops will be withdrawn at 5 o'clock this morning (Friday), thereby avoiding all trouble at present.

Orders have been issued, however, that no British officer shall leave or even "sleep out" at night or to go to dinner without furnishing his address to the adjutant.

The marines will return to the ships. Admiral Seymour objects to any of the Australian naval brigade, who volunteered for service on the railway, remaining. The military authorities say he does not understand the situation, that his interference is uncalled for and that the Australian marines are just the men needed.

The Russians have ordered a regiment to proceed from Port Arthur to Tien Tsin.

Secret Treaty Suspected.

London, March 22.—"It is generally believed that Russia will produce a secret treaty with China," says the Pekin correspondent of The Daily Mail, "fully establishing her prior claim to the disputed concession at Tien Tsin. Unfortunately, this dispute is only an isolated instance of the friction of interests between the two powers. The other instances have not obtained such prominence."

Collision Obviated.

Pekin, March 21.—The arrangements made by Gen. Bailloud, the French commander, are regarded as completely satisfactory and all danger of collision between the British and French is considered obviated.

Lord Lansdowne's Statement.

London, March 22.—In the House of Lords yesterday the Foreign Secretary, Lord Lansdowne, announced that Russia and Great Britain had agreed to withdraw their troops from the disputed territory at Tien Tsin and reserve the question of title and proprietary rights for subsequent examination. He also supplemented his statement by giving a history of the entire affair.

Lord Cranborne, the Foreign Under Secretary in the House of Commons, yesterday assured Sir Ellis Ashmead-Bartlett that the Government considered the statements of the Russian Foreign Minister, Count Lamsdorff, Feb. 16 and 17, as applicable to any agreement in regard to Manchuria between Russia and China.

A MURDEROUS MADMAN.

Beat His Wife Till She Was Unconscious and Then Cut His Own Throat.

Dunnville, Ont., March 22.—About 4 o'clock Wednesday evening, as Mrs. McBay was driving past Mr. Alex. Lynch's farm, she noticed a bloody smock hanging from a tree near the barn. Going to the house, she found Mrs. Lynch lying unconscious on the sofa, her head terribly lacerated, and bruised, and her hair matted and clothes stained with blood. In the barn Mrs. McBay found Mr. Lynch, quite dead, with his throat cut, and a bloody knife still clutched in his hand. Dr. Pringle was called, and he dressed Mrs. Lynch's wounds and restoted her to consciousness. She said that her husband had been acting strangely of late. On Wednesday morning, after they had milked the cows and were still in the barn, Mr. Lynch took the king bolt from a wagon, and saying that they would both die together, seized her and beat her with it until he thought she was dead. Then taking off his bloody smock, and hanging it on a tree outside the barn, he took his jack-knife and stabbed himself in the neck, severing the jugular vein. Mrs. Lynch staggered to the house and fell upon the sofa, where she remained until found in the afternoon. There is little chance of her recovery. Mr. Lynch was comfortably well off, and is thought to have been insane when he committed the deed. The couple lived alone.

Curiously, the men who are easiest to get along with are the very men who have no faculty for getting along.—Detroit Journal.

NORWOOD NEWS.

Meeting of the Board of Education—Inspector's Report.

March 19th, 1901.

Mr and Mrs Marshall, of Whitby, are the the guests of Mr and Mrs John Finley.

Mr. Jas White leaves this evening for South Africa to take a position as hospital surgeant.

Friday evening a load of curlers drove over from Hastings and played a friendly game with our village curlers. The game was very even, Norwood winning by only one shot.

On Monday two rinks from Keene played here both afternoon and evening, and won on the whole by 14 shots.

The High School scholars are busy getting ready for the "At Home" which will be held in the High School Friday evening, March 29th.

The concert given in the Town Hall under the auspices of the hockey club came off last evening, and was quite a success. The programme was as follows:

God Save the King.

The High School inspector's report was read by the chairman as follows:—

Re premises—The school premises are in good condition. The blackboard space is ample, but the surface is in need of renovation.

Re library—The additions to the Library of Reference show excellent judgment on the part of those who made the selelection.

Re organization—The time table is well arranged to meet the requirements of the various grades of pupils.

Re character of teaching—English and History I, Classics I, Drawing I, Mathematics I, French and German I, Reading I, Science (Chemistry) I, Commercial and Drill not inspected.

The Board of Education met on Monday evening. There were present Messrs. W. E. Roxburgh, Chairman, P. W. Reynolds, T. Fraser, Jas. Cummings, J. McNaughton, P. W. Stevenson, R. W. Waters, J. L. Squire, Secretary.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The special committee appointed to inquire into the heating of the schools, reported that they found the steam pipes in the public school frozed up. They were thawed out and the janitor called to account, since then no complaints have been made.

Moved by Messrs. Stevenson and McNaughton that the report be adopted.—Carried

The supply committee reported that they had purchased books for the library.

As regards organization, administration and the character of the teaching in the various departments, the school is in a very commendable condition.

The pupils are afforded good opportunities of keeping in touch with current events by the maintenance of files of leading periodicals.

The staff is legally qualified, the discipline excellent and the character of pupils' work satisfactory.

Moved by Messrs. Fraser and Webster that the Secretary call the attention of the Principal of the High School to a resolution on books requesting him to furnish quarterly a statement of the attendance and ask him to comply with same.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Webster and Fraser that the Secretary be instructed to communicate with the County Treasurer and request him to remit the model school grant for 1901 and interest on same.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Stevenson and Webster that the report of the inspector be received.—Carried.

The following accounts were presented,—E. H. Scott, supplies for Public School, $5 70; E. H. Scott, supplies for High School, $4.90.

Moved by Messrs Cumming and Fraser that the above account be referred to the several committees and if found correct, be paid.—Carried.

GORE'S LANDING.

Mr. H. J. Dale, who was visiting in Winnipeg, Calgary, Vancouver, and other points west arrived home on Saturday.

Mrs. T. Graham was the guest last week of her sister, Mrs. (Capt.) Harris.

Miss Waddingham has been confined to the house with a severe cold.

Miss S. Hore is visiting with her brother at Keene.

Mr. Mark Manley sold out his stock and household effects last week and has removed with his family to Precious' Corners.

Mrs. W. S. Herald gave a progressive crokinole party last Wednesday evening.

Miss Philp was confined to the house a few days at the end of the week.

The death occurred last week from pneumonia of Mr. Chas. Neill, sr., one of the earliest settlers in this part of the country. Mr. Neill was eighty four years of age being born in County Down, Ireland, and having come to this country when quite young. He settled in the Township of Hamilton over fifty years ago and has since resided at Plainville and later at Gore's Landing. Mr. Neill leaves a widow, two sons and two daughters, six of whom are married. The funeral took place on Thursday to the Plainville Methodist burying ground and was very largely attended.

SIGNALS IN BUSINESS.

A CODE LANGUAGE WHICH HELPS IN BUYING OR SELLING.

Signs Fraught With Meaning Which Pass Between Partners or Between Employers and Managers When Putting Through a Deal.

The business man's sign language is not a general language that anybody might study and understand. If that were the case, its value would soon be gone. It is not even a language generally understood by any branch of business, such as the wholesale carpet dealers, the tobacco importers, the furniture dealers, and so on.

It is in deals among themselves that these signs are mostly used and serve their best purpose. The sign language as used by business men is more of a code of signals. They all use the same expressions and phrases in their sign talk, but every merchant has his own code with which he carries on his sign talk with his partner or his subordinates. It comes into play when partners are conferring together with an outsider with whom the firm is doing business or else the head of the house and some of his subordinates are putting through a business deal with the representative of some other business house.

It wouldn't do for the partners to continually whisper together or for the head of the house to turn to one of his subordinates and say in a hoarse, low growl, "This fellow is trying to charge us two prices." It may be that the subordinate should know what is in his superior's mind, so that he can govern himself accordingly, but if there should be any whispered consultation the representative of the other firm might become suspicious and feel that he was being plotted against and show a sudden stubbornness about reducing his price.

So the business man who wants to tell the head of any department of his business who is assisting him in buying a certain line of goods that "this fellow is charging us two prices" merely reaches for a cigar and scratches a match twice before he lights it. Two partners in consultation use their own code in talking to each other in the presence of any outsider. One will telegraph "raise the price" by passing his finger over his upper lip or "lower the price" of the goods in question by stroking the lower lip. The amount to be raised or lowered is shown by resting the head upon the open left hand, one, two or more of whose fingers will be lifted clear of the head, $5 for each finger if small amounts or fingers at $25 to $100 apiece in big "deals." The gestures are as natural as possible if done by an "old hand." And various firms use slight alterations which make the sign talk impossible for a stranger to read. The agents and employees of big business houses are seldom so thoroughly "up" in this telegraphing as the managers, and two partners will "talk" before the smartest representative of a rival house without his perceiving the drift of the conversation, even though he may know a sign conversation is being carried on.

If there is anything shady about a third and fourth party, the fact is sometimes conveyed by momentarily rubbing the left eye with the back of the forefinger, or if it be that a dealer or a rival is "deep" and tries to arrange a well laid scheme, with most of the advantage on his own side, one friend signals to the other: "Be careful! Trying to catch you!" by resting his head on the first and second fingers of the right hand.

Probably the commonest of all signs are, "Accept the offer" or "Clinch the deal," conveyed by pulling the vest down with both hands, as if straightening it, and "Refuse" or "Stop negotiations" by biting at the thumb nail. These signals are made before carrying the resolution out, to give the partner a chance to silently object if he disagrees, when the sign "Postpone," by passing the hand over the forehead, is made and a chance to discuss things in private.

"Yes" is signaled by closing the right fist and "No" by closing the left. "Pretend indifference," by biting the lower lip, is a frequent message, especially in discussing contracts for large amounts, when the "outsider" shows signs of anxiety to clinch matters. In the wholesale dry goods business biting the lip means "Second class goods," and the right hand signal for the other is made by stroking the side of the face as if feeling whether a shave is necessary. The masterly and unconcerned way in which two old hands at trade sign talk will converse in company is wonderful. Even an expert will not catch the messages, though he knows he is being talked over. "Be careful; he suspects the signals," is used when necessary and consists in arranging the necktie as though it had accidentally slipped down.

There is an almost universal code among business experts and their employers, though it is altered slightly in different cases, to throw the outsider off the scent. A partner or manager often accompanies his best expert inspector when going to decide between goods that are offered, and the expert signals the "boss" whether to buy or not.

"Good" is telegraphed by resting the right hand on the right hip, "Bad" by the left on the left hip, and "Damaged goods, but worth taking at half price," is a common message, conveyed by passing a forefinger around the inside of the collar as though it had a rough edge and hurt the neck.

For hauling over the coals employees who have given cause for displeasure the same code is extended. For instance, "Threaten with dismissal" is frequent and is telegraphed by a glance at the ceiling as if there were a fly there. The dreaded sentence "Dismiss him" is flashed across by placing the finger tips of both hands together.

In large stores the shopwalkers and superintendents have a short, useful code with the assistants. Thus if a customer is suspected of kleptomania the shopwalker extends the first two fingers of the left hand in passing him on to an assistant. Many firms only use a few of these signals, while others have a most elaborate code, but all use some of the signals. The variations in the code are endless, and it is safe to say that those who have used the form of signals given here will at once revise their code.

HIS VIVID DREAM.

The Part That It Played In Saving His Brother's Life.

"I never had but one experience in my life that verged on the abnormal," said the colonel after the whist game at the club the other night when the conversation had somehow gravitated to queer coincidences, strange premonitions and similar unaccountable happenings. "It took place several years ago," he continued, in response to a little pressing for the story, "when I was living in apartments in upper Canal street and had a business office on the second floor of a building in St. Charles. At that time I was very methodical. At 6 o'clock sharp I would shut up the office for the night, dine, spend awhile at the club and generally reached home at about 10:30. Then I would get into a dressing gown, turn up the lamp and proceed to read myself sleepy.

"On the night I have in mind I followed that programme to the letter; but, contrary to all my habits, I fell asleep in my chair and had a vivid dream or, rather, a sort of swift, flashing vision. I thought I was standing at the head of the flight of stairs leading up to my office in St. Charles street and that my door was ajar about a foot, showing a pitch dark interior. I seemed to have just arrived for some purpose or other, and I was conscious of a strong feeling of surprise that the door should be open, but before I could form any conjecture in regard to the matter I awoke.

"The picture was absolutely commonplace, but it was so extraordinarily distinct that for a moment or two I could hardly realize where I was. It seemed certain that I had just been standing in the office hallway, and the impression was so firm and clear I thought at first I must have been walking in my sleep. My watch showed that I had been dozing less than five minutes, however, and somnambulism was plainly out of the question.

"As you may well believe, the incident left me wide awake, and I tried in vain to recompose my nerves over a book, but in spite of all my efforts I found it impossible to get that gaping office door out of my mind. I had a feeling, which became stronger and stronger every moment, that I must have accidentally left it open when I went away the preceding evening, and, seeing that sleep was not to be thought of until I settled the matter one way or the other, I finally got up, dressed and started down town. By the time I reached the stairs I was so firmly convinced that the door would be open that I called a policeman to go up with me and was not in the least surprised to find things exactly as I had seen them in my dream.

"But the strangest part of the story is to come. Inside the office was my brother. It seemed that he had been passing the stairs an hour or so before, when he was suddenly seized with an attack of vertigo and went up to lie down. He is a very large, heavy man, and the seizure assumed a sort of apoplectic form which had already rendered him partly unconscious at the time I arrived. I sent for a carriage and had him taken to his house, where he was ill for four or five weeks. What would have been the consequence but for my opportune appearance I don't pretend to say, and I have absolutely no theory to advance in regard to the circumstances that led me down that night. The episode occurred exactly as I have related it, and I have never allowed myself to waste any time in speculating over the matter. I have simply relegated it to the category of things that can't be explained."

Sneak Thieves In Mexico.

"The thing which struck me most forcibly in Mexico," said a man who had just returned from a visit to the far south, "is the boldness and cleverness of the sneak thieves who infest the Mexican capital. They call them rateros down there, and if that word comes from rat it is well taken. The day before I left Mexico an old man came in on a train and put his head out of the car window to see the sights. Just as the train pulled up at the depot a ratero on the platform snatched off the man's hat. The old man ran out of the car, and, seeing the thief, he set his valise down in order to give chase. In an instant another ratero had 'swiped' the valise, and both of the thieves got away. The old man went to a hotel and barely had unpacked his trunk when a young man appeared in his room and called for his dirty clothes for the laundry. The young man was another ratero, and he got nearly every stitch of wearing apparel the old man had. I had a little experience with the rateros on my own account. They got a light overcoat from my carriage seat in broad daylight."

Tried Twenty Years.

"A friend came to me once completely heartbroken," said James Whitcomb Riley, "saying that his manuscripts were constantly returned and that he was the most miserable wretch alive. I asked him how long he had been trying. 'Three years,' he said. 'My dear man,' I answered, laughing, 'go on; keep on trying till you have spent as many years at it as I did.' 'As many as you did!' he exclaimed. 'Yes, as long as I did.' 'What! you—James Whitcomb Riley—struggled for years!' 'Yes, sir, through years, through sleepless nights, through almost hopeless days. For 20 years I tried to get into one magazine; back came my manuscripts eternally. I kept on. In the twentieth year that magazine accepted one of my articles.'

"I was not a believer in the theory that one man does a thing much easier than any other man. Continuous, unflagging effort, persistence and determination will win. Let not the man be discouraged who has these."—Success.

Thought He Was Crazy.

Sir Morell Mackenzie at an "at home" chanced to converse for some time with a lady unknown to him. It happened to be a celebrated authoress, who introduced herself with these words, "I am John Strange Winter." Sir Morell did not read novels and gazed at her wonderingly. She added, "'Bootles' Baby,' you know." "Yes, yes, of course," he answered soothingly.

He afterward remarked to his hostess that the poor lady was very mad indeed. First she had told him that she was a man and then that she was somebody's baby.

OLD DUTCH WERE CHOLERIC

They Called Each Other "Snapperties," and Even Worse.

What a contentious crowd the inhabitants of the village, then known as Breuckelen, now part of Brooklyn, was!

The early records are filled with reports of inquiries into the cause of rioting and disturbances of the peace. The early court records consist largely of actions brought for slander and assault. It is recorded that a man was arrested for calling an official a "snapperije," another was put in jail, charged with having called his neighbor a "dick beeste" and still another was clapped into jail for having called a certain official a "bloodsucker." Some of the old Dutch records make interesting reading.

And the court meted out justice in all these cases with a regard for common sense and a disregard for statute law that one cannot help but admire. One instance of curious adjustment of penalties may be cited:

The village tavern keeper and a contentious woman both appeared before the court, asking justice. They had quarreled. The woman had accused the innkeeper of watering his brandy, and he in turn had applied an opprobrious epithet to the woman. The court after hearing the evidence adjudged both to be guilty. With rare discrimination in making the punishment fit the crime the man was fined 6 guiden and the woman, who had impugned the quality of the brandy, was fined 20 guiden.

With hundreds of times the population today, the courts of Brooklyn do not have one-tenth the slander or assault cases that they had some 200 years ago, and, as for a riot, there has not been one of any magnitude even threatened in more than a score of years.

A Case Lincoln Would Not Take.

All clients knew that, with "Old Abe" as their lawyer, they would win their case—if it was fair; if not, that it was a waste of time to take it to him. After listening some time one day to a would be client's statement, with his eyes on the ceiling, he swung suddenly round in his chair and exclaimed:

"Well, you have a pretty good case in technical law, but a pretty bad one in equity and justice. You'll have to get some other fellow to win this case for you. I couldn't do it. All the time, while standing talking to that jury, I'd be thinking, 'Lincoln, you're a liar,' and I believe I should forget myself and say it out loud."—Success.

Too Commonplace.

Little Jack—Oh, mother, I do love cake! It's awful nice.

Mother (reprovingly)—You should not say you "love" cake—say "like." Do not say "awful"—say "very." Do not say "nice"—say "good." And, by the way, the word "oh" should be omitted. Now, my dear, repeat the sentence correctly.

Jack—I like cake. It's very good.

Mother—That's better.

Jack (with an air of disgust) — It sounds as if I was only talking 'bout bread.—London Tit-Bits.

A Change.

"Do you think people in the next world will follow the same occupations they do here?" asked the gossiping lady.

"No," said the churchman; "everybody will attend to his own business there."

To have a perfect stomach a man or a woman must dine well and breakfast and sup simply.—Ladies' Home Journal.

DISHONEST DEPOSITORS.

Humor and Pathos of the Savings Bank In Great Cities.

Writing of the savings banks and their depositors in The Century, Richard Boughton tells of the embarrassment sometimes caused to bank officials by dishonest patrons.

The great bulk of depositors, perhaps 65 per cent, are of the laboring classes, the weekly wage earners; then come the middle and well to do class, say 30 per cent, and lastly the very rich man and the criminal in about equal proportions. By criminal I do not mean to confine this class to bank burglars, check forgers and bank note counterfeiters—you will see all of these if you watch the line long enough—but I include all those men and women who avoid police notice when they can and are occasionally "wanted" at police headquarters, the rich keeper of the fashionable gambling house, the woman who is suspected of knowing the whereabouts of a vanished thief or forger, the man who never breaks into a bank himself, but takes a friendly and patronly interest in those who do, and so on up and down the scale of cosmopolitan vice. At one time or another they all have savings bank accounts. It seems incomprehensible, but people of all these classes are frequent, even permanent depositors. I do not say this from hearsay, but have seen examples of each of them lodging their money even in their own names.

What can you do with these people when they come to deposit? It is not criminal to save money, and you cannot arrest them. In some cases their accounts are closed by the banks, and they are told to take themselves off, a hint upon which they promptly and quietly act, possibly from fear of the police, accustomed as they are to obey when told to "move on."

Some of them, however, are not easily got rid of. A famous confidence woman had her account in a New York bank, and her quiet demeanor, amiable smile, innocent, almost girlish timidity, quite won the chief official in charge. He was accustomed to call her aside politely from the somewhat rough crowded line, give her a chair in the anteroom and send her passbook and money by one of the clerks to the receiving teller. Her identity was finally discovered through a police inquiry at the bank, and the next time she called the old gentleman offered her not a chair, but her passbook with her deposits in full. The "poor young thing" swore at him like a trooper. It was quite necessary to call in the moral influence of the porter, displaying his "special deputy" badge, before Miss Innocent made less noise and took herself and her deposits out of the bank, giving the old gentleman a parting shot at the doorway.

The president and managing officials of a leading bank once debated long and seriously whether they should inform the authorities that just after a famous burglary three men and two women had deposited $8,000 each in new bank bills that possibly were a portion of those that had recently been stolen in transit between the two banks. It was a question whether the suspicion would justify this action, which of course would become public, perhaps get into the newspapers and some illiterate depositors might hear the story with a new twist given to it; not that burglars had put money into the bank, but had been in and had taken some out. The result would be a run. It was finally decided to do nothing, at least for the time. Soon afterward the thieves—for such they were—relieved the bank's perplexity. Two of the men and the two women came in singly, but in a hurry, drew the full amount that was in their names and made off. The fifth of the party did not return until years afterward, when a man with cropped hair, an unconscious lockstep halt in his walk and other evidences of having been temporarily retired from society called and drew the deposit that had slumbered while he was "doing time up the river."

Good Old Catch Questions.

If a goose weighs ten pounds and a half its own weight, what is the weight of the goose? When you are asked this question the first time, you will probably instantly answer 15 and will be wrong. The correct answer is 20 pounds. It is astonishing what a very simple query will sometimes catch a wise man napping.

The following will nearly always succeed:

How many days would it take to eat up a piece of cloth 50 yards long, one yard being cut off every day?

A snail climbing up a pole 20 feet high ascends five feet every day and slips down four feet every night. How long will the snail take to reach the top of the post?

A wise man having a window one yard high and one yard wide, requiring more light, enlarged his window to twice its former size, yet the window was still only one yard high and one yard wide. How was this done?

This is a catch question in geometry, as the preceding were catch questions in arithmetic. The window was diamond shaped at first, and was afterward made square.

Even the highest personages in Turkey are not exempt from suspicion. Their movements are watched and reported to the palace by an army of spies who swarm in every quarter.

Belgium holds the world's record in canals, having 535 miles, which carry 8,000,000 tons a year.

A MAYOR'S MIRACLE.

He Made the Blind See, the Deaf Hear and the Lame Walk.

From the many anecdotes of Bamfylde Moore Carew's rogueries in Arthur Montefiore Brice's essay on that "Amazing Vagabond" we quote one in which Carew and his gypsy crew who had rigged themselves up as cripples and gathered at Bridgewater fair to plunder the junketers came off second best.

When the mayor of Bridgewater heard that this motley group of cripples had arrived, he announced to some of his friends that he was possessed of a power they perhaps little suspected—that, in fact, he could make the blind see, the deaf hear and the lame walk. Bets were freely made that he could do nothing of the kind, and thereupon the mayor had the gypsies arrested and immediately brought before him and, after hearing their harrowing tales, ordered them to be confined for the night in the lockup.

About 10 o'clock at night, however, the municipal surgeon entered with a lantern and announced that he would examine them all in the morning in order to report to the mayor whether or not they really suffered from deformity of one kind or another, and he went on to say that those who were found to be impostors would be treated by the mayor with severity so extreme that, moved to pity, he would allow any such misguided wretch to escape there and then from the lockup on condition that he immediately left the town.

At this intelligence a great commotion arose, and in less time than it takes to write it the whole crowd surged out of the lockup, flinging away their crutches and wooden legs, patches and bandages, and made off down the town at topmost speed, the blind leading the way with unerring steps, the dumb crying aloud their fears, the deaf replying to them, and the lame sprinting along at a rattling pace. Now, just opposite the lockup, on the farther side of the street, stood the witty mayor and his friends, convulsed with laughter at the success of his scheme.

CATCHING CICADAS.

How Certain Malays Obtain a Curious Delicacy.

Certain natives of the Malay peninsula catch cicadas and eat them and that as a considerable luxury. To eat a cicada seems distinctly curious, says the London Daily Mail, when we reflect that this insect is in reality a glorified member of that insect group which contains as its most prominent representative the diminutive and swarthy creature which shall be nameless here for evermore.

The way in which the Siamese proceeds was related to the Zoological society the other day by a naturalist who has spent some time in the Malay peninsula observing men as well as insects. At night, when these insects fly, the native sallies forth armed with a torch and but little raiment. The torch is deposited in a convenient place, and the swarm of natives proceed to clap their hands in a perfectly regular fashion so as to produce a considerable sound.

It is the combination of light and sound that allures the cicada from its haunts to its destruction. The insects come also in swarms and settle upon the bodies of the applauding natives, whence they are easily detached, preserved, cooked and eaten.

The Greek sage remarked that happy are the cicadas in that they have voiceless wives. It is apparently the lady cicadas who are attracted by what they fondly believe to be the love cry of the male and are thus lured to their fate by that most dangerous of passions.

Victoria and Dickens.

Literary celebrities, as a rule, were not those who attained to any high degree of personal favor at the hands of Queen Victoria, but she paid Charles Dickens a delicate compliment. Dickens, who, by the way, in his youthful days was devoured by a grand passion for the youthful queen, was invited when at the climax of his fame to dine at Windsor castle. He was after dinner presented by the queen with a copy of her book "Tour in the Highlands," and on the fly leaf was inscribed in her own hand this sentence: "From the humblest to the most distinguished author in England." The queen afterward showed many favors to Lord Tennyson, but even in making him a peer of the realm she did not bestow as great a compliment.

Trafalgar Hats.

The year 1805 was a memorable one, as on Oct. 21 was fought and gained the battle of Trafalgar, and then, as now, fashion complimented heroes by devising toilets named in their honor. So Nelson was commemorated by a hat—the "Trafalgar"—and every woman and child adopted the wondrous structure, which would outdo even the headgear of the present day, for these hats were of enormous width and breadth, something of the size of a round table, and so loaded with plumes that the wearers must have looked all hat.

Question of Ownership.

"Need of counsel? Come up and let me introduce you to my lawyer."

"Your lawyer? Do you own a lawyer?"

"I—er—well, no, certainly not. He owns me."

The Chief "Difference."

Tommy—Say, paw, what is the difference between an amateur poet and a professional?

Mr. Figg—The amateur poet, my boy, is the one that keeps the professional starving.

For Example.

"I shall order a modest luncheon," said Tenspot as he scanned the bill of fare.

"What is your idea of a modest luncheon?" asked Bunting.

"Well, for example, I shall have dressed tomatoes."

Facts in the Case.

Man quotes the "pinch of poverty,"
While, as we know, the touch
Of poverty is really
An ablebodied clutch.

These Boston Girls.

He—Carrie, do you know you are the first woman I ever loved?

She—So then that accounts for your greenness? But to think that I should run a kindergarten courtship school!

Then He Dodges.

Who says I cannot meet my bills?
Of libels that's the worst!
Why, sirs, I meet them every day,
Unless I see them first.

THE FRENCH SOLDIER

SOME OF THE BRUTALITIES TO WHICH HE IS SUBJECTED.

Hazings and Other Punishments Which Sometimes End in the Victim's Death That Are Winked at, if Not Ordered, by the Officers.

Soldiers in the French army are not subjected by law to corporal punishment any more than it has been a part of the regulations governing the Military academy at West Point that cadets should "brace" or "qualify" on molasses and prunes. Nevertheless the French soldier is put through a hazing process which is most severe and several times has caused death. The French soldier is known as Pictou or Dumanet, just as the English soldier is known as Tommy Atkins. Dumanet finds when he joins the colors that life is not all skittles for a soldier.

The thing which distinguishes the hazing in the French army from the hazing in American colleges and universities is that it is suggested and almost ordered by the commissioned officers. An officer will say to a corporal or a sergeant, "You have a man here who has done so and so," naming some trivial offense, more than likely to be some neglect of the deference due to the officer. "It would do him good if he were tossed in a blanket."

The officer turns on his heel and walks away, while the unfortunate soldier is placed in a blanket, with saber, spurs, jack boots, bayonets and such pleasant bedfellows, and the combination is tossed until the hazers are too tired to continue. This is great sport for the man's comrades, especially if they are half drunk, which they are likely to be. This diversion has rather gone out of favor just now, because several soldiers who have been tossed had the bad taste to die after the discipline.

In some of the French barracks a favorite method of punishment is to hang the offending soldier up by his heels and then to spank him with a sword bayonet. In Algiers, where the men are far removed in the outlying garrisons from the central authority and at the mercy of their tormentors, they are subjected to many forms of hazing at the suggestion of the officers.

At one time the "vilo" was much in favor among the hazers in the Algerian army of occupation. It consisted in putting a man in a deep hole made in the shape of a reversed funnel dug by the Arabs in the ground as a place for the storage of corn. The unfortunate man was left there sometimes for days, with hardly anything to eat or drink and exposed all the time to the heat of the sun, while at night the place was cold. Many died from hunger, thirst or cold, while many others became insane.

The military authorities when they became aware of these tortures issued an order prohibiting such a punishment, but it is still practiced in isolated parts of Algiers where no eye can see of which the officers are afraid.

Several years ago Prince Piguatelli d'Aragon, a young Spanish noble, ran away from his home and went to Algiers to join the foreign legion, the refuge for men "with a past." His friends announced to the French military authorities that the prince had gone to join the legion, but the authorities were able to get no word of his arrival. At last a soldier suggested that perhaps a stranger who wandered into camp and had considerable difficulty in speaking French might be the prince. The sergeant to whom the prince had spoken was drunk at the time and became annoyed at the Spaniard's broken French, so he ordered that the stranger be placed in the "vilo" without more ado. Here the miserable young man remained for two days without eating or drinking, and then a good natured sentry broke the rules and gave him food. As soon as he was rescued from the "vilo" the young man started for Spain, having most thoroughly reconsidered his determination to enter the celebrated foreign legion.

Another form of punishment which used to be popular in Algiers was the "carcan." A piece of wood, usually the trunk of a tree, was used. The man was laid on it, usually bound so that the middle of his back would be resting on the wood, with his head and feet hanging down to the ground. His feet were tied to an iron bar and his hands to another, and, left lying face upward, he was exposed for hours to the terrible heat of the sun. Some men have survived 12 hours of this torture.

A form of punishment still popular among the French colonial troops—that is, popular with those who inflict it and not with those who suffer it—is the "crapadine." It consists of throwing the man face downward and tying his wrists and ankles behind his back so that his wrists and ankles are brought together.

An Embarrassing Laugh.

During a funny turn on the stage at the Walnut Street theater, Cincinnati, one night a man in the balcony leaned over the railing convulsed with laughter. During an extraordinary burst of hilarity his false teeth flew from his mouth and fell in the lap of a lady who was sitting in the parquet. Those near looked up and saw the toothless man waving frantically to the lady to pick up his teeth. This caused a general laugh at his expense. The teeth were returned by an usher.—Exchange.

Queer Nests of Fishes.

During a summer vacation the rare opportunity was given me of studying the nest building habits of a small fish that frequents the shallow places in Lake Sunapee, N. H.

My fish had selected a quiet cove within a few feet of the shore and quite near a row of cottages. Presumably they were less in fear of man than of the finny tribe. Their nests were circular in form and about the size of a bushel basket. They were hollowed out in the center like a saucer and were kept in perfect shape and beautifully clean by a swift, fanlike motion of the tail fin of the fish, held in a perpendicular position. The bottom of the lake being of a dark color and these nests made of white sand, you could easily see what a neat housekeeper this little fish was. Each nest had its owner, who fought for her "hearth and home" with great valor, chasing off every intruder and seldom being vanquished in the fray.

This pugnacious creature was essentially a home body, seldom leaving a nest except to dart off a few in quest of food or in hot pursuit of an invader. This little fish is a bold robber as well as a valiant fighter. I noticed one of the largest specimens drive a smaller one from her nest again and again and then take possession of it, spending her time between her own nest and the one she had robbed. I counted three dozen of these nests, not more than a foot apart. Some of these fish were beautifully colored.

I went down to the lake very early one morning to take a look at my pets. The water was very calm and clear. Nearly all of the fish were lying perfectly still in the center of their nest, apparently fast asleep.—Interstate Journal.

MR. STEERS REMEMBERED.

Presented With a Hymn Book and Bible Last Week.

Mr Jas Steers left last night for the Northwest, where he intends residing in future. During Mr Steers' residence he has been a valuable member of Charlotte street Methodist church choir, and that body did not allow him to leave without expressing their appreciation of his services. At the regular weekly practice of the Charlotte street choir last night, Mr Steers was presented with a beautiful hymn book and a Bible. The presentation was made by Mr A L Davis, who spoke in feeling terms of the loss the choir was sustaining through Mr Steers' removal from town.

Mr Steers made an appropriate reply.

THE COSBY CUP.

It is on Exhibition in Ormond & Walsh's Window.

The Cosby Cup, which comes into possession of the Peterborough Hockey Club by reason of the Colts having won the junior championship of the Ontario Hockey Association for the season 1901, was received here yesterday afternoon, and is now on exhibition in the window of Messrs. Ormond & Walsh, corner of George and Simcoe streets.

The Cosby Cup was the first trophy presented to the Association, the late Lieut. Col. Cosby, for two years president of the Association being the donor. It is now competed for in the junior series, and last year was held by the Stratford junior team. Upper Canada won the cup in '98, and St. George's in 1899. It is mounted on an ebony base and presents quite an attractive appearance.

ACCIDENT TO DR. TORRANCE.

He Broke His Leg Last Night When Returning From Bethel, Otonabee.

The many friends of Dr. E. F. Torrance, pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, will regret to learn that, while returning from Bethel, Otonabee, last night, he had the misfortune to break his left leg just a short distance above the ankle.

Dr. Torrance has been assisting Mr. Crombie in holding revival meetings at Bethel, in Otonabee, during the past week. Last night he drove down as usual and was accompanied by Mr. Wm. Fowler. They were returning home and when about a mile on the way to town the horse plunged in the snow which was undermined by water. The Doctor, thinking that an upset was eminent, jumped to save himself and in so doing he broke his leg as above stated. The roads coming home were quite rough and Dr. Torrance suffered great pain. He rested nicely last night, but it will, of course, be some time before he is able to resume his pastoral duties.

OBITUARY.

Demise in Cavan of Mrs. John Jackson, on Sunday Last.

The death occurred on Sunday, March 17th, at midnight of Mrs. John Jackson, a highly esteemed resident of the township of Cavan. Till about a month ago Mrs. Jack. was very well, and though being 84 years of age, she was as energetic and strong as any one of such age could be. Almost to the last she was in full possession of her mental powers and took the greatest interest in her surroundings. Mrs. Jackson was the relict of John Jackson, who preceded her in death about three years ago. Not many mothers were as favored as she was in having at her bedside her nine daughters and two sons. The death of her husband was the first breakage of the family union. The late Mrs. Jackson was a consistent member of the Church of England, dearly beloved by all because of her godly life and charitable works. Her funeral was largely attended by the friends and neighbors of the deceased. Rev E. A. Langfeldt, of Omemee, officiated at the service at the house and at the grave. The chief mourners are:—Mrs. William Fowler, N. Smith; Mrs. Watson Handley, Mt. Pleasant; Mrs. Walter Scott, Peterborough; Mrs. Wm. Scott, N. Monaghan; Mrs. Alex'r Findlay, Emily; Mrs. John Huston, Cavan; Miss Marie Jackson, Cavan, (homestead); Mrs. David Findlay, Emily; Messrs. Wm. and H'y Jackson, Cavan.

PERSONAL.

Rev. Wm J Keilty officiated in St. Martin's Church, Enniscmore, on St. Patrick's day this year. On a similar occasion the Rev. gentleman officiated in the same church 28 years ago.

The many friends in town of Miss B. Halpin will be pleased to learn that she was very successful in passing her examinations in connection with entering St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, as a nurse.

Rev. Wm. J. Keilty was over this week to Grafton visiting his old friend, Rev. M. Larkin, who has been quite ill for some months. He says that the condition of the Rev. Gentleman is considerably improved since he saw him some six weeks ago.

POULTRYMEN'S ANNUAL MEETING

MR. R. H. LEARY RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT.

The Board of Directors—Will Hold Another Show—The Secretary's Able Report.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Poultry and Pet Stock Association was held in the town council chamber, last night. The following members were in attendance: Mr. R. H. Leary, President, in the chair; Wm. Collins, Secretary, Messrs. E. H. White, F. G. Lund, H. T. Lush, T. H. Goldey, Geo. Pratley, F. Head, M. McNabb, Louis Spiers.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read, and on motion, adopted.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

Mr Collins in his most excellent report reviewed the work of the Association during the past year, explaining the reasons why the show was held at the time it was, etc, which resulted in the entries being slightly less than they were a year ago. The quality of the exhibits were of the very best and would be a credit to any show. Whilst the shows have not of recent years been a success financially, still they are doing much good in the community.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS:

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:—

President—R. H. Leary.
1st Vice-President—E. H. White.
2nd Vice-President—F. G. Lund.
Secretary-Treasurer—Wm Collins.
Board of Directors—Jas. E. Cullen, T. H. Goldey, A. Parker, Jos Baptie, H. Nesbitt, Harold Snowden, Wm. Head, H. T. Lush, and W. J. Doughty.
Auditors—John Jayes and Harry Rush, jr.

Upon motion of J. E. Cullen, seconded by T. H. Goldey, a vote of thanks was tendered the town and county councils for their liberality towards the Association and to the Light and Power Company for furnishing light during the time the exhibition was on.

The Treasurer's statement showed a balance on hand of $11.58 and a balance in the bank of $18.30 There is, however, prize money to the extent of $33.50 still owing.

At a meeting of the newly elected Board of Directors held immediately after the annual meeting, it was decided to make a greater effort than ever to push along the affairs of the Association and to hold another exhibition next winter.

AN OTONABEE WEDDING.

Nuptials of Miss Jennie Hetherley and Mr J. Alfred Wilson.

On Wednesday evening, 20th inst, at the home of her father, Mr. John Hetherley, of Otonabee, Miss Jennie Hetherley was married to Mr. J. Alfred Wilson, of Emmerson, Manitoba. The Rev. C. L. Thompson officiated.

The bride was given away by her eldest brother, Mr. Wm. Hetherly. Miss Nellie Hall played in excellent taste the wedding march. The bride was assisted by Miss A Eagleson, of Cobourg, and the groom was supported by Mr. Henry Hetherly.

The bride was dressed in white duchess silk, trimmed with chiffon, with a wreath of bridal blossoms, and carried a bouquet of crimson roses.

After the nuptials about thirty friends of the young couple sat down to supper, after which a pleasant evening was spent until 1 o'clock, when the bridal party were conveyed by a cab to Peterborough en route to Cobourg and other points.

The presents were choice and numerous, the groom's gift to the bride being a handsome Persian lamb coat. Mr and Mrs Wilson leave for Emmerson, Manitoba in about two weeks, where he owns a fine property, partly in the corporation of Emmerson town.

A GAY WEDDING.

Mr. D. P. Weir, of Emily, Marries Miss Margaret McN. Camelon of Hamilton Township.

The "Willows," the beautiful home of Miss McNaughton, on the Lake Shore road, Hamilton Township, was the scene of a very interesting event yesterday afternoon, when her niece, Miss Margaret McNaughton Camelon, daughter of the late Rev. Mr. Camelon, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. David Frederick Weir, of Emily. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. St. Clair, of Port Hope, assisted by Rev. Alex. McNaughton, uncle of the bride, in the presence of a large number of relatives of the contracting parties. The bride was charmingly attired in a costume of white silk organdie and carried a bouquet of white roses. She was given away by her brother, Dr. T. B Camelon, of Detroit, Michigan, and was attended by her sister, Miss Jean Camelon, who was attired in white organdie over blue and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The groom was supported by Mr. Thomas Stevenson, of Omemee. Two cute little maids of honour Miss Lillian Orr, of Peterborough, neice of the groom, and Miss Lillian Dixon, of Port Hope, performed their duties most admirably. The nuptial knot was tied 'neath a magnificent arch of flowers at the end of a passage way, defined by gay ribbons and held in place by the maids of honour, whilst the guests witnessed the beautiful ceremony from either side.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the usual congratulations were forthcoming.

The presents to the bride were many and were such of which one might well feel proud. The bride was handsomely remembered by her relatives and friends.

The groom is one of the most progressive farmers of this district, and his friends will join in wishing him and his wife the best wishes for a long and happy wedded life.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

HOCKEY.

The Toronto News says—Manager W. D. McPherson announces the retirement of the Peterborough Colts. The champions proved just as good sports as hockey players, for they met all challenges right up to the close of the season, so that the Old Orchards and the Stauntons have absolutely no justification in endeavouring to taunt the Peterborough team by innuendoes, at once malicious and absurd. It will be a long time until such another wonderful aggregation of junior hockeyists is put under sweater. The Stratford Indian Midgets outclassed the Woodstock Bohemians, Guelph Wellingtons and Toronto Simcoes, but the Peterborough Colts are as much ahead of them all as was Garry Herrman in advance of last year's Western two-year-olds. Burley, Kelley and Henderson are fast, clever forwards, but no question but Harold Armstrong, particularly on Peterborough ice, would simply smother the trio, and the whole Staunton team. Stollery could never handle King, either. The Old Orchards would meet much the same fate. The Peterborough Colts are the Ontario Hockey Association junior champions by all right and title, and their prowess cannot be disparaged by challenges at the eleventh hour from Toronto Lacrosse-Hockey League clubs."

Manager Bill Higgins of the EKO Camp team reports the game last night as follows: The hockey team of the 20th Century Club was defeated last night by the EKO Camp aggregation, by a score of 6 to 4. The game was perhaps the fiercest that has been witnessed in the City Scratch Series this winter, and which was due to the inability of the 20th Century representatives to play the game. They bolstered up from every quarter of the town and even then could not play hockey. They swiped and tumbled, and rolled, and did everything imaginable to hinder the progress of the game. They did, in fact, give a very good exhibition of how the game should not be played. The opinion of the spectators is that the members of the 20th Century team could play better marbles than they can hockey. The teams were as follows: EKO Camp—Goal, Bletcher; point, Glover; cover point, Watt; forwards, Gemmell, Ackerman, Dr. Scott. 20th Century—Goal, ———; point, Garrow; c. point, Hutchinson; forwards, Parnell, Rickey, J. Comstock.

The Lakefield hockey team will come to town on Tuesday night to play the return game with the Pig Iron Tigers. The match will take place at 8 30 o'clock, and should receive liberal patronage. The Pig Iron Tigers deserve much credit for the energy they have displayed in bringing an out of town team here.

The banquet which will be tendered to the Peterborough Colts this evening by the management of the Peterborough club, for the honour they have brought to the town in winning the junior championship of the O.H.A., promises to be one of the most successful affairs of the kind that has been held in Peterborough in some time. The banquet will take place in the Oriental hotel and whilst there have been a large number of tickets already sold, the committee still have a few left which may be obtained upon application.

ABOUT TAXATION.

The Mail and Empire says this:

Last year the Ontario Government derived $229 774 from the taxation of companies engaged in business in Ontario. This form of taxation followed the succession taxes, and these succeeded the steams of the larger proportion of the revenue collected from liquor licenses. It is sometimes said that we have no direct taxes in this province. In a sense this is true, but in another it is not. The revenue from liquor licenses is not direct from the people. Yet it is direct, because seeing that the Ontario Government takes so much of it, the municipalities have to levy other taxes, which are certainly direct, to take the place which the license money would occupy in their treasuries were it permitted to go there.

The organ misrepresents the situation entirely. The Government "seized" the licensing system for the sake of placing it under responsible administration and thereby lessening the evils which attended municipal management of licenses. When the licensing power was in the hands of the municipalities, those interested in procuring licenses exercised so much influence in municipal politics that they were able to gain control of municipal councils and dictate as to the licenses that were to be issued, so that practically these persons issued licenses to themselves and naturally, the character of the licenses was often of low grade, the number was practically unlimited and the prevalence of intemperance, with its attendant evils, was in proportion to the facilities for obtaining drink. This condition fully warranted the Government in assuming control of the licensing system; the result has been that, whereas, two years before the Government took control of the licensing system, the number of licenses issued was 6,185, the number issued in 1900 was only 2,950. In the first case the licenses issued gave one license to every 280 of the population, while at present the number of licenses is one to every 850 of the population; the character of hotels has greatly improved, the evil of drunkenness is greatly lessened, and, in general, the results have amply justified the Government in taking the licensing system into its own hands. The question of revenue was quite a subordinate consideration. Take the Conservative organ's claim: "The Ontario Government takes so much of it"—(the revenue from licenses) "the municipalities have to levy other taxes." This is not putting the matter fairly. Let us see. Since 1876, when the Crooks Act transferred the licensing power to the Ontario Government, the total revenue from licenses has amounted to $5,805,069.91. This was divided between the province and the municipalities. The province received of this sum less than three million dollars. But, to strike a fair balance, it must be stated that in the past the Government has, from the provincial revenues, returned to the municipalities the immense amount of $89,792,045.45 for services which directly relieved the municipalities from direct taxation. Thus the province has given to the municipalities over 85 millions more than the province received from liquor licenses. These facts deprive of its weight the contention of the Conservative mouthpiece that the Government has "robbed" the municipalities. The Government did not take over the licenses for the sake of the revenue, for it might have easily realized more revenue by withholding the aid it has extended the municipalities, but it took over the licenses in order that the liquor traffic might be effectively regulated in the interests of public morality and sobriety, which have admirably been subserved to the lessening of intemperate drinking, the lessening of crime and the marked diminution of the number of drinking places existing in Ontario as compared with the ante-Crooks-Act days.

THE PETERBOROUGH-ASHBURNHAM BILL.

Has Passed the Committee Stage—To be Yet Considered by the House.

The bill to confirm the by-laws of the Town of Peterborough and the Village of Ashburnham, fixing the assessment of the American Cereal Company's property for a period of 40 years, at $58,700 and $45 respectively, came before the Private Bills Committee, on Wednesday morning, and excited a great deal of interest and discussion.

Messrs. Andrew Patullo of Woodstock, Dr. McKay of Ingersoll, and Mr. Lumsden of Ottawa, looked upon the passage of the bill as practically a contravention of the law passed last session, against the granting of bonuses, and one that would prejudicially affect smaller millers and smaller industries.

Hon. Mr. Stratton said he was not advocating the passage of the bill from a Peterborough or Ashburnham standpoint, but if American capital was to be depended upon to develop Ontario, it should be encouraged. The millers of Peterborough and vicinity were not opposed to the passage of the bill. The Cereal Company, if established, would consume very large quantities of grain, and the interests of the farmers had to be considered as well as those of the millers. He thought the only possible objection that could be reasonably urged, was the length of date of the exemption. The property covered by the exemption, had cost the Company $100,000, about the figure at what was proposed to fix the assessment, and $500,000 additional, would be spent in buildings, by the Company. There should be no objection to large manufacturing concerns locating in Ontario, under such reasonable conditions as are called for by this bill.

Hon. Mr. Gibson said he would not be brought to support the bill for consideration of Peterborough and Ashburnham alone, but on account of the magnitude of the enterprise, which concerned the prosperity of the whole community, especially of farmers and producers of the grains that would be consumed.

Hon. Mr. Harcourt submitted that if the bill was of such importance and advantage to Peterborough and Ashburnham, it should have been submitted to the people for approval.

The bill was reported and will be discussed in the House in due course.

OUR ADVERTISERS.

During the present disturbed relations with our advertisers, on account of the disastrous fire in the Examiner buildings, we are compelled to ask the indulgence of our patrons for a few days until we can pull ourselves together again. Hard and earnest work is being done to instal an entirely new printing plant in our present temporary premises at No. 411 George Street, a few doors south of the burned building, and by the end of the week, we hope to resume our contracts with our advertisers. In the meantime, in order to keep our advertisers as much in touch with our readers as possible, we will be able to insert short local notices of their business announcements

THE TERMS OF PEACE.

Full Details of the Negotiations With General Botha.

BRITAIN WAS EASY TO BOERS.

Correspondence Shows That No Nation Ever Acted So Generously Towards a Vanquished Foe, and That No Enemy Behaved So Brazenly—Asked Independence and Pardon for Rebels.

London, March 23.—The Parliamentary papers, giving details of the negotiations between the Boer Commander-in-Chief, Gen. Botha, and Lord Kitchener, commanding the British forces in South Africa, issued yesterday morning, begin with a telegram from Sir Alfred Milner to Colonial Secretary Chamberlain. The despatch is dated Pretoria, February 22, and states that Mrs. Botha had returned from a meeting with her husband, bringing a letter in reply to Sir Alfred Milner's verbal message offering to meet Gen. Botha, as a means of ending the war, on the express understanding that he would not discuss the question of independence of the Transvaal and the Orange River Colony.

Mrs. Botha assured Sir Alfred Milner that the letter had been written with that point clearly understood. Gen. Botha referred the matter to his generals, and it was stated that the meeting would probably take place at Middleburg.

Mr. Chamberlain replied that he was glad to hear of Gen. Botha's desire to treat, and hoped it was genuine. "He will find us," said the Colonial Secretary, "anxious to meet him on all points affecting his individual position."

On February 27 Sir Alfred Milner cabled Lord Kitchener informing him that Gen. Botha had written that he would be in Pretoria at ten o'clock a. m., February 28.

A despatch from Lord Kitchener to the War Office, dated Pretoria, Feb. 28, reports a long interview with General Botha, who showed very good feeling and seemed anxious for peace. He asked for information, which he said he would submit to his Government, the generals and the people. If they agreed, he would visit the Orange River Colony and get those there to agree. Should all then hand in their arms, it would finish the war.

He said they could go on for some time, and he was not sure he would be able to bring about peace without independence.

"I declined to discuss such a point," said Lord Kitchener, "and said a modified form of independence would be most dangerous and would lead to war in the fature.

The Conditions.

"Replying to General Botha's inquiries I informed him that when hostilities ceased the military would be replaced by a Crown colony administration, consisting of a nominated executive and an elected assembly to advise him, followed after a period by a representative Government. The Boers would be licensed to have rifles to protect themselves against the natives; the Dutch and the English language were to have equal rights; Kaffirs would not have the franchise until after representative government had been granted. The Orange Free State law for the Kaffirs would be considered good; church property, public trusts and orphan funds would not be touched; no war tax would be imposed on farmers; assistance would be given to repair the burned farms, and to enable the farmers to start afresh, and colonists who had joined the republics should be disfranchised.

"Gen. Botha generally seemed satisfied with these conditions."

Not Covered by Kitchener.

Among the questions to which Lord Kitchener apparently did not reply were, when the war prisoners would return, and regarding the taking over of debts of the republics, including those legally contracted since the beginning of the war.

Gen. Botha was reported to be making a strong point of this. He referred to notes which had been issued amounting to less than a million pounds.

Lord Kitchener arranged to communicate Botha's views to his Government. All that he said was qualified by being subject to confirmation from the home Government.

Replies to Botha's Questions.

On March 3rd Sir Alfred Milner cabled Lord Kitchener, suggesting the following replies to Gen. Botha:

"I beg to inform you that, on the cessation of hostilities and the complete surrender of arms, ammunition, cannon and munitions in the hands of the burghers in the field, at Government depots or elsewhere, His Majesty's Government is prepared at once to grant amnesty in the Transvaal and Orange River Colony for all bona fide acts of war during the hostilities, as well as to move the Governments of Cape Colony and Natal to similar action, qualified by the disfranchisement of any British subject implicated in the war. The military prisoners in St. Helena, Ceylon, and elsewhere, on complete surrender, shall be brought back to their country. Military law shall at ons be replaced by a civil administration, but it is the desire of His Majesty's Government, as soon as circumstances will permit, to establish a representative Government. On the cessation of hostilities, a High Court, independent of the Executive, shall be established to administer the laws. Land, church property, trusts, and orphan funds shall be respected.

Dual Language Prohibited.

"The English and the Dutch language shall be taught in the Public Schools and allowed in the law courts. The legal debts of the State to the amount of £1,000,000 shall be paid even if contracted during hostilities, to the extent a creditor proves he has given value. The Government does not intend to extend the franchise to Kaffirs in the Transvaal and Orange River Colony before a representative Government is granted."

The conditions regarding assistance to farmers, firearms, etc., are the same as those in Lord Kitchener's reply to Gen. Botha. Sir Alfred Milner adds that he agrees to the above except as to the desire for modification regarding British subjects in Cape Colony and Natal in the Boer army, who, if they return to those colonies, would be liable to be dealt with under the laws of those colonies passed to meet circumstances arising in war.

No Amnesty For Rebels.

He adds: "While I am willing to concede much in order to strengthen Gen. Botha in inducing the people to submit, amnesty for the rebels is not, in my opinion, a point which His Majesty's Government can afford to concede. I think it would have a deplorable effect upon Cape Colony and Natal to obtain peace by such a concession."

Mr. Chamberlain, in a reply dated March 6, directs Lord Kitchener to modify the terms on a number of points.

Eventually Lord Kitchener reported to the War Office under date of Pretoria, March 20, that he had written Gen. Botha the terms the Government was prepared to adopt. These are the same as already given, except in the following particulars:

"The Government cannot undertake any liabilities regarding the debts of the late republics, but it is prepared as an act of grace to set aside a million pounds to repay the inhabitants for goods requisitioned by the Republican Governments. If the claims after adjustment exceed £1,000,000, they are liable to reduction pro rata.

"The Kaffir franchise, when given, shall be so limited as to secure a just predominance of the white race. The legal position of the colored inhabitants will be similar to that now held by them in Cape Colony."

The letter concludes: "I must inform Your Honor that if the terms now offered are not accepted after a reasonable delay for consideration, they must be regarded as cancelled."

On March 16 Lord Kitchener received Gen. Botha's acknowledgment of the receipt of the letter. "I had advised my Government," wrote Gen. Botha, "of your excellency's letter, but after the mutual exchange of views in our interview at Middleburg, Feb. 28, it will certainly not surprise your excellency to know that I do not feel disposed to recommend the terms of said letter; but they shall have the earnest consideration of my Government. I may add that my Government and my chief officers here entirely agree with my views."

DAILY SKIRMISHES.

Many Boers Taken—Combined Movement East of Bloemfontein—Large Supplies Captured by the British.

Cape Town, March 22.—The Boer raiders in the eastern part of Cape Colony are, with the exception of almost daily skirmishes, keeping out of the reach of the British. Colonel Scovill engaged Commandant Fouche and Commandant Malan near Blaawkrantz, March 20. Three British were killed and four wounded, and four Boers were killed. The number of Boers wounded has not been ascertained.

Commandant Kritzinger is marching steadily northward.

It is officially reported that Gen. Dewet's commandoes have been broken up for the present. This is probably to give the men a rest.

Still Gathering Them In.

Bloemfontein, March 22.—The result of the combined movements against Gen. Fourie near Thabanchu was the capture of 200 Boers, 140,000 sheep, 5,000 horses and a host of cattle. The Boers broke southward to the right and left.

More Boer Prisoners.

Bloemfontein, Orange River Colony, March 22.—Military operations in the southeastern part of the Orange River Colony are progressing. Major Julian Byng has brought in 300 refugees, 16,000 cattle, and 40,000 sheep from the Wepener and Smithfield districts. Col. Bethune has sent in 17 prisoners from Thabanchu. Three hundred prisoners are now encamped here.

The South African Recruits.

Ottawa, March 23.—It has finally been decided that the recruits for the South African Constabulary shall leave here on Monday afternoon, and sail from Halifax on Wednesday. The delay occurred in getting the Montfort into shape as a transport.

Marseilles Dockmen's Strike.

Marseilles, March 23.—The strike of dockmen here, which has influenced all sections of working people, shows no sign of abatement. The storekeepers are anxious and a majority of the stores are closed. The street cars have ceased running. Reinforcements of dragoons and infantry have arrived here. It is estimated that there are now 18,000 men out on strike or thrown out of work on account of the strike. About 1,200 free laborers are working on the docks, strongly protected by troops.

Salt as a Remedial Agent.

Salt is such a common article in the household that many of us do not sufficiently appreciate its high medicinal value. Many and various are the remedial uses to which it may be put.

As a dentifrice common salt may be relied on. By its judicious use the teeth are kept white, the gums hard and the breath sweet. When the gums are spongy, the mouth should be washed out twice a day with salt and water.

Warm salt water held in the mouth will sometimes banish toothache and at

GETTING ON OUR FEET.

The EXAMINER is issued to-day in a form somewhat more familiar to our readers than the abbreviated sheet, which has had to do duty since the date of the destruction of our premises by fire on the 9th inst. Although this issue will be a great improvement, both in size and general make-up, yet we still labour under the difficulty of not yet being able to replace our typesetting machines, and consequently the news matter has all to be set up by hand, involving the expenditure of much time on account of the difficulty experienced in securing the necessary labour. It will, we expect, however, be only a matter of a very few weeks before we are again occupying our former premises, when, through the medium of the most modern apparatus and equipment to be obtained, the EXAMINER will be placed in the hands of its patrons in an even more attractive form than before its premises were devastated by the fiery element.

We owe a debt of gratitude to the Review Publishing Company for coming to our aid so generously, when we were labouring under difficulties, which appeared almost insurmountable, and allowing us the use of their plant in our extremity. To our advertising patrons and subscribers our thanks are also due for bearing with us so patiently, and for the kind expressions of sympathy which were so spontaneously given on the days succeeding the morning of the fire.

The necessary equipment for turning out an up-to-date newspaper, in all its different branches, has been purchased and is ready for installation as soon as our former premises are refitted. In the meantime the EXAMINER will be issued from its present premises where a temporary plant has been placed in position, enabling us to again reassume advertising contracts, and donate the usual space to news-matter.

THE PRESS ASSOCIATION.

The Papers Read the Officers Elected and Resolutions Adopted.

Toronto, March 23.—The Canadian Press Association finished its business yesterday afternoon, after passing resolution on postage to the United States, Imperial postage, postage on newspapers, rural free delivery, nationalization of telegraphs, and the duty on paper, and electing new officers. The association divided into two sections to hear papers on important topics. In the daily section the following papers were read: "Employer and Employe," Mr. Atwell Fleming; "Market Reports," Mr. H. S. Scott; "What the Newspaper May Do for the West," prepared by Miss E. Cora Hind, Winnipeg. In the weekly section these papers were read: "Plate Matter," Mr. H. J. Pettypiece, M. P. P.; "Ad Display," J. S. Robertson; "Typesetting Machines," L. S. Chanell; "Monthly Collections," A. E. Bradwin.

The officers elected for the year are: President, Capt. Macdonald, Alexandria; first vice-president, D. McGillicuddy, Goderich; second vice-president, H. J. Pettypiece, M.P.P.; secretary, John A. Cooper; assistant secretary, A. W. Low (acclamation); Executive Committee, A. McNee, J. T. Clark, A. H. U. Colquhoun, J. W. Edy and Smeaton White (Montreal Gazette); auditors, L. G. Jackson and G. E. Gibbard.

Scrofula

Is a disease as old as antiquity, and as young as the newest born infant.

It has infested the blood of humanity from ancient times down to the present minute.

It is hereditary or may be acquired.

It appears in swollen glands, scrofulous sores, hip disease, boils, pimples, eruptions, and, as believed by high authorities, even in the forms of catarrh and rheumatism.

It can be cured by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla faithfully and persistently.

We know this, because Hood's Sarsaparilla has done it.

It will cure you if you give it a trial.

You should begin to take it today.

Hip Disease—"I suffered from hip disease; had 5 running sores; used crutches and each winter I was confined to my bed for weeks at a time. Hood's Sarsaparilla has accomplished a perfect cure—saved my life. I have a good appetite and feel strong and well." ANNIE ROBERT, 49 Fourth St., Fall River, Mass.

In Her Eyes—"My little girl had scrofula and sores appeared in her eyes. A few bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla entirely cured her and she has never had scrofula since." MRS. HOWARD POPE, Alpha, Oregon.

N. B. If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to buy any other.

ROBLIN DEFENDS HIS DEAL.

Favors Government Ownership, But Says Idea Is Not Yet Feasible.

Winnipeg, March 20.—Premier Roblin, in a speech at Virden Monday night, agreed with Mr. Scallion, a critic of the railway deal, in his remarks about Government ownership, and that he thoughtit desirable to have a similar system to that of Great Britain in regard to public servants, viz., by competitive examination, but he was powerless to remedy this evil, and but for that Government ownership would be feasible.

The Premier went into the figures he presented to the Legislature with regard to the anticipated earnings of the new system. In defending the recent deal, he said: "The province will incur no liability for any deficit until the wheat rate is reduced to less than 10 cents, and the general tariff to less than 15 per cent. below the existing tariff."

In conclusion he said he would feel relieved of any responsibility if the Dominion House threw out the bill.

Mr. Campbell Will Debate.

Isaac Campbell says he will accept Premier Roblin's challenge to debate the railway question, providing there are fair rules to govern the debate.

TO CURE THE GRIP IN TWO DAYS

Laxative Bromo Quinine removes the cause.

The Lieutenant's Brother.

It may not be generally known that it is considered a serious offense for a German soldier, no matter what may be his rank, to appear in public except in uniform, even though he be on furlough. The army regulations strictly enjoin that he must always wear his uniform.

A certain Lieutenant Schmidt, who was engaged in some lively adventure or other, dressed up as a civilian and was having altogether an enjoyable time until, on turning a corner, he unexpectedly met his colonel.

The lieutenant did not, however, lose his presence of mind. He pretended that he had never seen his colonel before and in a changed voice asked:

"Can you tell me, sir, where Lieutenant Schmidt lives? I am his brother from the country and am paying him a little visit, but I happen just now to have lost my way."

The colonel quietly gave the desired information, and Lieutenant Schmidt, congratulating himself on his lucky escape, hurried home and put on his uniform with all possible speed.

He thought, of course, that he had taken in his superior officer, but such an idea was rudely dispelled when on the next day he met his colonel, and the latter said:

"Lieutenant Schmidt, if your brother from the country pays you another visit I'll have him placed in close confinement for 30 days."

GRAIN INSPECTION.

Several Important Changes Recommended by the Government Grain Commission—A Bill to Be Introduced.

Ottawa, March 23.—Several important changes in the inspection of Canadian grain shipped to European ports have been suggested by the commissioners appointed to investigate charges made by British buyers of short cargoes and quality inferior to standard samples. The trouble was found to be chiefly attributable to an insufficient staff of assistants to the inspector, and the commissioners recommended an increase of the staff, also more frequent examination of the grain as it is being loaded on shipboard. Another suggestion is the payment of inspectors by salaries, instead of fees. It is further proposed that in the event of an appeal from the inspector's finding said appeal shall be to a board, or to the chief inspector for the Dominion.

In the matter of standards, the commissioners favor permanent standards, as used in the United States.

It is understood the Government has adopted the suggestions of the commissioners and have, prepared legislation embodying them. By the new regulations there will be inspectors of all grain for export, both at the western elevator and while being loaded, the inspection to be made according to permanent standards. The grain inspection will thenceforth be carried out under the direction of the Department of Trade and Commerce, instead of the Inland Revenue Department as at present.

MANHOOD SUFFRAGE.

Mr. Barr's Bill to Enlarge It Was Lost on Division.

THE EMPLOYMENT OF ALIENS.

Mr. Wardell's Bill in the Opinion of Hon. J. M. Gibson a Senseless Provision Designed to Secure a Little Cheap Political Capital — Mr. Whitney's Very Faint Defence.

Toronto, March 23.—In the Legislative Assembly yesterday, Mr. Carscallen's motion respecting the Government's nickel and pulpwood exportation policies was allowed to stand until Wednesday next, as a division of the House on the subject was anticipated.

Mr. Thompson moved for a return for correspondence respecting the exportation of natural gas. He contended that it was a matter falling within Provincial jurisdiction. The Attorney-General said it was a matter of Dominion concern, but the Province had power to regulate or prohibit it in the case of land owned by the Government intervening.

Mr. Barr, in moving the second reading of his bill to amend the Act respecting the registration of Manhood Suffrage voters. The measure gives to towns, other than county towns, villages and townships, the same right to register manhood suffrage voters as is enjoyed by cities and county towns. Many of the places affected by the bill were larger and more important than some of the county towns. There was no reason why this discrimination should be made. Either the law should be abolished altogether or equally applied.

Hon. J. M. Gibson denied that there was any demand in the country for the wholesale extension of the Act. There was indeed a doubt in many quarters as to the propriety of continuing this legislation, as it was urged that many had been placed on the voters list under its operations who were not fairly entitled to the franchise—though personally he did not hold that opinion. The proposition embraced in the bill could not be seriously entertained, the machinery it provided in connection with rural municipalities being wholly unsuitable.

Mr. Whitney suggested that a measure might be framed under which voters who had not got their names on at the annual registration might be entered on the list by the judges.

The bill was lost on division.

Mr. Carscallen's bill for the protection of life and property in the use of stationary boilers and engines and the licensing of persons in charge of them came up and after being discussed for some time was sent to the same special committee to whom it was referred last session.

Mr. Wardell, in moving the second reading of a bill relating to the employment of aliens in Ontario, stated that the Government had never enforced legislation on the subject.

Hon. Mr. Harcourt warmly repelled the accusation stating that at Welland a large Buffalo firm of contractors had been compelled to deport a force of Italian workingmen and Canadians had taken their places.

Mr. Wardell claimed that the deportation was the enforcement of a Dominion and not an Ontario Act. He went on to argue that the existing legislation on the subject was insufficient. The bill proposed that no person should be imported to work here, who was either an American citizen, or had lived one month in the United States. He read a number of newspaper extracts and letters in favor of the bill. So long as the States maintained a barrier against Canadian labor we should meet them in the same way.

Hon. J. M. Gibson said the bill was almost identical with one which had received full consideration and been rejected on a previous occasion. If the question were to be dealt with on a broad scale the Dominion Government was the proper authority. So far as the matter related to civil contracts the Provincial House had already legislated. He had years ago introduced a measure to prevent the importation of labor in case of strikes and trade difficulties. The bill would restrict enterprise and prevent American citizens coming here to engage in various industries. It would seriously interfere with many important industries and was merely devised to secure a little cheap political capital for its promoter. To put such a senseless provision upon the statute book would prevent some of the large enterprises now in contemplation in which Americans were interested from being established here.

Mr. Whitney said that the bill was a transcript of the law of British Columbia and if there were matters of detail which were unsuited to this province, they could be amended in committee. The industries referred to by the Attorney-General would not, he claimed, be adversely affected by the bill.

Mr. Conmee objected that the bill went too far. He claimed that foreign labor did not displace Canadian labor in the construction of railways because few Canadians would do such work.

Premier Ross said that the bill was very sweeping and dealt with almost every occupation in the country. He did not think that we should exclude cheap labor unless it excluded other labor of a higher grade. The measure would keep out experts who were needed in mechanical industries. Ontario was largely dependent upon American capital for the development of our industries, and it was not advisable to show unfriendliness to the men who controlled this capital. It was desirable to wait and see the result of similar legislation at Ottawa. This House had already put on the statute book comprehensive legislation against alien labor in connection with railways.

The debate was adjourned.

Mr. Lumsden moved the second reading of a bill respecting Habitual Drunkards, which provides that they shall be declared incapable of managing their property. Hon. J. R. Stratton opposed the measure as too drastic and likely to result in endless legislation. Mr. Crawford supported the principle of the bill. Premier Ross thought it would be a difficult bill to put into operation. The bill was withdrawn.

Mr. Macdiarmid's bill to amend the voters' list was referred to the Legal Committee.

IT IS THE WAY YOU USE IT.

Its the Method Employed Which Makes Success or Failure.

One man with pen, ink and paper can produce a landscape, another man with same pen and ink may not be able to write his own name legibly. It is all in knowing how.

It is equally true in the use of medicines. The same remedies we have to-day have existed for thousands of years, but if their existence was known the knowledge of how to use them was lacking.

They became valuable to the human race only when experiment and science showed the way to use them to get results.

The grip is an old disease with a new name; it is really catarrhal in character and the usual symptoms are those of acute catarrh, but the old time catarrh salves and sprays do not cure it, neither does the application of antiseptics through an inhaler give anything more than relief for a short time.

The antiseptics are all right; they will kill the germs of catarrh and grip if they are applied rightly, but their local application to the nose and throat avail little because the germs are in the blood and through the whole system.

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets contain many of these same antiseptics, that are used in sprays and inhalers, but instead of applying them to the inflamed membranes of the nose and throat, they are taken into the stomach and thus reach the blood, the real seat of the disease and drive out the infectious germs through the natural channels of the bowels and kidneys.

In other words Stuart's Catarrh Tablets reach the CAUSE of the mischief instead of merely local symptoms.

The remarkable success of these tablets in curing grip, catarrh and throat and lung troubles is because they drive the catarrhal poison from the system and the nose and throat become clear of the excessive secretion of mucus, which causes the hawking, spitting and gagging, because the secretion is not supplied from healthy blood.

Two years ago, Stuarts Catarrh Tablets were unknown, but to-day have become so popular through positive merit that druggists everywhere in the United States, Canada and Great Britain now sell them.

WALDERSEE'S REPORT

Anglo-Russo Dispute Settled From a Military Standpoint.

JAPAN AND RUSSIA MAY FIGHT.

The Gloomy View Taken by the British Foreign Office of the Situation in the East—Russia's Secret Treaties Will Be Withstood at All Cost by the Japanese — The Situation.

Berlin, March 23.—The War Office has received the following from Count Von Waldersee:

"The Anglo-Russian dispute at Tien Tsin has been settled from a military standpoint in a manner satisfactory to both parties, at a conference between Gen. Wogack and Gen. Barrow. Both guards and posts have been withdrawn, and salutes have been exchanged.

"The British declare that no offence to the Russian flag was intended, and that the alleged removal of the Russian boundary marks was neither by the command nor with the knowledge of the military authorities.

"The work on the disputed land will not be continued until the Governments have reached an agreement as to its possession, until a special understanding has been attained."

JAPAN AND RUSSIA.

Fighting Between These Nations Is Not Improbable.

London, March 22.—The Foreign Office takes a pessimistic view of the immediate future in the Far East, in spite of the settlement of the Tien Tsin incident, and entertains grave fears that the relations between Japan and Russia may shortly reach the danger point.

Judging from information obtained in various official quarters in London, Japan has confided to at least some of the powers her determination to oppose at all costs any secret agreements made between Russia and China, by which the former could secure territorial or other advantages contiguous to Corea.

The British Government has received no official confirmation that the Japanese fleet is mobilizing, but it would not be surprised to learn that such were the fact. It appears that Great Britain would be quite willing to refer the whole Manchurian matter to arbitration on the lines of The Hague conference. The Tien Tsin siding affair is not considered important enough to be disposed of in this way, and it will immediately become a matter of diplomatic interchange between St. Petersburg and London.

RELATIONS HAD BEEN CRITICAL

Between Britain and Russia, But Matters Have Calmed Down.

London, March 23.—In the House yesterday the Indian Secretary, Lord George Hamilton, explained that the relations between Great Britain and Russia in China at one time had been critical. If a collision had occurred it would have been difficult to foresee the ultimate consequences. Therefore it was impossible to make a statement until the negotiations had reached a final, satisfactory settlement.

Russia Has Not Infringed.

London, March 23.—Replying to a question in the House of Commons yesterday, asking whether the Government proposed to request Germany to act with reference to Russia's action in Manchuria, the Foreign Under Secretary, Lord Cranborne, replied that the Russian Government had repeatedly declared its intention to respect the integrity of China, and the British Government was not aware that Russia had infringed it.

Russian End of It.

St. Petersburg, March 23.—A despatch from Pekin, giving the Russian account of the affair, says: "The British military authorities have acknowledged that the land was at the time under the protection of the Russian detachment, and that three Russian boundary posts had been removed without their knowledge. The difference will now be peacefully settled by judicial investigation."

French and English Generals Dined.

Tien Tsin, March 23.—General Bailloud (French) and General Lorne Campbell (British) are dining together here this evening. The offending French soldiers at Tien Tsin have been punished, and assurances have been given that the offensive conduct of the French troops will not occur again.

The Russians, besides withdrawing their guards from the railroad property, have removed the demarcation flags which fixed the boundaries of the concession, and before which the sentries were stationed.

Cashiered the General

London, March 23.—A special despatch from Shanghai says Gen. Tseng Chi, the Tartar general commanding in Manchuria, has been ordered to be cashiered and tried for having consented to the Russo-Chinese Manchurian treaty. This is regarded as showing that the Government is yielding to the demands of the Viceroys and Foreign Ministers who opposed the treaty.

A PLEA FOR THE WEST.

Mr. Frank Oliver of Alberta Speaks in the Budget Debate—First of Prosperity Waves—Mr. Haggart's Speech.

Ottawa, March 23.—The budget debate bids fair to eat a hole into next week. Only four speakers addressed the House yesterday, Messrs. Oliver, Haggart, Wade and Lennox. Mr. Oliver made a strong defence of western development. Mr. Haggart stated that the Conservatives would enact protection against England and against every other country.

In renewing the budget debate, Mr. Oliver declared himself a protectionist in theory and principle. He believed that Canada should regulate its tariff according to the requirments of the country. Until the Opposition brought forward something better than the present tariff, he would have to continue supporting the Government policy. He did not believe that the prosperity of the country depended upon protection of the manufacturers, who should be able to support themselves under a revenue tariff. Mr. Oliver said the prosperity of the country and the stupendous increase of trade, in his opinion, came from the country west of Lake Superior. The development of the western country had not ended, but only begun. He believed the country was only enjoying the first of the waves of prosperity. He urged the Government to induce people struggling for a living in the eastern part of Canada to take advantage of the opportunities offered them by western development.

Hon. John Haggart said the resolution before the House was an affirmation of the principles of the Conservative party, which they had always stood by, and which they intended to stand by, when they next had the opportunity of appealing to the country. The protection of native industries was a policy followed out in practically all enlightened countries to-day. The principles of protection could no longer be sneered at, as contrary to true political economy. The policy of Mr. De Witte, Finance Minister of Russia, was embodied in the principles of the Canadian Conservative party. The Government, in bringing large quantities of woolens into Canada under the preference, had begun the ruin of the woolen industries of Canada. The first duty of the Government is to the inhabitants of Canada.

Mr. Haggart quoted Mr. Chamberlain's much-discussed statements on closer trade relations, and said the clear meaning of that statesmann was that the colonies should keep their tariffs, giving Great Britain a preference. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, however, had taken the ground that free trade in Canada is a pre-requisite of any mutual trade arrangements with Great Britain. With the same idea in his mind, the Premier shut the mouth of every Minister in England by the statements which he made at the time of the Diamond Jubilee.

The Ministerialists asked why the Opposition, if they disapproved of the preference tariff, did not move to wipe it out. The principle enunciated in the resolution could be carried into effect as well with the preference as without it. It was possible to have a tariff giving sufficient protection to Canadian industries, and yet give a preference to Great Britain against the rest of the world.

After recess the debate was continued to empty benches.

Mr. Wade (Annapolis, N. S.,) supported the Government's policy.

Mr. Lennox (South Simcoe) quoted from the trade returns, and said that for all the boasted preference, our trade increase with England was not equal to our increase of trade with other countries.

Mr. Scott (Assiniboia) moved the adjournment of the debate, and the House rose at 11.15.

ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

Will Be Represented by a Fine Building and Exhibit at Buffalo.

The Argentine Republic will have a building and exhibit at the Pan-American Exposition in Buffalo next summer which will represent fittingly the progressive institutions and commercial and industrial prosperity of that South American republic. The sum of $30,000 has been appropriated by the Argentine government for this purpose.

Argentine merchants, and especially those of Buenos Ayres, appreciate the importance of representation at the Pan-American. Many agricultural and industrial organizations are notifying the minister of agriculture that they intend to send exhibits. It is probable the government will have its exhibit at the Paris exposition brought to Buffalo at the close of the French fair.

Buffalo's Mayor and the Exposition.

The Hon. Conrad Diehl, mayor of Buffalo, the home of the Pan-American Exposition, has great faith in the success of the enterprise and is more than pleased with the progress that is being made on the work of construction. He says: "I frequently drive out there and look over the buildings. It is phenomenal the rapidity with which the work is carried forward. The men who are directing the Exposition affairs are shrewd calculators, and they are going to make this enterprise the wonder of the world. Outsiders are becoming enthusiastic over it. Thousands of people who did not go to the World's fair at Chicago will come to the Pan-American. Let everybody prepare to receive them and give them a good time."

REV. MR. CROSSLEY AT LOS ANGELES.

Thousands of Acres in Orange Orchards.

AMERICAN SUNDAY DESCRIBED.

It is a Day of Recreation—May Canada Preserve the Sacredness of Her Sabbath.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

We have taken still another stage on our journey, and at this date find ourselves in Los Angeles, one of the finest cities of Southern California.

During the two hours of travel from San Bernardino, our last stopping place, to Los Angeles, several thriving little towns are passed, which are devoted mostly to fruit culture in their near surrondings. Several orange orchards, covering hundreds and even thousands of acres, are seen from the car windows, while intervening parts of the country are given to stock raising and grain.

Our stay of five weeks in San Bernardino was very pleasant, and we were sorry to say good-bye to the friends who had gathered around us during our brief stay.

One Canadian friend, a Mr. Stephens, conducting a very successful furniture store in the city, desiring to give us a real treat before we left, engaged a splendid livery and driver, and invited us to join him, his wife and son, in a drive to Redland and Smiley heights. This drive proved to be one of the most delightful of our experiences since leaving home.

In the twelve miles traversed to and from Redlands, we passed through orange, lemon, peach, olive and apricot orchards showing every variety and condition of blossom and fruit.

Many people of wealth, have chosen Redlands as a home for at least a part of the year, and it is a pleasure to note that some among them are sufficiently interested in the place to spend their money freely in public adornment and improvement.

Among these are Messrs. A. H. and A. K. Smiley, who have laid out an extensive and beautiful park, known as Smiley heights, and thrown it open to the public. I wish I were able to give you even a moderate description of this beautiful place. The road winds through a bewildering tangle of tropical plants, palms, bamboos, acacias, sweet-scented vines and flowers of brilliant colours, making a picturesque combination, which can only be seen in tropical lands. Ten years ago this beautiful park was but an ill-looking hillside; it is now one of the features of a trip to Southern California, and its transformation has cost the owners nearly a million of dollars.

We have been but a few days in Los Angeles, but have already met several Canadians, who are among the successful business men of the city. Of these, we mention Geo. A. McBain, Esq., doing an extensive furniture business, and Mr. Smart, in the boot and shoe business, both of whom are well known in Peterborough. We had the pleasure of attending church last Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. McBain, and of afterwards taking dinner with them at their beautiful home in the western part of the city.

The city itself is considered up to date. On the business streets where people jostle one another in the rush of modern life, are many fine blocks of stores and offices—great steel-framed structures of terra cotta and pressed brick, well proportioned and tastefully ornamented.

The old buildings of the city are rapidly giving way to the new, and each season contributes to the sightliness and permanence of a modern American city, evidently modeled after the most approved ideas of New York or Chicago.

A few years ago while boring for water in the western part of the city a man struck oil, and straightway every other man began to sink a well also, with the result that in this section of the city, in every back yard and in some front yards, there is an oil well with its derrick reaching fifty or sixty feet into the air. There are now over one thousand wells within the city limits, some of them yielding as much as a hundred barrels per day, and the crude oil is worth from ninty cents to a dollar per barrel.

This is the cheapest city we have struck for living. The restaurants furnish ranging from five cents up to fifty cents, suited to every ones purse, and to every ones tastes as well. The manager in one of the best eating houses on Broadway East, offers four doughnuts, three anails, and a cup of coffee for 5 cts. Who need go hungry, in the face of such a bill of fare? I wish to assure my friends that though I did take lunch in that particular restaurant, I did not call for that particular dish.

We have visited West Lake Park, East Side Park and Santa Monica by the Sea. At the latter place we indulged in a salt water bath, not in the open sea, but in the shelter of the bath house and in heated water. Many, however, were bathing in the sea and letting the surf roll over them, others were sunning themselves on the sand by the sea shore, and others still were promenading along the shore with a parachute lifted to keep off the glare of the sun. The contrast between this summer land and Canada is very great at this particular season of the year, and the advantage seems to be with this country, as far as climate is concerned.

Nevertheless, for moral reasons I prefer very much our own beloved Canada. The great mass of this people have practically forgotten God. Sunday is not known by most of them as a day for religious worship and rest, but only as a day for recreation and pleasure, often ending in wild dissipation and sin.

More than ever I pray that Canada may preserve the Sacrededness of her Sabbath days and teach her people to reverence God's sanctuary.

We shall leave this point to-morrow on the Southern Pacific R. R. for San Francisco, where after remaining a day or two we shall start on our return trip by way of Salt Lake City and Colorado Springs, Col., at which latter place we expect to remain for a couple of weeks, and where any mail matter may be addressed to us.

From thence we expect to go on to our home in Peterborough in time for Easter Song Sermon on April 7th, the music for which I have found in California.

With kindest regards to all our friends.

Sincerely yours,
D. O. CROSSLEY.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 12, 1901.

SPRING ASSIZES OPEN MONDAY.

BEFORE HIS HONOUR MR. JUSTICE LOUNT.

Alex. Sharpe Will Stand His Trial for the Murder of Wm. Hull—The Civil List.

The Spring Assizes for the County of Peterborough open at one o'clock, Monday, before the Honourable Mr. Justice Lount. The civil docket is rather light, there being only three actions to dispose of, whilst the crimnal list contains a case the like of which has not been tried in Peterborough in many years. Alex. Sharpe will answer to the charge of the murder of Wm. Hull. The circumstances in connection with the affair are too fresh in the minds of the readers of the EXAMINER to require a review here.

Fred Hubner will stand his trial for having stolen a horse from a local liveryman, and having stolen a quantity of butter from a cheese factory in Otonabee.

CIVIL ACTIONS.

Wasson vs. Douglass.—The plaintiff, John Wasson, is a gentleman who resides in the village of Warsaw, and the defendant, also a gentleman residing in the same place. The action arises to determine the ownership of a small island situated in Indian river, on the east half of lot No. 12, in the 1st concession of the Township of Dummer. The land in question at one time belonged to one R. J. Rogers, but the plaintiff claims that it was deeded to one Wm. Wasson and then to him when purchasing the lot mentioned aforesaid. But the defendant alleges that he is the owner of the said island, claiming to have purchased it from the said Rogers, and has threatened and declared that he intends and will cut down and remove and carry away all the timbers, trees and wood now on the said island, and commit further waste thereon. The plaintiff seeks damages for trespasses and wrongs complained of.

A declaration that the southern edge of the said river or stream at high water mark is the true limit or boundry of the plaintiff's said land. Also an injunction or order restraining the defendant from repetition of any of the wrongful acts complained of.

The defendant claims amongst other things that the piece of land in dispute was deeded to him by the said R. J. Rogers.

Edmison & Dixon for plaintiff, E. B. Edwards for defendant.

Brotherson v. Corry & Laverdure—Andrew Brotherson, a labourer, residing in the Township of Otonabee, seeks to recover from Messrs. Corry and Laverdure, canal contractors, the sum of $1000 damages for compensation for injuries alleged to have been received by him while in the defendants employ.

The defendants in their statement of defence deny any responsibility in the matter, and claim that the derrick referred to in the plaintiffs's statement of claim, was not in a defective condition as alleged. They also claim that the accident, if any, was caused by negligence on the part of plaintiff and further say that they intend to reply for a defence on the want of notice and insufficiency of notice in respect to the injury complained of, and also that defendants were not employers of the plaintiff. D. W. Dumble for plaintiff, Stratton & Hall for defendants.

McGuire v. Corry—This was an action similar in particulars to that of Brotherson v. Corry, but it has been settled out of court.

Dennistoun, Peck & Stevenson, for defendants, Stratton & Hall for plaintiffs.

Mrs. Furber, who has had charge of Turnbull's dressmaking workrooms, has taken full charge. She has just returned from the city where she has been picking up the latest ideas in her line, and will be pleased to take your orders. All work guaranteed. 3d69

WEDDINGS IN THE COUNTRY.

MILES—BOYCE.

A very pretty wedding was celebrated on the evening of March 6th at the residence of Mr. John Miles, of the township of Dummer, when his eldest daughter, Miss Lillie May, and Mr. Norman Ward Boyce, of Smith, were united in marriage.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev Mr. Fusee, pastor of the Methodist church, Warsaw, in the presence of a large circle of friends and relatives of the contracting parties.

The bride was becomingly attired in a beautiful dress of cream silk, trimmed with silk lace and ribbon, and carried a bouqnet of white flowers. The bride was assisted by her cousin, Miss Maude Elliott, who was dressed in cream corded silk, trimmed with cord, who also carried a bouquet of flowers.

Lillian Hubble, cousin of the bride, who was dressed in cream cashmere, trimmed with lace, and wore a white wreath, made a pretty little maid of honour.

The groom was assisted by Mr. Wm. Miles, cousin of the bride, and the wedding march was played by Miss Florence Blewett, cousin of the groom.

The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and costly presents, showing the high esteem in which she is held by her many friends. The groom's present to the bride was a pair of gold bracelets.

The happy couple will take up their residence in Smith.

We all unite in wishing them a long and happy life.

FERGUSON—McMILLAN.

A very pretty wedding took place on the 13th inst, at the residence of Mr. Duncan Ferguson, 8th line of Dummer, when his daughter, Mabel, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. George D. McMillan, of the same township, by the Rev. Wm. Peer, of Norwood.

The bride was given away by her father' Miss Jeannette Ferguson, sister of the bride, acting as bridesmaid, while Mr. John McMillan performed the duties of groomsman. The bride was tastefully attired in pale blue cashmere, trimmed with white ribbon and lace.

There were about fifty guests present to witness the happy ceremony and to take part in the pleasures of the occasion and who gave the bride many costly presents, such as would be useful to her in her new home. May long life, full of joy and peace, be theirs.

A Bridegroom's Perfunctory Promise.

The groom entered alone and said confidentially:

"Do you use the word 'obey' in your marriage service, Mr. Blank?"

"No," said the minister, "I do not usually."

"Well," said the expectant Benedict, "I have come to ask you to marry me now, and I want it used."

"Certainly," replied the other. "It shall be done." And presently the couple stood solemnly before him.

"James T.," said the clergyman, "do you take this woman to be your wedded wife?"

"I do."

"Do you absolutely promise to love, to honor and obey her so long as you both shall live?"

Horror and rebellion struggled with the sanctities of the occasion on the bridegroom's face, but he chokingly responded, "I do," and the meek bride decorously promised in her turn.

After the ceremony was over the bridegroom said excitedly aside to the grave minister:

"You misunderstood me, sir, you misunderstood me! I referred to the woman's promising to obey."

"Ah, did you, indeed?" serenely answered his reverence. "But I think what is good for one side is good for the other, don't you? And, my friend, it is my advice to you to say nothing about it, for as an old married man I can tell you you'll have to obey anyhow."—Woman's Journal.

Children In Church.

Grandma says in her young days children were expected to stay through the sermon. A bag of doughnuts was always taken to church for their support during that trying time. As soon as the minister was fairly in the pulpit she and the other little ones subsided on hassocks and noiselessly munched. Sometimes they were allowed to steal across the aisle to visit their comrades in the rector's pew opposite. The visits had to be of the most silent kind. The children merely nodded at each other and brought their little hassocks in a row facing the pew seat. It was just the right height for a table. They could spread their provisions upon it and consume them in mute companionship. It was part of the church game to make them last to the benediction, and it was a point of honor to be absolutely noiseless during the half hour when only the minister's voice must be heard. If a shoe creaked or a prayer book dropped the delinquent was frowned on by public opinion in his small particular circle in a way more deterrent than anything mamma could have said.

"Hump!" said Aunt Lucretia. "Much good that kind of churchgoing does children!"

"It makes them feel at home in their Father's house," said grandma gently.—Chicago Post.

Posing For Portraits.

Care must also be taken in the selection of the proper pose for the individual. A laughing girl looks absurd drawn primly up in the attitude of a woman engaged in the warfare of society, whereas a woman of dignified mien would look equally ridiculous portrayed in an attitude exhibiting the energy of youth—for instance, running gayly through a garden of roses. Preposterous as this seems, it is merely a sample of the desire of many persons who contend with the artist about the proper pose and backgrounds of their contemplated portraits. The individual whom melancholy claims as her own should be posed appropriately and the sentiment carried out through all the details of the picture. Harmony in motif and action should always be maintained.

The question of lighting is, of course, a most important subject. Again, it must be remembered that the underlying idea or thought of the composition must be brought out clearly, and everything else must be kept subservient to this. The strong light should fall on the reason for the picture. Everyhing else on the canvas leads up to this point.—John W. Alexander in Harper's Basar.

What Care Will Do!

Care will kill a cat. But it does worse to a woman. It makes her ugly. It puckers up accordion plaits between her eyes and draws funny, scraggy little railroad tracks across her forehead. When it doesn't do that, it imparts a hopeless, alone in the world countenance—which is even more dreadful. The thing to do, argues a woman noted for her sunny disposition, is to give care a frosty glare occasionally. Make up your mind that you are not going to be miserable just because something or other—or everything—goes wrong. Whenever you feel the worrying fever coming on go and borrow somebody's youngster and play circus. Cut out paper dolls. Make chocolate fudges. Sit on the floor like a tailor and sing like—like—well, sing the best you can, good old time songs that you used to sing when you were young and foolish and hankering for moonlight boat rides and all that sort of thing.—Philadelphia Times.

Teaching the Child.

We never know what part of the day's experience will register itself indelibly upon the little child's brain. A parent lete no single opportunity pass of implanting useful ideas. And what he says today he may have to repeat tomorrow in another form. No matter; it is by adding bit to bit that the idea finally grows solid in the little one's mind. In the midst of hurried and absorbing occupations we should pause an instant to answer a searching question, not in a roundabout, careless fashion, but in a manner that will enable the child to carry on the train of thought for himself.—Florence Hull Winterburn in Woman's Home Companion.

HIGH HONOURS TO A FORESTER.

Were Bestowed on Peterborough's Representative at the Last Meeting of the High Court, C. O. F.

In the official report of the recent meeting of the High Court, Canadian Order of Foresters held in Sarnia, the "Canadian Forester" refers as appended to a portion of the proceedings, which will be of particular interests to residents of Peterborough:

"Bro. Robt. Elliott, High Chief Ranger, on assuming the chair after the ceremony of installation, called upon the High Marshal, Bro. C. E. Britton, to take Bro. F. J. Jameson in custody and conduct him to the platform. Bro. Dr. U. M. Stanley, Chairman Medical Board, on behalf of High Court, then presented Bro. Jameson with the Past High Chief Rangers's badge and conferred upon him the honour of Past High Chief Ranger of the Canadian Order of Foresters. In addressing Bro. Jameson, P.H.C.R., Bro. Dr. Stanley referred to the fact that nine years ago he had had the pleasure of nominating Bro. Jameson as a member of the Executive Committee. On that occasion Bro Jameson was elected triumphantly, and has held his position ever since with ever-increasing majorities, which indicates the good-will of the High Body. Last year Bro. Jameson was elected High Vice-Chief Ranger by the largest majority ever obtained by anyone in a contest for that position. In speaking of the great responsibilities and duties of an Executive officer of High Court, Dr. Stanley referred to the fact that Bro. Jameson had always taken an important part in discussing all questions before the Executive Committee, and his judgment was always found sound and good by his associates on the Executive Board. In the investment of the funds of High Court, there is required great care and ability, on account of the enormous amount of money in our surplus fund. Bro. Jameson's foresight, acumen and business ability has been invaluable during his long tenure of office as a member of the Executive Committee. If honour is, as it should always be, in direct proportion to responsibility, then no member of the High Court is more deserving of the highest honours the High Body can confer than is Bro. F. J. Jameson. And now, continued Dr. Stanley, at the end of nine years of faithful service, Brother Jameson is retiring at his own volition, and at a time when, had he chosen to stand for office, he is held in such high esteem by his brethren, the members of High Court, that his election was assured. A few years ago the High Court of the Canadian Order of Foresters decided to confer the honorary degree of Past High Chief Ranger on all members of the Executive Committee who have served thereon for three years. It was also decided to present the badge of Past Chief Ranger to all such members. It affords the greatest pleasure not only to myself personally, but to the officers and members of High Court to present to you this badge, and with it confer the honour of Past High Chief Ranger of that body. We ask you to accept them, not on account of their intrinsic worth, but as a token of the regard and respect in which you are held by every member of the Executive Board and of the High Court at large."

Speaking editorially of the presentation the "Forester" says:

"In the retirement of Bro. F. J. Jameson, a useful and zealous officer passes from active service to his well earned rest, after a useful and honourable career as member of of the Executive Committee and H.V.C.R., he carries with him not only the best wishes of the members of the Executive, out of the Order generally, Timely and well deserved were the words addressed to him by Bro. U. M. Stanley, who, on behalf of the High Court, formally presented him with the badge of a P.H.C.R., the honorary office being conferred upon Bro. Jameson, on account of his having been a member of the Executive Committee over three years."

ENTERTAINED BY MRS. DAVIS.

A Pleasant Evening Spent by the Y. W C. A. and their Friends.

The evening at the home of Mrs. A. L. Davis given by the Board of Management of the Young Women's Christian Association, was a most delightful affair. The guests were most enthsiastic after the address given by Miss Sara Carson of New York City, who was the speaker of the evening, and during the social time which followed, many and lively were the discussions, and all agreed that the new light brought upon the organization under discussion made one feel that every city was complete only when it had given to the Young Women's Christian Association its place as an added force and dignity to its welfare.

SALVATION ARMY SERVICES.

Special Meetings to be Held To-Night and on Sunday.

At the Salvation Army Barracks this evening and Sunday, March 24th, special meetings will be held, led by Major and and Mrs. Turner, the subjects of which are as follows:

Saturday, 8 p.m.—Welcome Meeting.
Sunday, 11 a.m.—"Mental Gymnastics."
Sunday, 3 p.m.—"Well Digging."
Sunday, 7 p.m.—"Who is a Fool?"

Major Turner, the new provincial officer for East Ontario Province, has been an officer in the Canadian wing of the Army for fifteen years. He first became associated with the Army in Toronto, a year before he entered the work. After seven years' service in Ontario, in field work, he was promoted to the staff and made a district officer. Two appointments followed in this capacity, covering a little over a year, after which he was made a Chancellor, and served as such in Toronto and London, Ontario, and Spokane, Washington.

During the past two years, the Major has been the assistant Provincial officer in connection with the Central Ontario Province, with headquarters at Toronto, where he has been signally successful and the Army has thrived considerably under his administration.

Mrs. Turner shares with her husband, the honour of having put in several years active service as a field officer, prior to their marriage.

BANQUETTING PETERBORO' COLTS

Most Successful Event in Club's History.

PRESENTED WITH SOUVENIRS.

Many Excellent Speeches Made—An Enjoyable Time Around the Festive Board in Oriental Hotel.

The dining room of the Oriental hotel was the scene of a very interesting affair last night, it being the occasion of a banquet tendered to the Peterborough Colts, junior champions of the O.H.A., by the management of the Peterborough Hockey Club. The event was one of the most successful affairs of the kind that has been held in connection with hockey circles in Peterborough in many years, and will long be remembered by those whose pleasure it was to be present. It was attended by the members of the several teams, and the members of the executive and club in general. Toasts were drunk with enthusiasm, speeches of a happy nature made and songs of an appropriate nature sung.

The tables were arranged with every degree of neatness, decked out in profusion with flowers, etc., while the menu was one that could discount that put on at many banquets of a more pretentious nature.

An orchestra, stationed in a central place, furnished excellent music throughout.

THOSE PRESENT.

The chair was occupied by Mr. H. R. H. Kenner, the energetic and popular president of the club. To his right sat Mr. Will Cavanah, the captain of the victorious Colts, and to his left sat Rev. W. L. Armitage, the chaplain of the club, whilst in the vice chair was seated Mr. A. H. Stratton, the vice-president. Seated around the table were His Worship Mayor Denne, Dr. Andrew Scott, A. W. McPherson, C. G. Graham, R. B. McKee, H. LeBrun, W. D. Parker, Walter Stocker, R. M. Roy, Ernie Wasson, A. A. Hollingshead, S. D. Hall, Thos. Barnett, Fred Clarke, E. O. Bradburn, Lewellyn Hall, G. M. Hamilton, E. S. Clarry, S. S. Moore, R. M. Glover, Jas. McCabe, Harry Rush, Harry Thompson, Herb. Edmison, R. F. McWilliams, Hal. B. Burnham, W. J. McCallum, R. A. W. Hay, Fred Whitcroft, W. Waran, "King" Dillon, Elmer Smith, H. Gilman, Harold Armstrong, H. King, Walter Robinson, Harry Morgan, E. A. Brundrette, Wm. Bunton and D. J. Devine.

After justice had been done to the most excellent menu, the chairman formally welcomed the assemblage and thanked them for their kindness in being present. He called upon Rev. Mr. Armitage to propose the toast of the King. Rev. Mr. Armitage, in so doing, expressed the pleasure he felt at being present. He had followed the progress the Colts had made from the time of their first game until the finish and their record had been one of which they might well feel proud. He congratulated them on being the champions of the O. H. A., and then went on to speak of the sports of ancient times, the champions of which had been honoured both in verse and song. Speaking more directly to his subject, Rev. Mr. Armitage said that the King was a lover of sport, and the royal family never failed to recognize true manly sport. He closed by stating that the members of the Colts' team could in years to come look back with feelings of pride upon their noble record, of which we are all so proud.

The toast of the King was most enthusiastically drunk—all rising and singing the National Anthem.

The Ontario Hockey Association was proposed by Mr. A. W. McPherson, Secretary-Treasurer of the local club, who claimed that that organization deserved everything good that might be said of it. He reviewed the growth of the association during the past ten years of its existence, growing as it did from an organization of six clubs to an association of sixty clubs, as it is at the present time. The President, Secretary, and other members of the Executive, were eulogised for their efforts in trying to promote the best interests of the game.

The toast was replied to by letters which were read by the chairman from Mr. A. H. Beaton, Secretary of the O.H.A., and Mr. W. A. Buchanan, of the Executive.

BUCHANAN'S REMARKS.

Mr. Buchanan wrote, saying that he was very sorry that he was unable to be present, but he was thus prevented by illness. However, he wished the Colts a pleasant time, and assured them of his deep interest in the affairs of the Club.

The Ex-secretary's letter was received amid great applause.

Mr. Walter Stocker at this point sang "Greeting to the King," for which he received much applause and for an encore gave "Jack's the Boy, etc."

"Our Guests," the Colts, came next. The chairman in asking the assemblage to drink to the same, spoke in a happy and appropriate manner of their work during the season. Mr. "Bill" Cavanah the popular captain, replied, thanking the management for their kindness and the public for their support.

Mayor Denne, in the absence of the Hon. President, Dr. Bradd, presented each of the Colts with a handsome gold locket. The members of the team were A. E. Brundrett, W. H. Cavanah, Harold Armstrong, Fred Whitecroft, Elmer Smith, Harry King and Harry Morgan, and W. Gilman and Walter Robinson spare men.

A SURPRISE.

Mr. H. B. Burnham just here interrupted the general order of proceedure by proposing the toast of the officers of the club. Mr. Albert Burndrett then arose and read the following address to Mr. Kenner and Mr. McPherson.

To Messrs. H. R. H. Kenner and A. W. McPherson, President and Secretary respectively, of The Peterborough Hockey Club for the season 1900-1901.

Dear Sirs.—During the past season in your different positions as President and Secretary of this Club, you have worked most faithfully to carry on the business connected with your offices. Many difficulties have presented themselves throughout the season, but all were fairly met with and overcome without Peterborough losing any of its former prestige in the eyes of the other clubs in the O. H. O.

We feel that our winning the Junior Championship was greatly aided by your wise and able direction of affairs. We believe that never before were there two men in your positions with as unbiased opinions as yours, yet standing on such good terms with the different players at the end of the season. To show you in a slight way our appreciation of your fair and sportsmanlike conduct in your respective offices, we desire that you will accept these two canes as a remembrance of the past hockey season, and also of the members and supporters of this Club.

Signed on behalf of The Peterborough Junior Hockey Club and supporters.

W. H. CAVANAGH, Captain.

Peterborough, March 22nd, 1901.

The canes were beautiful gold headed ones.

"KING" DILLON, TOO.

Mr. Walter Robinson arose and addressed the following communication to "King" Dillon, the popular and hard working trainer of the team:

To Mr. E. Dillon, trainer of the Peterborough Colts Hockey Team for the season of 1900-1.

Dear Sir,—During the past season you have in looking after the training of our team, no doubt contributed largely to the endurance and strength which enabled us to win the Junior Championship. There is no doubt that training a team is the most essential point of a campaign. Condition will tell every time, and we feel positive that your efforts in that direction this winter met with the greatest success, as a look over the record of the season's games will show that in almost every one more scoring was done by us in the second half than in the first.

While it seems hard to be told sharply enough—"No pie or ice cream now"—and then later to be ordered off to bed, when a good tonic may be had, still we can see when the next game comes off that it was sound advice.

In order to show you that we recognise how well you have succeeded this winter, we beg of you to accept this locket as a slight token of our regard for your efforts.

Signed—H. Morgan, F. Whitcroft, H. King, H. C. Armstrong, A. E. Brundrett, W. M. Robinson, Elmer H. Smith, H. Gilliman, W. H. Cavanah.

The Vice-President, Mr. A. H. Stratton, proposed the toast of sister sports, coupling with it the names of Messrs. R. M. McWilliams, ex-Captain of the Peterborough Rugby Club, C. G. Graham, Manager of the Baseball Club, G. M. Hamilton, President of the Snowshoe and Toboggan Club, and Dickson Davidson, President of the Thistle Curling Club.

Excellent and most appropriate speeches were made by these gentlemen, and by special request Mr. Hamilton recited a selection by Drummond entitled "The Oyster Ship." It produced rounds of applause and he was compelled to respond again.

Dr. Scott claimed to have been left the most pleasant duty of the evening, that of proposing the toast of the ladies. He referred to the great encouragement given to the various teams by the ladies, and Mr. R. M. Glover in his reply said that he was sure that they would follow the course of the Colts just as eagerly off the ice as the had done on the ice.

Mr. E. S. Clarry, Secretary-Treasurer of the Trent Valley Hockey League, responded to the toast of that League, and that of the Press was duly honoured.

The affair was brought to a close by all present rising and singing Auld Lang Syne.

NOTES.

The guests were photographed by Mr. R. M. Roy, during the evening.

When the toast of the Colts was proposed, there was a rather wild scene. Those present arose and cheered again and again, whilst the orchestra struck up "They are jolly good fellows."

Milne Hamilton's recitations proved to be quite a treat.

The vice chairman in proposing the "Sister Sports," coupled with it the name of Mr. Wm. Bunton, as representing the Golf Club. Of course the crowd took it as a joke.

The costly cup, the trophy which was won by the Colts, occupied a prominent position on the table.

King Dillon was one of the surprised men of the evening.

The general impression made by all the orators was that Peterborough is in need of new athletic grounds and a new rink.

The distinctly artistic New York novelty patterns of themselves will repay any visitor. Novelties in Fancy Trimmings, Jets, Gold and Steel effects will be a special feature of our recherche display. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

SPORTING PASTIMES.

HOCKEY.

The Pig Irons claim to still have another game on. They expect the Lakefield seven down on Tuesday night to play their return game. The Pig Irons have had a most successful season.

LACROSSE.

The lacrosse season at the present time looks exceptionally bright, and the prospects are that the game will receive a boom in this district such as it has not had in many a day. Port Hope, Cobourg and Lindsay, three towns in which the good old game of lacrosse has been dead for many years have all organized and are going into the fight with great energy. The outlook in Peterborough is not any too bright, as far as a senior team is concerned, but the Vaticans may get together and show outside clubs a thing or two. An effort should be made to form a district comprising Marmora, Hastings, Campbellford, Norweed, Peterborough, Lindsay and Port Hope.

The secretary of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club is in receipt of a circular letter from Mr. H. S. Cameron, secretary of the Checker Lacrosse Club, Beaverton, asking the support of the local club for the candidature of Mr. Peter McMillan as President of the C. L. A. Mr. McMillan has been identified with lacrosse circles for the past 25 years.

The Vatican Lacrosse Club has reorganized for the season and by the list of officers elected it is evident that the prospects are bright for a good season. The officers are as follows:—

Patrons and Patronesses—Mr. and Mrs. H. LeBrun, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. McGill, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. G. Denne, Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Bradd.
Hon. President—M. Halpin.

TAKES NO POINTERS.

To the Editor of the EXAMINER:

Dear Sir,—At the opera house on Thursday night Mr. Pauline, the hypnotist, stated before a large audience that he did not give any lessons in hypnotism to a young French Coon for 50 cents as had been stated. Mr. Pauline, I understand, referred to me. True it is, I did not receive any lessons from him, as I claim to know as much about the business as he does. Mr. Pauline is a Frenchman himself, but he does not display the politeness characteristic of our nationality in referring to me, also Frenchman, publically, in the manner he did.

Yours truly,
MAX GIROUX.

EXPOSITION BEAUTY.

PUTTING THE RAINBOW COLORS ON ONE OF BIG BUILDINGS.

Early Hints of What the Visitors May See of Molded Plastic Ornamentation and Color Decoration at Pan-American Exposition.

It is now possible to go somewhat more into detail regarding the plastic and color work upon the various buildings of the Pan-American Exposition. The most advanced of the buildings is that to be devoted to machinery. The staff upon the exterior of this edifice is now nearly all in place, and the great structure is in the hands of the color artists.

Though a very large building, 500 by 350 feet, the four facades are so broken by architectural features that there is nothing of monotony or severity. Every one who has the good fortune to visit the grounds during this advanced stage of development unhesitatingly applauds the happy results of both the architectural and color schemes.

In order that the reader may have a correct understanding let me first describe the molded work with which the exterior of the building is ornamented. By means of the very ingenious production known as staff, which is made out of white plaster, into which liberal quantities of manila fiber have been mixed in order to make it tough and durable, the Exposition buildings are given the appearance of solidity and massiveness as well as the beauty of richly carved stone. But, since the material is not stone, the idea of adding color to the work has been suggested. How to apply the color so that it would heighten the beauty of the work has taxed the ingenuity of the most famous mural painter of the world, Mr. Charles Y. Turner of New York.

The very intricate character of the staff work and the vast amount of it in delicate designs offered a most forbidding task. All four of the broad facades of the building have an arcaded effect. Every window is a deeply recessed arch, with wide soffits and casings. Every entrance is composed of one or more high arches, with massive pillars at the sides, and every pillar and pilaster is of very elaborate detail. Every window is grilled and finished with fidelity to the most artistic ideas of architects of the Spanish renaissance, from which the general architectural scheme of the Exposition is derived.

the east and west sides are massive domes. Two very tall towers rise above both the north and south entrances and help to complete two wonderful architectural compositions. Imagine, if you can, the delicate and beautiful character of this unique work. Some one has said it reminded the observer of a skillful confectioner's best achievements in a fancy wedding cake many times exaggerated. The comparison is not inappropriate perhaps, for the Exposition celebrates a closer union of the several Americas, and in the original white the wonderful compositions of staff which crown these towers possessed the apparent delicacy of one of these marvelous creations of the confectioner.

But color has been added, and the white has disappeared. The likeness is no longer there. The brilliant colors that the Moors loved so steadfastly hundreds of years ago in Granada and Andalusia have been revived, better than the originals. The majestic columns and fancy pillars look like carved ivory. The arabesques have a background of brilliant shades, such as yellows, pinks and reds of varying degrees of brightness. The round domes have bands of green and other shades. The roofs are all of red tile. The broad eaves are upheld by substantial brackets that resemble rose wood carved in intricate design. The lofty towers present a radiance of blues, reds and gold. Medallions of Ericsson and other famous men who have given the world wonderful machinery are surrounded with a glow of color.

Difficult or impossible as it may seem to the reader to employ brilliant colors so freely upon a great building such as this without destroying its grandeur and cheapening its appearance, the problem has been magnificently worked out, and the effect is not merely pleasing and harmonious, but the work is an artistic triumph that every person from far and near will delight to see. The wonderful harmony of the many colors that have been used is at once observed, and there is no one feature of the Exposition that has aroused more popular interest than the great color scheme. With the 20 or more other big buildings, all aglow with color and adorned with richly molded plastic work, the effect will be a profound surprise to those who have visited other Expositions.

MULUDIZI'S DISSOLUTION.

Ascended an Eminence, Knelt, Called on Mohammed and Expired.

London, March 22.—Advices received from Mengo, in Uganda, Africa, dated Thursday, March 14, say that Muludizi, the Mohammedan prophet, who recently proclaimed himself as leader of a new religious doctrine, in Uganda, died at Mengo that afternoon under extraordinary circumstances, after a short reign as a prophet. The Sultan of Imbego, the head of Mohammedanism in Uganda, denounced the new doctrine, and a native court declared Muludizi to be an imposter. Whereupon Muludizi indignantly declared that he would no longer remain on earth. He left the native court and ascended a small eminence outside the King's enclosure, where he knelt, called loudly on Mohammed and suddenly expired.

INTERVIEWED MR. CHAMBERLAIN.

Mr. Mulock Invited to Appear Before Inter-Departmental Committee.

Montreal, March 22.—A Star special cable from London says: "London, March 21.—Hon. Mr. Mulock, Canadian Postmaster-General, interviewed Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, Colonial Secretary, at the Colonial Office this afternoon. Mr. Mulock has been invited by Lord Balfour of Burleigh to appear before the Inter-Departmental Committee on the cable system of the Empire on Tuesday afternoon next. He will, in consequence defer his departure till Wednesday, joining the Himalaya at Marseilles.

New Commandant Arrives.

Kingston, March 22.—Lieut.-Col. Reade, commandant of the Royal Military College, has made a good impression since his arrival. He is of fine military appearance and decidedly genial in manner. If his bearing counts for anything, he will make a good commandant. He is 40 years of age and has been in the service since 1879, serving in Afghanistan, Egypt, South Africa and the Niger. In South Africa in 1900 he served on the staffs of Generals Methuen, Hunter and Hamilton, and saw much of the Canadians. This is his first visit to Canada.

Steamers in Collision.

Antwerp, March 22.—The steamer Chemnitz of the German-Australian Steamship Company and the British steamer Tay collided last night in the Flushing roadstead. The Tay sank. Fourteen persons perished. The first officer and two seamen were saved. Among those lost were the wives of two sailors, who had boarded the vessel to say good-bye.

Indorsed By The Highest Authorities in the Science of Foods.

Malt Breakfast Food

The Healthiest and Best of all Known Breakfast Cereals.

Malt Breakfast Food is the first practical and successful grain breakfast food made according to the recommendations of such famous British Food scientists as Sir Henry Thompson, Dr. J. Milner Fothergill and Prof. W. M. Williams. These three celebrated writers on "Dietetics" strongly recommend the use of Malt to increase the digestibility and the nutritive qualities of all grains used as foods.

British, American, French and German food experts are of opinion that in Malt Breakfast Food the highest degree of perfection has been reached as a health food for old and young.

Malt Breakfast Food combines in proper proportions the freshest and purest Malt and the choicest Wheat, the whole partially cooked and predigested, producing a muscle-building and bone-forming food of unequalled value. Rich in flavor, satisfying, easily digested and readily absorbed are the leading qualities of Malt Breakfast Food. Sold by all Grocers.

One of His Majesty's Ontario Officials

He is Freed From the Terrors and Dangers of Dyspepsia by

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

He Speaks of Years of Failures With Other Medicines.

His Happy Experience With

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

Compels Him to Recommend it to Others.

Now is the time, if ever, to banish dyspepsia, indigestion and health destroying stomach troubles. During this month nothing should interfere with the work of toning the weak nerves of the stomach and giving strength to the various organs of digestion, so that the whole digestive machinery may work harmoniously. After Paine's Celery Compound has begun the good work, food will enrich the blood, make bone, build muscle, and physical vigor and strength will increase from day to day.

Paine's Celery compound is the only remedy that can give a guarantee of striking directly at the root of all stomach and digestive troubles, and give a permanent cure. Read the testimony of a prominent Ontario gentlemen, Mr. John McKenzie, one of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace, and Clerk of the Township of Sarawak and Brooke, Ont.:

"You will think me ungrateful in not sooner acknowledging to you my entire cure from dyspepsia through the use of Paine's Celery Compound; but when I tell you that I suffered all the tortures of dyspepsia for five years, and during that time having taken most of the GREAT REMEDIES advertised as THE ONLY SURE CURE for the horrible complaint with little or no benefit I was determined to be cured before I would be satisfied. Some of the GREAT REMEDIES would give me a little relief while I was taking them, but as soon as I stopped them I was as bad as ever.

"When I commenced taking Paine's Celery Compound I fully expected the same results, as my confidence in all patent medicines was shaken; but from the first dose of the compound I felt better, and after taking two bottles I thought I was completely cured, but to make the cure certain I took four bottles more. It is now over two years since I took the last dose, and have not had the least symptom of the disease in any way. When suffering from dyspepsia I could not look a hog in the face; now pork and beans is my favorite dish. I can from my own blessed experience, recommend Paine's Celery Compound as a sure cure and a very pleasant medicine to take."

Don't Scold.

Of all forms of human effort and execution scolding is the most useless. When a parrot, a chipmunk, a squirrel or bluejay scolds he is ludicrous. For people to scold is ludicrous, too, but with a difference, and assuredly the difference is on the unfavorable side. It never did and never will do any one any good. It has done much harm. Besides, scolding grows to be a habit. We have all suffered because of the shortcomings of some one else, receiving tremendous tirades over what we had no hand in, because we happened to be present when the scolding habit was yielded to by one of its victims.

Scolding is easy. It takes neither power of brain nor heart to scold. It does not even make any great draft upon the physical being. Any fishwife alive can be a grand success at scolding. Why compete with her?

Scolding should be compelled to perish from the earth. The tongue, the voice, the eye, the face—all should be trained not to scold—yes, and the pen, for of all things a scolding pen is the worst. And the habit once formed with the pen is apt never to be entirely shaken off.—Ada C. Sweet in Woman's Home Companion.

Millions Spent In Amusements.

"The American people are great theater goers and spend about $112,000,000 annually for such amusements," said a prominent theatrical manager to the writer recently. "This vast sum of money is paid into the treasuries of some 1,000 companies, which were estimated to be playing in all parts of the United States last year. This includes everything that can be considered strictly professional companies, to say nothing of the countless amateur organizations.

"Of the strictly theatrical organizations it is safe to say that the average receipts per night for the 1,000 companies is $400 each. At seven performances per week for each company the weekly average would be $2,800. The average theatrical season is 40 weeks. The entire 1,000 companies, with average nightly receipts of $400, would produce weekly receipts at seven performances per week amounting to $2,800,000. This multiplied by 40, the number of weeks in the theatrical season, will yield gross receipts amounting to $112,000,000, which is probably far below what the people of this country really do pay every year for theatrical amusement."—Washington Star.

GEN. FRENCH EXECUTED.

A Rumor From Antwerp That Boers Captured and Killed Him.

Antwerp, March 22.—A singular and utterly improbable rumor is in circulation here to the effect that the Boers, after capturing and then liberating and subsequently recapturing Gen. French, finally executed him for not keeping a promise not to fight against them again.

London Does Not Believe It.

London, March 22.—The Antwerp rumor of the execution of General French by the Boers is absolutely discredited in London.

A Botha Killed.

London, March 22.—A despatch from Lord Kitchener, dated at Pretoria, March 20, says:

"Philip Botha, a brother of the Boer Commandant-General, was killed on the Doornberg. His two sons were wounded.

"The Boers of the Orange River Colony have disbanded and scattered. Dewet is in the neighborhood of Heilbron."

Cause of Failure.

New York, March 22.—The London correspondent of The Tribune says it is stated that the failure of the negotiations was caused by a disarrangement upon the question of the treatment of the Cape rebels.

Two Men Crushed to Death.

Fort William, March 22. — News reached here yesterday of a doubly fatal accident at the A. L. mine on Wednesday. While placing a boiler in position at the mine, James Hammond and John McGrath were both accidentally killed, being crushed to death by the heavy boiler. James Hammond was one of the best-known men in the district, especially in connection with mining interests. He was one of the pioneer miners, and interested in the Hammond Reef gold mine, which was named after him. He was in the prime of life, and actively engaged in developing the district by opening up gold and copper mines. Deceased was 43 years

OWNS THE HOUSE.

You ask me if I own the house
I live in. Well, I thought it
Was mine, because with solid cash,
All earned by me, I bought it.

But now it seems a little chap
Who dropped in t'other night'll
Be master here, though to the place
I have a clean, clear title.

He's turned the whole house upside down,
Changed everything, and yet it
Does seem more homelike since he came
To oust me and upset it.

He came as comes a king unto
His own. He showed no papers,
But raised his voice and cut a few
Not very kinglike capers.

Within the walls I once thought mine
The rascal holds carouse now.
I walk the floor and pay the bills,
But baby owns the house now!

"Little Bat" AND THE Sibley Fight.

"The long haired man from the west may be all right, but there are others," remarked a dark, swarthy, stout man in this city yesterday. He was Frank Grouard, ex-chief of scouts of the United States army, the hero of a hundred Indian fights and hairbreadth escapes. There is nothing romantic in the appearance of this big, brawny man, his black hair now well streaked with silver, but his exploits are liberally blazoned on the army reports by Crook and Sheridan. Born on an island in the south Pacific in 1850, the son of a missionary, through stress of circumstance at the age of 5 he was left to shift for himself. Doing chores about the California mining camps and driving an ore wagon were his training for carrying mail over a lonely star route. He was captured as a youth by Indians and adopted as a son by the famous Sioux chief Crazy Horse, living five years in Indian camps, eating his meat without salt, forgetting the taste of bread, and intrusted with the mysteries of "medicine making" by Sitting Bull. This school inured him to hardship and eventually led him to meet and overcome dangers that few men have experienced.

When he saw the telegram in the newspaper of yesterday relating the tragedy at Crawford, Neb., that sounded "taps" for Baptiste Gaunier, better known as the famous scout Little Bat, he quite forgot the overhanging wonder of the elevated road and the tall buildings to tell his regret at the passing of one who had shared with him many perils. "Did you ever hear of the Sibley fight?" he asked. "If you have not, John Finerty can tell you one lively side of it. Little Bat might have told you some more about it, and I might say something myself. Yes, we were all in it up to our chins, and as an all round close shave I think all accounts agree that it was about the limit. The idea of a man living on a diet of that kind and then getting killed in a saloon fight! It seems tough. Poor Little Bat! Bad whisky was worse 'medicine' than Sitting Bull ever made in all his years of devilry.

"But you want me to tell about the Sibley fight, do you? It was about 24 years ago last July, just about a week before the battle that wiped out General Custer and his entire command. General Crook assigned Little Bat and myself to go north on the Tongue river and meet a body of friendly Crows that were joining us to fight against the Sioux. Much to my regret, Lieutenant F. W. Sibley and 24 picked men of the Second cavalry were detailed as an escort. The men were splendid fellows, but all more or less new in Indian fighting. We had been moving north two days when in the dawn of the third morning I discovered the Sioux moving toward the Tongue river thicker than buffaloes in the valley of the Platte. I called Bat softly, and when he saw the great painted procession stealing over the plains he said, 'My God, we are gone!'

"I waited until I saw them strike our trail. Immediately the discoverer began circling his horse and waving his blanket, and about ten minutes later every Indian in that section knew that white men were somewhere about. I thought we might possibly get away from them by getting up into the mountains. I told Bat to follow me with the men as fast as he could, my idea being to get beyond where the Twin creek trail crossed our own in the mountains, knowing that the Indians would naturally make a run to cut us off at that point. I suppose I went up the hills rather fast, for at length I got tired waiting at the trail crossing and went back for the soldiers. Imagine my surprise when I learned that the party had stopped to make coffee. Lieutenant Sibley admitted his inexperience in a running fight and had yielded to the importunings of his men who wanted breakfast. I told him the chances were that none of us would eat any more between that time and kingdom come, as the Indians were probably waiting for us at the point we should have passed long ago. I made a wide detour from the trail as we toiled up the mountain. Very fortunately, for they were ambushed for us at the crossing of the trails between two high tree crowned buttes. If we had passed through that natural gate, none of us would have been left to tell about it. As we passed up the mountain to the left they got on to our curves, and about 200 did some wild target practice in our direction. Strange to say, not a man was hit. Correspondent John Finerty's horse was shot, and he came up and joined me in leading the line. The horses were inclined to stampede at the first fire, so at the beginning of the thick timber I ordered the stock tied in a bunch. The Indians tried in every way to draw our fire, but Sibley, at my suggestion, ordered no firing unless they charged up to us, which is not the way an Indian fights.

"We got to the timber at 10 o'clock in the morning, and we did not fire a shot until 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Every man had his tree, and he stuck to it closer than a brother. Early in the day a leather lunged Sioux yelled at me that he knew Bat and myself were there, and they were going to have great fun with us—particularly me. I knew what that meant without a map, so I told every soldier to save a good cartridge for himself before surrendering to the fiendish tortures, for the Sioux have very original methods of making a man die by the most painful process possible.

"Along about the middle of the afternoon my red friends who were waiting to entertain me began to get very gay and were growing bolder every minute. They had killed all our horses but five, and thought it was impossible for us to get away—in fact, I heard them say so quite frequently in the gutteral language of the Cheyennes. White Antelope and a band of Cheyennes had joined the war party, and this chief began riding closer and closer to our trees. Finally he and another chief, who was riding about five yards behind him, came into fairly good range. I could see the color of his eyes as he came toward me. I pulled the trigger of my rifle, and both Indians went down together as a result of the single shot. It was the first shot from our party, and the double tragedy confused the Indians. Then our whole outfit poured in a withering volley, and I told Sibley it was our time to take advantage of their confusion and get through their line back to the gully. I waited until they were all fairly started back through the heavy timber, then, taking the lariat from timber, then, taking the lariat from the saddle of my dead horse, I followed.

"It was a mile from where we made our stand to the main fork of the Tongue river, and the woods were full of terrible windfalls, and it was awfully hard traveling. The first 200 yards the men had to simply squirm their way through the timber and keep very low. The savages had a comparatively thin line at our rear, as they knew the character of the country and thought we would be helpless without our horses.

"When I rejoined the men, I sent Bat in the lead and I covered the rear. The soldiers took off their boots and stepped from rock to rock in order to leave our trail as blind as possible. About dark a heavy rainstorm, with much wind, came up and soon drowned out the firing that our foes kept up on our camp. Our policy of holding our fire so fooled them that they did not rush our camp until the following morning, a fact that I learned later. The storm was wild and terrible. We were drenched, and the timber began to fall all about us. We kept in a territory where horses could not travel for reasons of our own, and we hit an unblazed trail over the mountains for the following 45 hours without a mouthful to eat. Sometimes the squirrel path was so steep that Bat and I had to pull the soldiers up over the rocks with our lassoes.

"The following morning at 3 o'clock we forded Goose creek, the cold water coming up to our armpits, and at daylight fell in with a scouting party of the Second cavalry. Then we went back over the trail and picked up two of our exhausted soldiers that had given up. We had been under a hot fire nearly ten hours, had traveled 50 miles over a terribly rough mountain country and during all that time had not enjoyed the luxury of a ration, as we were forced to abandon everything when the Indians sighted us except our hope and our ammunition. Yet we never lost a man.

"Poor Little Bat! He was in the lead. Just to think of it! Now he is snuffed out as the result of a cowardly misdeal in a miserable saloon fight."

The speaker cast aside the stump of his cigar and said, "Where do you think I could find John Finerty anyway?"—Chicago Record.

A Ventriloquist.

Probably every one has seen a time when he wished he could administer rebuke impersonally. The Springfield Republican pictures an occasion when it was done.

The "grouchy" individual came from behind his paper and glared savagely at the woman with the crying baby. "Why can't you keep that brat quiet?" he snarled. "What's the matter with it, anyway?"

There was a dead silence in the car, and then a pitilessly distinct voice from nowhere in particular replied, "He thinks your face is the moon, and he's crying for it."

The surly one looked about with a deathly stare. Every one was quaking with mirth, but preserved a solemn countenance except the man who was smiling out of the window at the other end of the car.

"There are advantages in being a ventriloquist," he murmured softly to himself.

The Men of Mexico.

"It is curious," writes a City of Mexico correspondent of the Boston Herald, "what contrasts there are among the young men of the land. Out on the haciendas and ranches you find sturdy young fellows much on horseback and expert with the rope and as skillful in riding as the Cossacks of the Don. These young men are the hope of Mexico. Often tall, broad shouldered and vigorous, they will be the fathers of healthy children and keep the Mexican nation alive. From men of this sort the cities are recruited, and their descendants will be the ruling men of the country. They, too, are romantic, but with a difference. They are too healthy to become æsthetic, and yet the women who marry them will be happier than as the mates of the poets whose fine fancies thrill the feminine heart."

Are Slaves of the Cook.

Cooks have their rights as well as other people, and that is the one reason why the restaurants of New York are crowded every Sunday night by people who have numerous servants including capable cooks. It was a custom for many years, nobody knows exactly why, says the New York Sun, to eat a heavy dinner in the middle of the day on Sunday. During the prevalence of this custom the cooks made it a point to take Sunday night off, and that point has now become a prerogative. Men who dine six days in the week at 7 are invariably overloaded and uncomfortable when they dine in the middle of the day on Sunday. The effort to have Sunday night dinner at 7 o'clock has resulted in a flat and indubitable failure wherever attempted by householders, and so the knot has been cut by allowing the cook to have her regular Sunday night off, while the master of the house and his wife go to a restaurant, and the children scurry about for themselves. If a stranger in New York is anxious to see the heavy weight financial, commercial, legal and other professional men of this city at dinner with their wives he should visit Delmonico's, the Brunswick, the Savoy, Waldorf or New Netherlands Hotel any Sunday night at about 7 o'clock. It is a curious phase of New York life. Famous men of every conceivable walk of life dine out at these places. The general public is familiar with their faces, but not with those of their wives. There is often a very strong contrast, as, for instance, a small, famous lawyer and his ponderous, domineering wife, who tips the beam at 250 pounds and bullies the waiter; a famous statesman, whose wife is palpably jealous at his slightest glance at his neighbors; an eminent judge of 60 and his flirtatious wife of 20, and so on interminably.

THE STADIUM.

Greatest Year in Athletics at Pan-American Exposition.

During the Exposition of 1901 at Buffalo the greatest athletic sporting carnival that ever took place in America will be held. For the purpose of this grand carnival the largest sporting arena ever erected in America is to be built. It is to be known as the Stadium and will cover nearly ten acres, having a seating capacity of 12,000. It will be supplied with numerous entrances and broad aisles, so that the comfort of the spectators will be assured. The large space beneath the seats will be used for exhibits, being the equivalent of a very large building. The arena will contain a quarter mile track and ample room for the various pageants and exhibitions of live stock, automobiles, farm and road machinery, vehicles, etc. At the western end of the Stadium is a large ornamental building, which forms the main entrance to this grand arena.

EXPOSITION NOTES.

Brief Items Relating to Progress of the Pan-American.

The Chittenango Pottery Company has been granted the exclusive privilege of selling pottery at the Exposition.

Frederick Law Olmstead, who advocates the abolishment of billboards because of their inartistic and unsightly character, is the landscape architect who laid out Delaware Park, Buffalo, a part of which is to be used for the Pan-American Exposition in 1901.

We have only admiration for the courage, enterprise, liberality and energy displayed by the city at the foot of the lake in preparing for the great Exposition which is to be held next year. If ever success was earned, Buffalo has earned it. The city deserves to be filled with visitors during the life of the Pan-American Exposition and to reap a rich harvest of honor, glory and substantial gains.—Cleveland Leader.

"We have never advertised the resources of our state half enough," says The Times-Democrat of New Orleans in an article upon the Pan-American Exposition, in which it urges an adequate representation of the resources of Louisiana. The same may be said of other states, and the opportunity now offered by Buffalo is of exceptional value.

The enthusiasm and interest displayed by the people of southern California in the preparation of their great display of products for the Pan-American Exposition present a lesson and an example for all citizens to contemplate. American enterprise seems to have a very high development in "the glorious climate of California." The Californians purpose to make a very large and effective display.

One of the most conspicuous features of the Niagara Falls landscape now is a mammoth sign handsomely lettered thus: "Pan-American Exposition, Buffalo, N. Y., 1901." There are several similar signboards placed where thousands of people passing and repassing upon the great railroads may in this way have their attention called to the great event of next year which so vitally interests all the states and countries of the western hemisphere.

Obituary.

The death occurred in Petrolia on Saturday last of Mr. A. B. Lefroy, of that branch of the Bank of Toronto. Deceased was married to Miss Nellie Wood, daughter of Mr. Archibald Wood, banker, Millbrook, and his remains were interred at Millbrook on Monday. Besides his bereaved wife he leaves two young boys to mourn his demise. Messrs W. D. Parker, of the Ontario Bank, and Peter Campbell, of the Bank of Toronto, town, attended the funeral, as did Mr. Roly Wood, of Ashburnham.

Mr. Crombie's Meetings.

The special evangelistic services at Bethel Church, Otonabee, conducted by Rev. W. B. Crombie, were concluded last night. The interest in the services continued to increase from night to night, until the last meeting, when a large number signified their intention to follow Christ. The services were so encouraging that Mr. Crombie intends to go down next Tuesday, with Rev. Mr. Thompson, for another service. In consequence of Dr. Torrance's accident, Mr. Crombie will conduct the morning, as well as the evening service, in St. Paul's Church, to-morrow.

TOWN RATE IS EIGHTEEN MILLS.

Ald. Rogers Explains the Reason of the Raise.

A BIG BATCH OF BYLAWS READ.

They are Passed for the Purpose of Raising Funds to Defray the Cost of Construction of the Pavements.

At a special meeting of the council held last evening, with Mayor Denne presiding, there were present Aldermen Best, Corkery, Batten, Clinkscale, Shortly, Rush, Roger, Edgcumbe and Sawers.

On motion the reading of the communications and presentation of accounts was left over until the next meeting.

MANUFACTURERS' COMMITTEE

reported as appended through its Chairman, Ald. Rush :

1. Your Committee recommend that no action be taken on the proposition of the Monetary Times to advertise the town in that paper.
2. Your Committee also recommend that no action be taken on the letter of Messrs. Desbarats & Co., respecting their proposition to publish a book descriptive of the town.
3. No action was taken by your Committee on the matter of sending a deputation to Toronto to ask the Government to subsidize the Norwood & Apsley Railway.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

H. RUSH, Chairman.

The report was adopted.

COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

reported as follows through its Chairman, Ald. Sawers :

That the matter of preparing a building for use as a smallpox hospital, in case it should be required, be left with the Mayor with power to act.

JOHN SAWERS, Chairman.

The report was adopted.

THE FINANCE COMMITTEE

through its chairman, Ald. Roger, reported as appended :

1. That the Treasurer's salary be increased to $700 per annum, and that he be required to assist the Town Engineer in making computations and the figuring required for making assessments for local improvements, and for the By-laws for issuing debentures in connection therewith, and also to keep such books as are necessary in connection with the Engineer's department to keep a record of the cost of public works.
2. That the Auditors be paid $25.00 each for extra work occasioned by the change of Tax Collectors during the year.
3. That a grant of $400.00 be made to the 57th Battalion Band, subject to the usual conditions as to playing in the park.
4. Enquiry having been made into the mistake as to the assessment of several ratepayers for school purposes, reported to the Council by the Assessors, your committee instructed the Solicitor to prepare a By-law to correct the mistake.
5. That the Mayor be authorized to offer $100 reward for information that will lead to the conviction of the incendiary or incendiaries who caused any of the recent fires.
6. That the Ashburnham Council be notified that this Council cannot continue furnishing the use of the fire appliances at the present rate paid by the village, and that they be asked to meet this Council to discuss the matter.
7. That this Council invite the Duke of Cornwall and York to visit Peterborough on the occasion of his visit to Canada next autumn.
8. That the appropriation for the Horticultural Society be made $600.00, on condition that the Society take charge of and properly care for the Central Park, and the small parks at the corners of Park and Murray streets, Park and Charlotte streets, and between Lake and Perry streets on Bethune street, as well as the Victoria Park.
9. That the Salvation Army Band be given a grant of $30.
10. That the Fire, Water and Light Committee be authorized to purchase a horse, harness and cart, and that the Treasurer be authorized to pay for them on the certificate of the chairman of the committee.
11. That the material that was used in draping the town buildings be given to the Central Charity Board.
12. That the expenses of the deputation to Toronto, regarding the water front, etc., be paid on the certificate of the Mayor.

THE MARKET COMMITTEE

reported as follows through its chairman Ald. Batten :

Your Property, Market and Building Committee beg leave to report that on March 18th inst., the market tolls and charges for the year, commencing April 1st, next, were sold by auction to Mr. Joseph G. Hutchinson for $1,300, and that the agreement to purchase and the bond have been executed by Mr. Hutchinson and his sureties.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOS. BATTEN, Chairman.

The report was adopted.

Ald. Roger reported verbally for a committee, which had waited upon the Ontario Government in reference to the securing of the water front privileges. Further plans and specifications will be drawn.

BY-LAWS.

A number of by-laws were introduced as follows :

Ald. Batten—Authorizing the execution of a by-law with Thos. Williams, for providing a dumping ground.

Ald. Roger—For fixing the rate of taxation at 18 mills on the dollar, and authorizing the levying of taxes for 1901 and confirming the assessment of 1900.

Ald. Roger—Providing for grants of $400 to the 57th Reg'l Band and $50 to the Salvation Army Band.

Ald. Roger—Providing for a grant of $600 to the Peterborough and Ashburnham Agricultural Society.

Ald. Roger—Providing for the fixing of the assessment and issuing of debentures for cost of the construction of the granolithic sidewalks.

The by-laws received their several readings and were passed.

In introducing the by-law fixing the rate at 18 mills Ald. Roger, chairman of the Finance Committee, stated that this was the first time since 1893 that the rate had been raised above 17 mills. The estimates were practically the same this year as last with three exceptions. In the first place $600 was asked to defray the estimated expenditure connected with the Waterworks arbitration. The people had decided that the waterworks should be purchased, and as experts were needed to examine the plant, etc., this sum had been set aside for the purpose. Then an invitation had been extended to the Duke of Cornwall and York to visit the town on his way through Canada, and if an acceptance was received it was necessary that fitting preparations be made for his reception, therefore an amount of something over $1,000 was asked for this purpose. The third item asked was an amount of $2,300 to be used in connection with the streets and bridges. When the 17 mill rate was fixed in 1899, the appropriation for streets and bridges was $14,000. The same rate had been maintained, but the expenses had been steadily increasing on electric lights, hydrants, street watering and interest on public debt. All these items had to be provided for and the expense was met by deducting from the appropriation for streets and bridges until it was reduced from $14,000 a year in 1899, to $9,000 a year in 1900. It had been felt for some time that the amount placed at the disposal of the Streets and Bridges Committee was not sufficient, and the Council realized that the time had arrived to raise the appropriation to a sum which would enable the thoroughfares to be kept in better condition. The total of the three items amounted to $4,530, and the extra mill would raise $4,000 ; the balance would be made up by exercising economy in other departments.

On motion of Ald. Batten and Clinkscale, the janitress was granted $5 in view of extra services rendered.

On motion of Ald. Best and Roger, the Ontario Government was memoralised in connection with the altering of the Municipal Act in such a manner as to afford municipalities more protection in the matter of being mulcted in damages for injuries received by persons falling on slippery pavements.

MR. WALLER GOING WEST.

He Leaves on Tuesday for his Farm Near Souris, Man.

Mr. R. J. Waller of town, intends leaving on Tuesday morning for Souris, Man., where he will superintend the putting in of the crop on his extensive farm. Mr. Waller will be absent from town two months, and will take up with him one car load of stock. In addition to Mr. Waller's very large farm at Souris, he has just purchased a quarter section, consisting of 480 acres, about 70 miles west of Souris. It is not his intention to work this land, however, as it is only a matter of speculation.

OBITUARY.

Death of Mr. Frederick Welch in Ashland, Wisconsin.

The death occurred in Ashland, Wis., on Friday morning, of Frederick Welsh, son of Edward Welsh, Esq., of Elm st., town. Typhoid fever was the cause of death, and the remains are expected to arrive in Peterborough on the midnight train Sunday.

The deceased left Peterborough some ten years ago and has been engaged with his brother William in the tailoring business in Ashland. He was very popular here and had a large circle of friends, who will be greatly shocked to hear of his sudden death.

GONE TO THE SOO.

Mr. R. B. Rogers Appointed by the Government.

Mr. Richard B. Rogers, superintending engineer of the Trent Canal, has received instructions from the Department of Railways and Canals to proceed at once to Sault St. Marie, Ont., to investigate and report upon a break which has occurred in the breast wall of the great Canadian lock at that place.

DEATH OF WILLIE SMITH.

The Eight Year Old Son of Principal Wm. Smith.

The many friends of Mr. Wm. Smith, Principal of the Peterborough Central School, will regret exceedingly to learn of the death of his little 8-year-old son, Willie, which occurred at the Nicholls Hospital at 11 o'clock this morning. The little fellow was stricken with diphtheria the early part of the week and was immediately taken to the Hospital. His condition, then, was quite hopeful, and his untimely death will come as a great shock to the remainder of his family.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith will have the sincere sympathy of the community in the loss by death of so promising a young son.

RUSSIA IN A TURMOIL.

Situation So Serious That Czar Called Cabinet Together.

PLOT AGAINST THE RULER'S LIFE

Student Who Drew the Lot to Assassinate the "White Father" Told His Father—Conflict Between Workmen and Cossacks Results in Loss of Life—To Establish Anarchy.

London, March 25.—The Daily Mail publishes the following, dated March 24, from its St. Petersburg correspondent:

"The police have discovered a plot against the life of the Czar. It appears that a group of students drew lots, and that the fatal choice fell to the son of a prominent general. The student told his father, and the latter informed the Czar, informing him to leave St. Petersburg.

"Yesterday (Saturday) 500 workmen from the Obuchower Metal Works paraded on the Nevskoi prospect. On the way thither they demolished the stately brandy booths. Eight hundred Cossacks, with drawn swords, met the workmen, and a sanguinary encounter ensued. The number of killed and wounded is kep number of killed and wounded is kept secret."

A Hundred Killed and Wounded.

London, March 25.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of The Daily Express says: "In the last encounter at Narva Gate 100 workmen are reported to have been killed or wounded by the Cossacks."

The Situation Is Serious.

St. Petersburg, March 25.—The political situation is so serious that Emperor Nicholas held a meeting of the Ministers yesterday to consider the state of public affairs.

Threatening letters have been received by Lieut.-Gen. Kouropatkine, Minister of War; M. [illegible]eurayieff, Minister of Justice, and M. Sipiaguine, Minister of the Interior.

Renewed demonstrations on a great scale are expected.

It is reported that Prince Viazemsky has been disgraced for petitioning the Czar to consider the grievances of the students.

The day passed quietly in St. Petersburg. Some 40,000 persons promenaded about noon along the Nevskoi prospect, particularly in front of the Cathedral of Our Lady of Kanzan. The crowd dwindled to normal proportions when it became apparent that nothing would happen. The promenaders were for the greater part curiosity seekers.

To Establish Anarchy.

New York, March 25.—The Journal has the following from Berlin: Russia is in a turmoil. Troops guard every important city to nip rebellion in the bud. The Czar and Czarina are at their country home at Gatschina, guarded by many thousands of Cossacks. It is reported here that they fled from St. Petersburg in an armored train.

The assassination of M. Bogollepoff, followed last night by the attempt to kill M. Pobledonestzeff, are merely outcropings of what is believed here to be a widespread plot to overturn the Government, assassinate the Czar and establish anarchy. The student uprisings here, at Moscow, Kieff, Odessa and other great university centres, are part of the revolt.

high persons ththt hgrtgrfr ere ferrr

Letters from St. Petersburg say high persons at the court are suspected of connection with the plot, and the Czar cannot trust even his closest advisers.

NEW HEAD FOR JESUIT ORDER.

Pope Said to Be Ready to Remove Father Martin.

Rome, March 25.—The Pope has had special inquiries made respecting the policy and actions of the Jesuits throughout the world. He is much disturbed at the simultaneous and apparently spontaneous popular demonstrations against the order in Spain, Portugal, France and Austria and he expressed the opinion that there must be something radically wrong somewhere. It is now announced that the Pope is satisfied that the trouble is due to mismanagement and has decided to remove Father Martin, the Director-General of the Jesuits. Father Martin, it is understood, will be placated by an important post at the Vatican. The new director-general will be an Italian who will be more directly amenable to church discipline.

LIBERAL NOMINATIONS.

East Peterboro Liberal Association selected William Anderson of Otonabee Township as their representative for the coming election on Saturday. Hon. J. R. Stratton gave the address of the afternoon.

West Durham Liberals in convention at Bowmanville on Saturday chose W. Ricard of Newcastle to contest the riding in their interests at the ensuing election for the Provincial Legislature.

Elections in the Northwest.

Winnipeg, March 25.—Three bye-elections for vacant seats in the Northwest Territory Assembly were held Saturday. Bennett, the former member, has 225 majority in West Calgary. Lake is re-elected for Grenfell by about 550 majority. At last reports Hitchcock was leading in Moose Jaw.

Archbishop Lewis Better.

New York, March 25.—At the Empire Hotel last night it was said that the Right Rev. John Travers Lewis, who has been ill there for several weeks is much improved.

More Filipinos Surrender.

Manila, March 25.—In the Province of Cavite, four insurgent officers and 53 men, with 56 rifles, have surrendered to Lieut.-Col. Frank D. Baldwin of the 4th United States Infantry, and one insurgent officer and 12 men, with 16 rifles, to Col. Walter S. Schuyler of the 46th Volunteer Infantry.

To Fight American Trusts.

Edinburgh, March 25.—The Scottish and North of England steel makers are negotiating with the object of sustaining the present prices, with a view of competition with the American Steel Trust. The Scotch steel makers claim to have full orders.

Turkey Presses Bulgaria.

London, March 25.—"Turkey has addressed to Bulgaria a demand for the dissolution of the Macedonian Committee," says the Athens correspondent of The Times. "The demand comes at an inopportune moment, and places Bulgaria in a difficult position."

At Manilla, Ont., on Sunday lightning struck on Kerr's farm, occupied by William Matthews, just north of the village, killing three valuable horses, two cows and five pigs. A quantity of hay took fire, but the blaze was soon extinguished.

BOTHA HATES MILNER

Boer General Made no Specific Objections to the Terms.

SEVERE FIGHTING ON MARCH 22

British and Boers Fought on Friday East of Klerksdorp in the Transvaal—The 200 Boers Captured Near Thabanchu Were Refugees—Chamberlain Blamed for Losing Chance for Peace.

London, March 25.—Colonial Secretary Chamberlain, in the House of Commons on Saturday, said no specific objections had been made by Gen. Botha to any of the peace terms offered by Gen. Kitchener, and Gen. Botha had made no counter proposals. The only information in possession of the Government, outside of that published in the papers, was contained in a private telegram from General Kitchener saying Gen. Botha had a strong objection to Sir Alfred Milner.

Only Refugees.

London, March 25.—The latest despatches from Bloemfontein show that the 200 Boers who were captured near Thabanchu were refugees who surrendered voluntarily. They were in a bad plight, and had recently been fighting under Gen. Dewet and Gen. Fourie.

German Press Blames Chamberlain.

Berlin, March 25.—Severe press comments continue on the subject of General Botha's negotiations as revealed by the documents submitted to the British Parliament. The opinion is unanimously expressed that Mr. Chamberlain missed a good opportunity for restoring peace, his terms rendering it impossible for the Boers to accept them. The Tageblatt says Great Britain is still insufficiently impressed with the difficulty of the South African situation, otherwise she would make propositions acceptable for the Boers.

WRECK A SUPPLY TRAIN.

Boers Overpowered the Escort of a Convoy Destined For French.

Standerton, Transvaal, Friday, March 23.—Four hundred Boers, under Boer Commander Buys, have wrecked a supply train north of Vlaklaagte. They overpowered the escort, and carried off several wagon loads of provisions.

A convoy destined to join Gen. French's column has been attacked between Blood River and Scheeper's Nex, Transvaal Colony. The British had one man killed and three wounded. The bridge at Blood River was burned.

Heavy Fighting on Friday.

Cape Town, March 24.—Severe fighting occurred Friday, March 22, between the British and Boers at Hartebeestfontein, east of Klerksdorp Transvaal.

The Plague at Cape Town.

Cape Town, March 24.—The bubonic plague continues to spread here. There is an average of six fresh cases officially reported daily. Most of the victims are colored people.

Better Outlook at Marseilles.

Marseilles, March 25.—The proposed arbitration of the differences involved in the strike has led to a general relaxation in the situation. The measures of the police are now less strict. All troops have been removed from the streets and other public places, although retained under arms in barracks.

Yesterday morning the street cars began running intermittently, and a regular service on all lines is promised.

The strike of the bakers has not proved serious. Bread was delivered to all customers yesterday.

Canada and the U. S.

Washington, D. C., March 25.—From the 1st of July next international postal money orders will no longer be used in transactions with the Canadian Postal Department, but the ordinary domestic money orders, which we use in transactions between our home postoffices, will be used also in drawing on the Canadian postoffices, just as if there were no imaginary line dividing the two closely allied countries. This is the last step needed to be taken to put the American and Canadian postal systems into virtually one system of operation.

A Deputation of For Ottawa.

Winnipeg, March 25.—Mayor Fraser, Brandon; Mayor Brown, Portage la Prairie; J. H. Brock and D. W. Bole, Winnipeg, left for Ottawa on Saturday to protest against Mr. Roblin's railway deal being confirmed by the Dominion Parliament.

The grand jury has returned a true bill in the action of Premier Roblin for libel against The Free Press. The language of the libel complained of is "Forgery of a name in St. Paul brought home to Premier Roblin."

MONDAY, MARCH 25, 1901.

EAST PETERBOROUGH.

On Saturday at Norwood one of the most successful, well attended and enthusiastic Liberal conventions ever held in East Peterborough nominated Mr. Wm. Anderson, County Councillor, for the Otonabee division, as a candidate to be elected in support of the Ross Government at next Provincial general elections. Mr. Thos. Blezard, who has represented the riding for 23 years, feeling that he had amply done his duty in this capacity and not desiring to monopolise the honour, announced his retirement at the close of the present parliamentary term. He has served the riding very faithfully and satisfactorily, and he carries with him into the retirement of his mature years the respect and esteem of the Government he has supported, of his fellow members and of his constituents. In Mr. Anderson the Liberals of East Peterborough have a winning candidate. He is well-known, having been in municipal life for the past 25 years, as councillor, reeve, warden and County councillor. He has an excellent knowledge of affairs, sound judgment and a quiet but persistent energy that will constitute him a first-class representative of East Peterborough, which as a rural constituency, will have its best interests served by placing them in the hands of a progressive practical farmer as they are sure to do at the coming contest. Mr. Anderson is personally certain of being the representative of East Peterborough in the next Provincial Parliament,

HITCH IN TRIPLE ALLIANCE.

Kaiser Displeased Over the Abandonment of Italian Army Manoeuvres.

London, March 25.—There now seems no doubt of a hitch in negotiations in the Triple Alliance, but it is impossible to say exactly what has gone awry. The current report in diplomatic quarters places the point of friction at Rome, and there are indications of the early retirement of Signor Prinetti, the Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs. The fact that the Italian War Department, yielding to pressure and much worried by the Minister of Finance, has again decided that there shall be no great army manoeuvres this year, may have something to do with the diplomatic disturbances. This will be the third year in succession that the manoeuvres have been abandoned. Emperor William of Germany is disgruntled over this on the ground that the military efficiency of an ally is imperilled.

Tragedy Near St. Boniface.

Winnipeg, March 25.—Yesterday morning Onesime Falcon was found dead on the Seine River, under a bridge, about a mile northeast of St. Boniface. The bridge is about 25 or 30 feet above the ice, and it is surmised he fell over the railing at the side, which is about three feet in height. He had come from his home in Starbuck to Winnipeg, to collect some money which a lawyer had collected for him, but found it had been garnisheed, leaving him without a cent. He stayed with different friends until Saturday night, when he was seen in St. Boniface about 11 o'clock a little the worse for liquor, and looking for a place to stay. He leaves a wife and family. An inquest will be held this afternoon.

MORE SMALLPOX AT SUDBURY.

Death of F. C. A. Douglas, Formerly of Strathcona's Scouts, of Wounds Received Feb. 16—Rev. J. J. Stonehouse Murdered by Chinese Brigands—Suicide of Mrs. Alice Summers in Toronto Jail.

The British civil service estimates issued Saturday show a total of £23,650,120, an increase of £783,812.

The Rev. J. J. Stonehouse of the London Missionary Society has been murdered by brigands 14 miles east of Tien Tsin.

The Clinton House, Ithaca, one of the oldest and best known hotels in Central New York, was destroyed by fire Saturday evening.

The Right Rev. John Sweeney, D. D., Roman Catholic Bishop of St. John, N. B., Diocese, is seriously ill from a partial stroke of paralysis.

Additional patients are constantly arriving at the Sudbury Hospital for smallpox cases. The total number in the Province has now risen to 153.

In a collision which occurred on the Plant system at Montgomery, Ala., on Saturday between two passenger trains, one man was killed and four were injured.

Friends of Rabbi Joseph Moses of the Temple Emanuel at Kingston, N.Y., were surprised on Saturday at hearing that he had joined the Episcopal Church.

It is proposed to add $100,000,000 to the Union Pacific Railway Company's capital stock, which would make the total capitalization nearly $300,000,000.

The Students Organization Committee at St. Petersburg has issued a call inviting all intelligent members of Russian society to join their ranks in the struggle "for freedom."

The Militia Department announces that No. 186, F. C. A. Douglas, Howard's Scouts, formerly of Strathcona's Horse, has died from wounds received in action on Feb. 16.

Count Tolstoi is reported to be making preparations for quitting Russia forever in disgust and despair, and his English friends are urging him to settle in that country.

The British steamer City of Venice thence for Liverpool, is aground in a dangerous position on Chipbur Sands, 17 miles below Calcutta, on the River Hooghly. The passengers have been landed.

John Machon, clerk of the Township of Carlotteville, Norfolk County, Ont., died at his residence Victoria Saturday morning, having held the position of township clerk for more than 40 years.

There was a shocking suicide at St. Andrew's, N. B., on Sunday morning; Capt. James Storke, formerly a prominent shipbuilder, fastened a piece of iron to his neck and jumped over the wharf.

George Cheveyes, who shot and killed Town Marshal John Norris of Pocahontas, Ark., while Norris was performing official duty, was taken from jail by a mob of 250 men Saturday night and hanged.

The Paris surgeons on Saturday succeeded in extracting from the right thigh of M. de Rodays of The Figaro the bullet which he received in his duel with Count Boni de Castellane. The editor's condition is satisfactory.

Great damage to shipping was done by a severe southeast cyclone at Pensacola, Fla., on Saturday morning. The wind's velocity ranging from 48 to 54 miles an hour, with gusts of extreme velocity of 70 miles an hour.

The Minnesota State Senate reconsidered and finally passed Senator Chilton's bill prohibiting the marriage of insane, epileptic and idiotic persons and requiring a medical certificate of all applicants for marriage licenses.

Fire broke out in the boiler room of the Southam Printing and Lithographing Company, London, about 3.40 Sunday morning. The upper portion of the building was badly gutted. The total loss will amount to between $6,000 and $7,000.

A strike of stablemen was inaugurated at Newmarket, England, on Saturday. Some 700 men are affected. A large influx of unemployed has begun, and there is some fear of disorder. A number of special constables have been sworn in.

It is announced that the Red Cross line and the Booth Steamship Co., which have each been running a steamship service between New York and ports in North Brazil, have combined. The two companies have between them about 30 vessels.

Alice Summers of Toronto, charged with having stolen $25 worth of embroidery from a departmental store in that city, committed suicide in the jail on Sunday by strangling herself with a bed-cover. She was afraid to face the disgrace of appearing in the Police Court on Monday.

The body of Charles Kent has been found in his house at Elkhorn, Man., with his brains blown out. He was the only son of William Kent of Norval, Ont., and had only been there since last summer. He lived on a rented farm southwest of the town. Parties have gone out to investigate.

John F. Roadhouse, a porter in the employ of Warwick Bros. & Rutter, wholesale stationers and publishers, Toronto, met a terrible death on Saturday afternoon while discharging his duties. He was under the big press when the machinery was started, and one of the large revolving bars struck him on the head. His skull was fractured in several places, and death was almost instantaneous. An inquest will be held,

Ottawa, Ont., March 25.—The Press Gallery dinner was held Saturday evening in the Senate restaurant. Marc Sauvalle was master of ceremonies, and regulated the speech making with an ax presented by Carrie Nation in person. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. R. L. Borden, Speakers Power and Brodeur and Hon. David Mills were the guests. Messrs. Tarte, Cargill, Clancy, Calvert, Ganong, Bell of Picton, D. C. Fraser, J. E. Walsh of The Canada Atlantic; Lancelles Carr of The Western Daily Mail, Wales; P. H. Palmer of Dawson City, and George E. Casey, ex. M. P., were present. "The King" was the only formal toast.

THE HEALTH HABIT.

Just as Easy to Form as any Other.

We do not deliberately form our je habits but they are unconsciously acquired and grow as we grow, and by the time we learn they are hurting us, we find them too strong to be easily broken.

Then, why not form a good habit, a habit which will counteract the unfashionable habit of being always well.

The best health habit to get into is to have and keep a vigorous stomach; if you have a healthy digestion you can drink your beloved coffee, smoke your favourite brand of tobacco, with little or no harm; the mischief begins when these things are forced upon the faithful stomach, without any assistance.

Form the habit of taking after meals some harmless but efficient digestive which will relieve the stomach of so much extra work.

Nature furnishes us with such digestives and when they are combined in such a pleasant preparation as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, they give the overworked stomach just the necessary assistance to secure perfect digestion without any of the harmful effects of cathartics and similar drugs.

The habit of taking Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after meals is as necessary to the weak stomach as food itself, and indeed to get the benefit from food eaten, nothing better and certainly nothing safer can be used.

Many families consider Stuart's Tablets as essential in the house as knives and forks.

They consist entirely of natural digestive principles without the effect or characteristics of drugs; they have no cathartic action, but simply go to work on the food eaten and digest it.

Take into account your bad habits and the expense they entail and then invest fifty cents in a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and see if your digestion for the next month is not vastly improved.

Ask the clerk in any drug store the name of the most successful and popular stomach remedy and he will say Stuart's.

King Leopold's Wish.

Brussels, March 25.—King Leopold II., on receiving the British Embassy sent to announce the death of Queen Victoria and the accession of Edward VII., expressed the hope that the relations between Great Britain and Belgium would become even closer than they are at present.

Trouble in Corea Now.

Yokohama, March 24.—Advices from Seoul announce that the Corean Government has dismissed from office Mr. M. Leavy Brown, Director-General of Corean Customs, and that Great Britain is protesting against his dismissal.

Queen Alexandra at Copenhagen.

Copenhagen, March 25. — Queen Alexandra of Great Britain arrived Saturday evening. She met with an enthusiastic reception.

THE TIEN TSIN TROUBLE.

It Broke Out Afresh Through Russian Duplicity, but Later Report Says Russia Agrees to Arbitration.

London, March 25.—The Sunday Special's Tien Tsin correspondent says: "A new and unfortunate hitch has occurred in the Anglo-Russian siding dispute. After both parties had withdrawn according to agreement, the Russians suddenly returned to the disputed spot and planted flags over all the territory. They afterwards again retired, leaving the flags flying."

The Berlin correspondent of The Sunday Special says: "The settlement of the siding dispute was the work of Count Von Waldersee, who interferred at the special request of Emperor William, the latter considering that the maintenance of friendly relations between all the members of the international forces was clearly within the scope of Von Waldersee's duties as commander-in-chief."

Russia Agrees to Arbitration.

London, March 25.—According to the St. Petersburg correspondent of The Times, wiring Saturday, Count Lamsdorff, the Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs, has agreed with Great Britain to submit the Tien Tsin Railway siding to the arbitration and settlement of Count Von Waldersee.

RUSSIAN CRUISER GOES.

It Is Reported She Is to Proceed to Japanese Waters.

Philadelphia, March 25.—The Russian Cruiser Variag sailed from this port yesterday afternoon, under cable orders said to have been received Friday by Captain Vladimir Behr from the Russian Government. It is reported that the cablegram ordered him to proceed at once to Japanese waters. Captain Behr would not confirm or deny this report.

RUSSIA STILL AGGRESSIVE.

Has Been Making Trouble in Corea With Success.

London, March 25.—The dismissal of Mr. McLeavy Brown from the post of Director-General of Corean Customs is regarded in London as another score for Russia. In 1895 and again in 1898, Russian pressure was exerted to procure his removal. In the latter case he was only reinstated after a British squadron had moved to Chemulpo. As recently as a few months ago Russia strongly opposed an attempt by Mr. Brown to raise a loan for the Corean Government to purchase shares in the railway from Seoul to Fu San. As a result of her opposition the negotiations for the loan failed.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of The Daily Mail asserts that M. Pavloff, Russian Minister at Seoul, has protested against Corea taking foreigners into the Government service, with the exception of Russians, and demanded the appointment of the latter, but Corea seemed determined, with the help of the powers, to defend her integrity.

The Japanese Squadron Moving.

London, March 25.—"A Japanese squadron, Admiral Tsushima commanding, left Nagasaki Saturday for Corea," says the Yokohama correspondent of The Daily Mail. "The general opinion here is that the situation is serious. Urgent instructions have been issued by the Minister of War, Gen. Viscount Katsoura, to the commanders of forts, to attend a conference in Tokio, to consider questions of home defence.

"The war rumors are causing a fall in prices on the various bourses. The feeling of the country is uneasy and intensely anti-Russian, but the Cabinet shows no indication of its policy."

Germans Ousted Chinese Troops.

Tien Tsin, March 24.—The Germans have ousted the Chinese Imperial troops from the passes on the Chi Li-Shansi frontier, and intend summering in the vicinity of Shan Hai Kwan.

A Warning.

To feel tired after exertion is one thing; to feel tired before is another.

Don't say the latter is laziness—it isn't; but it's a sign that the system lacks vitality, is running down, and needs the tonic effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

It's a warning, too—and sufferers should begin taking Hood's at once.

HOW OLD MAN HAINES LOST PATIENCE.

The red gentleman with the feathers in his hat and the telegraph wire bracelets became too importunate in his demands for cigarettes, and as he had been detected in the act of appropriating a wooden handled skinning knife, valued $1.50, five minutes before the post trader walked around the counter and kicked him energetically out of the store and half way around the hay corral. It spoke volumes for the post trader's activity that he was able to do this, for it is no easy matter to keep within kicking range of a properly scared Crow Indian for the distance that he covered, to say nothing of performing the act itself. Therefore the post trader was breathless when he returned and had to lie on the counter with his head on a bolt of pink striped calico to recover himself. The old bullwhacker, who had been watching the race from his seat on a nail keg, with a grin on his wrinkled mahogany visage, complimented the advance agent of commerce on his achievement.

"I wuz anthen of a foot racer myself when I wus younger an limberer than what I am now," he said, "but I dunno that I ever seen the time that I could have done better than that. I'm regardin it purely as a physical feat, however. I'm not sayin that you showed a strikin amount of jedgment. When Young Man Afraid of His Breechclout has got you knotted up with green rawhide an the squaws are fixing the fire fer the grand barbecue, mebbe you will regret your pernishus activity an cuss the day that you humbled the proud spirit of the noble Injun warrior. Is this shebang insured?"

"You was never introduced to me," rejoined the post trader. "I've got a half inch of callous on the soles of my feet, an I come into this country from the headwaters of Bitter creek along of J. W. Hancher an Ed Phernetton an the rest of them desperadoes. I've got relatives by marriage among the Crows and Ogallalas, an I've drunk more alkali water an eat more dog an buffalo berry than any white man this side of the big Mizzoura. I didn't bring my outfit in here in the spring of '99. What did you expect me to do—give that greasy, tin tagged coyote my stock of cigarettes to keep him good tempered?"

"An if you had you wouldn't have forfuted his friendship," returned the old bullwhacker. "As it is I've got an idee his heart is bad, an he won't come an see you no more. An Injun has got his feelin's the same as a white man has, an I reckon you would git hostile if any hombre booted you from blazes to breakfast because you ast him fer the means of soothin your nerves. You injered that Crow in a sensitive spot, like."

"I done my best to," said the post trader.

"He may belong to the Badface band an have hair in his tepee," continued the old bullwhacker in the same grave tone of reproof, "but at the same time he's a human, an as a human it's your play to extend the right hand of fellership to him instid of the sole of your number nine. Hain't they got no Sunday school liberries out on Bitter creek? Hain't you never read about the settler who found a poor, starin redskin out in the snow plum exhausted an took him inter his shack an fed him up a whole lot an warmed him an then turned him loose with a grub stake, an when the Two Kettle outfit exhoomed the tomahawk an raised merry Cain scalpin an burnin through the paleface settlements an the good hearted granger was raked in the Injun that he had saved sashays in an rescoos him from a turr'ble death?"

"I've read them stories," said the post trader.

"But you don't believe 'em," said the old bullwhacker. "You ain't sanguine concernin the good that there is in your feller man. If you git a bad deal, you decline to chip in an lay down your hand instid of callin fer cards an draw-in to the ace."

"I don't draw to no two spot in the hope of completin a flush."

"Well, my the'ry is that there ain't no galoot so low down but if you treat him with kindness an keep him close herded he will show the good that's in him. Did I ever tell you about old man Haines an Gus Minnick? Well, it goes to prove what I wuz a-sayin. Old man Haines lived out on Blue creek apiece above where it empties into the Platte, opposite the mouth of Ash Hollow, where Harney cleaned up the Sioux. He wus jest about the most benev'lent old duck that ever ripped up tough sod with a balky team of bulls. Long sufferin wuzn't no name fer him. He had two boys that wus jest like him, an his ole woman wus worse'n he wuz.

"One fine, cloudy evenin Gus Minnick an Todd Blakey comes along an rustles ten head of old man Haines' ponies an wus hikin south with 'em when they met up with a crowd of inquirin strangers who were driftin back down Prairie Dog into Kansas after an unsuccessful pursoot of some north bound hoss thieves. The boys had too many brands in their bunch, an one of the stranglers reckernized Blakey, so they tied their feet under their horses' bellies an headed fer the nearest timber. They give Blakey the first swing in an wus adiustin the grass rope to Gus' neck when old man Haines comes up with his biggest boy, Arch. They had been hot an close on the trail all the time.

"As soon as they explained who they wus an identerfied their ponies, the boss strangler allowed that there wuzn't no reason why the ceremonies shouldn't perceed, an he throwed the other end of the rope over the limb.

"'Why,' says the old man, 'you hain't goin to hang that poor boy, air you?'

"'I reckon I am,' says the boss strangler, cheerful an gay.

"'I don't believe it helps a man to hang him,' says Haines. 'You jest give him up to me, an I'll take him back to the ranch with me an surround him with moral influences an keep him out of bad company. He's got good in him, an I'll bring it out of him an make a useful citerzen of him.'

"Well, the long an short of it wuz that he begged so loud that they let Minnick go, an old man Haines started back with him. On the way he talked to Gus like a father an told him how wrong it wuz to rustle cayuses when he could get 'em himself by workin honust fer 'em. He made Gus a present of the ten that he had stole as a starter an offered him good wages to work on the ranch.

"Gus staid there fer two months, an then he got inter a argyment with the biggest boy about breakin a colt an slot him up an lit out. Old man Haines wuz real provoked about it, but he jumped on a horse an put out after Minnick an overtook him at Box Elder. As soon as Gus seen him he throwed down on him with a Winchester, but the old man told him to behave himself an quit monkeyin with firearms.

"'I sh'd think you'd seen the evil of them sort of actions after killin Henry,' he said.

"'Did I kill him?' says Gus.

"'Yes, you did,' says the old man as severe as he knowed how. 'An I sh'd think you'd be ashamed of yourself. I don't wonder you felt as if you didn't want to look me in the face after sech actions. All the same, I don't want you straggling off where you'll get inter bad comp'ny, so you jest come right back home with me. We've got to have them colts broke, an we're short handed now.'

"Well, Gus knowed how forgivin the old man wuz, an he went back, an they all avoided the subjec' of Henry, so's not to hurt his feelin's. He staid on a month longer, an then because the old woman burned his cakes fer him he brained her with the skillet. The other boy told him that that wuzn't no way to do, an Gus got mad an massacreed him with the butcher knife an then set fire to the house an lit out.

"When old man Haines got back an found out what had happened, he said that it wus enough to make a man lose patience, but he wus set in his ways, an he said that he would make a good citizen of Gus in spite of hill an high water. So he went out after him again an coaxed him back, an everybody said that Gus was a changed man from that time forward, as meek as Moses an honust as the day."

"Are they livin there together yet?" inquired the post trader, with some interest.

The old bullwhacker took a large chew of tobacco before replying. Then he said: "I wuz hopin you wouldn't ast me that question, becus it might seem to milertate against my the'ry. The truth is that the old man sent Gus to town one day, an Gus come back with a jug of whisky fer himself, but he forgot the old man's smokin terbacker. The old man said that it showed selfishness an ingratitude on Gus' part, an he allowed that he must be poor material anyway, an he had done the best that he could with him, but that settled it. They wuz standin by the woodpile at the time, an the old man had the ax. I come along jest in time to assist at the funeral.

"Still I never took the old man's view. I reckon that Gus just forgot."—Chicago Record.

Good Advice; Hard to Follow.

Extreme worry comes from trying to bear all the cares of a lifetime at once instead of letting each day's evil be sufficient unto itself. If we could live our whole life in a few hours, it might be consistent to think it all over in one night. There is no past, there is no future, for doing or accomplishing. The present time alone is for action, and the order is and always will be one thing at a time. This one thing must be done on the instant in whatever circumstances we find ourselves.

Not that we should be forgetful of the past or careless of the future. The former has been our faithful schoolmaster; the latter holds for us the issues of life. That we may act intelligently in the present it is essential for us to look forward as far as the future can reasonably be predicted, but not to worry.

A degree of anxiety may be founded upon facts that point almost inevitably to future difficulties, but a large part of the forecast of trouble is groundless, as is proved when things do not turn out as expected. Overanxiety is always crossing bridges before they are reached, and it will stay awake all night borrowing trouble from the remote future.—Chautauquan.

WEST VIRGINIA ALERT.

Governor Will Urge Appropriation to Have State Represented.

Governor Atkinson of West Virginia announces that he will embody in his next message to the legislature a recommendation for an appropriation to pay the expenses of the state commission having in charge the state exhibit for the Pan-American Exposition. West Virginia is one of the many states that are inviting capital and labor to come in and help develop their natural resources. With her 15,000 square miles of coal lands, her thousands of acres of hard wood forests, her wonderful stores of petroleum, her iron ore deposits and her great acreage of lands suitable for farming, stock raising and wool growing, she has much to offer in the way of exhibits and much to gain by bringing her resources properly before the world. It is expected that an exhibit will be made showing by maps and specimens, statistics and information of a general character what a newcomer to the state may be able to do in the way of advancing the fortunes of himself and those who depend upon him. The millions of visitors to Buffalo next year will be interested to knowing what the possibilities are in all parts of the western hemisphere. The West Virginia commission is composed of Stuart W. Walker of Martinsburg, president; J. C. Morrison of Charleston, secretary; R. B. Battelle of Wheeling, treasurer; James M. Porter, Jr., of New Cumberland and E. E. Smith of Parkersburg.

GUARDING AGAINST FIRE.

Every Precaution to Be Taken at the Pan-American Exposition.

There are two fire houses upon the grounds of the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo, N. Y., which are fully equipped with the apparatus and men necessary to fight any outbreak of fire upon the grounds.

In addition to this there are chemical fire extinguishers in all of the buildings. These are of the same type used at the World's fair at Chicago and are attached to the wall on the interior of the building. A cog on the bearing of the reel releases a valve which turns on the water in case of fire. It is only necessary to unreel the hose and thus turn on a stream which can be directed upon the blaze without a moment's delay. In this way every precaution is to be taken to prevent the occurrence of any fire and consequent destruction of valuable property.

Excursions to the Pan-American.

All over the country the people are planning to make excursions next summer to the Pan-American Exposition. Clubs are being organized whose members are saving money for the trip in this way. Pan-American study clubs are also being organized. Some large business firms are planning to give excursions to their employees, and in many manufactories the employees are organizing to go in a body to the Exposition. In the large shoe manufacturing concern of Hanan & Sons of Brooklyn the employees, who have organized themselves into an association called the Mutual Aid society, have decided on a five days' excursion to the Pan-American and Niagara Falls and have engaged a special vestibuled train for the purpose. The trip will be made during Independence week, and it is expected that at least 1,000 persons will participate in the journey.

Firemen to Attend In a Body.

The Hill Hook and Ladder Company of Rensselaer, N. Y., will attend the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo next summer in a body.

AT TWILIGHT.

In the old home alone at twilight gray,
As night folds her robes o'er Thanksgiving day,
I am dreaming again by the firelight's glow
The beautiful dreams of the long ago—

Long ago, when my wayward feet
Wandered mid flowers wild and sweet,
When hearts were golden and skies were blue
And life reflected each glorious hue,

When the dearest joy of the gladsome earth
Was the blush of arbutus, the violet's birth,
And the deepest of all my childish woes
Was watching the bright petals fall from the rose.

Pale is the blossom I blushing knew
And its leaf overflowing with tears of dew.
The violet sobs as she droops her head,
"You loved me not as you loved the dead."

Rambling o'er mossy ruins gray
Is the eglantine of the years, and today
Its bright thorns gleam in the autumn sun,
But its blossoms have fallen one by one.

Ah, I know full well, for my thoughts will stray,
As I sit alone in the shadows gray,
Though the arbutus blossoms and sweetbrier grows,
That every petal is gone from the rose.
—Rose VanB. Speece in Scranton Tribune.

Modified Cruelty.

They met again at an evening party.

The young woman, however, swept past him with superb unconsciousness of his presence.

"Miss Licklodder," he said, "I am glad to see you are not a vivisectionist."

"Sir!"

"Don't you see? You cut me dead."

Then, with his head stiffly erect, young Spoonamore strolled to another part of the room.—Chicago Tribune.

The Gentle Martyr.

She suffered all the weary day,
Yet never made complaint;
She bore her pain as if she'd been
Some good, old fashioned saint.

But with the night came rest for her,
Untroubled rest and sweet;
She peeled her number four shoes from
Her number seven feet.

THE VILLAGE STREET.

From nine till twelve the village street
In sunny silence lies.
The chickens rustle in the dust;
The old dog snaps at flies.

But when the bell has rung for noon,
Then, with a tramp and shout,
The children of the village school
In haste come pouring out.

They run and jump and swing their books,
And such a noise they make
That all the sunny, sleeping street
Seems suddenly to wake.

The Election of Senator Gitkinz.

John Gitkinz had spent two terms in the United States senate and was anxious to go back for another six years. Unfortunately his prospects did not appear to be the brightest. The legislature of the far western state which would meet to choose his successor within two months was evenly divided. Exactly half its members on joint ballot belonged to the political organization of which Senator Gitkinz was one of the heads. For purposes of identification it may be called the Blue party. The Red party, which was bitterly opposed to Senator Gitkinz, had an equal number of votes in the legislature, lacking only one. The odd man was State Senator Marr, elected as an independent from one of the interior counties of the state. If Marr voted for Senator Gitkinz, his election was assured. If, as was expected, he voted for the caucus nominee of the Red party, it would be necessary to detach some opposition member from his party allegiance. That was the problem which Senator Gitkinz was facing.

Three men sat in a little room opening into the library of Senator Gitkinz's house in the town of Carton. They were smoking and looking into the fire. Gitkinz himself was a large man of 55, dressed so well that his clothes were not at all noticeable. His heavy figure was topped by a large and well shaped head. His iron gray hair was worn long and his face smooth shaven. With his deep set black eyes and eagle beak he looked not unlike the pictures of Daniel Webster. Early in his political career the resemblance had been marked, and he had ever since cultivated it. Even great men, it may be remarked, have their little vanities.

The man standing next the table was Gregory Uppman, for more than 15 years the private secretary of Senator Gitkinz. He was rather small, with a smooth manner, an educated hand grasp and a thorough acquaintance with practical politics.

The third man in the room was Charles Swerin, tall, thin and gaunt, with faded blue eyes looking out through big bowed gold glasses. He looked the part of a student, a chess player, perhaps, or a philosopher, used to concentrating his mind for a long time on an abstruse problem. Swerin's name never got into the papers. He had no apparent business. Yet he lived well and was always well supplied with money. To the few he was known as "the brains of Senator Gitkinz."

The three were completing their plan of action for the campaign so close at hand.

"I've gone over all of them," said Swerin, "and I think we had better concentrate on old Senator Marr. It will seem more natural if he flops than if one of the regular Reds comes over to us. Let's see what you've got on Marr, Gregg."

The private secretary got up, unlocked and opened the doors of a tall cabinet. It was filled with little pigeonholes, each of them numbered. In a drawer below was a list of the members of the state legislature, the number opposite each name being the same as that on one of the pigeonholes above. He ran his finger down the list to the name of Marr, noted the number opposite it and then pulled from the cabinet the little tin box which bore the same number. The box was half filled with papers and clippings.

"Marr was born in New York state," began Uppman. "His father was a farmer. The old man died while Marr was in the district school, and he has had to support the family ever since. He was admitted to the bar when he was 40 years old. He is attorney for the street car company which owns the line in Hartil, his home town. This is the first time he has ever held office. He is rated at from $5,000 to $10,000. Personally he is said to be a prohibitionist, though when he was in Chicago last winter he took a little fun with the boys. He has an exemplary reputation in Hartil. Dorson does not think him a man of strong character."

"I think I know how to manage old man Marr," said Swerin, after a moment's pause. "Does he know you, Greg?"

"No; I never saw him in my life."

"Well, I want you to find out all about that street railway line which he represents as attorney. Get its capital, its condition, and the names of its chief owners, and try to find out whether it can be bought at a reasonable price."

Within a week State Senator Marr received a letter from a Chicago lawyer asking if the Hartil street car line, for which he was attorney, was on the market. If it could be bought at a reasonable figure, the lawyer wrote, he might be able to find a purchaser for it.

It happened that the Hartil Street Car company had never been a profitable investment. Its owners were local capitalists, who had been chiefly moved to build the line by town pride. The best it had ever done was to pay expenses. Its owners, as Marr knew, would be delighted to get the property off their hands, provided only that it might be maintained and kept running.

He held a conference with the men who owned most of its stock before he answered the letter from Chicago. Then he wrote that while the company was not anxious to sell out it might consider an offer of $75,000. The Chicago man came back with a proposition to pay $50,000. There followed further negotiations by correspondence. Finally Marr was asked to make a trip to Chicago to talk the matter over. Before he left an upset price of $55,000 was fixed for the property.

"We'll let it go at $55,000," the president of the company said to Marr as the latter stepped on the train.

Gregory Uppman met him at the Union station and introduced himself as one of the men interested in the purchase of the road. The two went directly to the lawyer's office. There the deal was discussed at length. As a final proposition the new syndicate made an offer of $55,000, to which Marr refused to listen.

Finally Uppman came to the point.

"I'll tell you what, Marr," he said. "You use your influence with the company to get them to accept $55,000, and we'll be glad to pay you a personal commission of $3,000 when the deeds are signed."

At first Marr was horrified at the thought. It seemed to him that to take such a commission would be selling his professional honor. He shook his head. Uppman went on explaining smoothly that a commission on large sales of this kind was quite the usual thing. It was not intended in any way as a bribe. The property was not worth more than $55,000. Its owners were getting a good price for their line. There was nothing out of the way about it.

The more Marr thought of the matter the more it seemed to him that perhaps he would be justified in taking the $3,000. He had secured the price fixed by the owners of the line. Surely there was no harm in his making a little out of it on his own account. Besides, he needed the money badly. If after thinking it over he concluded that it would be best not to keep the money, he could turn it over when the price agreed on was paid.

Uppman took him out to dinner that evening. They dined at a club, and Marr drank more wine than he was used to. By 10 o'clock he had decided to take the money and settle it with his conscience later. Next day the deal was completed. Marr got his $3,000 in cash, and the papers were signed for the transfer of the Hartil street car line.

On the next train Uppman followed Marr home to the far west. Marr went straight through to Hartil, where the street car people congratulated him on the successful completion of his work. Uppman stopped off at Carton and reported to Swerin and Senator Gitkinz. Ten days later he and Swerin went up to the state capital to open the senator's campaign headquarters. One of the first men Uppman met in the lobby of the hotel was Senator Marr, just come down to attend the session. The legislator recognized him with evident signs of embarrassment. But the politician wasted little time.

"How do you do, Senator Marr?" he began. "I'm glad to see you again. Come down to look the ground over a little in advance?"

"Yes, Mr. Uppman, but what brings you here just now?"

"Oh, I'm Senator Gitkinz's private secretary, you know! I've come down to open his headquarters for the campaign. By the way, senator, we'd like to have you call on us as soon as you can conveniently. Parlor G, second floor."

Senator Marr blushed, hesitated and looked around as if he had been detected in some dishonorable act.

"You're Senator Gitkinz's private secretary?" he stammered. "I thought you were a street railway man."

"Oh, I have a little interest in one or two lines, but what I'm chiefly interested in is to get Senator Gitkinz sent back to the senate. I trust you'll call on us today. You and I know each other pretty well already, you know. As friends we ought to stick together, don't you think? I hate these bitter political quarrels, and I'm sure we shall get along together without any trouble. You'll come and see me, won't you?"

For a moment the two men fought a duel with their eyes. Then Marr's glance dropped. He felt that he was defeated.

"Yes," he answered hesitatingly, "I'll come."

When Uppman reported the result of his interview to Swerin, who was sitting quietly up stairs in an inner room, the latter gentleman smiled grimly.

"Checkmate!" he said. "I thought we had the old man where he couldn't get away."—Chicago Tribune.

IN BED SIX WEEKS.

A Very Bad Case of Dyspepsia—But after Three Years of Suffering, Mrs. Tefft is Cured by Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Mr. R. C. Tefft is Vice-President of the East York Agricultural Society. His home is in Markham, Ont.

He says:

"For three years past my wife has been a sufferer from Dyspepsia and Indigestion. Her sufferings were continual but were more severe on some days than others.

"So greatly did the complaint increase of late that she was obliged to take to her bed, and for six weeks she was unable to leave it. The pains she endured during that period were beyond description.

"Our doctor attended her but did no permanent good.

"Finally, she was advised to try Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. She received marked benefit immediately, and after having used three boxes she was able to get up and attend to her regular duties as well as ever.

"Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets were the only remedy that ever did her any good.

"I have used the Tablets myself for Dyspepsia and Constipation, and always with the best results.

"They have effected a cure in every case for which they have been used in our district."

Is your case any worse than that of Mrs. Tefft? Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets cured her. They will cure any case of Dyspepsia, no matter how painful. Your druggist sells them. Don't wait, and doubt, and suffer. They never disappoint. No matter how many other treatments have failed. Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets never fail

MR. WM. ANDERSON LIBERAL NOMINEE

To Contest the East Riding in the Interests of the Ross Administration.

WAS THE UNANIMOUS CHOICE.

A Large and Representative Gathering of the Reformers of East Peterborough Assembled at Norwood---The Government Urged to Grant a Charter for a Railroad to the Back Country.

One of the most enthusiastic, largely attended, as well as most representative conventions of the Liberals of East Peterborough, ever held met in the Town Hall, Norwood, on Saturday. The object was to reorganize and select a candidate to carry the riding in the Liberal interests at the forthcoming general provincial elections, and the enthusiasm and unanimity were an augury of success in the coming contest. Every township and municipality in the great riding was well represented.

The first business was the Election of Officers

which resulted as follows :—

President—Andrew Shearer, Keene.

Vice-President and Presidents of township organizations—Wm. Buck, Asphodel; R. Sheridan, Ashburnham; P. W. C. Shewen, Burleigh, etc., Wm. Purdy, Belmont; J. W. Ratcliffe, Chandos; Wm. Moher, Douro; Thos. Webster, Dummer; Wm. Matheson, Havelock; H. G. Buck, Norwood, A. Weir, Otonabee.

Secretary-Treasurer—Dr. Moffatt.

A cordial vote of thanks suitably acknowledged was passed to the retiring officers.

The newly elected president after briefly returning thanks for the honours of the position, called upon Mr. Thos. Blezard, M.P.P., to address the gathering.

Mr. Blezard Speaks.

Mr. Blezard who was received with great enthusiasm, began his remarks by stating that in all his long experience he had never seen a larger and more representative convention, nor one containing so many of the prominent and working Liberals of the riding. He saw among them the old familiar faces of those who had stood by him—many of them for the past 21 years, and had helped him in his successful battles; and if they stood by the candidate who would be nominated to-day with the same loyalty and fidelity. there was no doubt of his election. (Applause.) In his past career he had doubtless made mistakes, and fallen short in some things of what he would have liked to do; but the hearty support he had received had helped him to win. It had been said that he (Mr. Blezard) was being "side-tracked" and crowded out of the field. That was not the case. He was not retiring because he feared the result of a contest. (Applause.) He was not afraid of Dr. Ford or any other man. The East Riding was Liberal at heart, and if he had wished to enter the contest, he would be returned triumphantly, as he had been so many times before. He had been urged by many of the prominent Liberals of the Riding to remain in the field; but he had represented the riding nearly twenty-three years, and had earned retirement. He was not afraid of East Peterborough not remaining Liberal, for there are a dozen men, anyone of whom, if nominated by such a convention, and supported, as he had been supported, could be elected. A good Government with a good record, which had the courage of their convictions, which had the enterprise to enter upon a strong policy for the development of the resources of this great province, had strong claims upon the support of the people. He referred to the immense agricultural, mineral and timber resources of the Temiscamingue District, and said the Government was going to settle and fill up this great fertile region with hardy settlers. There might be disputes about the surplus, but he didn't care a cent about a surplus—the question was, was the money of the province well spent. We must have settlement of our back country, and we must have railways to open up the new country, to develop its resources and promote settlement. The strength of the Government was shown by the weakness of the Opposition, which was weak because it found nothing serious to object to or criticize. The estimates had passed through the House this season without opposition, and almost without challenge. He had been in the House for 23 years, and had never seen the Government get through their work so easily. With so good a cause there would be no doubt of electing their candidate. But the convention and the Liberals of East Peterborough must help the candidate. This was a big riding and a candidate would be kept busy covering it. He closed by insisting upon the importance of the best possible organization, and by saying that in retiring he could hardly express his thanks for the hearty support and unwavering kindness he had received at the hands of the electors for the past 23 years.

Mr. Blezard Thanked.

The following motion was enthusiastically and unanimously adopted:

Moved by John Finlay, Norwood, seconded by Wm. Moher, Douro:

That this convention of Liberals of East Peterborough, hereby gives heartfelt expression to the deep regret which the Liberals of this riding learn of the intention of its veteran representative, Mr. T. Blezard, to retire from public life at the end of his present parliamentary term; and while so doing to place on record on behalf of the people of the riding its deep sense of appreciation of the faithful and efficient services he has rendered both the Province and the riding. It is indeed a proud record that he can retire full of honours and possessing the unbroken confidence of the constituency he has so faithfully served for the long space of twenty-three years, and whose gratitude and respect he has so well earned; and this convention hopes that he may be spared to many years of happiness and prosperity, and that the Liberals of this riding, and the Liberal Government of this Province may, in lieu of his active service and support, for many years enjoy the benefit of the sage counsels which nearly a quarter of a century of active representation and experience have so well qualified him to give.

Mr. Blezard warmly thanked the convention for its flattering vote of thanks. He was still the representative of the riding and expected to spend another session in the Legislature, and to have still many opportunities for serving his constituents in both a representative and personal capacity. (Applause.)

Other Resolutions.

The sub-joined resolutions were also enthusiastically carried:

Moved by Wm. Matheson, Havelock, seconded by Wm. Leeson, Douro.

That this Convention of the Liberals of East Peterborough hereby pledges its loyal allegiance to His Majesty, King Edward VII. and expresses its unwavering confidence in the great leader of the Liberal Party in the House and in the country, Right Honourable Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and its admiration and appreciation of the eminent ability which he has exhibited and employed in both an Imperial and Dominion sense,—in promoting the integrity of the Empire, strengthening the bonds that unite us to the mother country, and advancing the material prosperity of the Dominion, unifying and consolidating the elements of our population, harmonizing their aims and aspirations, and creating a solidarity of national spirit; and that this confidence and admiration extend to his colleagues in the Government, who co-operate so harmoniously with him in spirit and in action, in guiding the destinies of Canada in such a way that peace, progress and prosperity mark the conditions of the country to a degree that makes for the present, well-being of, as well as gives hope for a great future for Canada,

Moved by J. M. Drummond, Keene, seconded by Wm. Buck, ex-County Councillor, Asphodel, and resolved

That the Liberals of East Peterborough in convention assembled, desire to most emphatically place on record their complete confidence in the Ontario Government and in the distinguished statesman at its head, Hon. G. W. Ross, whose lofty imperial spirit, whose broad Canadianism and fidelity to the interests, and faith in the future of Ontario, co-operating with similar qualities in his colleagues in the Cabinet, have in the short space of time he has been at the head of affairs, resulted in greatly promoting the welfare of the Province; that we desire to express our full approval of his broad, progressive and public-spirited policy, looking to, and already operative in developing our unbounded natural resources, opening up our new country and re-acting beneficially upon the prosperity of Older Ontario; and that we heartily pledge ourselves to employ every legitimate effort to retain to the Province the services of the Ross Government, and to that end to do all in our power to secure the return of the Liberal candidate nominated at this convention, at the forthcoming Provincial general election.

Moved by P. W. Reynolds, of Norwood, seconded by the Rev. P. Conway, of Norwood,

That whereas application has been made by the directors of the Norwood and Apsley Railway to the Ontario Legislature for a grant of subsidies towards the building of said road;

And whereas said road is entirely within the limits of the East Riding of the County of Peterborough, and is particularly needed in the way of opening up and developing the vast mineral and mining resources of the back country; and whereas such road will be of great benefit and assistance to the Municipalities of Norwood Village and the Townships of Asphodel, Dummer, Belmont and Methuen, Burleigh, Chandos and Anstruther, as well as the adjacent county.

Be it resolved that this convention of the Liberals of East Peterborough, earnestly and confidently requests the candidate chosen by this convention to use his best efforts and endeavours in his representative capacity, to procure government recognition of the road and subsidies to aid in its construction, and hereby urges upon him the great importance and advantage to the northern and eastern portion of this riding of the construction of this road.

William Anderson Nominated.

The chairman called for nominations, when, on motion Mr. T. Blezard, seconded by Mr. Charles O'Rielly, Mr. Wm. Anderson, County Councillor for the Otonabee divison, was nominated. As no other nominations followed he was invited to address the meeting.

Mr. Anderson, who was very heartily applauded, expressed his pleasure at seeing so large and representative a gathering to nominate a candidate to succeed Mr. Blezard who had faithfully and efficently served the riding for nearly a quarter of a century. In view of the fact that the Township of Otonabee had furnished Mr. Blezard for the Local and Mr. Lang for the Dominion House, and with himself another Otonabee man proposed as a candidate it looked as if Otonabee was monopolising parliamentary honours, this warranted him in declining to accept for a short time, in order to give the convention an opportunity of selecting a candidate from some other township.

Mr. John Lang, M.P., briefly addressed the convention, and spoke of the certainty of the Liberals electing their candidate, if they worked unitedly. There was no doubt that East Peterborough was Liberal and if good organization resulted in bringing out the vote there was no doubt of the Liberal being elected. He thanked the Liberals of East Peterborough for the hearty support they had given him. When the time came for the nomination of a candidate for the Commons he would like to see a man selected from the Eastern portion of the riding. The locality was immaterial as a man in one section could serve the whole riding as well as his own section no matter where he resided. Narrowness did not exist in the Liberal party, their desire was to get the best man with the broadest views, no matter what his township, county or creed might be.

No other candidate being nominated the nomination of Mr. Anderson was made by a unanimous standing vote amidst great enthusiasm.

Mr. Anderson cordially thanked the convention for the honor conferred. He accepted the nomination in the same hearty manner in which it had been made. (Applause). He felt sure he would be elected if his own efforts were backed, as he felt sure they would be, by the united support of the Liberals of the riding. He heartily thanked the convention for the honour they had conferred upon him. (Applause).

The Provincial Secretary.

Hon. J. R. Stratton was called on to address the convention, and was greeted, on rising to do so, to hearty applause. After expressing his pleasure at the splendid convention assembled he remarked that the occasion had it's regrettable as well as its pleasant features. The retirement of Mr. Blezard was a matter of regret. He had been a most useful representative, having faithfully served the riding and the Province. He did not claim to be a speaker in the House, but his large experience and his solid common sense had made him a great benefit in committee work and the Government, of which he had been so esteemed and consistent a supporter. The resolution adopted that day only weakly expressed the high opinion the government held respecting him. He was glad to see the unanimity that had marked the excellent nomination made. There was nothing sectional about the Liberal party. The aim was the best men and the best measures, and sectional considerations or considerations of nationality or religion did not enter into the determination of the Liberal party in dealing with public affairs. Apart from other influences, he believed the success of the Liberal candidate was assured by the fact that the Government would appeal to the people on a bigger and broader and more progressive policy than had ever been presented before. (Applause.) He felt sure we had a leader, Hon. G. W. Ross, who had the full confidence of the people. With his broad views, his aggressive attitude towards the development of provincial resources, with his large parliamentary experience, he had a strong claim upon the support of the electorate, and no man, he believed, had a stronger hold upon the hearts of the people. (Applause.) It was said that the Government was weak, but the speaker predicted that at the next elections, they would be returned to power by a very large majority. The province was Liberal at heart, and all along the line the Liberals were ready for the fray. It was to be expected that the Liberals would stand shoulder to shoulder. They had the benefit of working for the return of the best, the most progressive Liberal Government we have ever had since Confederation. (Applause.) With leaders like Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. G. W. Ross, with a cause such as the Liberals had, with a policy like that of the present Government, there was no such word as fail. (Applause.) The charge had been made that the expenditure of the province had been increased. If it had not we should not be in the proud position we were in to-day—the greatest and most progressive province of the Dominion. It was not a question of increase alone, but had the expenditure been wise? Had it been in the interests of the people? As Mr. Blezard had mentioned, the estimates had gone through this year without objection by the Opposition, a proof that there was no fault to be found, or it would have been urged by the Conservative members. Why should not the expenditure be increased when the development of a great province was at stake? When we realized the territorial extent and the greatness of the natural resources of Ontario, we must necessarily have increased expenditure. It had increased for the development of the country, for the improvement of our splendid system of education, for the promotion of the interests of agriculture, one of our most important industries, and one in which East Peterborough was most deeply interested. No Government had done more to promote agricultural education, and with better results, than that of this Province. No country has a better code of legislation in the interests of the working classes than Ontario. Here we are free from the strikes and disturbances that embitter the relations of employers and workingmen in the United States. The laws of Ontario were copied by the other provinces of the Dominion. In our excellent municipal laws we had a full measure of self-government. Another charge was that we had not the same quantity of pine timber as in 1872, but we had in its place something better—a million and a half of hardy people tilling the soil where once this timber stood. (Applause.) We had derived in revenue from our pine timber since 1872, twenty six million dollars, but in this same time the Government had expended ninety-eight millions of dollars, of which seventy-two millions had been expended in services that relieved the people of so much direct taxation if they had got the same advantages—in education, colonization roads, agriculture, public institutions, hospitals and charities, etc., etc. In education there had been a large increase. The grants to poor schools, in which the northern part of this riding was particularly interested, had increased from $10,000 in 1872, to $65,000 at present. In all these departments of public administration the expenditure had increased, because the public interests demanded it—if we were to go ahead and not stand still. Yet with all this, the Liberal Government, supported by the Liberal party, was able to show a surplus of interest—bearing assets of $2,850,000 of which one million was cash in the bank. (Applause) We had this sum as a surplus counting all our liabilities—we had seven millions of interest bearing assets. After 27 years faithful administration, we can defy any opponent to point out an improper expenditure, and the Liberal Government can look back with pride upon the general record and with especial pride upon its financial record. We had millions of acres west of the height of land, millions of acres of farming land. What shall we do with it? It was the policy of the Ross Government to open it up for settlement and development, in a way that will make demands upon and stimulate the industries of older Ontario. Referring to the action of the Government in preventing the export of saw-logs unmanufactured, reference was made to the immense deposits of iron ore and the results had justified the encouragement by bounties, and Canadian iron was coming into general use in Canada. On account of its fine quality, iron smelted in Hamilton was used in the Peterborough Lock Works and other works in Peterborough and Ontario. Dealing with the Algoma Central bargain, Mr. Stratton showed what a great enterprise it was. A line 225 miles long was being built into the new country. The Government gave no bonus but a land grant, on which settlers must be placed, and this would make valuable the lands of the province that were worthless before. The result of this contract, in addition to this, had been that the Clergue Syndicate had expended nine millions already and would spend nine million more. Of this a large proportion had come into older Ontario to purchase supplies. This justified the advance development policy of the Government. Which policy would you have, the Liberal policy of going ahead or the Conservative policy of standing still? The Government meant to go ahead and they felt that the enterprising people of Ontario would support a policy of advance. (Applause.) In line with this policy was the Government's plan to help in the establishment of abbatoirs, to help develop the chilled meat trade with Great Britain, giving the farmers the profit of finishing his cattle in Ontario instead of sending them out as stockers. Then the effort to establish remount stations for the British army was another step to help the farmers, as was also the million dollars spent on good roads, and the bonus to the beet root sugar industry. Cold storage stations, to help the farmer to better prices was another evidence of the policy of the Government to put in motion every possible agency that could advance the interests of the people. The Government should be judged by its actions not alone by the record of two short years but by its grand record of 27 years. The Government appealed to the people not on sectarian cries and side issues, but in proud issues involving the material and moral advancement of the best interests of the people. In regard to the Norwood and Apsley Railway, that question would be regarded by the Government on a line with its policy of aiding the development of our newer regions. (Applause.) Mr. Stratton concluded a stirring address that was punctuated with hearty applause, by urging the Convention to heartily support Mr. Anderson; if they did so, no doubt existed that he would be the next representative of East Peterborough. (Applause.) If the battle is well fought, victory is sure. East Peterborough had been represented a quarter of a century by a good practical farmer, and there is no reason why the riding should make a change just now. Another progressive practical farmer had been nominated, who would make an equally good representative. His long experience in municipal affairs—in the township and county councils—would make him a valuable member of the Municipal Committee. The township and county councils were training schools for the legislature. Mr. Blezard served his township and county and received his promotion; why should not Mr. Anderson be similarly honoured? His whole municipal training just fits him for the Legislative Assembly. He was economical in township and county affairs, and would be prudent in the Legislature.

Rev. Father Conway, of Norwood, spoke enthusiastically in support of the Norwood & Apsley Railway, and hoped for its early completion. He believed we had a good Government. He would not be at the Convention if he didn't think so. We usually kept good things when we had them, and should elect the candidate of a good Government.

Mr. R. F. McWilliams said he was not present to make a speech, but to show his interest in the Liberal party, and as a representative of a family that had voted and worked Liberal for two or three generations in East Peterborough. Mr. Anderson's long municipal experience would help to make him a good representative.

Mr. Wm. Buck, ex-district councillor, Asphodel said he had refused to be a candidate when he heard that Mr. Anderson was spoken of. He thought Mr. Anderson was a good man. He had known him in the county council, and his experience of 25 years would stand him in good stead. He was honest, straightforward and sound in judgment, and had progressive ideas, and the Liberals of East Peterborough had made a good selection, and with united support his election was assured. He (Mr. Buck) would not say he would not be a candidate if the Liberals wanted his services, but he wished just now to see Mr. Anderson elected. He was not much of a canvasser on his own account, but he thought he could do a little in this way for Mr. Anderson, at any rate he would do his best to see that Mr. Anderson was elected. (Applause.)

After a few remarks from others, the highly successful convention concluded with cheers for the King, the Ross Government and the candidate, Mr. Anderson.

EFFORTS APPRECIATED.

Resolution Passed by St. Peter's T.A.S. Society.

The regular meeting of St Peter's T.A.S. was held yesterday morning when Mr. D. J. Devine moved, seconded by Mr Maurice O'Heron, the following resolution regarding its presentation of the Maid of Mount Shannon, which was put on with so much success on St. Patrick's day. Mr. Devine in doing so eulogised the work of Miss Lillian Simons, to whose untiring efforts the success of the affair was largely due.

The resolution was as follows:—

"That St. Peter's T.A.S. wishes to place on record its appreciation of the excellent services rendered by Miss Simons in training the members for the annual play on March 18th. The success of the evening was due in a very large measure to the personal endeavors of Miss Simons, and the creditable manner in which every member performed the part assigned, made the play the most successful ever held on St. Patrick's Day. As a mark of gratitude, appreciation and esteem the society desires that a copy of this resolution be sent to Miss Simons and to every one who took part in the play.

GIRLS HOLD BANQUET.

The Niffs and Biffs Gather Around the Festive Board.—Those Present.

While the Peterborough Colts were being banquetted with great splendor at the Oriental hotel, on Friday evening their lady friends, the Niffs and Biffs, were enjoying festivities of a like nature at Long's. The affair took the form of a banquet, and it will go on record as one of the most successful events the lady hockeyists have ever enjoyed in Peterborough. The party was chaperoned by Mrs. Wm. Scott, and amongst the young ladies present were, Miss Pearl Lundy, Miss Madge Davidson, Miss Winnie McFarlane, Miss Mamie Hamilton, Miss Florence Hamilton, Miss Allison Hamilton, Miss Helen Davidson, Miss Pearl Fitzgerald, Miss Bessie Brightman, Miss Ethel Nicholl, Miss Bessie Rapsey, Miss Gertrude Latimer, Miss M. Howarth, Miss Lillian Rush, Miss Edith Russell, Miss Maud Hay, Miss Lulu Scott, Miss Estella Thornton, Miss Cora Lightfoot, Miss Gwen Hall, Miss Florence Scott and Miss Jennie Scott.

A very pleasant time was spent around the festive board talking over the successful season just brought to a close, and of the prospects of the season to come. Next year will undoubtedly see an amalgation of the two teams and some exciting matches with out of town teams should be the result.

During the evening the girls were photographed by Roy. To-day the teams are being photographed in team uniform.—Com.

A little while, dear God, a few brief days,
I pray thee, let me keep this love of mine
Just in my inmost heart, safe from the world!
Too dear, too deep, it lies for earthly gaze.
A few brief days!

A little while, oh, grant the boon I ask,
For none can ever know save heart divine
How life's environments have bound my soul,
Dear God! Oh, say I need not wear my mask
A few brief days!

A little while, oh, just a little while,
To have and hold the love I've prayed so long!
Though dark the way and drear my heart may smile,
For evermore my life will hold love's shrine,
Though love but linger here
A few brief days!

"LA DAME A LA CLEF."

By Walter Littlefield.

There were three of us one evening in the reading room of the Press club—M. Paul Blouet, better known as "Max O'Rell" through his sketches of French and English life and character; M. Charles P. Lebon, instructor of French, who, by the way, is a litterateur of some little note, and myself. The conversation, after various fluctuations, had assumed a story telling drift. M. Blouet had just related an amusing anecdote of his Boston sojourn, and we were silently puffing in that agreeable languor that arises from a good weed and a good story.

On drawing his cardcase from his pocket M. Lebon brought forth a small bright object that glistened a second in the lamplight as it fell to the floor. He stooped for it with rather undue haste; with so much haste, in fact, that he called our attention to a movement that otherwise would have passed unnoticed.

"What is it?" inquired M. Blouet.

Without a word Lebon handed him the object he had dropped, but eyed him carefully as it was examined.

"A key," remarked M. Blouet; "a key and evidently of gold." And he passed it to me.

I held in my hand a key of perhaps an inch in length and half as wide. There was nothing particularly remarkable about it unless it were the material of which it was composed, that appeared to be gold. Suddenly my eye caught sight of a date and an inscription upon the ring of the key—'1er Juin, 1848. Memento mori!"

"A curious key," I suggested as I returned it to M. Lebon. "Tell us about it."

The one addressed puffed assiduously for a moment or two as he twirled the mysterious key between his forefinger and thumb, but he made no reply.

"Come, come," said M. Blouet as he leaned forward with interest, "there must be something to tell about a key like that. Why not let us have it?"

"You are right, gentlemen. There is a curious story concerning this key, and since you desire it I will tell it to you, for truly, gentlemen, without exaggeration, this little bit of metal that I hold in my hand has one of the most remarkable of histories."

"Tell it! Tell it!" we both exclaimed in a breath.

Fresh cigarettes were lighted, and, still holding the key in his hand as if to bear witness to what he said, M. Lebon began his story.

"It was in 1871, just after the surrender of Paris. The second empire had fallen. M. Thiers and his party held the government. Evidences of the terrible commune were on every hand, still the city was beginning to look like the habitation of a civilized people. One morning Le Journal des Debats announced the death at Versailles of a Russian lady who for more than 20 years had kept all the gossips of the Paris salons busy concerning a mystery that seemed to surround her. For reasons that I shall presently explain she became known as 'La Dame a la Clef.' Now, a nickname in Paris means a great deal more than it does here. When one is nicknamed there, one carries that name to the grave.

"The notice in Le Journal des Debats mentioned 'La Dame a la Clef est morte.' It did not give her own name. That would have signified nothing. The paper concluded by saying that she died, aged 45, in complete solitude. It seems that her husband, who was much older than she, had visited her regularly every six months during the past ten years and then had disappeared, no one knew where. All was mysterious about this 'Lady of the Key.' One day came to her the news of her husband's death. She survived him but a short time, and it was whispered that she had allowed herself to die from hunger. That was all the notice of her death had to say about the matter. The mystery still remained unexplained, and the interest concerning her grew less and less and gradually died away altogether."

M. Lebon paused to relight his cigarette, which he had allowed to go out. After doing this, he settled back in his chair, puffed once or twice, but did not seem at all inclined to continue the story.

"Well," I ejaculated, "go on. That is no story. Why, you haven't even said what the mystery was, or why she was called 'La Dame a la Clef.'"

"Ah, yes," he replied pensively, "quite right. I had forgotten. Gentlemen, I have not said that she was beautiful, yet such was the case. Her face was one of the loveliest that I have ever seen, her figure was perfect, and"—

"Well?" interrupted M. Blouet somewhat impatiently.

"Gentlemen, I will not bore you," continued M. Lebon smiling. "Simply imagine her beautiful in face and form; then, gentlemen, around her neck, which was of the purest mold, was riveted a golden chain to which was attached this key. And, gentlemen, from the 1st of June, 1848, to the day of her death the chain never left her neck, nor the key."

He paused again and once more seemed disinclined to go on.

"Well," said M. Blouet, "we have the mystery; now for the solving of it."

"Gentlemen," continued M. Lebon, smiling sagely as he tipped off the ashes of his cigarette, "I have told you all that anybody but myself knows. Is that not enough? You now know what all Paris knew. Are you not satisfied?" and he laughed quietly to himself.

We smoked for a few moments in silence, both M. Blouet and myself surmising that the best way to hear the rest of the story was to leave the narrator completely to himself. In a moment the latter began again, speaking rapidly and in short sentences.

"In 1848 her husband owned a country house near Passy. She was then young and gay. No chain or key adorned her neck then. One day she was surprised by her lord, shutting somebody in the wardrobe. A servant had betrayed her. The Muscovite Othello turned the key twice in the wardrobe, took it out, then told his wife to follow him. A traveling brizska stood a few paces from the villa. More dead than alive, the unhappy woman obeyed. When the husband had placed her in the carriage he gave an order in a low voice to the coachman. 'Keep this key,' he said to his wife. 'I have forgotten something and will return,' then went back to the house.

"He returned, according to his promise, but as the carriage descended the hill the poor woman saw flames issuing from the windows of the villa. She fainted. Three days she remained unconscious. On regaining her senses she perceived that a gold chain was riveted around her neck, to which was attached a golden key, the exact counterpart of the original, bearing an inscription. She wished to kill herself, but her husband pointed to the inscription and added that if she would save her family from dishonor she must ever observe it. She was therefore condemned to live. Her strange necklace excited much curiosity in Paris. At last her tyrant allowed her to retire to a quiet retreat on the express stipulation that she would not attempt to destroy herself during his lifetime. His death released her from this condition."

* * * * * * *

Some three weeks later I was calling on my friend Lebon, who wished to show me some old manuscripts that he had been collecting. He produced a large box of rosewood, which he casually remarked contained his family papers. To my astonishment, he drew from his pocket the mysterious key and inserted it in the lock, which yielded readily to his pressure, and the lid flew back.

"Why," I exclaimed in wonder, "that is the key!"

"The key?" he interrogated. Then he laughed long and loud. "And you swallowed all that," he said when he could control his merriment.

"Certainly," I replied grimly.

"By the way, though, it wouldn't make a bad story, would it? I think I will work it up—elaborate it a little, you know."

I left the house feeling deeply mortified to think I had been so effectually "sold." A desire for revenge took possession of me, and I determined to steal a march on him. I have done so.—Criterion.

FLOWERS AT PAN-AMERICAN.

Charming Landscape Effects and Beautiful Floral Exhibits.

The Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo next summer will possess unusual charm for lovers of flowers and of beautiful landscape effects. Perhaps in recognition of this the members of the Society of American Florists have decided to hold their annual convention in Buffalo in 1901. Chicago was anxious to win the convention, but in view of the special attractions for its members which the Pan-American Exposition will possess it was decided to meet next year in the Pan-American city. The gathering will bring to Buffalo about 1,000 delegates and their families from all parts of the United States. The floral features of the Pan-American Exposition and its landscape effects will surpass anything ever seen before by visitors to expositions held in the United States. The laying out of the grounds was done with the view of providing for such attractions, and ample space was left for courts and fountains, canals and lakes, which will be bordered with plants and flowers of all kinds and descriptions. While there will be charming scenery of this character in all portions of the grounds, an especial effort will be made to embellish the southern portion, adjoining Delaware park, at the entrance to that part of the grounds where the main Exposition buildings are situated. On both sides of the splendid Triumphal Bridge at this point will be two artificial pools called the Mirror Lakes, connecting with the Grand Canal, which encircles the grounds. The slopes of these lakes and the whole vicinity will be adorned with a magnificent outdoor exhibit of flowering plants set in the midst of shrubbery and trees in such a way as most to enhance the beautiful effect. There will be a large display of rare water plants, including the Nilumbiums and the wonderful Victoria Regia, or Amazon Lily, and many Nymphæas not before exhibited. Applications for space for exhibits on the grounds and in the special building to be devoted to horticulture are coming from florists all over the country, and the expressed desire of the cultivators of flowers and plants to be represented at the Pan-American insures an extensive exhibition of these beautiful products of nature.

LIFE SAVING STATION.

One Is Being Erected by United States Government.

Work was recently begun on the United States life saving station upon the grounds of the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo, N. Y. The site of the station is on the north side of the lake in Delaware park, in one of the most beautiful portions of the Exposition grounds.

The life saving station will be fully equipped with apparatus and men and will be a most attractive as well as novel exhibit. Life saving exhibitions will be given every day during the progress of the Exposition. The apparatus in use by the government for this purpose will be shown and a crew of ten picked men will be employed in giving the exhibitions. The station is to be modeled after one of the regular stations along the coast of the United States.

Hoping to Make Their Fortunes.

The thousands of people who visit the grounds where the buildings of the Pan-American Exposition are rising like a city created by magic see many things which indicate that the value of the vacant lots surrounding the Exposition grounds for money making purposes next summer is duly appreciated. For instance, one real estate dealer advertises like this: "Can you keep a boarding house? Can you run a lunch counter? If so, here is your chance to make the most money." Another advertises, "Choice lots for hotels, boarding houses, saloons, summer gardens, restaurants, souvenir booths and other things by which you can make your fortune at the Pan-American Exposition." All the vacant property in the vicinity of the Exposition grounds is staked off and placarded by signs indicating its value for purposes in connection with the big Exposition to be held in Buffalo next summer, and many buildings are already going up which will be used for accommodations for Exposition visitors and all sorts of purposes connected with their entertainment.

Broad Scope of the Exposition.

Nearly all of the nations of Central and South America have already sent formal acceptances to the invitation to participate in the Pan-American Exposition. Exhibits showing the resources of all the principal countries of Central and South America are now in course of preparation. Government officials are preparing exhibits from the Philippine islands, Porto Rico, Cuba and the Hawaiian group. About 15 acres have been set apart for the court of the state and foreign buildings on the eastern side of the grounds and a little south of the main group.

SYMPTOMS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Backache, Sideache, Swelling of Feet and Ankles, Puffing under the Eyes, Frequent Thirst, Scanty, Cloudy, Thick and Highly Colored Urine. Frequent Urination, Burning Sensation when Urinating.

These symptoms indicate a deranged condition of the kidneys, and some of them are caused by uric acid in the blood, and unless attended to immediately may eventually cause Diabetes, Bright's Disease, Dropsy, etc., which very often result in life-long misery. Doan's Pills not only relieve but cure all the above complaints.

Here is what Mr. Young, of Harcourt, N.B., writes:

THE DOAN KIDNEY PILL CO.,
Toronto, Ont.

DEAR SIRS,—Some time ago I was greatly troubled with pains in my back, hips and legs. My water was very scanty and was the color of strong tea and very thick, containing a sediment very much like fine sand and had a very offensive odor. I am very glad to say that after I had taken one box of Doan's Pills all of the above troubles have disappeared and I am perfectly cured and feel like a different person. I might also say my brother was troubled with his kidneys and used Doan's Pills and was completely cured.

Legend of the Owl.

The owl was the symbol of the wise goddess Athene of Greek mythology. Plato says, "Like sending owls to Athens, as the proverb goes," referring to the fact that this bird of Pallas Athene was the emblem of the city, which was the home of science and art. According to Payne Knight, an owl was chosen as the emblem of the wise goddess because it is "a bird that seems to surpass all other creatures in acuteness of organic perception, its eyes being calculated to observe objects that to all others are enveloped in darkness, its ear to hear sounds distinctly and its nostrils to discriminate effluvia with such nicety that it has been deemed prophetic from discovering the putridity of death even in the first stages of disease." It is highly probable that "the delicate sense of smell possessed by the owl lies at the root of this superstition."

In certain places it is believed that the owl will spit poison on those that incur its ill favor, and the only possible cure is for the poisoned one to bathe at midnight when the moon is full on "the eve of the dead." Among some Indian tribes the owl is known as the "death bird," and if an Indian hears its call and calls out in return and the owl fails to answer he considers himself doomed to die within the year. Undoubtedly all the North American Indians look on the owl as an uncanny creature, and some tribes believe that medicine men, conjurers and priests are transformed at their death into these birds of the night. The Pawnees hold that an owl can give a man power to see at night, and owls are held in as much reverence as hawks and eagles because, like these, they kill their prey and so in some degree typify success in war. Owl's feathers are worn in connection with those of hawks and eagles by Indian warriors.

Along the banks of the Ganges the people consider the owl sacred to Rahne, who makes his midnight journeys astride the dusky back of this bird, and there is a strange belief among Mohammedans that if a man should eat an owl he would become the slave of his wife.—Our Animal Friends.

Your Box of Paints.

When you received a box of water color paints as a holiday gift, did you stop to think that the whole world had been searched to furnish you with those little cakes of color? Vandyke brown is an earth from Cassel, in Germany. From the neighborhood of Siena, in Italy, comes a transparent yellow ocher which is called raw sienna, and when it has been subjected to heat it takes the name of burnt sienna. Raw umber is an earth from Umbria, in Italy. The madder plant is now cultivated on a great scale in France, Holland and Turkey for the sake of the colors—rose madder, brown madder, carmine madder and others—obtained from it. Other pigments of vegetable origin are gamboge, from the gum of a tree that grows in Ceylon, and Indian lake, from the resin of another kind of tree native to Bengal and Siam. Sepia is obtained from the cuttlefish, carmine is derived from the cochineal insect, prussian blue is obtained from horses' hoofs, and ivory black is made by burning ivory chips.

Noblesse Oblige.

"What are you staring at, Nellie?"

"Oh, please, ma'am, with your hair like that and your diamonds, you do look so like Lady Plantagenet Gingham that I was own maid to! Are you any relation, ma'am?"

"No—at least, no near relation. But you can have that pink silk shirt waist of mine, Nellie."—Life.

The Wrong Word.

Mr. Frost (looking up from his paper)—What are you chuckling at, Maria?

Mrs. Frost—I was thinking of the time when you proposed. You told me to say one little word that would make you happy for life.

Mr. Frost—Yes, I remember. And you went and said the wrong word.

MR. A. W. ROSS DEAD.

One of the Pioneers in Opening Up the Canadian Northwest Passes Away in Toronto Saturday Night.

Toronto, March 25.—Mr. Arthur Wellington Ross, ex-M.P., died on Saturday night in Grace Hospital. Mr. Ross was taken suddenly ill at his home in Columbia, British Columbia, in January last, but his condition gave no alarm. A week later he was seized with a stroke, which completely paralyzed his left side. Shortly afterwards he suffered another stroke and on Feb. 10 he was brought to Toronto in the hope that the change of climate might do him some good. He showed no sign of improvement, however, and in the latter part of February he was removed to Grace Hospital. There he gradually failed until last Wednesday, when he became unconscious.

The late Mr. A. W. Ross was the eldest son of Donald Ross, J.P., and was born in Nairn, Ont., March 25, 1846. Had he lived until to-day Mr. Ross would, therefore, have been 55 years of age. He received his early education at the Wardsville High School, and at the Toronto Normal School, obtaining at the latter institution, a first-class certificate. He then entered Toronto University and graduated in 1874 with the degree of B.A. He became headmaster of the Cornwall High School in 1869 and three years later was appointed Inspector of Public Schools in Glengarry. He was a law student when he went to Manitoba in 1879 and in the following year was called to the bar there. In 1880 he was elected a bencher and for several years practised his profession in Winnipeg.

At an early age Mr. Ross became interested in real estate in Manitoba and invested extensively. At this time British Columbia was a wild and undeveloped country and Mr. Ross was quick to see the great possibilities of the future. He continued to invest in lands there. In the matter of building railways Mr. Ross took the initiative and was instrumental in interesting others in the development of the country. He became thrice president of the Manitoba and Northwestern Railway Company and in 1881 became associated with the Howland syndicate in its offer to build the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Mr. Ross entered politics in 1878, when he was elected as an Independent Conservative to represent Springfield, now Selkirk, in the Manitoba Legislature. In 1882 he was re-elected by acclamation for the same riding and in 1887 was the Liberal-Conservative choice of the electorate of Lisgar for the House of Commons. He continued to represent this constituency until 1896, when he retired. He leaves a widow and two sons.

THIRTEEN CENTS A TON.

Longshoremen Agree to Accept This With 12 Hours' Work a Day.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 25.—At the conference Friday between the 'Longshoremen's Union and the dock managers, the deadlock which existed on Thursday was broken. At the conference the 'longshoremen receded from their demands for 14 cents a ton for unloading ore and a compromise was effected on the basis of 13 cents. It was decided that 12 hours should constitute a day's work from the opening of the season until Sept. 15, and from that date until the close of navigation 11 hours should be a day's work. Twenty-five cents an hour will be paid for overtime. The wage scale for the engineers and hoisters and the ore shovellers will be taken up some time soon.

Miss Paul Still Missing.

Buffalo, March 25.—Miss May Paul, 28 years old, who suddenly left her home in Toronto on March 16, was located in Buffalo Saturday, but she has again disappeared, and her second disappearance may have resulted in a tragedy. Mrs. Lyons went to the police station and positively identified the muff lying on an unfrequented coal wharf as the property of her sister. The police are still scouring the city for the unfortunate woman, but it is feared their quest will be fruitless.

CANADA'S TEAM AT SEA GIRT.

Crack Shots Who Will Shoot For Us in the United States.

Montreal, March 25.—Some time ago an invitation was extended to the militia shots of Canada to take part in the big rifle meet, which is to be held under the auspices of the National Rifle Association of the United States, at Sea Girt, New Jersey, in September next.

The invitation has since been accepted, and a team composed of the best shots in the Dominion will enter the various competitions. The team will be commanded, it is understood, by Lt.-Col. Ibbotson of this city, and Lt.-Col. Hodgins of Ottawa, secretary of the Dominion Rifle Association, will accompany it to Sea Girt, as representatives of the D. R. A.

The team will be made up of the following officers, non-coms. and privates, all of whom have accepted the invitation to become connected with it: Capt. Hutchison, Ottawa; Capt. Davidson, Quebec; Col.-Sergt. Skedden, Hamilton; Sergt. Broadhurst, Montreal; Pte. J. Drysdale, Montreal; Pte. J. T. Peddie, Montreal; Sergt. Corrigan, Cornwall; Staff-Sergt. Hayhurst, Hamilton; a former Queen's prizeman; Staff-Sergt. McVittie, Toronto, and Pte. Armstrong, Toronto. The team will be composed of probably 12 men, and a commandant and adjutant.

Duke of Cornwall at Gibraltar.

Gibraltar, March 21.—The steamship Ophir, on which the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York sailed from Portsmouth, March 16, on a tour of the world, entered the harbor yesterday morning. All the ships in port had previously been dressed, and the Royal yacht approached through the fleet fully manned, and amidst the firing of a royal salute and the strains of the national anthem. The Royal party landed at the dockyard at noon. They were received by Gen. Sir George White, the Governor. The Duke and Duchess then drove to the Chamber of Commerce, where they were presented with an address of welcome. The Duke replied in appropriate terms.

Anecdotes of Henry Russell.

The Jewish Chronicle of London says that the late Henry Russell, the song writer, was of Hebrew birth and had many close friends among his coreligionists, including Sir Moses Montefiore, the Rev. A. L. Green and the Levy family. When Mr. Russell was accustomed to say to Sir Moses that he was getting on in years, Sir Moses, who was greatly his senior, would reply, "My dear old boy, you are only a baby."

At the house of Mr. Green, where he was a frequent visitor, he would tell some of his amusing experiences, one of them having reference to the time when he was in a wild part of America and often carried his life in his hands. One day, when he was supposed to be asleep, a man bent over him. Mr. Russell feared his last hour had come. When at length he summoned up courage to open his eyes he was pleasantly reassured by his supposed antagonist asking him, "Henry, can you tell me when Yom Kippur (day of atonement) is?"

Don't think less of your system than you do of your house. Give it a thorough cleansing, too. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla.

NIAGARA'S WONDERS.

POWER FROM THE GREAT FALLS FOR THE BUFFALO EXPOSITION.

Niagara Falls Citizens Preparing to Entertain a Few Extra Millions of People in 1901—Many Costly Improvements by the State.

Within 30 minutes' ride of the Pan-American Exposition are the falls of Niagara, the most magnificent and inspiring spectacle ever wrought by nature for the sight of man. Here, also, are to be seen the greatest electric power development in the world and bridges which are marvels of engineering. To see these natural and engineering wonders over a million people visit Niagara annually. These objects may be said to form a part of the Pan-American Exposition, situated as they are within such a short distance of it, and visitors will find it convenient as well as pleasant to include them in their Exposition itinerary.

The trains of eight trunk lines of railroad and the cars of a double track electric railway will run between the Exposition grounds and Niagara Falls. Visitors at the Exposition who may be pressed for time, but would not miss having a general view of the wonders of Niagara, may board an electric car at the station on the grounds, which will take them along the frontier, through the power district, the city of Niagara Falls and the reservation, across the new steel arch bridge spanning the gorge, past the falls, along the top of the cliff to Queenstown on the Canada side, across the suspension bridge to Lewiston on the American side, along the edge of the water and past the whirlpool in the great gorge to the reservation and back to Buffalo, the entire trip taking up less than three hours' time.

The people of Niagara Falls are making preparations to accommodate such crowds as have never yet been seen at that famous resort. There are 150 hotels and hundreds of commodious restaurants, boarding and lodging houses in the city. Many of them are being enlarged for the anticipated Pan-American business. The city is adding to its many miles of asphalt pavement and park roads, and before the opening of the Exposition all of its principal thoroughfares will be in the finest imaginable condition for driving. A police patrol signal system is being installed, and the efficient police department will be recruited sufficiently to afford the most ample protection to visitors. Ordinances have been established governing the acts of all persons entering to visitors and fixing the fees for services rendered. In fact, the authorities and citizens generally of Niagara Falls, wide awake to the importance of the Exposition, are doing everything in their power to add to its success and glory.

The railroad companies are planning increased facilities for handling the enormous traffic expected. Their stations will be enlarged and trackage increased. The International Traction company is erecting a large and handsome terminal station directly opposite the Niagara reservation and within a stone's throw of the falls. The different lines of the electric railway system on the frontier—the finest in the world—are being equipped with new cars, possessing all modern improvements and conveniences, some of them 50 feet in length, and equaling in elegance the drawing room cars of the steam railroads.

In the state's Niagara reservation new beauties and conveniences are being provided for the Pan-American visitors. A new steel and concrete bridge to span the rapids from the American mainland to Goat island, for the building of which the New York state legislature appropriated $120,000, is in course of construction. A new administration and shelter building is being erected at a cost of $25,000. The old stone inclined railway building at Prospect Point will be razed to afford an unobstructed view of the falls from the park. A broad stone staircase connecting Goat and Luna islands, where the rainbows play and delight the visitor with their prismatic colors, has been built and new balconies for sightseers have been constructed. New beauty spots have been created by grading and seeding wherever the possibility was offered. A flock of sheep will wander at will on Goat island and add life to the beauteous scene. An automobile service in the reservation will be inaugurated. In the Canadian park many improvements are being made. Niagara Falls will be dressed in her finest for the Pan-American Exposition in 1901. Niagara is an ideal breathing spot. The parks are extensive, liberally shaded and constantly visited by cooling breezes. No Exposition ever yet held has offered to the public an attraction equal to Niagara.

NEIGHBORLY WOMEN.

A GOOD OLD CUSTOM THAT HAS ALMOST GONE OUT OF FASHION.

It Isn't Always the Thing Nowadays to Know "the People Next Door." What a Good Soul Is the Neighborly Woman—Unobtrusive Acts of Kindness.

There has certainly come a change. The more I make observations along this line the more I am convinced that the change has come in reality and not merely in fancy. Of course there is a reason for the change. Nothing, you know, in this world happens by chance, though at first thought one thing or another may seem to.

But about the thing that has changed. Well, nobody or very few nowadays think it worth while to be neighborly. In fact, to say "I do not know who my next door neighbor is" is quite a matter of pride, judging from the lofty air with which the assertion is usually made.

Now, it may be proclaiming in a way when one admits that one does not know the folks who live next door that one is not given to gossip, does not, in fact, care to know about the affairs of folks about one.

One does not think of "running over" when one sees a doctor's rig drive up hurriedly to the house next door just to see, you know, if there is illness and to find out if one could not be of some assistance. And, indeed, if one should do this it is ten to one that the next door neighbor would be inclined to think that one was merely satisfying curiosity, alas! so uncommon has neighborly interest become.

And, again, whoever makes an excellent cake and sends you in a piece because it is so nice? And when you are ill what neighbor is there who comes in and offers to "sit up" so the members of the family, worn with constant watching, may get a bit of rest?

Now, the reason for the change? Oh, in a big city folks come and go so much and changes are brought about so quickly that one has no chance to find out if one's next door neighbor is worth one's attention.

Caterers make such excellent cakes and bread that nobody thinks it worth mentioning when a homemade loaf of cake or bread is very good.

A kindly neighbor does not offer to assist you in taking care of the invalid member of your family, because there are trained nurses, and if you are tired out you should hire one.

These are all the reasons, as commonly given. But, my dear, you who are still old fashioned enough to believe in being neighborly I am sure will regard them as excuses more than reasons.

In a big city there is a bachelor girl, a bright and busy girl, one who has little time for home life and yet who is as domestic in all her tastes as she was in those days in a home in the far southland, where she made salads and cakes to her heart's delight in a big kitchen presided over by an old black woman who could tell many interesting stories that were dated "before the war."

In this big city the busy bachelor girl has established herself in a bit of an apartment which it cheers her soul to call "home." Other girls envy her and love to drop in for a cosy little dinner and wonder how she does it all with but the assistance of a very young and inexperienced little maid.

Writes this busy and much envied bachelor maid, "Yes, the city with all its advantages is grand, but how I long to be somewhere once more where folks are neighborly, where there is a chance once in awhile for some one to send you in a piece of nice cake she has made or a dish of pudding."

There is a great deal told in this little wail of the bachelor girl. It tells of a loneliness that a thousand other folks have felt a thousand times over and over, and this is why, though some may say it is a little out of joint with the times, that I, for one, dote on the old fashioned way of being neighborly.

When one does come across the woman who still possesses the neighborly instinct—and she has not altogether passed away—one is at first a little surprised, then interested and then delighted. For all the world are one's sensations like those of the discoverer of a rare flower, one that the discoverer knows has existed, but which he hardly dared hope to ever find again.

In describing the neighborly woman, the first sign by which you may recognize her is her womanliness. She is not necessarily an old woman, taught by experience all the mysteries of housekeeping and the best remedies for a case of croup or measles. She may be young just as well as old. Age, in reality, has little or nothing to do with it. It isn't the passing of years that has made her what she is. It is pure and simple kindness of heart. She may not be especially clever, but she is always gentle, and her name is worthy to lead all the rest when it so comes to the matter of her being counted among good friends.

There is a dear girl, and I hope you know her, who doesn't mind in the least slipping into a big apron and helping you with the dusting or the dishwashing when Jane is ill and all the family affairs in a turmoil, and, besides this, she does not make any mention of having done it to any one else. Her little neighborly act is just a matter of kindness. She believes that you would do just as much for her, and I am sure you would if you think as much of the helpful girl you know as I do of that other girl like her that I know.

The neighborly woman takes a real interest in your children, and in after years when they grow older and go away they always recall the times that she "ran in" for a moment's chat as something pleasant that belongs with their childhood days. And the boys and girls never forget how, when they were shut up in the house for days and could not go to school or out to play because of some childish affliction, she sent them the best "goodies" that were ever manufactured in a kitchen and a dozen old picture books that could be cut or painted to their heart's delight.

If I were asked to name the woman whom I believed the most influential in her sphere, I am quite sure I would be tempted to say at once, "The neighborly woman." She has a little way about her of helping the inexperienced or incompetent housekeeper to improve her methods without in the least appearing to suggest that such a thing should be done. She is a sort of inspiration to an entire family.

While a little caution is a wise thing in forming associates, it is usually a very easy matter to learn about the folks next door.—Margaret Hannis in St. Louis Republic.

RESIDENCE:—178, Harvey street, Peterborough.

10 Years is a long time to be blind to your own interests. It is that long since a young couple came here to live. They called at our office to rent a house, and were advised in the most kindly manner to buy a home on our easy payment plan. But no use. They had some money but wanted to put on style, and did so for ten years, paying out for rent more than enough to buy and pay for a home. They saw their mistake, then called upon us and bought a home. Kind reader come thou and do likewise.

We are always ready to serve you.

Sunday School Association.

A very interesting meeting has been arranged in connection with the Town Sabbath School Association, for next Friday evening, March 29, in the Y.M.C.A. Hall. The reports will be given of the official visits to the various schools, and it is also expected that Rev. Mr. Redditt, of Uxbridge, will give an address. If time permits, there will be a round-table conference on matters of interest to Sunday School workers. A welcome is extended to all.

Young People's Union Meeting.

Miss Carson, New York city, will address a Union Meeting of all the Young People's Societies of the town, this Monday evening, the 25th inst., at eight o'clock, in St. Paul's Church. Miss Carson, of Christodora House, New York, has had a wide and varied experience among young people in the Associations and colleges of the United States, and is at present travelling throughout the Dominion of Canada in the interests of the Young Women's Christian Association. All are invited.

To-Night's Lecture.

Mr. Frederic Villiers, the well known war correspondent and artist, will lecture at the Opera House to-night. Read what an exchange says.—"Kruger and Khaki."—When Mr. Fred Villiers, the well-known war artist and correspondent, who has recently returned home from South Africa, had finished his lecture on the war on Thursday evening at St. James's Hall, many among his audience felt that the wonder was not that our generals had been so hampered in their movements by the want of horseflesh, but that they had done what they have. The fine collection of lantern slides, from sketches and photographs taken by Mr. Villiers himself, give a capital idea of the rocky kopjes and treeless sandy stretches, and the terrible effects of shot and shell upon horses and men. Prices 25, 35, 50 and 75 cents.

DRANK POISON, FATAL ERROR

WM. C. TOLE, FORMERLY OF PETERBOROUGH.

His Father Found him Dying—Was Formerly Employed by Messrs. Ormond & Walsh.

A Bowmanville despatch says: "William C. Tole, a young druggist of this village, last night swallowed some hydrocyanic acid in mistake for a stimulant, and died from the effects of the poison before medical assistance could be summoned. About half-past six deceased left the store with his father, but went back for the purpose of getting some soap from the cellar. Mr. Tole, sr., on finding that his son did not return, followed him to the cellar, and found him standing in a dazed condition. Before he could reach him the young man fell down and expired in a few minutes. Deceased had been in poor health for some days, and kept a bottle of stimulant in the store. It is supposed that while on his way to the cellar he picked up the bottle of poison by mistake and drank some of it. He started in business about a year ago, and was very successful. The young man had decided to take a week's holiday in company with his mother, and intended arranging with some one to look after the business during his absence. He was a member of the Canadian Order of Woodmen of the World, and also of the I.O.O.F., both of which societies will attend the funeral on Tuesday."

Deceased was a young man who was quite well known in Peterborough, having been about a year in the employ of Ormond & Walsh's drugstore. He left here about 12 months ago. He made many friends in Peterborough, who will regret to learn of his untimely demise.

PETERBOROUGH BEN.

The Bull Dog Has Arrived Safely in Canada.

Mr. R. S. Davidson to-day received a letter from Colonel Steele, of the Strathcona Horse, announcing the safe arrival of "Peterborough Ben," the bull dog presented by Mr. Davidson to the Strathconas when they were leaving for South Africa. The Globe refers to the dog as follows:

The Strathconas' Mascot.

"Benjamin Ben," the Peterborough bull-dog taken as a mascot to South Africa by Strathcona's Horse, arrived in the city after a most eventful experience. "Benjamin Ben" developed a remarkable aptitude for getting lost, and caused the regiment no end of worry searching for its mascot. He was stolen at Cape Town by a South African, who had the good taste go appreciate the fine-looking Canadian dog, and was eventually recovered. Ben accompanied the corps in its circuitous wanderings over the veldt and kopje, and made the return trip as far as London. There the dog again managed to lose himself, and the regiment returned to Canada without him. The mascot's luck proved genuine, for in a week or two later he was discovered at the refuge for stray dogs at Battersea. "Benjamin Ben" was brought to Canada by Sergt. Milligan, and his future has yet to be determined."

"Peterborough Ben" is to be expressed back to town immediately.

MISS TAYLOR'S FUNERAL.

It Took Place Yesterday and Was Largely Attended.

The funeral of the late Miss Lizzie Taylor took place Sunday afternoon to Little Lake Cemetery and was largely attended.

The services at the house and cemetery were conducted by Rev. C. L. Thompson. The pall bearers were Messrs. J. Speer, M. McIntyre, Oscar Matchett, M. Carton, A. H. Trussler and M. W. Matchett.

The floral tributes were numerous and handsome, and included a basket of flowers from Mark street Sunday School and Epworth League, of which deceased was a valued member. Up to the time of her death she had charge of a Sunday School class.

There will be a memorial service next Sunday morning at 11 a.m. in Mark street church.

SPRING ASSIZES WERE OPENED THIS AFTERNOON

Before the Honourable Mr. Justice Lount.

The Hull Murder Case—Mr. A. L. Davis, Foreman of the Grand Jury—His Lordship's Remarks.

There was much interest manifested in the opening of the Spring Assizes to-day before Hon. Mr. Justice Lount. This was of course due to the fact that the criminal list contains a case of murder, the thrilling particulars of which are still fresh in the minds of all. Alex. Sharpe will stand his trial for the murder of Wm. Hull. The residents of the townships of Belmont and Methuen, in the vicinity of which the murder took place, arrived in town in large numbers to-day, and are awaiting the progress of the trial with intense interest. Among those who are in town is old man Davis, who was sitting in the little shack at the time the shooting took place, and Mr. Hull, sr., the father of the murdered man.

THE BAR REPRESENTED.

The following representatives of the bar were in attendance:—Messrs. D. W. Dumble, Geo. Edmison, R. M. Dennistoun, E. A. Peck, Daniel O'Connell, A. P. Pousette, K.C., R. F. McWilliams, John Green, W. J. Bennett, R. E. Wood, G. M. Roger, L. M. Hayes, W. H. Moore, E. B. Edwards, Peterborough; Hugh O'Leary, Crown Prosecutor, Lindsay; George J. Sherry, Norwood.

The Honourable Mr. Justice Lount, for the first time in Petesborough since his appointment to the bench, entered the court room, with the customary ceremony. After Crier Walter Wood had his say, Mr. D. W. Dumble, on behalf of the local bar, read the following address to his Lordship.

To the Honorouble Mr. Justice Lount.

May it please your Lordship.—It is my pleasing duty to convey to your Lordship the congratulations of the local bar on your appointment to the high and honourable position you now occupy.

It is a source of much gratification to all members of the profession to remember the splendid history of the bench and bar of this country. The selection of judges has ever been carefully made, merit and high attainment in legal learning being the qualification. The result is that there never has been a time when the Bench has not been the true reflexion of that high and pure fountain of justice, the throne of Britain.

We remember with pride the names of the eminent men who graced the Canadian Bench, and not less than their learning we have in mind the courtesy and urbanity with which they performed their high duties—ever offering especially to the younger members of the bar, that graceful courtesy and consideration so helpful to them and so becoming in men whose high office called for great respect, and to whom it has ever been cheerfully rendered.

In your Lordships appointment we realize that fitness has been the moving qualification. We hope this may ever be so, and that the traditions of the past may be ever revived in the future.

The legal profession of this country has always been an honourable and able one, and there has been no difficulty in procuring from it well qualified judges.

We deem it of great moment to the country that neither legislation nor practice shall demean the profession and deprive the country of our highest source of pride, an able and pure judiciary an able and honourable bar.

On behalf of the local bar I tender you their congratulations and their hope that in you still greater lustre may be added to the honorable history of the Canadian Bench.

I am My Lord,
Your obedient servant,
D. W. DUMBLE.
Court House, Peterborough. For the local bar.

THE PETERBOROUGH RINK.

Will We Have a New One for Next Year?—Mr. Beaton's Suggestions.

The Peterborough curling and skating rink has been closed for the season, and the young people who were wont to spent their evenings at this centre of amusement will have to seek new quarters. The rink season, while it did not continue as late as last year, still was somewhat longer. Last year the rink was finally closed for skating and curling on March 29th, but it did not open as early as it did this season, viz. the middle of December. It cannot be said that the rink was a very great drawing card this winter, outside of hockey, and even in this respect it was not what it should be. In fact the requirements for hockey are such that it is doubtful whether Peterborough will be able to identify itself with the O.H.A. next year unless a larger sheet of ice is provided.

A communication from A. H. Beaton, secretary of the Ontario Hockey Association on this matter might prove of interest. In the course of his remarks he says:—

"I trust you will pardon my offering some suggestions at this time, but your position as junior champions suggests to me, as I am sure it does to you, the urgent need of a larger rink in Peterborough. I recall the bickerings on this question in the days of our old friend Geo. Horkins when I myself was young in the Association, and the same have been repeated from year to year, and indeed I had hoped to see the new and long expected rink materialize during my term of office, but as yet we have all been disappointed in that regard. If you could realize the number of complaints that come in on matters of this kind you would sympathize with the executive, who are blamed for not ruling out all rinks upon which visiting teams are defeated. From my position as secretary I have been forced to realize this fact more or less, and I can safely say that there is not a rink in the Association which has not at one time or another been the subject of complaint by defeated visiting teams. However, after making allowance for the proneness of all hockey clubs to kick, I can see that future secretaries will have plenty of trouble, and I have naturally a fellow-feeling for my successors, for I know that were a new rink erected in Peterborough, a long felt want would be overcome and one great cause of complaint removed. With the ever increasing popularity of the game a rink exclusively for hockey in a good town like Peterborough should pay well, and the present would seem to be the most opportune time for making a persistent effort to secure such a rink. Any town would be proud of a team like the Colts, and should not hesitate to furnish them with facilities for fitting themselves for higher honours, and I am sure that Peterborough will rise to the occasion now and remove the serious handicap under which the club has long laboured."

Yours very truly,
A. H. BEATON.

THE CHINESE QUESTION.

Chinese Minister at London Asks British to Interfere.

London, March 26.—Sir Chih Chen L Fenbg Luh, called at the Foreign Office yesterday afternoon and urged the British Government to bring pressure to bear, in order to prevent Russia from securing the necessary signatures of the Manchurian Government.

The Foreign Office was still in the dark last night as to whether the agreement will be signed or allowed to lapse when the time expires today, March 26. The officials of the Japanese Legation are inclined to believe Russia will succeed in getting the necessary signatures.

British Soldiers Bayoneted.

Tien Tsin, March 25.—In an affray yesterday evening, two members of the Welsh Fusiliers Regiment and a member of the Victorian contingent, who were acting as policemen, were sabred and bayoneted. It is alleged that Germans were the principal culprits.

Another Mining Calamity.

Connellsville, Pa., March 26.—Yesterday morning 28 men reported for duty and went into the pit of the Gates Mine (Fayette County). Of this number 16 were caught in the awful grip of the scorching breath of the fire damp, and singed and blackened. As soon after the explosion as possible a force of men were put to the rescue. One by one the burned bodies were brought up. Nine still lived, and these were brought to Connellsville and put in the Cottage State Hospital.

Death of Rev. Angus McColl.

Chatham, Ont., March 26.—Rev. Angus McColl died here yesterday, aged 83. Dr. McColl was the first Presbyterian minister in Chatham, and for 46 years was inspector of Public Schools of Chatham. He was the oldest resident of Chatham, and was well known throughout the western district. He leaves a widow and five sons. Chief Justice McColl of Victoria, B. C., is a son.

BIG GUNS CAPTURED.

Gen. Delarey Defeated and His Rear Guard Driven In.

70 BOERS SHOT AT ONE POINT.

140 of Delarey's Force Taken With Slight British Loss—Many Boers Were Killed and Wounded—The War From the House of Commons Point of View—No Confiscation.

London, March 26.—The War Office has received the following despatch from Lord Kitchener:

"Pretoria, March 25.—Babington's force, including Shekelton's column, attacked Delarey, 1,500 strong, southwest of Ventersdorp, and, having defeated him, followed him up rapidly, with the result that the Boer rear guard was driven in and their convoy, including the guns, captured at Vaalbank.

"Our troops displayed great gallantry and dash. They captured two fifteen-pounder guns, one pompom, six maxims, 320 rounds of big ammunition, 25,000 rounds of small ammunition, 160 rifles, 53 wagons and 24 carts besides taking 150 prisoners.

"Our losses were slight. Many Boers were killed or wounded."

Boers Lost Heavily at Lichtenburg.

Cape Town, March 25.—It is said the Boers lost very heavily in attacking the garrison at Lichtenburg last week. Upwards of 70 burghers are reported to have been shot among the wire entanglements.

Boer Delegates in London.

London, March 26.—Sir Robert Reid yesterday laid upon the table of the House of Commons a petition from Messrs. Merriman and Sauer, respectively former Treasurer of Cape Colony, and former Commissioner of Public Works of Cape Colony, asking for permission to address the House with respect to the peace settlement in South Africa, and especially against the establishment of a Crown colony form of Government. The petitioners have dropped the idea of protesting against annexation.

NO CONFISCATION.

Boers' Lands Will Not Expropriated, Says Mr. Chamberlain.

London, March 26.—Mr. Chamberlain, in reply to a question as to the reported intention of the Government to settle a number of soldiers in South Africa, replied that the Government had no intention of expropriating the owners of lands, or of taking land in any other way than it could be taken in England. Mr. Balfour, reinforcing the Colonial Secretary's statement, said the Government did not contemplate any such suicidal folly as confiscating the lands of the Boers.

Queenstown Menaced by Boers.

Queenstown, Cape Colony, March 25.—The town guard here has been called out owing to reports that a force of Boers is near the town. Business has been shut down in order to allow the employes to man the trenches and the forts day and night. The Boers, said to be 20 miles off, are alleged to have crossed the railroad near Drummond.

Must Fight to the Bitter End.

London, March 26.—The Colonial Secretary, Mr. Chamberlain, when asked in the House of Commons yesterday if it was possible to change the offer of peace terms to the Boers, said the negotiations were closed and there was no intention of reopening them.

Diamond Princess to Rise.

Antwerp, March 26.—Diamond merchants here declare that the De Beers Company intends to raise the price of diamonds 30 per cent. on April 1 or May 1. One of the most experienced diamond merchants said yesterday that if this step was taken it would cause the most serious crisis in the history of the trade.

TAPS FROM THE WIRE.

Owing to a small fire Monday night, Hamilton's electric light was cut off and the city was in darkness from shortly after 11 o'clock.

William Kipp and William McCauley of Princeton, charged with stealing 600 pounds of flour from the warehouse of F. Vickert on Jan. 15, are in jail at Woodstock.

Early Saturday night an M.C.R. westbound freight train was compelled to stop a couple of miles west of St. Thomas because two Muncey redskins were lying drunk on the track. They were removed to a place of safety.

The Attorney-General's Department's attention has been called to a sort of modified lottery that a firm of brokers is carrying on at St. Thomas. Circulars explaining its workings are being sent through the mails, and the legality of this part of the business is under consideration.

THE OPHIR AT MALTA.

Brilliant Reception Accorded the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall.

Malta, March 26.—The steamer Ophir, bearing the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York on their tour of the world, arrived here yesterday morning. The warships in the harbor were manned and dressed. In Valetta great crowds filled the terraces and the ramparts commanding the harbor. The Ophir was met 18 miles out by a flotilla of 10 torpedo boat destroyers and entered the harbor amid salvos of artillery from Ct. Angelo, the citadel, the forts and the warships.

After receiving the officials, the Duke and the Duchess landed and drove to Porto Reale and thence to the palace. The balconies along the route were filled with cheering spectators. The entire distance from the landing place to the palace was brightly decorated and lined with troops and blue jackets.

HAY-PAUNCEFOTE.

Lord Lansdowne's Reply to the Senate's One-Sided Arrangement.

Washington, March 26.—The communication from the British Government giving the reasons why that Government declined to accept the Senate amendments to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty was made public yesterday. Summed up Lord Lansdowne's reply is that Great Britain would be at the mercy of the United States if she were to accept the Hay-Pauncefote convention as amended by the U. S. Senate.

Killed by His Own Gun.

Thistletown, March 26.—Noah Tarles, a young man of this town, went out shooting ducks on Longtree's flats yesterday afternoon. When near Humberford, the trigger of his gun got caught on a twig, and the gun went off. The full charge of duck shot struck him, entering his abdomen, making a horrible wound. The intestines protruded, and were cut in several places, as if by a knife. A doctor was summoned to his aid, but medical assistance was futile. The unfortunate man passed away about 8 o'clock last night.

Turks Massacre Bulgarians.

Constantinople, March 26.—According to private advices from Macedonia, a band of Turks massacred three Bulgarian families, men, women and children, in the village of Aghamahalleh, near Serce, a town 47 miles northeast of Salonica. Details of the outrage have not been received. The news created a profound sensation.

It is reported that a village near Monastir, in Macedonia, with a mixed population of Mussulmen and Bulgarians, has been burned.

Bishop Sweeney Is Dead.

St. John, N. B., March 26.—Bishop Sweeney died yesterday morning at 9.30, at the Boys' Industrial Home. He went there to live last fall, and hoped to die among the orphans he loved so well, and whose home he established. He had been Roman Catholic Bishop of St. John Diocese for 41 years.

CANADA NATIONAL RR.

Bill Passed in Committee and Stands For Third Reading.

TWO AMENDMENTS WERE LOST.

Important Bills Read a First Time—The Regulation of Inland Waters—The Budget Debate Continued by Messrs. Walter Scott, Lancaster, J. J. Hughes, R. L. Richardson and Jabel Robinson.

Ottawa, March 26.—The Opposition to the Canada National Railway & Transportation Company's bill was renewed in the House of Commons yesterday, when the bill was under consideration in Committee of the Whole. Mr. E. F. Clarke moved an amendment, providing for the expropriation and reduction of the subsidies paid to the company from the purchase price. Lieut.-Col. Hughes offered a second amendment to deduct the amount of municipal bonuses also and refund the same to the municipalities. Both amendments were lost, and the bill stands for third reading. The remainder of the day was occupied by the budget debate. Before adjournment it was arranged that the division upon Mr. Borden's amendment will be taken on Thursday.

First Readings.

To amend the Inland Waters' Seamen's Act—Sir Louis Davies.

Respecting Enquiries and Investigations into Shipping Casualties—Sir Louis Davies.

To amend the Railway Act, bill containing a clause empowering the insertion in every railway charter of a provision for expropriation—Mr. Richardson.

A return containing the new mining regulations in the Yukon was tabled.

To Expropriate the Road.

Mr. E. F. Clarke moved that His Majesty shall have the right at any time to expropriate the proposed Toronto-Collingwood Air-Line, and that on the taking over of the same, the amount of any bonus granted to the road shall be deducted from the price. Mr. Clarke stated that the road is not intended to serve any local purpose.

Hon. Mr. Blair replied that the clause proposed by Mr. Clarke had been very thoroughly threshed out before the Railway Committee. He, as Minister of Railways, had submitted to the committee an amendment identical with the proposal of Mr. Clarke, but it did not find favor with the committee. The incorporation of the clause could not possibly mitigate against the success of the undertaking, as Parliament would always have the right to expropriate. The committee should consider whether the deciding of the bonus was a proper condition to annex to the charter. He was in favor of the amendment, and he could not see how it would harm anybody.

Col. Sam Hughes spoke in favor of Midland as compared with the port of Collingwood. He moved as an amendment that, should the Government take over the road, the bonuses voted by any municipality should be paid back to the municipality.

W. F. Maclean was glad the Minister of Railways had given his support to the amendment proposed by the member for West Toronto. But he understood that the Minister of Railways did not think much of the undertaking at all. The Government was acting unwisely in letting this charter fall into the hands of a private company. The Government should take over the G. T. R. between Toronto and the Georgian Bay, and extend the road to Sudbury, where it would connect with the Ontario system of railways. This could probably be done for the amount of the subsidies this company would receive. He thought the municipalities should be allowed to make their own bargains.

Trying to Kill the Bill.

Mr. Calvert said the member for Toronto was trying to insert a clause in this bill with the object of killing it. The City Council of Toronto was in favor of the construction of an independent line between a Georgian Bay port and Toronto in order to save some 300 miles in the carriage of freight from the west. The company anticipated expending some $4,500,000 upon the construction of vessels to operate in conjunction with the proposed railways, and he argued against the deduction from the expropriation price of the subsidies which might be granted, as under the new regulations made by this Government the company would be required to give a return in service of 3 per cent. upon the amount of the subsidies which might be granted by the Government. If it was proposed to apply the general principle of deducting the amount of bonuses from the price of a railway when expropriated by the Government, provision should be made in a general bill, which would apply to all railways, and one railway should not be singled out for the purpose.

Col. Tisdale favored the charter, but did not think the road one entitled to a subsidy.

Mr. B. M. Britton disapproved the amendment.

Mr. R. L. Borden—You must begin some time or other with a provision of this kind. There would be just the same objection to a general law, and there can be no injustice in beginning with this company. As to the deducting of the bonus, Mr. Borden thought, while in some cases it would be proper to do so, in others it would not. Suppose this property, at the time of its being expropriated, was only worth half of what it had cost the owners. It would not be a just thing to deduct the subsidy then: whereas, if the property had increased in value it would be a very proper thing to deduct the bonus. He could not favor the latter part of the amendment for this reason. He entirely favored the first part.

Dr. Sproule regarded as a precedent for expropriation the British subsidy system to steamboats.

Mr. Richardson then pointed out that a precedent for railway expropriation is provided in an Imperial Act of 1844.

Hon. J. Sutherland opposed the amendment as providing special restrictions for this company.

Mr. R. L. Borden would vote against the amendment unless that latter part was modified by such words as the following: "But such subsidy shall not be deducted except to the extent which the value of the undertaking is in excess of the cost, together with a reasonable allowance for interest on such cost."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, on general principles, was in favor of supporting the report of the Railway Committee unless it could be shown that some gross error had been committed. He thought if a beginning were to be made in legislating on the lines of the amendment, it should be only after the fullest consideration. He said:

This Parliament has the right at any time to expropriate railway property, even the C. P. R. I think my hon. friend from East York will agree with me that we have an undoubted right to do so, and we can do so to-morrow. I do not know but the time may come which my hon. friend from East York is sighing for, when we should have all the railways of this country under our jurisdiction, that we should have the ownership of them. I am not prepared to adopt this principle to-day, but some time we may come to this conclusion. We may do what has been done in other countries. But if that time ever came, this Parliament would have to consider the clauses of expropriation, and what rule of expropriation should be followed.

In the present case he agreed with the argument that the amendment would apply special conditions to one bill of a private company.

After stating his total disagreement with the Premier's view that the Railway Committee does the whole thing, leaving practically nothing to the House, Mr. Maclean said, respecting Sir Wilfrid's statement on the expropriation of railways, I am glad to have heard this confession of the hon. gentleman with regard to Government ownership, and I say we could never have had that confession but for the discussion which has taken place in this House. (Hear, hear.) All progress that we may make can only be by the kind of discussion we had here when the House went into committee on the Air Line bill, the style of which is to incorporate the Canada National Railway and Transit Company.

Mr. W. F. Maclean objected to the word "National" in the title. That word should, he said, be reserved for the Government road. The Intercolonial is the National Railway of Canada, and that road only should have such an appellation.

Hon. A. G. Blair saw no objection to striking out the word, if there was a feeling in the House about it

Hon. J. Sutherland said the third reading was the proper time for making the alteration in the title.

It was agreed to omit the word at the third reading stage.

Mr. Gourley compared the railway development of Australia and Canada, and brought down the House by an allusion to "Little Canadians." He believed Canada to be only in the initial stage of its railway development, and if this bill were going to affect in any way the grain transportation problem it was of the utmost importance that the amendment should be passed.

Col. Sam Hughes' amendment to the amendment was lost, only three standing up for it.

The amendment was also declared lost on a division.

The committee then rose.

After recess, these gentlemen discussed the mutual preference resolution of the leader of the Opposition: Messrs. Scott (Assiniboia W.), Lancaster, Hughes (King's, P.E.I.), Richardson (Lisgar), and Robinson (West Elgin).

The House adjourned at midnight.

Spring Medicine

Is of the greatest importance. This is the most critical season of the year, from a health standpoint.

It is the time when you imperatively need Hood's Sarsaparilla.

It will give you a good appetite, purify and enrich your blood, build up and steady your nerves, overcome that tired feeling, give mental and digestive strength—in short, will vitalize your whole being, and put you in perfect health.

Don't delay taking it.

Don't experiment with others. Get that which trial and test have proved the best—

HOOD'S Sarsaparilla

Best for Spring—"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla when needed for several years and would not be without it in the house. It is an excellent medicine and I heartily recommend its use in the spring and at any time when a blood purifier and tonic is needed." Mrs. F. M. Foote, 21 Irving Place, Passaic, N. J.

Spring Fever—"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla for my spring medicine for years and have always found it reliable and giving perfect satisfaction. In the spring it takes away that tired feeling or spring fever, gives energy and puts the blood in good condition." Miss Ervie Colonne, 1535 10th Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

IT IS THE WAY YOU USE IT.

Its the Method Employed Which Makes Success or Failure.

One man with pen, ink and paper can produce a landscape, another man with same pen and ink may not be able to write his own name legibly. It is all in knowing how.

It is equally true in the use of medicines. The same remedies we have to-day have existed for thousands of years, but if their existence was known the knowledge of how to use them was lacking.

They became valuable to the human race only when experiment and science showed the way to use them to get results.

The grip is an old disease with a new name; it is really catarrhal in character and the usual symptoms are those of acute catarrh, but the old time catarrh salves and sprays do not cure it, neither does the application of antiseptics through an inhaler give anything more than relief for a short time.

The antiseptics are all right; they will kill the germs of catarrh and grip if they are applied rightly, but their local application to the nose and throat avail little because the germs are in the blood and through the whole system.

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets contain many of these same antiseptics, that are used in sprays and inhalers, but instead of applying them to the inflamed membranes of the nose and throat, they are taken into the stomach and thus reach the blood, the real seat of the disease and drive out the infectious germs through the natural channels of the bowels and kidneys.

In other words Stuart's Catarrh Tablets reach the CAUSE of the mischief instead of merely local symptoms.

The remarkable success of these tablets in curing grip, catarrh and throat and lung troubles is because they drive the catarrhal poison from the system and the nose and throat become clear of the excessive secretion of mucus, which causes the hawking, spitting and gagging, because the secretion is not supplied from healthy blood.

Two years ago, Stuarts Catarrh Tablets were unknown, but to-day have become so popular through positive merit that druggists everywhere in the United States, Canada and Great Britain now sell them.

HIS MAJORITY IS 11.

The official return of the result of the bye-election in North Bruce was made by the returning officer at Tara on Saturday. James Halliday, Conservative, was officially declared elected by a majority of 11.

England Backs Russian Riot.

Columbus, Ohio, March 26.—Baron Eugene de Haupick, said to be a representative of the Czar in investigating oil fields of America and the American method of refining petroleum, declared in an interview yesterday that England was supplying the money with which the uprisings among Russian students and workingmen were incited.

"THE FRENCH SHORE."

Where Misery, Squalor, Hunger and Cold Rule In Newfoundland.

Misery, squalor and wretchedness, accentuated by an almost ceaseless struggle with hunger and cold, are the portion of the inhabitants of the "North Shore," in Newfoundland. Their little hamlets are perched in the rifts in the almost unbroken hills, and the fierce storms sweep the surface almost to their doorsteps, while for seven months of the year their coast is blockaded with ice and they are cut off from all communication with the outside world.

The only industry is codfishing, and cod is the sole medium of exchange. The people rarely see money, and barter is the system of trading, a quintal of cod being the unit of value. The needs of the fisher folk are only supplied by the itinerant trader, his schooner being laden with provisions, clothing and fishing appliances. Thus have these people lived for generations. They are ignorant, for the means of education are nonexistent, the children being content with what satisfied their fathers. The common objects of everyday life are unknown to them. They have neither horses nor cattle. Only a few of the older folk who have ventured south have any knowledge of these things.

There are no roads and therefore no vehicles. Travel is by boat during the summer and over the ice floes during the rest of the year. The few letters for the clergy and others who can read are conveyed to the settlements by dog teams during the winter, and, save for the fortnightly visit of the mailboat during the period of open navigation, a steamer is never seen by the residents.

With such marvels as electric telegraphs, telephones and electric light they are of course unfamiliar, and their standard of intelligence is best indicated by stating that it is not unusual to find a justice of the peace who cannot write his own name.—Chambers' Journal.

THE ONTARIO HOUSE.

Good Progress Made With Routine Work Monday Afternoon.

THE ONTARIO COMPANIES' ACT.

Hon. Mr. Stratton's Bill Considered in Committee—Col. Matheson Moves an Amendment to Clause 3 of the Bill—The Debate on the Remount Station Address Resumed.

Toronto, March 26.—The session of the Legislative Assembly yesterday afternoon was largely devoted to routine work and good progress was made. The following bills were read a third time: To incorporate the Town of Kingsville; respecting the People's Life Insurance Co.; to consolidate floating debt of Village of Acton; respecting the City of Brantford; to confirm bylaw of York County; respecting the Town of Cobourg, and to consolidate and amend the Act respecting the Education Department.

A number of private bills were passed in committee and the following received second readings: Respecting the Town of Fort William; to amend the Act incorporating the Midland Land Co.; respecting the Town of Port Arthur; respecting the Town of Collingwood and the Cramp-Ontario Steel Co; respecting the Subsidiary High Court of the Ancient Order of Foresters.

The bill to amend the Supplementary Revenue Act was reported from committee.

Hon. Mr. Stratton's bill to amend the Ontario Companies' Act was considered in committee.

Mr. Whitney took exception to the clause providing that in cases in which the shareholders did not reside in this Province, the annual meetings could be held outside its limits. Hon. J. M. Gibson advocated the provision on the ground of its convenience and the hardship of requiring men living in a distant State or Province to hold their annual meetings here.

Hon. Mr. Stratton said that under the present law, it was doubtful whether in such cases the annual meetings were required to be held within the confines of the Province or not. The present bill removed all doubts on the matter. There was no reason why a company whose shareholders were non-residents should be put to the expense of going through the formality of holding their annual meetings here. It was desirable to give American capitalists inducements to make investments in Canada.

Mr. Crawford said that no adequate reasons had been given for the bill and he thought it ought to be withdrawn.

Hon. J. M. Gibson said that the argument that the meetings were beyond the jurisdiction of the country had no weight. There were provisions for the cancellation of the charter in certain cases and also for the making of regular returns. The courts of the United States would give relief if a shareholder resident there had any substantial grievance.

Col. Matheson moved that the first section of clause 3 of the bill providing that the name of a company which had made no returns to the Government for three years might be conferred upon another company be struck out.

Mr. Stratton explained that numerous companies had ceased to exist and that other concerns desired to assume their names. There was no good reason why this privilege should not be granted.

Col. Matheson was disposed to press his motion to a vote, but Hon. J. M. Gibson protested against the unfairness of taking a division in so slim a house and the clause was allowed to stand. The committee reported progress.

The debate on the motion for an address to the British Government respecting a remount station was resumed. Mr. Whitney said that no exception could be taken to the wording of the address, but failed to see that much was likely to be accomplished by the movement, as the Imperial Government had always been free to buy horses in Canada. Mr. Pattullo regretted that the attention of the Imperial Government in the matter had hitherto been drawn to the United States rather than Canada. The British War Office, unfortunately, was very much under the influence of tradition and red tape in such matters. By addressing the Imperial authorities directly something might be accomplished. It was a matter in which the rural districts were much interested. Mr. Crawford thought the Government should encourage the importation of a better class of stock to improve the breed. Premier Ross detailed some of the steps that he had taken to bring the question before the attention of the British War Office. He was aware of the conservatism of the Imperial authorities, and it was specially for this reason that he had introduced the resolution for he thought that if the House spoke as a body it would have more weight than any representations made by the Government. There would be no difficulty in our farmers raising the class of horses required, provided the market were assured. Even if the address did not accomplish its purpose nothing was to be lost by making the effort.

After some further discussion the motion was adopted.

The report of the Committee of Supply was received and concurred in with the exception of three or four items, which stood over.

The Premier, in reply to a question by Mr. Whitney, denied that the Ontario Government had agreed to aid the Union Stockyards Company by guaranteeing their bonds to the extent of $200,000, as stated in circulars.

Catarrhozone Cures Child of Catarrh.

Perth, Ont.—"I cannot withhold my testimony as to the great value of Catarrhozone as a remedy for Catarrh, one bottle having cured my daughter of that trouble, and I heartily recommend it to all suffering from that disease. No house should be without it." Mrs. J. A. Morris.

So pleasant, babies use it; so safe, grandmothers employ it; so certain to quickly relieve and cure that doctors, lawyers, merchants and public speakers rely upon Catarrhozone as their standby for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma and Hay Fever. It is cheap because it lasts so long, and because it is so sure to cure even the poorest can afford to buy it. Every dollar outfit is guaranteed to cure, or your money back. Small size, 25c., druggists or by mail. A trial sent for 10c, by N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Canada, or Hartford, Conn., U.S.

Animal Peculiarities.

If a female fox (vixen) gets caught in a steel trap and is discovered by the male or fox dog, it is said he invariably kills her, although I have not heard it stated that the vixen would kill the dog fox or another vixen or the male another male.

If a cow becomes impaled on a fence and groans with pain, the whole herd instantly rush wildly to the spot, fight and apparently do their best to destroy her if not beaten off.

A hog confined with others in a pen breaks out and on being returned to the pen is at once set upon and bitten by the others.

Why, with all the instinct animals possess, is the desire so strong to injure or destroy rather than to help or rescue?

Wood That Causes Sneezing.

Among its many curious products South Africa includes the "sneeze wood" tree, which takes its name from the fact that one cannot cut it with a saw without sneezing, as the fine dust has exactly the effect of snuff. Even in planing the wood it will sometimes cause sneezing. No insect, worm or barnacle will touch it. It is very bitter to the taste, and when placed in water it will sink. The color is light brown and the grain very close and hard. For dock work, piers or jetties it is a useful timber, lasting a long while under water.

LADIES GOLF CLUB MET LAST NIGHT

And Re-organized for the Coming Season.

THE ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

Mrs. R. P. Boucher is President, Miss Barlee, Secretary-Treasurer and Miss Archer, Captain.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Ladies Golf Club was held last evening in the Y.M.C.A. parlours with thirty of the members present. The president of the Club, Mrs. R. S. Davidson, occupied the chair and the business of the meeting was transacted in a manner which reflected the greatest credit on the ladies present, and in fact took precedence, in the manner of its conduct, over that of the men's meeting held last week. The reports were compiled and submitted in such a manner as to permit of a clear insight into the existing state of affairs, and those present adjourned feeling highly satisfied with the mode of procedure which had been adopted in carrying out the various objects for which the meeting had been called.

After the minutes of the last annual meeting had been read, Mrs. Campbell submitted a constitution for the Club which was read by the president and subsequently adopted.

Mrs. Davidson presented the president's annual report as follows :

PRESIDENT'S REPORT.

Let us take a retrospective view of the events of the past year from a golf standpoint. It is just about a year ago since the last annual meeting was held in this place, and you did me the honour of appointing me to the office of President, and with the greatest misgivings I accepted the office, but I was assured of help by several, and the promises were kept. I found the office a great pleasure—I thoroughly enjoyed it—and I wish to thank the members of the Club in general, and the committee in particular, for their kind help and hearty co-operation in the management of the affairs of the Club. Everything has gone on in such a happy, comfortable manner (indeed I cannot recall an unpleasant occurrence), but of course there is nothing remarkable in that, as we would not expect anything but harmony to exist among so many happy, healthy people.

It is a matter of congratulation that the year has been so successful, both as regards membership and marked progress in the game. A membership of 70 is a large number for a town of this size, and the enthusiasm has been very pronounced.

The formal opening of the club house took place on Saturday, May 26th, when Mr. Ritchie and Mr. Hatton kindly entertained all the members of the Club at tea. Teas were held weekly and were largely attended and very enjoyable.

We had the pleasure of entertaining two foreign clubs during the season, the High Park Club of Toronto, on June 5th, and the Port Hope Club in September. We were fortunate in having perfect weather on both occasions. We enjoyed having them with us very much, and I am quite sure that they enjoyed their visit. I may say that the result of both these matches was victory for the visitors. In July a party of 12 ladies visited the Port Hope Club. A delightful day was spent and we were charmingly entertained. We did our best to loft over their numerous kopjes, and returned home not covered with honours, but with a very substantial coat of sunburn, which served to remind us for several days of our visit.

Prizes were kindly donated by the Hon. President, the Captain, Miss Josslo Fairweather, Mr. Dickson Hall and the President. These prizes added much interest to the matches. Mrs. Sanderson kindly offered a prize in the fall, but as the season had advanced so far it was decided to hold it over till this spring.

We had the honour of having one of our members, Miss Daisy Hamilton, chosen to play in the Inter-Provincial Match, which was held in Toronto in October. It is gratifying to state that she was successful in defeating her opponent by 3 up. The Peterborough Club was represented by four members at this tournament.

A musicale was held at the home of Miss Katie Hall this winter at which the sum of about $8 was realized.

I cannot conclude this report without referring to the sad death of Mrs. Hanrahan, the wife of the caretaker, who was always obliging and attentive to the wants of the members.

In referring to matches, tournaments, etc., I have perhaps gone beyond what really comes under my especial charge, but in the absence of the Captain, I feel that all these things which are of general interest, should be mentioned.

It is a gratifying fact that the club has a balance of $11.15 to its credit in the bank.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

CLARA C. DAVIDSON,
President.

The report was adopted on motion of Miss Barlee and Mrs. A. H. Stratton.

SEC.-TREASURER'S REPORT.

Miss Annie Hall, the secretary-treasurer, presented her annual statement as subjoined :—

The season of 1900 has been the most successful one in the history of the Peterborough Ladies' Golf Club. There are on the list 46 playing members and 20 associate members, making a total of 66. The following is a statement of the receipts and expenditures for the year :

RECEIPTS.

Mrs. Hanrahan,	12 25
Tea and Sugar,	2 93
Stationery, postage, telephone,	2 49
Balance on hand,	11 15
	$136 22

Respectfully submitted.

ANNIE M. HALL,
Sec.-Treas. P.L.G.C.

On motion of Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. R. R. Hall the report was adopted.

General business was then taken up and it was decided that the House Committee, hereafter, have the disposition of the locker money in their hands. It was also decided that the teas, which are such a pleasant feature of golfing during the summer, will be held fortnightly during the season instead of weekly, as the holding of this function proves quite a task for the ladies.

Miss Barlee referred to the question of allowing the men to pass the ladies when playing on the links, and urged that this concession be made freely, as on account of the men playing so much faster there had been some dissatisfaction expressed when they were obliged to wait behind lady players.

Mrs. Davidson thought that some arrangement might be reached regarding days of play as suggested at the men's meeting. Mrs. Campbell agreed with Mrs. Davidson's remarks, stating that the matter might be left with the men and their suggestion acted upon. Mrs. Dennistoun thought it would be a graceful thing to ask the men for their ideas on the subject.

Mrs. McAllister was in favour of giving up Saturday afternoon's to the men, and giving them the privilege of passing on the links after four o'clock every other afternoon.

It was finally decided to take no definite action until the Executive of the men's club had been heard from in the matter.

Votes of thanks were then passed to Mr. C. H. Bradburn for his kindness in drafting a constitution for the club ; to Mr. Williamson and the Y.M.C.A. for placing the parlours at the disposal of the ladies ; to the retiring officers and to the Press.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The election of officers was the final order of business, and the contest for each office, except that of Honorary President, was keen and exciting, resulting in every case in several ballots having to be taken before a candidate was finally selected for the position in question.

The officers elected were as appended :

Hon. President—Mrs. Hon. Hamilton.
President—Mrs. Boucher.
Sec.-Treas.—Miss Barlee.
Captain—Miss Archer.
Match Committee—Mrs. Campbell, Miss Halliday and Mrs. R. S. Davidson.
Entertainment Committee—Mrs. Dennistoun, Miss Hugel, Miss Georgie Dennistoun, Mrs. Eastwood, Mrs. Sanderson, Miss Annie Hamilton, Mrs. Stanley, Mrs. D. Lundy, Mrs. McAllister, Miss Annie Hall, Mrs. A. H. Stratton and Mrs. Burnett.
Auditors—Mrs. R. R. Hall and Miss Clementi.

LEFT FOR THE WEST.

Mr. Will Cavanah, the Popular Captain of the Peterborough Colts, off for Home.

Mr. Will Cavanah, who for the past two seasons has been a tower of strength on the Peterborough Colts' hockey team, left this morning for his old home in Lethbridge, Alberta. Mr. Cavanah, or rather, "Bill," as he was familiarly known among the boys, took his departure from town with the best wishes of his host of friends for success in the West.

He came to Peterborough just fifteen months ago to take a course at the Business College, and it was not long until he became acquainted with all the boys. This was in a large measure due to his connection with hockey circles, as he shortly became recognized as a capable exponent of Canada's winter game, and at once took his place at point on the Colts' team. His services on the team last season were admired by all who witnessed the games, and as a reward for his excellent, all-round work, his excellent judgment and great popularity, he was unanimously elected captain of this year's Colts' team. The fact that the Colts won the Junior O.H.A. Championship was in no small measure due to his capable management, and the people of Peterborough were not slow to recognize this. He was handsomely remembered before leaving town. This morning when the Grand Trunk train pulled out there was a number of his friends on hand to give him a final farewell, and wish him godspeed. He will take the C.P.R. at North Bay.

During Mr. Cavanah's residence in town he lived with his uncle, Mr. W. J. Green.

ART NEEDLEWORK.

Gratifying Success of Miss M. A. Rose's Classes in Peterborough and Lindsay.

The very interesting and instructive class of ladies, under the tuition of Miss M. A. Rose, instructor in fine art needlework, in connection with Messrs. Sutcliffe & Sons, town, the representatives of Messrs. Belding, Paul & Co., of Montreal, successfully graduated during the first week in March. So highly were Miss Rose's services appreciated by members of her class that they presented her with a beautiful morocco combination purse, in one of the inner pockets of which a five dollar gold piece was carefully secreted. The handsome work which Miss Rose's pupils have learned will constitute an accomplishment in fine art needlework which must prove a life-long pleasure to them.

Miss Rose was, the following week, invited to teach a similar class in Lindsay, which completed the course last Friday. Speaking of this class, the Lindsay Post of the 23rd March has the following complimentary reference :—

"Miss M. A. Rose, instructor in art needlework with Sutcliffe & Sons, of Peterborough, and Belding, Paul & Co., Montreal, yesterday completed her two weeks' engagement with Messrs. Sutcliffe & Sons, of this town. Her magnificent samples of fancy work stirred the enthusiasm of our ladies, and a class of over 60 made rapid progress under her painstaking tuition. At the close of the final lesson yesterday the members of the class fittingly recognized the patience, skill and geniality of their teacher by asking her to accept a handsome opal ring (her birthday stone), as a token of their esteem and gratitude. The presentation was made by Mrs. (Dr.) Gillespie, and the recipient was so surprised that she felt obliged to return her thanks by deputy. The members of the class and others who were prevented from joining by various circumstances, all regret that Miss Rose could not remain for another term.

Grand Spring Opening!

Remember our Grand Spring Opening on WEDNESDAY, MARCH 27th,

and following days, when we will be prepared to display for your inspection the grandest assortment of high-class Millinery, Tailor-made Suits, Jackets, Dress Goods, Carpets and House Furnishings that has ever been displayed in Peterborough.

EVERYBODY IS WELCOME.

We want everybody to see our display, whether intending purchasing or not. We have made big preparations for it, and you will say it is a sight truly worth seeing.

Don't be content with seeing the Millinery only, but when you are up-stairs see our Carpets and House Furnishings. They are just adjoining the Millinery Room. Then, when you come down stairs don't go out without seeing our elegant display of Dress Goods, as well as the other novelties in their respective departments. It will be a pleasure for us to show them and explain the special features of them to you.

A GAS LIGHT DISPLAY.

For the benefit of those who are unable to be here in the day time we will have one evening display on Wednesday evening, from 7 to 9.30. Make it a point to be here.

"KRUGER AND KHAKI."

MR. FREDERICK VILLIERS, WAR CORRESPONDENT,

Heard at the Opera House Last Night. —A Pleasing Speaker. — Excellent Views Add Interest to the Story.

Perhaps the fact that the residents of Peterborough have been lectured and re-lectured upon the story of the South African war, added to the very unpleasant state of the weather last evening, accounted for the very slim attendance at the opera house last evening to hear Mr. Frederick Villiers, the famous war correspondent. At any rate the leturer merited much better patronage.

With an apology for not appearing in the orthodox garb of the conventional lecturer, but preferably in his khaki campaigning costume, he launched out into the story proper.

He was, at the time of the breaking out of hostilities, in New Zealand, and left that colony along with its first contingent. Arriving at the Cape he hurriedly pushed forward and joined Lord Methuen's column, then engaged upon the task of the relief of Kimberly. The speaker paid a glowing tribute to Lord Methuen, both as a soldier and a gentleman, showing how this much-criticized general had acted at ill-fated Magersfontein like any other man would have done under similar circumstances. He had taken the only step open to him, and had not the false command to retire been given from the Boer trenches a victory instead of a defeat would have been written upon the pages of history to-day.

The next point of interest to his hearers was the Sunnyside and Belmont affairs in which the behaviour of the Colonials in general, and of the Canadians in particular, came in for great praise. They were so rude, in their eagerness to commence operations, that they interrupted the Boers at breakfast, supplementing this meal with shrapnel. It was the Colonials' first taste of real warfare and only served to make them keener for the more momentous engagements which were to follow.

The speaker then told of joining Sir Redvers Buller's column at the Tugela, and how that worthy general by his repeated failures to relieve Ladysmith had won from the soldiers of that beleaguered garrison the sobriquet of Sir "Reverse" Buller. After the relief was finally accomplished they were quite willing to change it to Sir "Relievus" Buller.

Then in thought and by excellent views the audience was carried to the relief of Kimberly, which was accomplished by General French's cavalry column. Here the speaker amusingly told of how, after weeks of weary marching without the luxury of a bath or of sufficient food, he had sat down at a Kimberly hotel to the following bill of fare:—Porridge, Rissoles and Anchovy Sauce, Tea, Toast, Coffee. To the question by the waiter as to what he desired to have he was quite willing to say with the poet: "Let them all come."

Of course, as in previous lectures, the event of greatest interest to Canadians was the recital of the thrilling incidents of the engagement at Paardeberg, on the memorable 26th of February. Majuba had been avenged and the Canucks were instrumental in wiping that score off the slate.

In closing, after showing photos of the prominent generals and officers of the Imperial army in South Africa, the lecturer took occasion to plainly refute the statements of the well-known gentleman who had gone thither to find fault with the army hospital service. He stated that no campaign in history had been better conducted with regard to this particular feature.

PROSPEROUS INDUSTRY

Which the Town of Peterborough Might Have Had — Handsome Dividend.

The Grant-Hamilton Oil Co., Toronto, are increasing their capital stock to $100,000. The first year's operations of the Company were very successful. The stock is held largely by the users of oil, soaps, etc., in all parts of Canada, and is founded on the co-operative principle. It has just paid a handsome dividend on this its first year's operation. They now employ ten travellers, and have in addition to the office staff, 64 men in their employ—all skilled men in oils, soaps, etc. This is the Company the Peterborough council at that time allowed to go to Toronto in refusing to them a suitable site.

CENTRAL CHARITY BOARD.

The Regular Meeting was Held Last Night—The Statement.

The regular meeting of the Central Charity Board was held last night. The following members were in attendance—Mr. Robt. Innes, chairman; Venerable Archdeacon Casey, and Messrs. Fowler, Kempt, Batten, Miller and Rev. J. C. Davidson.

The following statement of aid given was read:—

	Since Feb. 25	Since Jan. 1
Groceries	$ 79 60	$217 40
Wood	108 02	353 50
Tickets	1 95	6 45
Sundries	8 00	71 45
	$196 17	$648 80

A number of accounts were received and ordered to be paid. A number of applications for aid were duly considered.

The Board adjourned until the evening of Monday the 8th day of February.

THE PALACE CHANGES HANDS.

Mr. J. M. Brooks, of Oshawa, the New Proprietor.

The Palace Restaurant, which for some months has been under the management of Mr. Joseph Armstrong, has changed hands, the new proprietor being Mr. Brooks, of Oshawa. Mr. Brooks, it is said, has had considerable experience in his line of business, and was formerly proprietor of the Oriental Hotel, Port Perry. It is his intention to place the Palace in first-class condition, and he has engaged Mr. Jimmy Spellman as wine clerk, which is in itself a guarantee to the public of his determination to carefully look after the wants of the public.

HOME READING CIRCLE.

A union meeting of the Home Reading Union Circles will be held in the Y. M. C. A. Hall on the evening of Thursday, March 28th, at 8 o'clock.

Reports on the work of the different courses will be presented by the secretaries of the same, and an address by the president, Rev. Herbert Symonds, will be given on the Renaissance Period. It is earnestly hoped that there will be a good attendance.

SHARPE WILL BE TRIED FOR MURDER

Grand Jury Brought in a True Bill.

SHARPE WEEPS IN COURT.

The Case will Commence at Nine O'clock To-Morrow Morning — Wasson v. Douglas Now On.

At the conclusion of the reading of the address from the local bar to the Hon. Mr. Justice Lount, at the assizes, yesterday, His Lordship made a modest and fitting reply. He expressed his gratitude for the very cordial reception the local bar had given him to Peterborough, on this the occasion of his first official visit. He recognized the truthfulness of their reference to the bench of Canada, and more particularly Ontario, and he could say that there was no country, not even England, that has given more lustre, having regard to the surroundings, than has Canada. It is to be hoped, then, from the past history of appointments, whoever may have the fortune to control the destinies of Canada, it will be their duty to appoint well qualified men as in the past. He, himself, had yet to win his laurels, but it will be his greatest wish to hold the scales of justice well balanced. His Lordship reminded the Court, however, that the bench looked to the bar for assistance, and for this reason he felt that we could feel with pride and pleasure that we will have such assistance for justice and for right. He next made suitable reference to the death of our late beloved Sovereign, Queen Victoria, and he believed, having in view her reign, that the mantle has fallen on shoulders capable of hearing the responsibility connected therewith, and that the Empire shall continue to prosper.

In conclusion he said that he appreciated quite fully the responsibilities that rested upon him and he would endeavour to uphold the good opinion they now held of him, according to the words of their address.

THE GRAND JURY.

The Grand Jury was then empanelled as follows.—Mr. A. L. Davis, Peterborough foreman; Jas. G. Armstrong, farmer Smith; J. S. Boswell, gentleman, Peterborough; Ralph Braund, grocer, Peterborough; Peter Crombie, farmer, Otonabee; Adam Dawson, bricklayer, Peterborough Vincent Eastwood, merchant, Peterborough; George Esson, farmer, Otonabee; William Gallon, farmer, Ashburnham; Thomas A. S. Hay, C.E., Peterborough; J. A. Sexsmith, farmer, Belmont; Robert Shaw, farmer, Harvey; W. C. Taylor, farmer, Douro.

HIS LORDSHIP'S ADDRESS.

Judge Lount's address was rather lengthy and was characterized by the explicitness of the manner in which he clearly defined the various duties that were to come before the Grand Jury. He spoke in a slow and distinct voice, and was listed to with marked attention by the faithful jurors, the representatives of the bar and the court in general. In the course of his remarks he said that the calander handed him by the Sheriff, did not show many cases to be inquired into, but that there was one, however, a very serious charge. His Lordship, after dealing with the necessity for a poor house; etc., as many learned members of the bench before him have done, referred to the duties they would have to perform in connection with the case of Alex Sharp charged with murder. He made very clear the cirumstances that should prevail in order to reduce the charge from murdur to that of manslaughter.

HUBNER'S CASE.

The first case taken up was that of Bert Hubner, who was charged with stealing horses from Mr. Westlake, of Peterborough, and Mr. Scott, of Norwood. He pleaded guilty to the former and not guilty to the latter. He had no counsel and as the evidence was too gloomy against him, he was given two years less one day in the Central Prison.

R. E. Wood, County Crown Attorney, conducted the Crown case.

In the meantime the Civil action of Wasson v. Douglass was in progress.

The court room was crowded and the arrival of the prisoner Sharpe was eagerly awaited. It was only a brief while, however, until he came in under the care of Turnkey Rae. Sharpe with the aid of his two crutches and minus his wooden leg climbed up to his place in the prisoner's box, and was immediately the cynosure of the crowded room. He looks considerably pulled down in health as a result of his confinement, and appears to feel his position keenly. He was tidy in his appearance, but there was an expression on his face that seemed to indicate that he was passing through a deep mental strain. He became unnerved while waiting for the Grand Jury, and, breaking down, wept for some time. Mr. F. D. Kerr, prisoner's counsel, at this juncture, appeared in court for the first time. He has been confined to his room with illness, and it was feared at one time that he would be unable to attend. He had a brief conversation with Sharpe, after which the formal arraignment took place. Mr. John Maloney, the clerk of the court, read the charge, which was that of the murder of Wm. Hull.

Prisoner through his counsel, Mr. Kerr, pleaded not guilty.

His Lordship—Are you ready to proceed with the case, Mr. Kerr?

Mr. Kerr — To-morrow morning, my Lord.

The spectators gradually withdrew from the room as their chief attraction was in the murder trial.

The Wasson v. Douglass case was then proceeded with.

LOOKING FOR MANUFACTURERS.

A Deputation From Toronto After The Cordage Company.

A deputation from Toronto was in Peterborough a few days ago, with a view of securing the location of the Canadian Cordage Company, Limited, in that city. Nothing definite can be learned of the inducement, but it is said that a good site, railway connections and exemption from Municipal taxes were offered. The company will employ about 60 to 80 hands, and manufacture rope, binder twine and all kinds of mercantile cords. The buildings will be large and the capital invested in machinery and buildings will be about $150,000.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS.

THE COUNTY ASSOCIATION MET LAST WEEK.

Officers Elected for the Year and Plans Drawn up for the Next Twelve Month's Work.]

The annual meeting of the Peterborough County Sunday School Council was held Thursday afternoon, March 21st, in the Y.M.C.A., with a fair attendance of the members.

The chair was occupied by the president Mr. E. E. Hawthorne. Several letters of regret were received from absent members. Among others was one from the field secretary, Dr. Harrison, who was unable to be present owing to the recent fire, and for the same reason the financial statement was not presented, having been mislaid in the disorder that prevailed. It had been forwarded to Dr. Harrison by the treasurer, Mr. W. E. Roxburgh, Norwood, who was also unable to be present. Excellent and encouraging reports were received from the various officers and a hearty vote of thanks was tendered them.

The report of the field and minute secretaries gave a synopsis of the work as a whole done by the Association during the past year.

The home class superintendent, Miss Nettie Shearer, reported that the work had been introduced, superintendents appointed in the townships of Belmont, Dummer, North Smith and Harvey. In Otonabee five schools have home departments, and the town of Peterborough reports two. Wherever this work is taken up it not only helps and strengthens the school, but proves a blessing to those who are shut out from the privileges of the Sabbath School.

The primary superintendent, Mrs. Garvin, reported having visited 22 schools in the county, and one of the results was that several of the schools have placed in their libraries books that will be helpful to the primary teachers of their school. The work of this department might be greatly facilitated if each Association would elect a superintendent of primary work for their own township. Otonabee is the only township in the county having a primary superintendent. The normal work is slowly but steadily gaining ground. The town Association has a union class of all the schools. Otonabee has three classes at work and is arranging for a series of Normal Institutes to be held in each school in the township. The superintendent of this department, Rev. D. A. Thomson, Hastings, will willingly give his services wherever he can be of any assistance.

From the report of Miss L. Bennett, delegate to the Provincial S. S. Convention at Brockville, the following facts are gleaned: Peterborough County had 13 delegates present. The county stands well to the front in Sunday school work. Our organization was held up as a model for other counties. The various associations were urged to keep their schools in touch with the work of the Provincial Association, thus helping both the schools and Association. One cent per member from the Sabbath schools of Ontario would give the Association an income of $5,000, and place it in a position to carry on the work more aggressively. Each township secretary was requested to send the names and addresses of all superintendents of Sabbath schools in their township.

Arrangements were made to hold a series of conventions throughout the county, similar to those of last year, and as nearly as possible on the same dates. A committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements.

The following are the officers for the ensuing year:

Pres.—Rev. J. G. Potter, B. A.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mr. John Lancaster.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mr. E. E. Hawthorne.
Minute Secretary—Miss Laura Bennett.
Field Secretary—W. T. Harrison, M.D.
Treas.—Mr. W. E. Roxburgh, Norwood.
Primary Supt.—Mrs. J. W. Garvin.
Asst. Primary Supt.—Miss English.
Home Class Supt.—Miss A. Shearer.
Normal Supt.—Rev. D. A. Thompson.
Representative to Provincial Asso'n—Rev. H. Symonds, M.A.
County Representative to Prov. Asso'n—Mr. J. M. Roberts.
Town Representative—Mr. S. R. Armstrong.

Representatives from Associations—Peterborough and Ashburnham, Rev. J. Bastow; Otonabee, Miss Edith Armstrong; Dummer, Rev. Mr. Hyde; Apsley, Rev. J. R. Berry; North Smith and Harvey, Rev. Mr. Dove; Belmont and Havelock, Mrs. Mathieson; Ashphodel, Mr. B. F. Doxsee.

MARRIED IN THE WEST.

Miss Gunn, a Former Peterborough Young Lady, to Mr W. M. McAdam.

A Revelstroke paper contains the following account of a marriage of local interest: "At the Methodist parsonage, Revelstoke, on March 6th, by the Rev. S. J. Thompson, Wm. McAdam, of the Hudson Bay Co., Nelson, to Caroline, eldest daughter of Mr. Thomas Gunn, of Peterborough, Ont. The groom was assisted by Principal Sullivan, of the Revelstoke School, while the bride was assisted by Miss Smith, another of the teachers The bride was becomingly attired in a travelling costume, and carried a bouquet of white heather sent her by relatives of the groom in Scotland. Mrs. McAdam was a well-known Calgarry young lady, and with Mr. McAdam spent several days in town during the week as the guest of Mr. W. B. George. The happy young couple left Wednesday for their home in Nelson, B.C. Their many acquaintances in town wish them every happiness."

MISS CARSON IN ST. PAUL'S.

She Spoke Before a Large Audience Last Night—Her Subject.

Miss Carson, of Christodora House, New York City, addressed the young people's societies of the town last evening in St. Paul's schoolroom. The audience was a large one and evidenced much interest in the very practical, helpful and soul-lifting address to which they attentively listened. The speaker chose as a subject for her address that most wonderful verse found in 1st Chron. 1st chapter,—"Take heed now; for the Lord hath chosen thee to build an house for the sanctuary; be strong and do it." David here delivers his message to his son Solomon. It was an exhortation throughout on character building, and was beautifully and aptly illustrated from the common occurrences of every-day life. Young women to-day need no advice as much as the following: "Take heed," etc. To-day we are called upon to build just as wonderful a structure a structure that we are each called upon to build for ourselves—a structure of life.

We build through our social, religious, intellectual and physical life, and through these we may be building for or against God.

Miss Carson spoke of what we would here in Canada call social teas, that were given amongst the poor in connection with her work in the college settlements of New York city, and through which many lives were brought to Christ, and made ready for the home the All-Father prepared for them.

EXPOSITION MAKING

THE PAN-AMERICAN TO EXCEL IN MANY PARTICULARS.

The Most Delicate and Intricate Plastic Work Ever Attempted For Exposition Purposes — Color and Horticultural Embellishment.

The development of the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo is observed with profound interest throughout the western world. Almost every day shows some new feature of the magnificent enterprise completed. Some new tower rears aloft its ornamental pinnacle, some new dome presents its rounded top to the sky, or some new decoration of form or color is added to the wonderful bouquet of architectural loveliness.

Never was there an Exposition so novel, so unlike what the world has learned to expect, as this. With the glorious examples of the Exposition builder's art and genius to look back upon with fond remembrance and admiration, the world has wondered if all that has been promised for the Pan-American would be realized. If one may judge by the present stage of the vast work, the millions of visitors to Buffalo during the exposition season, which begins on the 1st of May next, will suffer no disappointment.

The Pan-American Exposition will outshine its distinguished predecessors in many particulars. Of these the court settings are of first importance. In order that there may be abundant room for the elaborate decorative effects, 33 acres are alone devoted to courts. This area is two and a half times the area of the courts at the Chicago Columbian Exposition. About these broad courts are grouped a score of great buildings, in which the multitude of exhibits from all parts of the western world are to be displayed.

As a second important feature may be mentioned the ornate architecture, the use of plastic ornamentation of very intricate and beautiful design and the employment of original sculptured groups in the exterior decorations of buildings, entrances and architectural features. No less than 125 original sculptured groups, modeled by some 30 or more distinguished American sculptors, will be used in this feature of the decorative work.

The use of an elaborate color scheme has never before been attempted at an exposition. The appropriate title of the "Rainbow City" has already been applied to this great group of brilliantly colored buildings, and lovers of color will find the exquisite harmony of tints that has here been produced a most delightful subject for contemplation and study.

As a fourth point of superiority may be named the hydraulic and fountain features. In all the courts are broad pools containing numberless cascades and fountains. These will add to the beauty of the great work in no small degree. Many of the fine sculptures will form a part of these charming fountains. A broad and stately canal, a mile and a half in length, banked with grass and lined with a double row of young trees, completely encircles the main group of buildings.

The horticultural embellishment of the grounds constitutes a fifth point of excellence. Ornamental trees, shrubs, lawns and flowers of brilliant hue will delight the eye everywhere. Sunken gardens and formal beds of flowers will surround fountains and pools and border upon the walks throughout the courts.

Crowning the great work of producing unparalleled vistas and an exposition picture of unrivaled beauty will be the electrical illumination. Only when a great volume of power is available, such as Buffalo possesses in the newly harnessed Niagara, could electric illumination be undertaken on so grand a scale. With unlimited power to draw upon, the electrician has had no restraining conditions in his work. The electric tower, 375 feet high, of rich and elaborate design, will form the centerpiece of the electrical brilliancy, while every building, fountain and architectural feature and even the broad surfaces of the artificial lakes and pools, with floating lights, will glow with electrical radiance and luster. The scene will be one of unsurpassed loveliness, hitherto impossible and unlikely soon to be repeated again on account of the vast expenditure of electrical energy necessary to produce it.

MARK BENNITT.

Manitoba and the Exposition.

The Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo next year is assured of a representative exhibit from the important province of Manitoba. Special Commissioner Henderson, who has made a tour of northwestern Canada for the Exposition, met with gratifying success in arousing interest in the enterprise.

The Gentle Art of Letter Writing.

The classic age of letter writing, like that of chivalry, is gone, although no Burke has been found yet to utter its splendid funeral oration. Correspondence on business, hurried notes containing invitations to dinner or acceptances thereof—these are the missives which fill the bag of the letter carrier. The love letter, we presume, still holds its sway, and, if we are to judge from the revelations of breach of promise cases, it is full of sugary sentimentalism as in the days of Lydia Languish. But the letter as it has passed into literature, the letter whose highest claim to be treated as art is that it conceals art, the letter as written by William Cowper, or Oliver Goldsmith, or Horace Walpole, or Miss Burney—that charming epistle intended only for the affectionate perusal of friends and yet of such value to the historian of life and manners—shall we say that it has disappeared from the busy modern world, killed by the "railway and the steamship and the thoughts that shake mankind?" As least, it is now but a rare product, a fragile flower scarcely able to maintain itself in our altered social soil.

Correspondence from being a cherished art and solace has in our day tended to become what is called in slang a "grind." It is "snippety," like the cheap newspapers, a sort of "bits" or "cuts," giving hints which require to be filled out, only that the receiver has hardly time for that mental process. Truth to tell, a great deal of our letter writing is boredom, the source of irritation and weariness to those who are called on to undertake it.—London Spectator.

From Fingers to Forks.

In olden times fingers served well enough to convey food to the mouth, and a divided gourd was an acceptable drinking vessel, but when fashionable aspirations seized our ancestors they scorned these implements of nature, and even the Pacific islanders pulled their hair, of which they had a generous abundance, in their anxiety to devise more seemly methods. They finally manufactured forks that looked like skewers, and out of the bamboo they manufactured knives. The Indians, proverbially slow in adopting modern ways, still eat without knives or forks, although they have permitted the use of spoons. These were first made of shells and the rinds of gourds. Later handles were inserted, and, having passed numerous stages, knives, forks and spoons have reached the present elaborately ornamented kinds now in general use.

The cup is probably the most ancient of all domestic utensils. Its earliest form was simply the half closed hand or the folded leaf. Then followed cups made of sea shells or rinds of fruit cut in halves. Later appeared cups of metal, lacquer and china. For centuries the cup has been made the expression of art and luxury, and the most precious metals, combined with the artisan's most consummate skill, are now commonly employed in their manufacture.—Baltimore Sun.

MESSRS. THE T. MILBURN CO., LIMITED, Toronto, Ont.

"Some time ago I was weak, nervous and run down, and seeing Milburn's Pills advertised I procured two boxes, and after taking them I was cured."

EDWARD J. JORDAN.

Nile, Ont., Dec. 2nd, 1899.

"When I first started taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills I was very weak and nervous, and would often wake up with fright, and it would be impossible for me to go to sleep again for some time.

"I also had dizzy spells, and shortness of breath. After using the Pills, I cannot say enough for them as they have done me so much good."

MRS. SAMUEL KERR.

Blanche, N.S., Oct. 9th, 1900.

"I was very nervous and easily excited by the least little thing. I took one box of your Milburn's Pills, and found them just what they are recommended to be for nervousness."

ONE NEVER TIRES

Using Delicious

MALT BREAKFAST FOOD.

From experience, we know that many people become nauseated with a continuance of ordinary oatmeal, cracked wheat, hominy and other grain foods, and have a desire to switch off on something new occasionally.

Amongst the ten millions of members comprising the Ralston Health Club who (upon the advice of their President) use Malt Breakfast Food, or amongst the millions outside the ranks of the Ralston Health Club who use Malt Breakfast Food every morning, we have not yet heard of a single individual who has tired of the Food or who would willingly give up its use.

The delicious flavor, the appetizing qualities, the sustaining nutriment, the energizing effects of Malt Breakfast Food have made it so popular with those who use it, that it must always be reckoned as an indispensable friend of the breakfast table. Perfectly toned stomachs, correct digestion and daily progress in good health are assured when Malt Breakfast Food is used. Grocers everywhere.

No Use.

A young swell got into a Sheffield tram car the other evening and sat opposite to two respectably dressed girls.

He soon began to cast admiring glances at them, smiling, twirling his mustache, folding and unfolding his newspaper.

This went on for some time, till one of the girls, looking at him earnestly, said:

"It isn't a bit of use, old boy. We are both married."

Amid the laughter that followed he made his exit as quickly as possible.—London Spare Moments.

Don't think less of your system than you do of your house. Give it a thorough cleansing, too. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla.

PERSONALITIES.

Senator Martin of Virginia, six years in the senate, has never yet made a set speech.

Lord Roberts wears a goatee, and because he is so popular in London t.. style of facial adornment is likely to come into favor again there.

Peter James of Yazoo City, Miss., has presented an observatory and a $2,000 telescope to the Millsaps college, Jackson, Miss., as a memorial to his father.

It is said that the queen regent of Spain has long been opposed to the national sport of bullfighting and is now doing all she can to discourage the sport among her subjects.

Two of the 670 members of the English house of commons are over 80 years of age. Spencer Charrington is 82, and Sir T. Mappin is 81. Two others are 78, and 19 are over 70.

Mlle. Crettier of Amsterdam, who climbed the Breithorn a short time ago, is the first woman who has made the ascent of this steep Swiss mountain in winter time. The peak is 13,000 feet in height.

Daniel Moulton of Lewiston, Me., is one of the few surviving friends of Sam Houston. His recollections of Santa Anna are vivid, and he has a large collection of letters written by Houston and his friends.

The bachelorhood of Governor Dietrich of Nebraska has caused him no little embarrassment, not a day going by without bringing him a written proposal of marriage from some quarter of the state or country.

Henry Guy Carleton, the playwright, stammers very badly at times. Not so long ago he stopped Nat Goodwin on the street and said to him, "Nat, will you g-g-give me half an h-hour for f-five minutes' con-ver-s-sation?"

The largest landowner in England proper is the Duke of Northumberland, who possesses 186,000 acres, mainly, of course, in the county from which he takes his title, and he is the only one of the eight and twenty great lords who has not an acre either in Scotland or Ireland.

Vice Admiral Barrera, the maritime prefect of Brest, having reached the age limit, has been placed on the retired list of the French navy. He is one of the few Frenchmen knighted by an English monarch, Queen Victoria having knighted him for his services at the wreck of the Drummond Castle.

Senator Chandler was a stenographer when he was a young man and used to write letters for General Butler. He is the only stenographer in the senate and still keeps his memoranda in shorthand notes. Representative Hitt of Illinois does the same. He was one of the first stenographers in Illinois and took down the memorable debate between Lincoln and Douglas.

Dr. F. B. Davidson is jogging the pacer Fred Darling, 2:14¼, at Neepowa, Man., and a good green mare owned by himself.

A green sister of Broomal, 2:15, and Bursar, 2:17½, by Stranger, that is to be raced showed 2:19 on a half mile track last summer.

Pat Shank, the well known Litchfield (O.) reinsman, is working a fast green 4-year-old by E. C. Bayard, out of the dam of Temper, 2:12¾.

The Heir Apparent, by Chimes, out of Grace Hamlin, sister of Heir-at-Law, 2:05¾, recently paced a trial in 2:10¼, last half in 1:00.

C. A. Winship, Los Angeles, has a filly, 2-year-old past, by Zombro (3), 2:13, out of Gazelle, 2:11½, dam of Zolock, 2:10½, that recently trotted a quarter in 34 seconds.

A green 4-year-old pacer by McRoberts stepped a half in December over the half mile track at Sioux Falls in 1:04. He is looked upon as a coming star, as he was only broken last May.

Little Mack, full brother to Black Robert, 2:13¼, and a year older, is owned by E. M. Crumbine, Hanover, Pa., and trotted a mile in 2:24 over a third of a mile track last season. He is said to be capable of 2:12 over a mile course.

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND.

The Great Spring Medicine That Restores Ailing Females to Perfect Health.

MRS. ADAMSON, SAYS

"I Can Never Say Too Much In Favour of Paine's Celery Compound."

One of the oldest and best edited monthly magazines published in America, in a recent leading article, declares that more than half the revenue of physicians is derived from the treatment of females, and that about one case in every hundred is correctly diagnosed, showing that cures are extremely rare.

The important knowledge gained by women of every age about Paine's Celery Compound and the special and peculiar benefits it bestows on females suffering from ailments peculiar to their sex, as well as from the common ills of life, have made Paine's Celery Compound the most popular and trusted home medicine of the day.

In spring time, when woman's nervous strength is overtaxed by home work and duties and the constant demands of social functions, it is then that Paine's Celery Compound shows its invigorating and vitalizing effects, as the precious medicine is used from day to day. It quickly banishes nervousness, prostration, weakness, debility, languor, despondency, and the many nameless ills that come to women of all ages.

Mrs. R. Adamson, Head of Millstream, Kings Co., N.B., says:

"I feel it a duty to testify regarding the value of Paine's Celery Compound. Since childhood I suffered from sick headaches, neuralgia and constipation. Had attacks once a week which kept me confined to bed. Have been treated by a number of physicians without beneficial results. I procured six bottles of Paine's Celery Compound which were strongly recommended to me, and after a short time I found that new life and health coming that I so long wished for. Two years have passed and I have not had a return of my old troubles. I can never say to much in favour of Paine's Celery Compound."

A MAN AND HIS VIOLETS.

The Story of the Vivacious Maid Who Received the Flowers.

"Yes, it was a lovely bunch of violets," sighed the girl who received them, "but I wish they had never come to me. You see, it was this way: The man who sent them is one of those awfully nice fellows who bore you to death—the kind you feel so glad to see talking to some one else, don't you know," she ended appealingly.

"Yes; I've seen the type," sympathetically replied her auditor.

"Well, on my birthday he sent that lovely bunch of violets—perfect beauties they were—with a dear little note to the effect that he had to go out of town, but would be represented by these little purple clad messengers, so like my eyes and whose fragrance always reminded him of me. I thought the note rather nice," she concluded pensively, "and put the flowers in the parlor on the center table, where I had done so. Why in the world was I so prompt?" she wailed.

"It was no more than polite."

"Oh, much more! My dear, it is always idiotic to go into details like that. Well, he did not go out of town, but was 'fortunately' detained and came around after all to tell me so. And those wretched violets"—

"Surely they were all right?"

"I had loaned them to Annie to wear to the Blanks' dinner. Of course I had to tell him that the heat of the room was too great, and I had put them in the icebox. Just as he was going and I was congratulating myself on my escape in sailed that miserable girl, violets and all! If he had only gone, as he said he would, it would have been all right. Men are so unreliable!"

Made to Look as Good as New By Use of DIAMOND DYES.

Mrs. William, Surgent, Petrolia, Ont., says: "Your Diamond Dyes are the best I have ever used, and they have done splendid work for me. In a short time Diamond Dyes saved me ten dollars, so that I think they deserve a good word. My friends, to whom I have shown my dyed goods, say that Diamond Dyes make old things look like new. The richest woman in our town, after seeing my work, has become a user of your Dyes. I thank you for such valuable money-savers as Diamond Dyes."

Mrs. Thos. Hyndman, Masham, Que., says: "I have been using Diamond Dyes for many years and find them most satisfactory in renewing the colours of my children's clothes. For brilliancy and fastness, Diamond Dyes cannot be excelled."

Indigestion

Is about the first symptom of dyspepsia and other stomach troubles which lead to ill health and numerous other diseases. The want of space will not allow us to give all the symptoms and causes of indigestion. One of the most prominent is gas in the stomach after eating, causing colic, belching of wind and other stomach troubles. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS corrects the acidity and wrong action of the stomach. Here is testimony to prove what we say:

Here is what John Fisher of Douglas, Man., has to say of B.B.B.:

"Some time ago I was suffering from indigestion. A young man stopping at our place advised me to try BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. Before this time I had tried numerous remedies, but had found no relief from them. After taking a few doses of B.B.B. relief came as by magic, and I can now eat three square meals a day without any bad after effects, and although sixty-seven years of age can do an ordinary man's work every day—thanks to B.B.B."

March, 1900.

MRS. JOHN RILEY, West Liscomb, N.S.: "Have been using B.B.B. for indigestion and it works like a charm. Before starting to take it I was thin and run down in health and could get little strength from my food; two bottles completely cured me."

QUEER ENGLISH.

We'll begin with a box, and the plural is boxes,
But the plural of ox should be oxen, not oxes.
Then one fowl is goose, but two are called geese,
Yet the plural of mouse should never be meese.
You may find a lone mouse or a whole nest of mice,
But the plural of house is houses, not hice.
If the plural of man is always called men,
Why shouldn't the plural of pan be called pen?
The cow in the plural may be cows or kine,
But the plural of vow is vows, not vine.
And if I speak of a foot, and you show me your feet,
And I give you a boot, would a pair be called beet?
If one is a tooth and a whole lot are teeth,
Why shouldn't the plural of booth be called beeth?
If the singular's this and the plural is these,
Should the plural of kiss be nicknamed keese?
Then one may be that, and three would be those,
Yet hat in a plural would never be hose.
We speak of a brother and also of brethren,
But, though we say mother, we never say methren.
Then masculine pronouns are he, his and him,
But imagine the feminine—she, shis and shim!
So the English, I think, you all will agree,
Is the most wonderful language you ever did see.

A WOMAN'S COQUETRY.

.....By M. Quad.

COPYRIGHT, 1900, BY G. B. LEWIS.

For five years I had been the keeper of the elephant Jamrock. In summer we traveled with the circus, and in winter we either had quarters on a farm or in some zoological garden. Jamrock had taken to me from the first, but you must know that an elephant is as capricious as a woman. For a month at a time the big beast would be as humble as a kitten and as loving as a child, and then all of a sudden he would pout and sulk and perhaps seek to do injury. There were two weeks in every year when I actually feared him. From the 1st to the 15th of February he had the temper of a devil. During this interval he was securely chained and every precaution taken when approaching him. He would stand for hours swinging his head to right and left, and then suddenly scream out in a way to make you chill. It would have been as much as my life was worth to have got within reach of his trunk. These spells always lasted two weeks, and then Jamrock was his old self again and under complete control.

When a circus goes into winter quarters on a farm, what is known as the animal staff must be retained. Each elephant's keeper, the man in charge of the various wild beasts, the herders of the camels, buffaloes, zebras, rhinoceroses, etc., are kept on half salary. These people make up a colony of 25 or 30, and it is generally a happy family. In this fifth year of my keepership of Jamrock I was in love with little Zara, the tightrope performer. She was the daughter of Professor Irwin, the lion tamer, and he frankly told me that he favored my suit. I was a young man of good character, had fair prospects ahead, and I had reason to believe that Zara returned my love. Things between us would have been settled before we took the road again but for her spirit of deviltry. While she was not a flirt, she was more or less of a coquette. Every good looking girl is, for that matter, but here was one who received the praise and applause of hundreds of thousands, and, while she had not been spoiled, she had come to think pretty well of herself. When "the tiger man" came, she set out to make me jealous and have a quarrel or two before surrendering her rights. This tiger man was named Norton. He had a cage of three performing tigers, and he joined us in winter quarters about Feb. 1 to get ready for the spring opening. He was a man of 30, rather good looking and well fixed financially, and I will do him the justice to say that it was no flirtation on his part. He fell in love with Zara, and when she seemed to encourage him he was clean gone. He soon discovered that I had claims, and there was open enmity between us. It was not my fault. While I felt a little sulky over the girl's conduct, I did not doubt her loyalty to me and pursued the even tenor of my way. It was Norton who at once became insanely jealous of me. He was a man of violent temper, and it wasn't three days before we quarreled. This pleased and amused Zara, and none of the rest of the staff regarded it as a serious matter.

The animal quarters were in one great house, divided off by half way partitions. At the east end of the building came Jamrock first of all, and just over the partition was the cage of the three tigers. There were alleys running north and south and east and west, and once a beast got loose he could wander over the whole floor.

THE TIGER MAN WAS THRUSTING AT ME.

My elephant had his annual mad fit on, and he was secured to the floor by four chains. I slept in a rough bunk 40 feet down the alley, so as to be on hand should he try to break away. There had been only the one quarrel between Norton and I, and no blows had been struck in that. He had exhibited a fierce temper, but had not threatened my life. As we went about our duties we passed and repassed each other, but there had been no more words. On the night of the 9th of February, after a day's anxiety over Jamrock, who was unusually ugly, I turned into my bunk and after a time fell asleep. I had slept three hours when awakened by a clutch at my throat, and as soon as I opened my eyes I found Norton bending over me. He had a grasp on my throat with both hands, and his intentions were to strangle me. We were pretty evenly matched as to strength, and though he had taken me unawares desperation helped me to break his clutch and throw him off. As I flung him clear of me he drew a knife. I had no weapon, and was crowded into a narrow bunk, but I used my pillow as a shield and he buried his knife into it several times as he struck at me.

At the end of two minutes I knew that I must have help or lose my life. We were alone in the great shed, and after the choking I had received my voice would not carry across the building. In the dim light I saw that Jamrock was watching us, and that his eyes were ablaze. I had no hope that he could break his chains, and I knew that he would kill us both if he did, but yet I called out to him. He answered with a scream, and throwing all his weight on the chains he snapped them as if they had been old clotheslines and came dashing down the alley. The tiger man was thrusting at me and cursing below his breath, and the point of his knife had drawn blood three or four times. As he heard the beast coming he turned to look, but he had no time to escape. With a sweep of his trunk Jamrock knocked him down, and then lifting him up again the body was battered against the beams right and left until it was reduced to pulp. I did not try to leave the bunk, being almost helpless, and hoped the elephant would go away after a bit. When he had given the body a fling down the alley, he picked me out of my bunk and carried me back to his stall. I expected death, but he let me down on the straw with care and stood over me. I remained quiet for 15 minutes and then tried to creep away, but Jamrock brought me back so roughly that I dared not try it again.

It was morning before any one came to us, and you may be sure there was great excitement. It was Zara who finally approached the elephant with food and distracted his attention while I got away, and later on we opened the doors and let him out into a field where he could do no more damage. It was an affair that never reached the newspapers, and two weeks after the incident a wedding was quietly celebrated in our quarters. Why Jamrock, who had often tried to kill me when his fit was on, should have spared me on this occasion has always been a puzzle to me. Perhaps the one victim took the edge off his temper, or it may be that he remembered our long friendship and conquered his desire to slay. Be it as it may, I mourned him almost as a brother when he was killed in a railway accident the following year.

Keep Up With the Times.

One should be familiar with the current news of the day and the topics occupying public attention, with the names and authors of new books, and be able to say something worth hearing about what one has read and heard.

Many get no further in speaking of a book than it is dull or interesting. Others give it few words that seem to be its central idea, its characteristics, the time and scene of its action, quoting perhaps some sentiment that has impressed or witticism that has pleased.

True culture carries with it an atmosphere of breadth—the world and not the village. A woman lacking it was said to betray by her conversation a mind of narrow compass, bounded on the north by her servants, on the east by her children, on the south by her ailments and on the west by her clothes.

The mind grows shallow when occupied perpetually with trivialities. A course of solid reading is a good tonic. When ignorant of our ignorance, we do not know when we betray ourselves.—Philadelphia Press.

Mushroom Culture by Ants.

In The American Naturalist Professor Wheeler describes a genus of insect living commensally with certain ants. The general reader will, however, be specially interested in the so called "mushroom gardens" formed by the ants in question. It appears that they cut and transport into their subterranean cellars large pieces of leaves, which are there divided into smaller fragments and ultimately reduced to a fine pulp. "This pulp is heaped up and soon becomes invaded by the mycelium of a fungus. The mycelium is kept aseptically clean—i. e., free from all species of fungi and even from bacteria—and induced to grow in an abnormal way by bringing forth minute swellings which constitute the only food of the ant colony. Moller likens these swellings to the 'kohlrabi' of the German kitchen gardens."—Nature.

Odd Death Certificates.

Certificates of death are not documents where one usually seeks for humor, but there is frequently to be found in them much of the unconscious variety. Here, for instance, is how the cause of death is stated in the case of a laborer:

"Died from injuries received through a bull accidentally kneeling on his chest." The consideration shown for the feelings of the bull is a fine touch and suggests grave questions on the moral responsibility of the lower animals.

Again, a man is stated to have "died from the effects of injuries received after being run over by a railway train in motion, owing to a misunderstanding between deceased and an engine driver." This description of a rather ordinary railway casualty is excellent.

IN BED SIX WEEKS.

A Very Bad Case of Dyspepsia—But after Three Years of Suffering, Mrs. Tefft is Cured by Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Mr. R. C. Tefft is Vice-President of the East York Agricultural Society. His home is in Markham, Ont.

He says:

"For three years past my wife has been a sufferer from Dyspepsia and Indigestion. Her sufferings were continual but were more severe on some days than others.

"So greatly did the complaint increase of late that she was obliged to take to her bed, and for six weeks she was unable to leave it. The pains she endured during that period were beyond description.

"Our doctor attended her but did no permanent good.

"Finally, she was advised to try Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. She received marked benefit immediately, and after having used three boxes she was able to get up and attend to her regular duties as well as ever.

"Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets were the only remedy that ever did her any good.

"I have used the Tablets myself for Dyspepsia and Constipation, and always with the best results.

"They have effected a cure in every case for which they have been used in our district."

Is your case any worse than that of Mrs. Tefft? Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets cured her. They will cure any case of Dyspepsia, no matter how painful. Your druggist sells them. Don't wait, and doubt, and suffer. They never disappoint. No matter how many other treatments have failed. Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets never fail

WHAT BECOMES OF THE CORKS.

How They Are Gathered and to Whom They Are Sold.

"What becomes of the pins?" is an old and unanswered question, but "What becomes of the corks?" admits of a pretty complete reply. Cork is one of the most indispensable articles; yet, useful as it is and harmless as it appears, it is made a means of danger to health by trade competition; not that anything noxious occurs in the original growth or preparation for market of the cork wood or even in the process of charring the surface and closing the pores by extreme heat, which is said to give the elasticity and flexibility known in the trade as "nerve." When it comes on the market, it is without any deleterious qualities. It is after the cork in its finished state has served its purpose in the neck of a bottle that it begins its degenerate course.

A cork once drawn and the bottle and contents disposed of is thrown away generally as waste, especially in private houses, though in the liquor trade they are often preserved for sale to itinerant dealers, who purchase them for a trifle. Those which are thrown away gravitate to the ash and garbage barrel, the dump or the gutter and possibly the sewer. From these odorous and offensive receptacles as well as from behind the bar they eventually reach the bag of the peddling collector and are all placed in one mass to undergo the process of so called "cleaning," which makes them appear to the untrained eye as good as new and prepares them for sale to the economical bottler of wines, liquors, pickles or what not who has a strong eye to the main chance. The corks look all right and secure the bottle as well as new and clean ones would. So even if there is a little poison or worse in them, what does it matter? thinks the careful dealer.

Thousands of corks float about the coast, and thousands more which have been thrown out from passing ships mingle with them and are finally cast on shore, where they are collected by the agents of the dealers and shipped to the city to be "cleaned" and sold.

Nothing will really clean them, but they can be whitened or bleached by the action of a powerful acid, and this is what is done. The acids used are chiefly sulphuric and muriate or hydrochloric. Vitriol is also sometimes employed. The trade is quite a large one and is said to be very profitable, many having grown rich at it and carrying on big establishments, with agents at all main points. It is conducted mostly by foreigners and has representatives in nearly all the cities, though of course this city boasts of the greatest number.

TRICKS IN ALL TRADES.

Lapidaries Who Substitute Stones That Are "Just as Good."

A Chicago jeweler was handed a New Mexico garnet the other day with the request that he have it cut for a ring setting. Two days later he sent for his customer, and when the latter came he said:

"I am afraid to have that stone cut."

"Why?"

"Well, I am not sure that what I give to the lapidary will be returned to me. He may substitute a stone."

"How do you know?"

"I took your garnet to a lapidary with an order to cut it at once. He looked it over and then handed me a cut stone, with the remark that that would do in its place. Then I found out that this lapidary at least, if not others, when receiving a stone in the rough finds it cheaper to substitute an already cut stone of similar color than to cut the original."

The customer finally had the stone cut in carbuncle form for a pin, but to this day he is not satisfied that he received back the stone which he originally turned over to the lapidary. In the matter of ordinary ring settings it is easy to make substitutions without it being possible for even an expert to know that the change has been effected. The owner of a garnet in the rough has no means of proving when it has been cut that it is the stone he first possessed. He takes the lapidary's word for it. Another trick which is quite common, but not generally known to customers, is that of substituting hair on customers who desire ornaments of hair made for brooches, pins or chains. A young man secures a lock of hair from his sweetheart and rushes off to have it made into one of those lovely watch chains that look like a centiped with a million legs. He lovingly hands the lock to the hair worker and in a week receives his ornament. But often he does not receive back the hair he gave. The hair worker buys his hair at wholesale. He makes it up into stock ornaments. He simply matches the hair he has received with something in stock—not a difficult matter—his work is completed and his bill ready for collection.

Of course the customer knows no better. So the workman of easy conscience asks, "What is the difference?" There does not seem to be much, only the difference between honesty and dishonesty, and that is no more than the difference between black and white.

THE LATE PATRICK WELSH.

The Interment Took Place in the Roman Catholic Cemetery Yesterday.

The funeral of the late Patrick Welsh took place this morning from the residence of his mother, Mrs. Edward Welch, No. 33 Elm street, at 9 o'clock this morning. Deceased, it will be remembered, died at Ashland, Wis., on Friday last and the remains reached here yesterday.

Referring to the death of the late Mr. Welsh, who was much respected in Peterborough, the Ashland Daily Free Press publishes the following excellent portrait of the deceased and makes this reference to him, showing the prominent place he had won for himself among the business men and how fully he had established himself in the esteem of the community:

"P. J. Welsh died this morning at nine o'clock at St. Joseph's hospital, after a three weeks' illness with typhoid fever. For the past week but small hopes had been entertained for his recovery, and his death was not wholly unexpected. He was unconscious for the three days preceding his death, and at times was delirious. His mother and sister arrived in this city yesterday from Peterborough, Canada, and were at his bedside when he passed away.

"Mr. Welsh was born in Peterborough, Canada, about thirty-nine years ago. He went to East Saginaw thirteen years ago, where he worked at the tailor trade for a year and then went into business for himself. He was in business for two years in Saginaw, when he sold out and came to Ashland. At Ashland, he worked for C. H. Ziehlsdorff for a short time and then formed a partnership with W. P. Engels, to do a general tailoring business. Mr. Engels withdrew from the business about three years ago, and since then Mr. Welsh has conducted the business alone. Mr. Welsh leaves a father and mother, three sisters and one brother in Peterborough, a brother in Detroit, and a brother in Ashland, to mourn his loss. His remains will be taken to his old home in Peterborough, Canada, to-morrow for interment. His mother, Mrs. Edward Welsh, his sister, Miss Minnie Welsh, and his brother, William Welsh, will accompany the remains. Mr. Welsh was a member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, Catholic Order of Foresters, Red Men and Elks.

"During the ten years that Mr. Welsh has resided in Ashland he has made many warm friends. He was one of the leading business men in the city, and was noted for his business ability and honesty. His many acquaintances and the Daily Press unite in extending heartfelt sympathy to the grief-stricken parents and the sorrowing sisters and brothers, for in his death Ashland has lost one whom all will miss."

ELECTRICAL EXHIBITS.

Wonderful Collection and Grand Display of Electric Lighting.

It is the plan of the management to make the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo next year the greatest electrical Exposition ever held. In view of the wonderful advance in the electrical science since the World's fair there will probably not be a single duplication of an exhibit seen at Chicago in 1893. Nearly everything in the electrical line then exhibited has been superseded in the market by new machinery and appliances constructed upon a better understanding of the wonderful force. The discovery of the Roentgen rays, the invention of wireless telegraphy and the development of the electromo-bile are among the well known new and useful applications of electricity unknown at the time of the Columbian Exposition. Electricity is to be extensively used in making attractive displays at night. For this purpose a steel tower 375 feet high has been planned which will face the Court of the Fountains. Upon this great tower and in this broad and beautiful court there will be seen at night fantastic and beautiful displays in electrical illumination. More than 200,000 electric lamps are to be used for this purpose, it being the intention of electricians to have all the large buildings surrounding this court outlined with a fringe of brilliant electric lamps. These wonderful electrical displays are made possible by the nearness of Niagara Falls, from which nearly all the power used for the Exposition will be drawn.

THE MINES BUILDING.

Uncle Sam Now Owns Them All.

Washington, March 25.—The Spanish Minister, Duke D'Arcos, Saturday received from the Secretary of the Treasury, a warrant for $100,000, and the United States received the final cession of "Any and all islands of the Philippine Archipelago lying outside of the line described in article 3 of the treaty of peace between Spain and the United States of Dec. 19, 1898." At the same time a protocol was signed by Mr. Hay and Duke D'Arcos, exchanging ratifications of the treaty of cession. The specific purposes of the transaction is to add the islands of Cagayan, Sulu and Sivitu to the possessions of the United States.

CHOPSTICK DINNERS.

A FAD WITH WOULD BE BOHEMIANS IN NEW YORK.

Chinese Restaurants There Tolerate a Free and Easy Etiquette, and Everybody Does Just About as He or She Pleases.

In the last few years a surprisingly large number of Chinese restaurants have made their appearance in up town districts in New York. The tawdry outward decorations of red and blue lights and huge gilt Chinese characters are in every case the same. The same, too, are the unattractive entrances, the walls decorated with colored pictures of pretty Chinese girls and marvelous specimens of landscapes, the little tables covered with white oilcloth, the general dilapidation of the establishment. Nothing about them seems attractive, and yet these places thrive, and their number increases with astonishing rapidity. The reason is not far to seek if one is at all familiar with the facts. There are several characteristics of the Chinese restaurant which recommend it highly to certain classes and seem to indicate that its popularity is not a mere fad.

In the first place it should be understood that most of these places are really what they are supposed to be, eating houses carried on under Chinese management. The cooks are invariably true Celestials, and in only a few cases are the proprietors Americans. The food is prepared, therefore, according to the most approved methods of the Middle Kingdom, with the result that in cheapness and savoriness (if you like it) it can easily outclass similar places run by American cooks. The Chinese is a master of the art of making palatable dishes out of next to nothing or rather a little of everything. Not even the French cook can rival him. The insipidity of cheap chophouses and the sameness of the dairy lunch counters are thus escaped by frequenters of these restaurants. Moreover, in spite of appearances the food is prepared in an extremely cleanly manner. No one is debarred from entering the kitchen, and a visit thither sends one back with renewed appetite to the untidy eating room. So many who while possessed of a small share of this world's goods still affect "sportiness" frequent the restaurant for its cheapness and grow to enjoy the highly flavored dishes.

There is also a free and easy atmosphere about the Chinese eating house which attracts many would be "Bohemians" as well as a goodly share of a class below the lowest grades of the city's many graded Bohemia. Visitors loll about and talk and laugh loudly. When the waiter is wanted, some one emits a shrill yell which brings an answering whoop from the kitchen, followed sooner or later by a little Chinese at a jog trot. Any one who feels like it may stroll into the kitchen and try a little pigeon English on the cook. The proprietor will teach anybody to use the chopsticks and roar with laughter over the failures of the novice. Everybody does as he or she pleases within certain very elastic bounds. The limit is reached sooner in some places than in others, for while some of the houses are before midnight at least perfectly well conducted others are of more than questionable respectability. It is curious and interesting to note that under American management the tone of these places is lower than when the Chinese are in sole control.

These new up town places are not so good, either in a moral or a culinary way, as those down in Chinatown. It is usual to speak as if Mott and Pell streets were the city's sink of iniquity, and so they are in some respects, but there are no Chinese restaurants in the neighborhood as disreputable as one or two up town. The clientele of the down town places is above suspicion as a rule. Chinese drop in for their meals, and dwellers from up town come either from curiosity or because they have learned to like good Chinese cooking. Up town the bills of fare are more limited. "Yockaman," "chop suey" and "chowman" are the pieces de resistance. They answer the purpose certainly, for 25 cents' worth of some kinds of chop suey served with rice will make a toothsome dish for two people. Tea is served free of charge, and the quantity is not limited. But no one should judge the Celestials' culinary skill by these up town houses.

Many of the guests in these restaurants come regularly. Frequently men and women come with pails to buy the food and take it home. Negroes are in disproportionately large numbers. They seem to like the Chinese, and indeed the noise in the kitchen reminds one of the similar condition of southern kitchens under negro management. However solemn the Chinese may seem to be in public, he is a cheerful creature in his own kitchen. Talk and laughter, even music during "off" hours, float out to the dining room. All the servants seem ready to break into smiles at the smallest provocation. They are always ready to exchange jests with their patrons, but familiarity never becomes impertinence. The Chinese doesn't care what happens so long as he is left unmolested. He likes everything to be slipshod and merry.—New York Tribune.

It Often Happens Just So.

The casual caller came in and remarked to the snake editor:

"You didn't print that poem I sent you."

"Good guess."

"Why didn't you?"

"Well, you said in your letter that if I published it I should hear from you again."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

In Mourning.

Harvard Hasben—No, lady, but if there's an old black suit of clothes about the house I can use that. The poor fellow you gave the cake to yesterday was my brother.—Philadelphia Press.

The First Kick.

"That cut you printed this morning is a libel," protested the irate citizen. "It doesn't look anything like me."

"Impossible!" replied the editor. "Why, we've used that cut dozens of times, and you're the first one to make a kick."

Easy.

"Jinks has no faculty for keeping money."

"Let's it go to whoever asks him for it, I believe?"

"Why, I'm told that even his wife can get money from him if he has it!"—Detroit Journal.

Candid.

"Did you do nothing to resuscitate the body?" was recently asked of a witness at a coroner's inquest.

"Yes, sir; we searched the pockets," was the reply.

Why "Wedding Breakfast?"

"In all my experience of wedding breakfasts," said a guest at a wedding, "I have never understood why the feast was called a breakfast and not a luncheon. Now I have learned. It is from the custom in the Church of England, where the bride and bridegroom always receive the holy communion before the ceremony, receive it fasting and remain fasting until after the wedding, when the meal which is served is really a breakfast."

Miller's Compound Iron Pills, only 25 cents for 50 doses.

A Comfortable Corset.

The correct corset for the overslender person is one that does not open at all behind and that closes in front with laces instead of hooks. A comfortable or easy corset, so declare the experts, invariably makes a stout woman grow stouter, or, rather, allows her that privilege. Therefore the woman who really needs a coating of flesh should wear very loose stays and should eat an abundance of butter with bread.—New York Evening Sun.

A BIG BOER ROUND-UP.

Gen. French Captures Seven Guns on His March.

FORCE FINISHED 1,200 BOERS.

That Number Was Rendered Hors de Combat by Death, Wounds or Capture—A Great Quantity of Supplies Taken—139 Colonials Captured by the Boers Near Richmond.

Vryheid, Monday, March 25.—General French, with Dartnal's and Pultner's columns, arrived here to-day, having killed and wounded or captured 1,200 Boers.

He has also taken 7 cannon, 1,000 rifles, 1,800 wagons and 226,000 head of horses, cattle and sheep.

KRUGER WANTS PEACE.

Said to Have Advised Acting President Schalkburger to Formulate Terms.

London, March 27.—The official casualty list issued this evening indicates a renewal of active operations since the failure of the negotiations between Lord Kitchener and Gen. Botha. At Hartebeesfontein, March 22 and 23, two officers were killed and three wounded, and four men killed and 20 wounded. There also seems to have been heavy fighting at a place near Gredgedacht, March 18.

The Amsterdam correspondent of The Daily Express says he understands that Mr. Kruger has advised Acting President Schalkburger to formulate peace terms.

It is virtually certain that the Government will decline to hear Messrs. Merriman and Sauer at the bar of the House of Commons.

Dewet Again in Cape Colony.

London, March 27.—It is reported from Bloemfontein that Gen. Dewet is again in Orange River Colony.

The Cape Town correspondent of The Daily Express reports the capture by 1,000 Boers of 139 colonials in a rocky defile near Richmond last Thursday. He asserts that the colonials lost 13 men before they surrendered, adding that they were all liberated after having been stripped of their accoutrements.

THE BUDGET.

Preference Debate Resumed—Mr. Monk Points Out Great Divergence Between Liberal Speakers.

Ottawa, March 27.—Yesterday Messrs. Hackett (Prince Edward Island), Monk, Dobell, Paterson and Sproule spoke in the budget debate. Mr. Turgeon adjourned the debate half an hour after midnight.

Mr. Monk.

In the course of his speech, Mr. Monk observed that the distinguishing feature of the debate was the extraordinary divergence of views expressed by members supporting the Government. Some declared duties were too high. Mr. Edwards, for instance, who sat side by side with a protectionist member, had declared himself a free trader. Some from the west declared they were satisfied for the present, but hoped for further reductions; others established that this was a protective tariff, a continuation of the old National Policy. Some called it a revenue tariff, in defiance of the laws of political economy.

Mr. Paterson.

Mr. William Paterson, Minister of Customs, first referred to the Opposition's statement that the tariff policy of the Government was indefinite. The Government's tariff policy was a living fact to-day; it had prevailed for the last six years, and was in operation when Parliament dissolved and they went to the country, and the country said it was the right policy. The Opposition policy, as set forth in the amendment, was the same old policy they adopted 25 years ago. Here was a party in this progressive country of Canada, that was advancing by leaps and bounds, that found the height of their ambition in a policy 25 years old, discredited and worn out, and cast off by the people of the country. During the last election Mr. Foster had offered to lead any straying Liberals to the old Tory wigwam of 1878. He asked if there was any Liberal dissatisfied with his party for any little things who wanted Mr. Foster to lead him to that old wigwam. Mr. Foster might dwell in it, the Tory party might, but the country and the Liberal party would not. No; the Liberal Government had moved forward, the Liberal party had moved with them, and left the Conservative party. The Liberal motto was "Onward, forward." Progress was the word that was wanted in this country. Mr. Paterson skillfully pointed out the disagreements between Conservatives especially on Railway policy before he closed.

Dr. Sproule replied and the House adjourned at 12.30.

RUSSIA AND CHINA.

Chinese Court Informs Foreign Ministers That It Will Not Sign the Manchurian Convention.

London, March 27.—The Shanghai correspondent of The Times, wiring yesterday, says:

"I am informed on the best authority that the Chinese court has instructed Li Hung Chang to inform the Ministers of the powers that China has refused to sign the Manchurian convention, and has also notified all viceroys to the same effect.

"It is further asserted that the court seriously contemplated a removal of the capital from Pekin."

Shanghai Gas Again.

London, March 27.—The Reuter Telegram Company has received the following despatch: "Pekin, March 26.—(7 p.m.)—The report that China rejects the Manchurian convention is not true. She objects to many points, which are under discussion."

Death at a Railway Crossing.

Toronto Junction, March 27.—Mrs. Anne Eaton met with instant death last evening at Royce avenue crossing by being struck with a G.T.R. train. Her body was found by Pete Campbell and Mr. Wilson about 8 o'clock, but as a passenger and a freight train had bothe passed the crossing only a short time previously it is not known by which she was struck. Deceased was 68 years of age and leaves two sons and two daughters.

Col. Dent Coming Back.

Toronto, March 27.—Premier Ross yesterday received a letter from Lord Strathcona, in which he says: "In continuation of my letter of the 15th ult., regarding the horse question, I am pleased to be able to tell you that, as a result of my interview and correspondence with the Right Hon. W. St. John Brodrick, Secretary of State for War, the Army Remount Department are forthwith sending an officer to Canada to purchase horses. The officer selected is Lieut.-Col. Dent."

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO BILL.

Hon. Mr. Harcourt, Minister of Education, and Premier Ross Give Explanations of the Measure and What Is Intended to Be Accomplished by It—Read a Second Time.

Toronto, March 27.—In the Legislative Assembly yesterday Hon. J. M. Gibson introduced the Statute Law Revision bill, which he explained was intended to repeal certain Imperial statutes which had become obsolete or were practically inoperative. Many of them had reference to conditions which no longer existed. Hon. Mr. Dryden introduced a bill to amend the Shops Regulation Act, containing some more stringent provisions with reference to sanitary provisions and for the protection of employes.

The House went into Committee on Mr. Dryden's bill respecting the encouragement of the sugar beet industry. A change was made in the clause appropriating the sum of $225,000 for expenditure during three years so that in case portions of the $75,000 appropriation were not expended in any year, the amount would not lapse back into the Treasury, but remain at the disposal of the Government until the whole sum were expended.

Mr. Pattullo said he would like the assurance of the Government that $225,000 was the extent of the aid that would be given. He also asked if the recipients of any bounty given by the Dominion Government would also be eligible for Ontario bounties?

The Premier said there was no intention on the part of the Government to give any further aid and he did not think that the Dominion proposed aiding the beet sugar industry by bounties.

Mr. Boyd thought that if the bounty were to be any incentive it should continue at least five years. The bonus ought to go direct to the farmers. Mr. Whitney agreed with this proposition.

Mr. Dryden replied that the Government had fully provided that the farmers would come in for a share of the bonus by making the payment of any bonus to the manufacturer conditional upon his paying at the rate of $4 per ton for beets.

Mr. Barr said that the bonus should be divided between the manufacturer and the farmer.

Hon. Mr. Davis said that the experiments made had proved that beets could be grown for $2 per ton, the profit being all the way from $14 up to as high as $77 per acre. When, therefore, the bill provided a good round price for the farmer for any kind of beet with an additional sum after the first year for beets containing a certain proportion of saccharine matter, the interest of the farmer was amply protected.

Premier Ross said the bounty was intended merely to cover the period of inexperience. If a direct bounty were to be given to the farmer the saccharine quality of the beets would have to be considered. It was the intention of the manufacturers to employ experts to instruct the farmers as to the growing of the best qualities of beets and the bounty would enable them to meet the expense entailed.

Mr. Pettypiece reviewed the bounty systems prevailing in many of the United States and thought that the proposed system was as favorable to the farmers as that in vogue anywhere. After some further discussion the clause was adopted.

Mr. Whitney opposed the addition of a clause under which all contracts to be made between manufacturers and farmers for the delivery of beets should be approved of by the Minister of Agriculture. Mr. Dryden defended it as necessary for the protection of the farmers. The clause was adopted and the bill reported.

Mr. Harcourt moved the second reading of his bill respecting the University of Toronto and University College. He dwelt on the need of keeping the university efficient as a means of maintaining the character of the public and high schools. He reviewed the arguments urged by the deputation which recently waited on the Government asking aid to the university. Nearly one-half the revenue of the institution was contributed in fees from the students. At Cornell the fees were only 20 per cent. of the income. The fees paid at Toronto University were double the average fees payable to other universities on the continent, and moreover many universities were absolutely free to students. He gave figures showing how liberally most of the States aided their universities and the wealth at the disposal of those institutions. Toronto University was at a disadvantage in point of resources and appliances as compared with the American universities.

Dyspepsia

Is difficult digestion, due to a weakened condition of the stomach and its inability to properly churn the food; or to unhealthy condition of the gastric juice, too much or too little acid, too much or too little pepsin.

Hood's Sarsaparilla relieves all the distressing symptoms of dyspepsia because it promotes the muscular action of the stomach and intestines, aids nature in the manufacture of her own digestive secretions, which are far better than any artificial pepsin, unlocks the bowels, stimulates the kidneys and tones up their mucous membranes.

So prompt is its effect in many cases that it seems to have almost a magic touch.

Begin to take it NOW.

Suffered Everything.—"I was troubled with dyspepsia, suffered everything but death, could not eat without terrible distress. Since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I eat heartily and I am well." Mrs. Eugene Murphy, Danbury, Conn.

Eat Three Times a Day.—"Hood's Sarsaparilla has cured me of dyspepsia and I never felt better. Can eat three good meals every day." Fred Poehler, 457 South Penna St., Indianapolis, Ind.

IN THE PALACE OF THE KING.

This is the apt title of a royally good story—the lastest by Marion Crawford, just issued by the Copp Clark Co., Limited, Toronto. It's sub-title "A Love Story of Old Madrid" prepares one for the bounteous leaven of warm romance that impregnates every page, and the name of the author prepares one for the literary charm that pervades this as all other novels of this clever and entertaining novelist. The heroine. Dolores de Mendoza, the recognized beauty of Madrid, was the envy of other court ladies not only on account of her charms of person but also because she was the chosen of the heart of Don John of Austria, younger brother of Philip II of Spain. The course of true love never did run smoothly—the rock in the course was the father of Dolores, a poor, but proud old noble, who knew that for state reasons Prince John would not be allowed to wed the daughter, however beautiful and charming, of a poor retainer. He "forbad the banns"—knowing that such a love idyl could lead to no honourable fruition. Then the fight began between the father—on the daughter's honour—and the girl for her heart's love, incidentally introducing strong characters and stirring scenes. King Philip—a stern, cruel character, envious of the greater popularity of his brother, espoused the old man's side of the complex quarrel, which ended in the slaying of the royal lover. How the crafty, cruel king brought the always gentle Don John to a quarrel, and even to the sword's point, is well told by the wonderful Crawford pen; and chapter xviii, relating the interview between Dolores and the king, is one of the most dramatic scenes ever conceived. The excitement is keen. Dolores rises to an exalted height when she ordains herself Philis's accuser:—"I am not asking anything of Your Majesty; I am dictating terms to my lover's murderer;" The volume issued by the Copp Clark Co., is a fine specimen of book-making; clear print, fine and profuse illustrations, good paper, etc.

SOUTH MONAGHAN.

The council met at the Agricultural Hall at Centreville on Monday, March 18, at 1.30 p.m. Members all present. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. Communications were received: From Municipal World, with receipt of account; from Millbrook Reporter, re printing contract for 1901, and also receipt of account for last year: from Peterborough Times re township printing, with catalogue of prices. Communications received and read. Moved by Messrs. Anderson and Baxter, that the offer of the Millbrook Reporter for printing be accepted.—Carried. Mr. Buckham, for the commitee on Smithson's floating wharf, reported that they had let the job of caretaking to W. David Higgins for the season for $5. The council then went into committee on the by-laws of the township. The clerk was instructed to have several new ones prepared for the next meeting of council. After reading of bylaw No. 6, Mr. Robinson moved that the bylaw be amended to divide the township into two polling subdivisions, all east of 1st quarter line to be No. 2, and to meet at Bensfort; all west of 1st quarter line te be No. 1, and meet at Centreville. Mr. Robinson failing to get a seconder, it was moved by Mr. Greer, seconded by Mr. Anderson, that bylaw No. 6 be not amended.—Carried. Mr. Spence and Mr. R. Fisher, commissioners, and Mr. R. Eagleson, reeve of Hamilton township, were heard re equalization of assessment rolls for county purposes, also for the maintenence of the indigent poor of the counties. The matter was left over for consideration. The following accounts were presented: Councillors' pay, 4 day, $5; W. Armstrong, gravel for road, 15c.; Dr. Montgomery, witness fees to Peterborough and Board of Health meetings, $10. Moved by Messrs. Anderson and Baxter that accounts be paid.—Carried. Orders drawn on treasurer. Moved by Messrs. Anderson and Greer that council now adjourn.

ties. The problem was how to strengthen the university, and the bill had mot it by providing for the expenses of instruction in the scientific departments. The experience of Germany, France and the United States showed how the attention paid by the state to scientific instruction had furthered the industrial and commercial interests of both countries. In Germany the college graduate left the scientific classes to enter the workshop as an expert. He entered elaborately into details, showing that the surprising commercial progress of Germany was due to the great attention devoted to scientific training. The Government, therefore, were warranted in singling out the special branches of chemistry, physiology, mineralogy and geology for aid. The development of the iron industry would present openings by the score for young men of scientific training. One step had already been made by appointing a professor of geology and mineralogy. An assistant ought to be appointed in these branches. Such enterprises as those inaugurated by the Clergue syndicate at Sault Ste. Marie needed scientific experts. At present they were forced to employ Americans simply because Canadians possessing the requisite training were not to be had. The Government had decided to furnish another building for the School of Practical Science, which he hoped would meet its increased requirements. It would cost in the neighborhood of $200,000. The Opposition leader had often spoken of "freeing the university from its shackles" and he would like him to explain what he meant by that expression. It was well known what was meant by "shackles," as applied to American universities, where professors were frequently expelled for holding views contrary to those of the Board as had been the case in connection with the Leland, Stamford, Chicago and Brown Universities. No such cases had ever been heard of in Canada. Speaking as to the bill, he was glad to say that none of the friends of the university had so far protested against any of its features. He went on to explain several of its provisions, an outline which has already been given.

Mr. Whitney said that the policy pursued by the Government towards the university rendered it impossible to remove the cloud which rested on it by abolishing the heavy fees, which debarred poor men's sons from entering it. The demands of the university should be met in no niggard spirit and every reasonable demand on its behalf acceded to. Under the bill the relations between the Government and the university practically remained the same. There was just as much danger of dictation or undue interference with freedom of teaching by a Government as by an independent Board of Management. The principle of Government control prevailed throughout the bill. The desires and necessities of the university had not been met by the Government. The deputation of representatives of the university which waited on the Government to-day clearly expressed their dissatisfaction with the measure. If the Government would rise to the occasion and remodel the bill to give the university what it was entitled to, he promised that the Opposition would support them in so doing.

Mr. Pattullo believed that the main duty of the State in this matter was towards the elementary schools. When that stage was passed individuals should do their share in meeting the outlay. The high schools ought not to be entirely free—that was imposing too great a burden on the class who never went beyond the public schools. The high schools were not the schools of the poor, but of those in fairly good circumstances. This argument applied with still greater force to the university. If the university were absolutely free from fees the poor could not send their sons there. It was not the function of the State to pay for professional education and some of the claims presented by the university were certainly not in accord with public opinion. The bill dealt with the university in a very liberal spirit, and the Government were to be congratulated on their determination to aid the department of science as it had so marked a bearing on the industrial development of the country. The State was more rightly concerned with scientific instructions than with other branches taught at universities. He heartily endorsed the form in which the Government had determined to aid the university, but there was a limit to the resources of the country. The fees of the university he considered extremely low.

Premier Ross denied that the professors had been interferred with either in their teaching or their utterances through the press or otherwise. He regarded the arrangement in the bill gave the University practical self-Government. He did not consider the Government would be warranted in handing over the sole control of the property of the University, which he regarded as a provincial trust fund, entirely over to the University authorities.

The second reading was agreed to without a division.

The Assessment bill to abolish the scrap iron system which has been expected for some days was introduced by Premier Ross and two technical acts, and the House adjourned at 11.40.

COOK'S IMPRESSIONS.

Letters He Has Are Copies of Those From Man Now Dead.

CASE HAS BEGUN AT OTTAWA.

Mr. H. H. Cook Began Endeavors to Secure a Senatorship When the Liberals Attained Power—Says Late Mr. M. C. Cameron Was Go-Between Sir Richard Cartwright and Himself.

Ottawa, March 27.—The special select committee of the Senate to inquire into the charges of Mr. H. H. Cook commenced its inquiry yesterday morning in the committee room of the Senate. The meeting was presided over by Sir Mackenzie Bowell. When the roll was called all the members of the committee answered to their names, as follows: Senators Mills, Sir A. Pelletier, Dandurand, Kerr, Young, L. M. Jones, Kirchoffer, Ferguson, Baker, Landry, Wood (Westmoreland).

Mr. C. H. Ritchie, K.C., was present on behalf of the Senate. Mr. Herman H. Cook was accompanied by Mr. A. H. Marsh, K.C., his legal adviser and counsellor, who handed him the various documents for production, and occasionally interposed in the proceedings in the interest of his client.

Mr. S. H. Blake, K.C., announced that he was present on behalf of those against whom the charges were made.

Mr. Cook's Evidence.

Mr. Cook, having been sworn, was examined by Mr. Ritchie, and said that he was a candidate for appointment to the Senate and had pressed his claims upon the Government up till the time of Sir Oliver Mowat's resignation. After Senator Macpherson's death he saw Sir Oliver Mowat and Sir Richard Cartwright in August, 1896. His interview with Sir Oliver Mowat was not very pointed. He did not obtain his consent to support him. He then saw Sir Richard Cartwright, who received him kindly and told him that he was not then prepared to support him, as there was some one else who had precedence, but there would be a vacancy very shortly, because Senator Ferguson was very ill and would not likely survive, but the two appointments would be made together, so that they would be introduced together.

Sir Richard told him he recognized his claims as better than the other parties and as equal to those of anybody in the Province of Ontario; still there was one who had more recent claims upon them and they had to appoint him. Sir Richard said that the gentleman in question had assisted in the elections. When asked by Mr. Ritchie whether the gentleman in question assisted on the stump. Mr. Cook replied: "He never takes the stump." No indication was given by Sir Richard how this gentman had served the party, but his impressions were:

Mr. Blake objected that impressions could not be taken in evidence.

Continuing, Mr. Cook said he told Sir Richard that, although he would not tell him who the other party was, he knew, and he knew also the service rendered to the party by the man who had the preference, and he (Mr. Cook) told Sir Richard the man was Cox, and that he thought probably Cox was more entitled to it than he was. He then withdrew from the interview. This interview took place shortly after Senator Macpherson's death.

Mr. Cook said he continued to press his claims until after Senator Ferguson's death.

Copies of Letters Produced.

Mr. Cook then produced copies of a number of letters received from the late M. C. Cameron, the originals having, he said, been returned to Mr. Cameron after perusal at his request.

Mr. Blake contended that proof of the destruction of the originals should first be produced, as it was possible the copy was inaccurate.

Objection overruled and copies were produced.

Mr. Cook then produced a number of letters and copies. On 24th August, 1896, the late Mr. M. C. Cameron wrote that he had seen the friend mentioned, on the subject of their conversation, and would have another interview, and advising him, in the meantime, to keep quiet. On 28th August Mr. Cook replied, hoping that Mr. Cameron would see Mowat and put his case before him as strongly as he could, and asking him to see some members of the old guard, and see if they would do anything for him.

On 27th August Mr. Cameron informed him that the candidates for the Senatorship, were Messrs. Geo. A. Cox, J. K. Kerr, K. C., Robt. Jaffray, A. P. Cockburn, James Innis and Dr. Spohn, and that the three last named were at Ottawa pressing their claims. Mr. Cameron wrote that Mr. Cox was the most formidable candidate, that he had called at Sir Oliver Mowat's office four times, but could not find him, and that he would go again to-morrow and sound him.

On August 29th Mr. Cameron wrote Mr. Cook that he had seen Mowat, and that one of the men standing in the way was wealthy. Aug. 30th, Cameron to Cook, that there was one way of putting the matter through, which he would not mention in the letter, but would see Mr. Cook when passing through Toronto.

August 31, '96, Cook to Cameron —"Am very anxious to know what your suggestion is. Would like to meet you at the station when on your way to Ottawa."

September 11, '96—Cameron to Cook — "Have discovered that Mowat's friend for the appointment is James Young, of Galt, and he sticks to him like a burr. I can't tell what the result will be."

Acting on a telegram received from Mr. Cameron, Mr. Cook met him at the Union Station. They had breakfast together. Mr. Cameron received a letter which he said had been placed in his hands by Sir Richard Cartwright and which he had not yet opened. He gave the letter to me. I read it and gave it back. He would not let me keep it. The letter said that "Cook must do something in this connection."

Mr. Cook asked what "that something" meant.

Mr. Cameron replied that it referred to the price of the Senatorship.

"I was very indignant," said Mr. Cook. "I told him that I would not give a red cent, that I had already done enough for the party."

"What did Mr. Cameron say?" inquired Mr. Ritchie.

"I was excited," replied Mr. Cook, "my voice was loud, and he told me to speak low."

"Did you recognize Sir Richard Cartwright's handwriting?"

"Yes, I did."

"Will you swear it was his signature?"

"Yes, I swear it."

"How did your interview with Mr. Cameron conclude?" asked Mr. Ritchie.

"He asked me to meet him a week hence, when perhaps I would be in a better mood to purchase."

Many letters were exchanged between Mr. Cook and Sir Richard Cartwright, all of them indicating that Sir Richard was doing his utmost on Mr. Cook's behalf.

Mr. Cook's Special Claims.

On March 18, 1898, Mr. Cook wrote claiming the lumber interests should be considered, taking exception to the statement that an exmember of the Legislature who represented the cheese interests should be appointed, and calling attention to the fact that there was no representative of the U. E. Loyalists in the Senate, and he was living in expectation of an appointment before the Senate reassembled. On the 18th March, 1898, Sir Richard wrote to Mr. Cook that he had done all in his power on Mr. Cook's behalf, but was unable yet to say how it would go. On 25th June, 1898, Sir Richard again wrote, stating that he had been fighting his battle for the past week, and found more difficulty than expected, and, therefore, thought it advisable to press for a conclusion, but would advise him when next in Toronto.

On 13th March, 1899, Sir Richard wrote Mr. Cook that he had done his best, but his residence in Toronto was an insurmountable obstacle in Council. Under the same date Mr. Cook wrote to Sir Richard, the letters apparently crossing, stating that he heard the opposition to his appointment came from James Sutherland and other new Liberals, who were favoring Mr. Hyman, and recalling the fact that Sir Richard had shown him a letter from Sir Wilfrid Laurier that: "Our friend Cook should, in all conscience, wait for the next appointment."

On the 1st August, 1899, Mr. Cook wrote to Sir Richard, forwarding a letter from Sir Wilfrid, who referred the matter to Sir Richard, who, he stated, had always had charge of the matter, and stating he could not think Sir Richard had played him false in the last appointment.

On July 27, 1899, Mr. Cook wrote to Sir Wilfrid, withdrawing his application for a Senatorship. This concluded the correspondence, Mr. Cook being unable to produce the reply of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, but promised to have a search made.

Matter Joked About.

Senator Kirchhoffer enquired whether Mr. Cook had any conversations in the Russell House with members of Parliament about the matter. Mr. Cook replied that he used to have jokes occasionally about the matter. He knew Dr. Landerkin was a joker, and used to joke about $10,000, but he knew also Dr. Landerkin would never get there if he had to pay $10,000.

Mr. Marsh asked Mr. Cook whether any official of the Ontario Government ever approached him in reference to the matter.

Mr. Blake thought it was hardly a fair question.

Mr. Cook said Mr. W. T. R. Preston, Librarian at the Ontario Parliament buildings, wrote him a letter and had an interview with him some time before Mr. Kerr was appointed. Mr. Preston came to his office and said he had just come from Ottawa, and addressed him: "Good morning, Mr. Senator." Mr. Preston said he had just returned from Ottawa, and was instructed to ask him for $10,000 for the Senatorship; either that the Government or Sir Richard told him to ask for the money. He told Mr. Preston he would not give him or any Government the money, and Mr. Preston told him if he did not give the money he would not get the appointment.

Could Not Give Exact Language.

Mr. Cook said he interviewed all the members of the Government from Ontario, but thought he did not interview any Minister from outside Ontario.

In those interviews with the members of the Government nothing was said by him to them or by them to him with respect to the payment of any money, except what he said to Sir Richard Cartwright. He was interested in the matter, but could not recollect anything else. The statement in his telegram was that he had been offered a Senatorship, but the price was too high. What led to this was his inquiry of Sir Richard whether Cameron had the authority of the Government or himself to ask for $10,000. Sir Richard replied that Cameron wanted it for party purposes, and that he assented to it. Sir Richard had told him that Cameron had spoken to him about it and that he wanted it for party purposes.

Mr. Blake pressed for a recital of the conversation in language more closely to that actually used, but Mr. Cook said he could not give it.

The committee then adjourned till 10 o'clock to-day.

THE HEALTH HABIT.

Just as Easy to Form as any Other.

We do not deliberately form our pet habits but they are unconsciously acquired and grow as we grow, and by the time we learn they are hurting us, we find them too strong to be easily broken.

Then, why not form a good habit, a habit which will counteract the unfashionable habit of being always well.

The best health habit to get into is to have and keep a vigorous stomach; if you have a healthy digestion you can drink your beloved coffee, smoke your favourite brand of tobacco, with little or no harm; the mischief begins when these things are forced upon the faithful stomach, without any assistance.

Form the habit of taking after meals some harmless but efficient digestive which will relieve the stomach of so much extra work.

Nature furnishes us with such digestives and when they are combined in such a pleasant preparation as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, they give the overworked stomach just the necessary assistance to secure perfect digestion without any of the harmful effects of cathartics and similar drugs.

The habit of taking Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after meals is as necessary to the weak stomach as food itself, and indeed to get the benefit from food eaten, nothing better and certainly nothing safer can be used.

Many families consider Stuart's Tablets as essential in the house as knives and forks.

They consist entirely of natural digestive principles without the effect or characteristics of drugs; they have no cathartic action, but simply go to work on the food eaten and digest it.

Take into account your bad habits and the expense they entail and then invest fifty cents in a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and see if your digestion for the next month is not vastly improved.

Ask the clerk in any drug store the name of the most successful and popular stomach remedy and he will say Stuart's

IN THE KING'S FAVOR.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir William Whiteway Are Privy Councillors

London, March 27.—The Gazette yesterday announced the appointments of the Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier of Canada, and Sir William Whiteway, former Premier of Newfoundland, to be Privy Councillors.

According to Hazell's Annual, 1900, Sir Wilfrid Laurier was made a Privy Councillor in 1897. Sir William Whiteway was also a Privy Councillor prior to this announcement.

The cable means that the two gentlemen have been reappointed under the new King.

Looks Like a Murder Case.

Galt, Ont., March 27.—Mrs. William Cowan, aged 68, was found dead in her little frame cottage on Pollock avenue yesterday by neighbors. There are strong suspicions of foul play. The old lady was found sitting on a chair, her head, which was a mass of clotted blood, thrown back. No clue has as yet been found, but a spade discovered in the shed shows traces of blood. Deceased lived all alone, was addicted to drink and the companionship of dissolute young men. A coroner's jury viewed the remains, a postmortem examination was decided on, and an adjournment made until 1.30 Friday afternoon.

THE ISLAND LAWSUIT.

Mr. Wasson of Warsaw won His Case Yesterday—Many Witnesses.

The time of the Assizes was taken up entirely, yesterday, in hearing the civil action of Wasson vs. Douglas. This was a case in which John Wasson, a retired gentleman of Warsaw, sought to recover from the defendant, Douglas, undisputed possession of an island, comprising about four acres, in the Indian River on the east half of lot No. 12 in the first concession of the township of Dummer. The land in question at one time belonged to R. J. Rogers, but the plaintiff claimed that it was deeded to one William Wasson, and then to him when purchasing the aforesaid mentioned lot.

The defendant, Douglas, contended that he was the rightful owner of the island, having purchased the same from the said Rogers. He has been in the meantime cutting down timber, etc., on the island.

The chief question to be decided was as to which of two streams was the original stream as this of course would determine the boundary.

There were in all 15 witnesses called. The case commenced at 9 a.m. and lasted until 8.30 p.m., and Mr. Justice Lount's charge to the jury lasted about 2 hours. A verdict was rendered for the plaintiff, granting him a perpetual injunction, restraining the defendant from trespass on the island in question, for $100 damages and the costs of the action.

It might be said that the land value was not a material issue in the action, but on the ownership of the island depended the control of a certain water power just where the two streams join again, and which is at the present time owned and controlled by the plaintiff.

Geo. Edmison for plaintiff, E. B. Edwards for defendant.

BATES WAS BURGLARIZED.

The Hunter street Confectionery Robbed Last Night.

Sometime during the night the premises on Hunter street occupied by W. Bates as a confectionery store and restaurant, was entered and a general raid made on the stock.

Of six tempting pies which had been left on a shelf, only one remained this morning, and the intruders also made away with half a boiled ham, as well as a quantity of cakes, buns, etc.

Entrance was gained through a cellarway and egress was obtained through unlocking the back door. The burglars left no clue but it is thought that they must have been local parties, as a fair knowledge of the premises must have existed.

HARDWARE MEN DINE.

The Pig Iron Tigers Hold a Banquet Last Night.

The Pig Iron Tiger Hockey Club brought a most successful season to a close by a banquet in the Crown Inn last night. The affair was attended by a large number of the Pig Iron representatives and their friends, and a enjoyable time was spent in talking over the past season's record, and speculating as to the future of the team.

The chair was occupied by Mr. Tom Burnham, and amongst others present were, Messrs. "Tick" Thornton, H. Rush, Frank Packenham, R. M. Glover, Manson Comstock, Bert. Stewart, W. Bullen, Bob Brown, Dr. Tate, "Dinnie" Hobbins, Bruce Hutchinson, Will Higgins, "Dagger" McAuliffe, "Bill" Creamer, Robert Matchett and E. S. Clarry.

After disposing of an excellent menu, an informal toast list was run off. Mr. Harry Rush responded to the toast of mercantile and banking institutions. R. M. Glover and Dr. Tate to the toast of Eko Camp, Frank Packenham to that of manufacturing concerns. Mr. Will Higgins spoke on behalf of the Pig Iron team. A pleasing feature of the evening was the presentation to Mr. "Dinnie" Hobbins, the trainer of the team, of a handsome pipe. The presentation was made by Chairman Burnham, and the recipient thereof made a suitable reply.

The Matter of a Poor House Dealt With —Congratulations to Mr. Justice Lount.

At 12 o'clock to-day at the Spring Assizes, the Grand Jury made the following presentment to the Honourable Mr. Justice Lount :

To the Honourable Mr. Justice Lount.

May it please your Lordship,—It is with feelings of pleasure and confidence that the Grand Jury desire to convey to your Lordship their most hearty congratulations on your appointment to the high and honourable position of the Bench, we look back with pride to the family name of which you, in the sight of Providence, have been permitted to so honour.

We hail with pleasure the extreme care and sound wisdom that has been ever put forth in the selection of the Judiciary of our Country, and we have the most profound faith in the future of any Country that shall so continue to be advised. We have noted with pleasure your experiences as regards the absence of crime in the various courts throughout the Province at which you have presided, and earnestly hope that the same may long continue.

In accordance with your instructions, we have looked carefully into the various institutions and conditions therein prevailing, particularly in the County Gaol, further reference to which is being made in this report. Regarding the County buildings proper, we beg to report that these are in excellent condition, and every effort being made to continuously improve the surroundings. The inmates of the gaol were comfortably cared for in all respects. Regarding the removal of those unfortunates of unsound mind, we note with pleasure that the Provincial Government hope at a very early date to have the new institution at Cobourg ready for occupation, when we trust that this difficulty will be overcome. We visited the Nicholls Hospital, St. Josephs Hospital, House of Providence, Protestant Home and the Children's Shelter. All of these institutions we found in excellent order, and declare that the Town and County of Peterborough have great reason for gratitude that such conditions generally prevail towards the alleviation and cure of disease, and the amelioration of the conditions of the poor and the orphaned.

Your Lordship referred to the question of a house of refuge. We have gone into this matter very fully and find for consideration the following existing conditions. In the town we have the Protestant Home, a gift to the town, to which is attached an endowment of eight hundred dollars a year. There is also a government grant, and in addition it is supported by private subscriptions. This Home receives aged people from the county as well as town. There is the House of Providence in Ashburnham. This institution receives the poor and infirm from all over the diocese controlled by His Lordship Bishop O'Connor. There is the charity board organized by the town council, and is made up of representatives from all the churches in the town, both Catholic and Protestant. The amount spent last year amounted to twenty five hundred and ninety one dollars. There is the Children's Shelter which is kept up largely by private subscriptions. The inmates in this shelter are cases of destitute children or children whose parents are immoral and totally unfit to have the responsibility of bringing up a family. There is also the Hall Trust Fund with an income of about fourteen hundred dollars a year; this fund, besides being used to give temporary relief, gives stated sums to numbers of aged people, who are averse to going into any charitable institution. Then in addition to these each church has its poor fund, and all the municipalities of the county dispense charity to the poor for whom they are responsible. Finding such conditions in existence we cannot help but conclude that in so far as the County of Peterborough is concerned there is no immediate necessity of a House of Refuge.

However, in order to cover the ground more fully and improve on present conditions we would recommend that a building be erected in connection with the County Buildings and under the same supervision to be used for the purpose of accommodating exceptional cases of aged and infirm people as well as boys who have committed some offence under the law who require punishment, but nevertheless for good reasons it is not desirable to send to gaol, thereby saving a boy from the stigma which is sure to be attached to his character.

A. L. DAVIS,
Foreman.

His Lordship in reply said he appreciated very warmly the kind reference they had made in their address to his appointment to the bench. Their words gave consolation to himself and stimulated him to fulfil the expectations they had expressed of him. The duties of the bench were not always as easy as they looked; they are sometimes very onerous, but it would be the ambition of his life to retain the confidence they had expressed in him. He referred to a statement made by a Hamilton paper that the Judges of the High Court of Justice of this country were travelling on passes supplied them by the railways. He repudiated this statement as most scandalous, and he had the greatest pleasure in saying that there was no truth whateves in the charge. Neither was it true regarding the County Court Judges of the Dominion. He spoke of the honour and integrity of the members of the bench of England for centuries, and the Canadian bench was of the same model. We have only to look at the Canadian judges of the past 100 years to see the able men who have dispensed justice in the courts of the Dominion.

His Lordship noted what they said regarding the county buildings, and it was a matter of congratulation that they were kept in such a cleanly manner, more especially at the present time, when disease was so prevalent. Had he known as much as they had told him regarding the charitable institutions of the town and county, he would not have addressed them in the manner he did. It was a great pleasure to learn that there is no county perhaps that spends so much in charities, and has more charitable institutions as Peterborough. At the same time he agreed with the remarks they had made as to a county poor house, for the number of vagrants confined in the county gaol shows that they cannot, owing to certain provisions, obtain admission to these charitable institutions. In conclusion he thanked them for the expeditious manner in which they had discharged their duties, and then discharged them.

KEEPING RIGHT UP-TO-DATE.

The Firm of Robt. Fair & Co's Improvements—New and Artistic Arrangement of Stocks.

The prosperity which is sweeping over Ontario, is bringing with it much that is progressive in the way of business matters, and the merchants of Peterborough have been quick to seize upon up-to-date plans for increasing the volume of trade.

Perhaps at no other time in the history of the town, have there been so many attractive stores as are to be found here at present. Particularly at this season of the year, during the spring openings, have the stores a bright and beautiful appearance. Handsomely dressed windows are a special feature of our business streets, and all the large dry goods, men's furnishing and drug stores, have behind their plate glass windows handsome displays of goods arranged—not on the old fashioned plan of showing quantities—but rather displaying ingenuity of expert window dressers, who by beautiful goods and lovely combinations of colours, seek to attract attention.

Peterborough is not only well equipped with retail stores in all lines, but the stocks carried this season is larger and more valuable than ever. Most of our large dry goods merchants are direct importers, so that shoppers have the advantage of selecting from stocks, in most respects, equal in quality, selection and good value, to those of Toronto or Montreal.

The enterprising firm of Messrs. Robert Fair & Co. continue to keep right up-to-date. The opening displays for the spring season have been planned on an unusual liberal scale to provide for the ladies the best dress goods, millinery and house-furnishings available. Already the ladies are showing their appreciation of these efforts by placing early spring orders in increased numbers, and the departments are very busy with work for Easter.

Important changes and improvements have been made during the past two months in the interior arrangement of the Golden Lion. The extensive department of carpets, floor coverings, etc., has been removed to the fourth story, and now occupy that entire flat. This change affords extra room for carrying a much larger stock, and gives increased space and better light for showing the large variety of new patterns. Passenger elevator carries shoppers with comfort and safety to this fine new carpet wareroom. Special values will be the key-note in all floor coverings, rugs, mattings, etc., and the early demand is quite brisk and notable.

The dress and mantle-making department, which had outgrown its former premises, has been removed to the third story; and the whole of that flat is now devoted to this rapidly-growing part of this firm's business. This new section has been newly refitted and refurnished—increased accommodation, comfort and conveniences so much needed during the past, being now amply provided.

The ladies' cloak and suit parlour now occupies the second storey, formerly the dress and mantle-making section. Here a very noticeable improvement has been effected, the full value of which will be best appreciated by the lady patrons of the store. The walls have been treated to a handsome dressing of wall paper, the ceiling brightened, and the floor laid with English linoleums. Standing at one end of this large room, and looking down the whole area over the extensive displays of elegant garments, new furnishings, and the busy throng of work-people, the sight is a very pretty one.

The basement has also been brought into requisition, and is now being used for heavy reserve stock, such as mattings and other bulky material.

The Golden Lion's advancement in every department is in keeping with the new century's progress. In studying the requirements of the future, this firm see the necessity for rapid, vigorous action and step into the new era with re-doubled energy and ample strength.

THE DIPHTHERIA OUTBREAK.

Editor Examiner.

Sir,—When an epidemic of diphtheria prevails in any place, it is natural for people to ask what has caused it, and many people think that a medical man should be able to point definitely to the cause of the first case, and also that he should be able to trace with mathematical precision, the origin of every other case of the disease which occurs. But in many instances this is impossible, and the physician is often forced to adopt the opinion of classical writers on this subject, when they say that the outbreak follows the gederal law of epidemics. I have carefully examined all the schools where diphtheria has made its appearance and as far as I could make out, those schools are in a good sanitary condition.

Some people blame the Smead-Dowd system for the trouble, and as I am not a sanitary engineer, I will not speak dogmatically on that matter; but one may say that if the system has caused diphtheria now, why did it not cause that disease in other years. In reasoning from analogy in this way, it would seem that the suspicion against the Smead-Dowd system is not valid. There is no doubt but schools are disseminators of infectious diseases, for if one infectious pupil enters a school there is no telling how far the disease may spread. I have visited most of the houses where diptheria has made its appearance, and the people seem to appreciate the necessity of strict sanitary measures. I have also examined the water in many instances, and have found nothing in it prejudicial to health.

The Streptococcus microbe, which causes diphtheria, is found in bad water, in foul gas from a sewer, or from an ill kept privy, also in decaying animal and vegetable substances in dirty cellars. It is well known too, that children sometimes get diphtheria from dogs and cats by inhaling their breath, and it is not uncommon for a mother to toss a cat or a small dog to the baby to play with it. Nothing could be more dangerous, and at the present time as there is an outbreak of infectious diseases all over the country, people should, for their own safety, observe every sanitary measure with the utmost fidelity. I don't think anyone can say definitely what has originated the present outbreak.

Medical Health Officer.

RESOLUTION OF CONDOLENCE.

Passed by the Local Carpenters' Union.

At the meeting of the Carpenters' Union, Monday night, the following resolution was adopted,—

To John Taylor, Esq.,—

We, your fellow members of International Union No. 783, desire to express our sincere sympathy for yourself and family in the bereavement you have suffered through the death of your only daughter. May the Faith that she is not dead but sleepeth sustain you and support the stricken mother in her great sorrow.

Signed on behalf of the Union,

ALEX SHARPE IS NOW ON TRIAL.

A Big Crowd Listening to the Evidence.

WITNESSES EXAMINED TO-DAY

F. D. Kerr Conducting the Defence and Hugh O'Leary K. C. Appearing for the Crown.

The court room was crowded at nine o'clock this morning with an inquisitive crowd of spectators to hear the opening proceedings in the Sharpe murder case. Men, women and children filed up the court house hill from shortly after 8 o'clock in order to secure their seats in the chambers. It was only a few minutes after nine o'clock when Crier Wood cried "silence," and his Lordship Mr. Justice Lount entered. The prisoner entered the court room in care of Jailer Nesbitt and Turnkey Rae, and accompanied by Rev. J. C. Davidson, rector of St. John's. His presence was the subject of some little commotion.

Mr. Kerr was a little late in arriving and when he entered he bowed and spoke to Sharpe, who was sitting in the box.

His Lordship asked Mr. Kerr if he was ready with the case, and the latter replied in the affirmative.

Swearing in the petit jury was then proceeded with. It was empanelled as follows:—

W. W. Daly, Peterborough; Reuben Castles, Peterborough; John Elmhirst, Otonabee; Frederick Warner, Asphodel; Walter J. Kidd, Dummer; Andrew Wilson, Smith; Fred Dixon, Peterborough; Arthur Blade, Peterborough; Geo. Benton, Peterborough; John Maniece, Asburnham; Wm. Clarkson, Harvey; Adam Graham, Peterborough.

The only two jurors challenged were A. J. Kidd of Lakefield, and Wm. Humphries of Dummer, and they were both challenged by the prisoner's counsel.

Mr. Hugh O'Leary, the Crown prosecutor, then addressed the jury in a calm and clear manner. He reminded them of the oath they had just taken, that they would give their verdict according to the evidence they heard, and he cautioned them therefore to banish from their minds anything they may have already heard as to the tragedy, and any opinions they might already have. Proceeding with his address, Mr. O'Leary explained the Criminal Code in its references to homicide, etc. Continuing he reviewed the circumstances leading up to the shooting of deceased, Hull. He pictured graphically the little log cabin in Belmont Township, where the tragedy occurred. This was the home of Steven N. Davis. The positions of the various members of the household at the time were explained, old man Davis sitting in one coroner with the little child, Mrs. Sharpe, the chief actress in the drama, washing the dishes, and the deceased Bill Hull in the midst of all, engaged with a small boy, little thinking of the awful fate that awaited him. Mr. O'Leary then touched upon the circumstances which would reduce the charge to that of manslaughter and closed by again reminding them that only on the evidence they heard could they give their verdict.

THE FIRST WITNESS.

The first witness was Robert Newell, a young man of seventeen years of age. He lives in Belmont and had known prisoner for about a year previous to the tragedy. He told of Sharpe having called at his father's house on the eventful evening and said that he wanted to go down to see Davis. George Dwyer went with them. Sharpe had a rifle with him, but witness did not see it until he was getting into the sleigh. Stephen Davis' was about half a mile distant. When they got to the house they noticed a light in the stable across the way. They stopped, Sharpe got off the sleigh, taking the rifle with him and went to the house, while witness went over to the barn yard for the purpose of turning around. He then heard a shot, and by the time witness had his horses turned around he saw prisoner coming back from the house. The only conversation he heard Sharpe have was that he had shot the man who stole his woman. Sharpe got on the sleigh again with Dwyer and witness and they proceeded home, Dwyer got off the sleigh at a cross road a portion of the way home. He slept with Sharpe that night but had no conversation with him to any extent. He drove him next day to Jimmy Drains' at the mica mines, to get his belongings. They went from Drain's to Hubbles, to get some things for his boy, and thence to Magistrate Robb's where they arrived in the evening, where prisoner gave himself up. He did not see him again until the evening of the inquest. He heard no more statements from Sharpe than those above mentioned.

Mr. Kerr then took witness in hand. He could not remember that prisoner was not well about this time, but he admitted making the statement that prisoner did not seem altogether right.

When Mr. O'Leary asked witness in what manner he supposed that prisoner was not altogether right in his mind, witness said that it was in his look.

George Dwyer, the other young man who went with Sharpe to Davis' house, was called. His evidence was much on the same line as that of the previous witness. In reply to the Crown prosecutor he said that Sharpe lived principally at John Drain's. He could not say that he had any way in particular of earning a living. His story of the incidents that took place at the Davis home were much the same as have been previously published and which was told by the previous witness.

When Stephen Norman Davis, who had been in the barn, asked Sharpe what he had done, prisoner replied, "I have fixed the man that stole my wife."

Davis said, "Maybe you have killed my baby," and Sharpe again replied, "No sir, I fixed the man that stole my wife."

Witness asked prisoner if he did not tell them he was coming down to trade

guns, and Sharpe replied, "I don't tell everyone my business." He did not go all the way home that night with Sharpe and Newell. He had known Bill Hull for about five years, and had seen him last on the Sunday preceeding the shooting. He saw Hull after he was shot lying on the floor in a pool of blood. He did not see Sharpe again until the Magistrate's trial.

Examined by Mr. Kerr, witness said he heard no expression from prisoner that he had came there for that purpose. Sharpe used the expression more than once, "I have fixed the man who stole my wife." Witness know that prisoner was a hunter and a trapper, and had earned his living in that way. There are others who make their living in a like manner. It is not a matter of comment when they see a man walking around with a rifle. He had known Wm. Hull for some time. He had a wife but had not been living with her for some time. Witness did not think that Sharpe was the same man he used to be. He seemed to be in great anxiety.

What's the prisoner's reputation as a man?

Witness—He gets the name of being a kind hearted person.

Continuing, witness said that Hull was a big man, and in a "scrap" with Sharpe could easily get the best of it.

Re-examined by Mr. O'Leary, witness said that prisoner the evening of the tragedy appeared rather wild and excited.

Stephen Norman Davis, the owner of the little log house in which the tragedy occurred, was next called. He lived with his father, his wife and three little children. William Hull, the deceased, came to his house on the Sunday morning before the Wednesday on which the shooting occurred. He went away that afternoon and returned the same evening with what witness supposed was his wife. Hull left again on Monday morning, returning on Wednesday evening. He had no supper at witness' that evening. They sat and talked for a while, then witness went to the barn with his wife, leaving his father, Hull, his woman, and witness' three children in the house. Hull had his back to the door, with witness' eldest boy standing in front of him.

What size is your house?

Witness—12 x 16.

How many rooms?

Witness—Two; one upstairs and one down.

Witness was then put through an examination as to the position of the furniture inside the house at the time he left the house. When at the barn, and in the hay loft of the same he heard a sleigh drive up and stop in front of his house. The barns are about 200 feet across the road from the house. He saw some one get off the sleigh and go up to the house, while the sleigh containing two others came down to the barn yard. Witness got down from the hay loft at once and in a minute or a little more he heard a shot fired. He also saw the door of the house open before the man had got off the sleigh, and immediately he heard the shot. Sharpe then returned from the house, having a gun on him.

HULL IN HIS COFFIN.

Sharpe said, "It's me, Steve, don't be afraid."

Witness said, "What have you done?" and prisoner replying again, said, "I've fixed the man that stole my wife; I come prepared to do it, and I have done it."

Witness said, "What have you done it for?" and Sharpe said, "I don't know; I have gone completely crazy, out of my mind."

Witness then asked if he had killed his children and Sharpe said once more, "I have fixed the man that stole my wife."

One of the boys asked Sharpe if he did not tell him that he had come down to trade rifles, and he said, "Never mind, drive on."

When witness went into the house he found Wm. Hull lying dead. There was blood all over him and blood running from out of his mouth and nose. There was also a mark on his right hand. Witness then described the position deceased was lying in when he entered the house. He found blood on a wound in the right breast. Prisoner's condition of health was good when he last saw him alive. He knew Sharp slightly, and believed that he was a good shot.

To Mr. Kerr—I was at the house as the owner of the house. Hull brought the woman there on the understanding that she should help my wife with the work of the house. He was to work in Sexsmith's shanties the following day. He and the woman he introduced to me as his wife slept together that night. He was not to come back to reside at my place, and when he came back on Wednesday night it was a surprise to me. I did not expect him until Friday. When I heard the rifle shot it shocked me very much, as I thought someone had been firing off an old pistol that had hung in the house. I had seen Sharpe some time the previous summer and had borrowed a rifle from him. We talked then about trading rifles but nothing was done. "Hull was an able bodied man" said witness in conclusion.

STEVEN DAVIS, SR.

Steven Davis, Sr., a typical specimen of anold settler took the stand. It was he who was in his son's house at the time the shooting took place. He went over much the same story as already related, of Hull's coming to the Davis shack and the positions of Hull, Hull's wife, the children and the witness himself at the time the shooting occurred. The woman, supposed to be Hull's wife, was standing washing the dishes, whilst Hull was sitting near the table with his face to the front door. When his son was out at the barn, Alex Sharpe came and opened the door, unnoticed to witness and without rapping, and the first intimation witness had of anything being wrong was when Hull shouted out "God save me."

He then saw the barrel of the rifle sticking through the door, about breast high. Sharpe apparently did not take any sight. There was nothing else said and the gun was discharged, Hull falling almost instantly. As soon as the gun went off the woman went to the door and shut it, just after the shot was fired. He did not know how the mark occurred on Sharpe's hand, unless he received it when he put up his hand.

Mr. Kerr's cross-examination did not elicit anything new.

DR. HOLDCROFT.

Dr. Holdcroft, of Havelock, who conducted the post mortem examination on the body of the deceased, was called. His evidence was the same as that which already appeared. He explained the nature of the wound which caused death, and which was on the right breast. There was another slight wound on the hand. The body was frozen when he got to Davis' house, it having been removed to the sheds in the rear. It was then taken to the Belmont town hall, where they kept on a good fire and thawed out the body. The wound was such that it would cause instant death. The body was that of a healthy, well developed man.

Dr. Holdcroft was shown a bullet by Mr. O'Leary, and asked if it was the bullet he took from the body of deceased. He replied that it was.

WOMAN AND HOME.

EUROPE'S TWO ROYAL SPINSTERS VICTORIA'S GRANDDAUGHTERS.

The Debutante's Ordeal — Two of Kingsley's Women—Sensible Toilet Articles—Woman in Two Centuries. When Baby Is Sick.

There are only two old maid princesses in Europe. Not very long ago the empress of Germany succeeded in marrying off the last of her sisters, a lady verging upon 28, and it is annoying to Queen Victoria that the only two royal spinsters left are her namesakes and her granddaughters.

Princess Victoria of Wales is over 32, and Princess Victoria of Sleswick-Holstein will never see 30 again, and in spite of their deplorable, conspicuous and unnatural singleness they are not the most unhappy of high born ladies. They are fast friends and allies, and though they enjoy few of the same studies and pleasures they are equally callous in their estimate of the world's and even grandmother's opinion and equally determined to prove that the life of an unwedded princess is neither forlorn nor unprofitable.

It is an interesting fact that of all the royal household the Prince of Wales has afforded his daughter the most kindly countenance in maintaining her position. The prince is nothing if not modern and liberal in his views. He believes in a woman making her life to please herself, and he has never come the high parental authority over the only one of his girls who preferred not to be forced into the bonds of matrimony merely for the sake of the conventionalities. Furthermore, it is whispered that the prince was on her side when for the only time in her life she fell in love.

That event took place many years ago, when a famously rich, handsome, amiable and enlightened young Indian prince visited Queen Victoria. His gorgeous jewels, his charming manners and his excellent pronunciation of the English language created a great sensation on his appearance first at a garden party given at Buckingham palace. He was then introduced to Princess Victoria, who was then far and away the best looking of the three sisters and always the cleverest.

The young East Indian found her royal highness most attractive, and when he went to pay a visit to Sandringham he shortly found that the princess was by no means indifferent to his admiration; that personally she was quite willing to make India her home, and privately her lover asked her hand in marriage. He pledged himself to make her his only wife, to conduct his domestic affairs on the European plan, and he was not refused point blank. He was told to go home and let the princess' family think it over. He went and died of the plague three days after reaching India.

The princess well knew that her lover had been ordered home merely to afford her family time to put other obstacles than the seas between them. It would not have been tactful to refuse so honorable a proposal from a powerful Indian ruler; so when Providence intervened and cut the thread of the young man's life the whole royal household breathed a sigh of mingled regret and relief. Very well the family knew that had he lived Princess Victoria would have insisted and the prince would have clamored and the highest diplomacy and the severest pressure would have been required to balk Cupid of his victims.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Debutante's Ordeal.

The "coming out" of a fashionable girl, meaning thereby her presentation to society, has of late years developed into a very important epoch in her career, second only to her engagement and subsequent marriage. In old days, although rich people often gave a dance for their debutante daughters, the majority of girls simply became eligible for invitations, etc., by leaving school, making calls with their mothers and generally taking part in the social life of the family.

Gradually, however, the change from a schoolgirl into a full fledged young woman became more and more a recognized distinction, until now, as has already been said, it is a very important era indeed—the culmination on her part and her mother's of years of anticipation and preparation.

Not infrequently parents have sufficient foresight to make prudential provision for the great event, setting aside a certain sum to aid in bringing out their girls creditably. This giving of such importance to a girl's debut seems a great mistake. It is altogether too cruel an ordeal for her to be heralded by society writers in all the papers before her advent and then watched critically by the social world, who votes her either a success or a failure, according to her ability to secure smart invitations and obtain plenty of partners. To those who can command such attention this "coming out" is undoubtedly a delightful experience. But it is to be questioned whether such a series of triumphs over less fortunate companions is good for either character or disposition, while for the poor maids who are failures, according to the world's verdict, what heartburnings and actual unhappiness they must experience before they become philosophical enough to fit into their places gracefully and create interests for themselves. It is very hard for them to realize what, however, is often the fact, that the race is not always to the swift, and it frequently happens that the debutante who enters society with the greatest eclat finds herself in her second winter far behind some one of her associates whose qualities are less brilliant, but more enduring.—New York Tribune.

Two of Kingsley's Women.

It cannot be said by the unprejudiced reader that his Hypatia is an attractive personality. He has somehow failed to give her charm, though he has given her a beautiful body, perfectly molded features, with blue eyes and yellow hair, and a glorious intellect. But the truth is his Hypatia remains as cold as the baths of Apollo, and it is not going too far to say that she is rather repellent. Of course she might answer that she did not mean to be otherwise, in her poet's hands, and that what he had shown her, that she was rather arrogant in mind, holding matrimony in high scorn and thinking but little better, if any, of maternity. The passion of the ardent young monk Philammon for this snow cold divinity is not made altogether credible, and his sister, poor, pretty Pelagia, who has lived the life of a wanton and is presently the paramour of the Gothic chief Amal, is more winning in some things that take the heart. She is passionately faithful to her huge, stupid, honest Goth, and she is kind to every one else, with a willingness to see people happy even if they are not virtuous. She is spiritually modest and at least unconscious in her other immodesty. When she is awakened through the dim memories of childhood to the fact that she and Philammon are sister and brother, long ago carried captive from Athens and sold into slavery, she tries hard to let the monk bring her to a conviction of sin. But though she is good Christian enough to believe in hell, she also believes in a good God and thinks he will take into consideration the peculiar circumstances under which she remains constant to Amal, whom the customs of the Goth's tribe will not suffer to marry her.—W. D. Howells in Harper's Bazar.

Sensible Toilet Articles.

It is not advisable to be tempted by each new advertisement. Select pure toilet articles and cling to them as you do to favorite colors or scents. They will be as satisfactory as old friends, if you treat them right. You cannot neglect them any more than you can neglect your tried friends. The list of necessary toilet appurtenances is not formidable. Indeed better results are obtained by a small number of things faithfully used. A few manicuring implements, a good face cream, pure soap, toothbrush and powder, a harmless face powder to remove the gloss which mars some skins, an antiseptic mouth wash, a shampoo fluid that will not kill out the hair and a tonic for falling tresses, a coarse comb and well made hairbrush, both kept scrupulously clean, are a sufficient supply for the good grooming of any woman. It is a mistake to buy articles so costly that they cannot be put to daily use, like combs and brushes in fancy mountings. Plain, well made articles are more satisfactory, if not so beautiful to look upon.

Then let women put away their slothfulness and take the advantages provided for them. I believe that an absolutely clean human being is more comfortable than the other kind, and of the health of such a person there can be no question. It is all well enough to point to the apparently healthy people who live despite insanitary conditions. When disease strikes them, it sweeps down everything in its path, and certainly unclean people are not nice to look upon, are they?—Betty Bradeen in Boston Traveler.

Catarrhozone Cures Child of Catarrh.

Perth, Ont.—"I cannot withhold my testimony as to the great value of Catarrhozone as a remedy for Catarrh, one bottle having cured my daughter of that trouble, and I heartily recommend it to all suffering from that disease. No house should be without it." Mrs. J. A. Morris.

So pleasant, babies use it; so safe, grandmothers employ it; so certain to quickly relieve and cure that doctors, lawyers, merchants and public speakers rely upon Catarrhozone as their standby for Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma and Hay Fever. It is cheap because it lasts so long, and because it is so sure to cure even the poorest can afford to buy it. Every dollar outfit is guaranteed to cure, or your money back. Small size, 25c., druggists or by mail. A trial sent for 10c, by N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Canada, or Hartford, Conn., U.S.

Had Molted.

"That fellow is a bird," said the admiring stranger as he looked after the fresh young man.

"Not now," replied the native. "But there was a time when your description might have been justified."

"When was that?"

"The night we tarred and feathered him, about a year ago."

Don't think less of your system than you do of your house. Give it a thorough cleansing, too. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla

First Waiter—That man over at the corner table is an awful kicker.

Second Waiter—Yes; he complained the other day because there were no pearls in his oysters.

First Waiter—And now he wants to know what we mean by removing the diamonds from his diamond back terrapin.

The Number 4.

There are four cardinal points, four winds, four quarters of the moon, four seasons, four figures in the quadrille, four rules of arithmetic, four suits of cards, four quarters to the hour, four legs for furniture, most animals go on four legs, the dead are placed between four planks, the prisoners between four walls. We have four incisor and four canine teeth, and our forks have four prongs; all animals, when butchered, are cut into four quarters; the violin, greatest of all string instruments, has but four strings; four of a kind is a pretty good hand at poker even if they are only fours.—Exchange.

APHORISMS.

No sword bites so fiercely as an evil tongue.

Self respect is the cornerstone of all virtue.—Sir John Herschel.

The greatest of all faults is to be conscious of none.—Carlyle.

Better a little chiding than a great deal of heartbreak.—Shakespeare.

The more we study the more we discover our ignorance.—Shelley.

Repentance is the golden key that opens the palace of eternity.—Milton.

Fire and sword are but slow engines of destruction in comparison with the babbler.—Steele.

The only way to make the mass of mankind see the beauty of justice is by showing them, in pretty plain terms, the consequence of injustice.—Sidney Smith.

Woman in Two Centuries.

The nineteenth century opened under the most favorable auspices for the advancement of the cause of liberty and the betterment of the conditions of the human family.

Great indeed has been the advance of woman in the nineteenth century by comparison with the past. She has forced the passage of laws which give her the right to exist independent in her property rights and free to follow pursuits of life and happiness formerly closed to her. Her force of character and ability have compelled legislation to allow her to enter into the competition for an honest livelihood; she was gradually allowed to practice medicine and cure humanity from the ills of the flesh.

She has been allowed by law to practice jurisprudence; she occupies nearly 1,000 pupils; she teaches over 10,000,000 children in the public schools of the country; she is on the staff of every important journal. All this she has achieved in the nineteenth century—but how little, after all, when compared with what still remains to be attained. The word "people" is not yet understood; the word "citizen" is still misquoted.

In the twentieth century the cause of liberty must and will progress until every vestige of injustice to woman shall be wiped away. Then indeed human rights will mean the rights of man and woman alike; then difference of sex will not prevent one-half the people from asserting their right to participate in every part of a government which is by the whole people for the whole people.—Alice Parker Lesser.

When Baby Is Sick.

A baby's cry should be to the intelligent mother the best index to its physical condition. The healthy baby cries very loudly and in a lusty, explosive, angry manner, and the tears flow freely. The sick baby, or the one on the verge of sickness, cries peevishly or whines in a low tone.

Watch the manner in which the baby takes its food. If it is perfectly well it will attack the bottle greedily and will express its satisfaction much in the same manner as any other young suckling animal—that is, by soft and inarticulate noises or grunts. If, on the other hand, the baby contemplates its food before touching it or after tasting turns from it, be sure there is something wrong.

Watch the baby closely while it sleeps. If it is in perfect health the skin will be moist, the lips damp and scarlet, the palms of the hands and the soles of the feet pink. The eyelids will be completely closed and there will be no twitching of the muscles about the mouth or nose or eyes. Save for a faint rhythmic sound of breathing the healthy baby when asleep will be as still as a piece of carved marble.

If the baby smiles in its sleep, if it throws out its little hands and feet with swift, spasmodic motions; if the eyes are only half closed, the corners of the mouth drawn down, the breathing irregular or labored, the face flushed and the head hot, then lose no time in calling in the family physician.

Convalescent Nurses.

In the line of trained nursing a new departure has been taken which will appeal to the housekeeper who has struggled with the question of home nursing or its alternative. Convalescent nurses are trained to take care of the patient during the last weeks of a fever or other lingering sickness before he is well enough to go out and yet demands companionship. The duties are light, consisting merely of reading aloud, giving tonics, keeping the depressed spirits up, seeing that the invalid does not overdo and all the hundred and one things which the occasion demands.

Of course the salary is not so great as it would be if more detailed attention were required, but by means of this change many a nurse who could not spend the time and money necessary to take the full course at a training school and hospital is enabled to begin her duties in this way, while the boon to the average income is a great one, enabling a nurse to be retained during the trying weeks which succeed a dangerous illness, when otherwise the family would be obliged often to do the hundred and one things which a querulous patient demands and which are so fagging. While the salary of the expert nurse is from $25 a week up, that of the convalescent nurse is about $8 or $10, and yet her work may be as satisfactory as that of the other.

For a Hurt Finger.

If you prick your finger and the place seems inclined to fester, get some boracic lint, pour boiling water through till thoroughly heated, wring as dry as possible, bind the lint over the injured part, put a piece of oiled silk over and wrap in cotton wool or a piece of flannel. Repeat this treatment every two or three hours till all pain is gone.

If you have no boracic lint, make a bread poultice, using boiled boracic lotion instead of ordinary water. Five cents' worth of boracic acid dissolved in a pint of water and bottled will keep good for months and is always ready for use.

An Earnest Course.

The excitable leading lady, hearing footsteps passing her dressing room, thought it was the irascible stage manager, against whom she harbored enmity.

"Say, you lobster," she called in her sweet, cultivated accents, "I want you to"—

"Excuse me," interrupted the producer of the footsteps. "I am not the lobster. I am only the supe."

For indeed it was the young man who each matinee and evening announced that the carriage was waiting.

He Knew to His Sorrow.

"How's your father today, Tommy?"
"He's jest as strong as ever."

As Usual.

Clerk—Madam, you will have to describe the contents of the pocketbook you lost.

Mrs. Shoppe—Well, it contained four hairpins, a button hook, a lace handkerchief, four stamps, six rainy day skirt samples, my lorgnette, a safety pin and—

Clerk—That will do. This was a pocketbook. The lost baggage department is on the second floor.

Color.

The red man perused with profound concern the accounts of the latest lynchings in Ohio, Indiana and elsewhere.

"If I were colored," he exclaimed when he had done, "I should be blue!"

Then he affected to laugh grimly, but we could plainly see that he was depressed by unwonted forebodings.—Detroit Journal.

JINGLES AND JESTS.

The Trouble With the Hen.

The duck approached the stub tailed hen,
Who had a melancholy air.
She was most sympathetic when
Her neighbors seemed oppressed by care.

"Cheer up, dear friend, and smile once more;
There's sure to be a change of luck.
Forget your grief, and don't get sore,"
Advised the sympathetic duck.

"You must try to remember that
In sorrow's cup are bitter dregs,
Likewise that care once killed a cat,
And that's as sure as eggs is eggs."

Replied the hen, "I have no doubt
My weakness is"—she raised her wings
And let the fluffy chicks run out—
"In brooding over little things."

What Puzzled Him.

The professor had lost the change that was in his pocket.

His Wife—There's nothing very strange about it. See this big hole in your pocket.

The Professor—Yes, my dear, I understand that. It is not that which puzzles me. There are two holes, equally large. I am endeavoring to ascertain out of which hole the money went, and why it chose that outlet in preference to another quite as practicable.

By the Neck.

"Down our way," remarked the visiting eastern man, "you westerners have a great reputation for hospitality. We hear you're always ready to give a poor fellow a lift."

"Well, stranger," replied Cactus Cal, "I don't edzackly know what you mean by 'horse-pitality,' but I kinder ketch on, an you jest bet we'll lift any feller we ketch at it. That's what!"

Another Hold Up.

"Poor Bronson."

"What's the matter with him?"

"He was the victim of a hold up last night, so he tells me."

"You don't say so! How did it happen?"

"Oh, the baby had eaten something that didn't agree with it. He had to hold it up for three hours at a stretch."

Beautiful Economics.

Oh, nature knows her business!
She does her work wu'f while.
When she puts out an shticle,
She puts it out in style.
Jes' think what disappointment
Would strike us mortal men
Ef de turkey was created
No bigger dan a wren!

He wouldn' be wu'f shootin
On 'is perch up by de twig
Ef de 'possum wa'n't no larger
Dan a little guinea pig.
Life wouldn' be wu'f livin,
An we'd all go out of biz
Ef de quinine pills was hefty

One Way of Saving.

Bachelor—So you're married, eh? I suppose your wife saves you a good deal of trouble?

Benedick—Well, she saves every little trouble that comes to her during the day so that she may bother me with it when I come home at night.

A Study From Nature.

Man's a little chunk of ice;
Woman is the sun; she lets
Herself beam on him. Ah, how nice
And soft he gets!

Had Something to Say.

"Pardon me," said the busy man to the insurance agent who had forced his way into his office, "but I'm not prepared to talk to you today."

"Don't let that worry you," replied the insurance agent, "I'll do all the talking."

Couldn't Stand the Strain.

"Yes, this is the worst case in the institution—complete nervous breakdown. Two weeks ago he weighed 200. Now look at him."

"Who is he?"

"He's a Kansas saloon keeper."

The Disagreeable Man.

"Do you think the face an index to the mind?" asked the prosy boarder.

"Well," said the savage bachelor, "when a woman makes up her mind that she has lived single too long she is apt to make up her face."

Where Respect Is Due.

Young love may laugh at locksmiths; true,
But though its scorns sublime,
You'll find it takes its hat off to
The goldsmith every time.

Requiescat In Pace.

Bing—What's become of your dog? I haven't seen him around lately.

Boker—I took the precaution to try some of the medicines on him that were recommended to me for the grip.

In the Midst of Life We Are In Debt.

McSwatters — What happiness! I'm all out of debt!

McSwitters—That's good.

McSwatters—And thrice happy day! I can go in debt again.

A Shrewd Guess.

"I wonder how long 'Unleavened Bread' will hold the stage?"

"Just as long as there's plenty of dough in the box office."

The Meditative Girl.

Her eyes were dreamy, and it gave
His jealous heart a shock,
But she mused not on other men;
Her thoughts were of a frock.

A Warning.

To feel tired after exertion is one thing; to feel tired before is another.

Don't say the latter is laziness—it isn't; but it's a sign that the system lacks vitality, is running down, and needs the tonic effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

It's a warning, too—and sufferers should begin taking Hood's at once.

THE HORSE SHOW.

Simmocolon, 2:13¾, is in John Roth's hands at Chillicothe, O.

At Moulton, Me., Dr. F. F. Innis owns a horse said to 44 years old.

The Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' association will hold their meeting Oct. 8 to 18 at Lexington.

J. Howard Ford, the new proprietor of famous Stony Ford farm, is said to be trying to buy Charley Herr, 2:07.

B. F. Pew, Niles, O., has bought the stallion Gold Lace, 2:23½, by Gold Leaf, 2:16½, dam by Lace Dealer, 2:25.

The pacing mare Nelly Hammond, 2:21½, by Patron, 2:14¼, dam Nelly G, 2:20, is to be bred to John R. Gentry, 2:00½.

Smith & Eagal, Davenport, Ia., have sold the gray pacing gelding Admiral Dewey, 2:12¼, to S. W. Cooper, Wichita, Kan.

The California pacer Clipper, 2:06, by Diablo, 2.09½, will again be campaigned by James Thompson, who gave him his record last season.

Aurora and Ottawa have already claimed dates as members of the Illinois Valley circuit. The Aurora meeting will be held July 16 to 19 and Ottawa July 23 to 26.

Muncie, Ind., will have a race meeting July 3 to 5, which will be a starter for a circuit, leading up to a fair circuit, furnishing in all 15 weeks of racing within a radius of 75 miles.

The Berlin (Wis.) Blue Ribbon fair will be held Oct. 1 to 4. Six classes each for trotters and pacers will be on the programme, with purses ranging from $250 to $500. The secretary is C. M. Willis.

Ione, 2:00½, the black pacing mare who scorched the talent's money at Lexington last fall, is stepping fast on the snow at Winnipeg. Tom Ogden, 2:07, and Don Quixote, 2:10½, are there.—

THE ROYAL BOX.

It is not "all talk" with the Emperor William. He is really a brilliant orator.

The king of England is without doubt the most traveled monarch the world has seen.

The German emperor, it is said, takes great pleasure collecting ties and scarfs of all ages, climes and patterns. His collection numbers, it is said, 18,000 of these.

Queen Wilhelmina's latest photograph shows that she is not so pretty after all. Of a strongly Dutch type, her face and ears are large and the eyes and nose are small and "crowded."

Queen Victoria once conducted a Bible class. Long ago, when she was staying in London, she would call together the children of her married servants in one of the private rooms of Buckingham palace and read the Bible to them. At the close of the reading she would explain the chapter and children's hymns were sung.

If the gossip writer of a Paris paper is to be believed, the king of the Belgians is very vain of his personal appearance. His beard particularly is the object of much attention, for at night before retiring his majesty envelops it in a silk bag, which keeps it in curl. His toilet table is covered with brushes, combs and various kinds of brilliantine.

BRITON AND BOER.

The British are preparing to pour 30,000 more men into the hopper.—Chicago Record.

De Wet and the British authorities are having another dispute over definitions. What the British call peace envoys De Wet calls spies.—Detroit Free Press.

"We can but regret," says the London Mail, "that the queen was not permitted to see the end of the South Africa struggle." But, on the other hand, you can but rejoice if the king is permitted to see it.

Next to the king, Lord Roberts is the most popular man in England. The reason for this popularity seems to be that "Bobs" succeeded in getting out of Africa without having been whipped by the Boers.—Louisville Post.

The Boers can hope for no amnesty from King Edward. They would agree to no terms which do not include independence and a restoration of their republic. To such terms neither king nor ministry will consent.

THE GLASS OF FASHION.

Black embroidery on batiste and chiffon is one of the novelties in trimming.

A proper ring to wear with your tailor made suit is one large turquoise set in gold without any jewels.

Renaissance and mercerized grenadines are shown in great variety among the thin cotton materials for summer gowns.

Empire ribbons of varying tints are woven with either silver or gold laurel wreaths and effectively used for chemisette fronts and stocks.

Gray suede slippers worn with gray silk hose are very smart, while for the ballroom there are gilt slippers and black satin slippers embroidered with gold.

Squares of cluny lace, alternating with squares of jet galloon, are used for trimming silk petticoats, while another decoration is in floral designs of applique velvet.

Roses with most realistic dewdrops scattered over them have been worn as hair ornaments all winter, but now you can purchase the dewdrops by the dozen and stick them on to suit your own fancy.

Metallic ribbons, soft, glossy and uncrushable, are one of the spring novelties. They are submitted to some process which gives a metallic sheen to the gloss and makes them a little different from other ribbons.

The smartest muffs are very large, either in the oblong flat shapes, with ruffles at the ends and a bow for a finish, or, if in long haired furs, like sable, made soft and round, with a finish of tails. Wonderful creations are made of scraps of fur, chiffon and velvet or lace and satin and fur, as you like.

IN BED SIX WEEKS.

A Very Bad Case of Dyspepsia—But after Three Years of Suffering, Mrs. Tefft is Cured by Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Mr. R. C. Tefft is Vice-President of the East York Agricultural Society. His home is in Markham, Ont.

He says:

"For three years past my wife has been a sufferer from Dyspepsia and Indigestion. Her sufferings were continual but were more severe on some days than others.

"So greatly did the complaint increase of late that she was obliged to take to her bed, and for six weeks she was unable to leave it. The pains she endured during that period were beyond description.

"Our doctor attended her but did no permanent good.

"Finally, she was advised to try Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. She received marked benefit immediately, and after having used three boxes she was able to get up and attend to her regular duties as well as ever.

"Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets were the only remedy that ever did her any good.

"I have used the Tablets myself for Dyspepsia and Constipation, and always with the best results.

"They have effected a cure in every case for which they have been used in our district."

Is your case any worse than that of Mrs. Tefft? Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets cured her. They will cure any case of Dyspepsia, no matter how painful. Your druggist sells them. Don't wait, and doubt, and suffer. They never disappoint. No matter how many other treatments have failed. Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets never fail

He Could Not Spell.

The owner of a small book store in Harlem, desirous of a distinctive name for the same, after some hours of deep cogitation finally hit upon the legend, "Harlem's Literary Mecca." This he thought exceedingly good, and he had a man put it up in enamel letters upon his window. After the job was done he was standing out by the curbstone admiring the effect of the inscription, when he heard an old Irishman who had stopped and was also looking at it soliloquize as follows:

"Well, now, will you luk at that! The cheek of that Scotchman, callin himself 'Haar-r-lem's Literary Mickey,' just to catch some of the Irish trade! An the blackguard don't even know how to spell 'Mickey!'"

The inscription has been removed.

Putnam's Painless Corn and Wart Extractor.

Contains no acids or injurious chemical compounds; is neither caustic, corrosive or irritating; but soothes and eases from the first application, and acts quickly. If you want an irritating and flesh-eating remedy do not ask for Putnam's—it acts just the other way. For sale at all druggists.

are unable to enjoy the fruits of their labor because of kidney trouble brought on by the work which they are subject to. When the first sharp pain comes across the small of the back it is a warning that something has gone wrong with the Kidneys. At this time delays are dangerous and by taking Doan's Pills immediately many years of suffering may be avoided.

Here are a few proofs that Doan's Kidney Pills are a positive cure for backache:

MR. M. E. SANDERS, Fairbank, Ont., writes: I suffered intensely with pains across my back and am pleased to say that after taking one box of Doan's Pills I feel entirely cured, and can recommend them to all.

MR. G. WILLIAMS, Brantford, Ont., writes: I was suffering with a lame back, but after using three boxes of Doan's Pills the lameness entirely disappeared. He highly recommends Doan's Pills to others.

MR. R. T. ARNOLD, Davisville, Ont., writes: I was troubled with severe pains in my back, but after taking one box of Doan's Pills felt greatly improved, after taking the third box was completely cured.

MISS ELLA F. VAN TASSELL, Tiverton, N.S., writes: I was subject to lame back, but after taking one box of Doan's Pills felt better and have not been troubled since.

MR. HAY KING, Claremont, Ont., writes: I consider Doan's Kidney Pills an excellent remedy for backache and all kidney troubles.

MARGARET A. BOUDREAU, Grosse Point, Ont., writes: Doan's Pills saved me from dying. Before using them I could not move on account of soreness in my back, but now I can do any kind of work. I can recommend them to any one suffering with backache.

LASSWADE.

Mr. J. W. Ratcliffe has his mill running in full blast. Mr. Sanford Washburn is the sawyer. Such a stir never was witnessed at McFadden's Corners before—teams hauling in logs and taking the new sawn lumber home. Long may Mr. Ratcliffe prosper. So highly pleased is he with the outfit that he has sent the following testimonial to the Peterborough agents:

Lasswade, March 23, 1901.

Messrs. W. J. Doughty & Sons,
Peterborough:

Gentlemen,—I have pleasure in stating that the steam saw mill plant manufactured by George White & Sons, of London, and supplied by you, has been running for some time and giving perfect satisfaction. I may say that the capacity of the mill is fully equal to your guarantee. Although I have not yet required to run it up to the full twenty horse-power, I feel satisfied that it will perform all that it was represented to do with ease. It is simple in construction and easily handled.

Yours truly,
J. W. RADCLIFFE.

The sick of this place are all getting strong again.

The sleighing is good for the 23rd of March.

Owing to the storm last Tuesday evening, the most of the people were unable to attend the Epworth League.

Chas. Hawley and family, of Chandos, have taken their departure to Wisconsin, where they intend to reside for a few years.

Mr. Henry N. Merriam, of Harwood, was in this vicinity a few days last week healing the sick with his herb medicines and liniment.

Hay seems to be scarce in these parts.

The camps are nearly all broken up on account of the men being ill with bad colds and coughs.

SPRINGVILLE.

Large quantities of lumber and stone are being drawn for our new store. Mr. F. E. Wilson has the contract for hauling the material.

Rev. Dr. Campbell having received and accepted a call to a church in Claremont, moved up last week.

Miss Ada Porter, of Millbrook, was visiting friends here last week.

We regret to report the serious illness of Mrs. David Wilson.

Mr. Wm. Douglass while returning from visiting a neighbour Friday, was attacked by a weak spell and with difficulty reached home. We hope for his speedy recovery.

Mrs. Furber, who has had charge of Turnbull's dressmaking workrooms, has taken full charge. She has just returned from the city where she has been picking up the latest ideas in her line, and will be pleased to take your orders. All work guaranteed. 3d69

His Kidneys

TORTURED MR. PETHICK OF TORONTO, UNTIL TIMELY HELP CAME

In form of Dr. Arnold's Toxin Pills—His affliction was Diabetes—Dr. Arnold's Toxin Pills cured him, after all other Medicines failed.

Arnold Chemical Co., Limited, Toronto.

Gentlemen:—"For Several years I have been a victim of that terrible affliction, Diabetes. All the special symptoms of this disease were present—urination caused severe cutting pain; the urine was unnatrurally dark colored; I suffered with intense headaches and with twitching of the nerves. The quantity of urine discharged was greatly increased; my lips were always dry; I was tortured by a perpetual and intense thirst; carbuncles broke out on my body, and I wasted to a mere skeleton, in in spite of what the doctors could do. In despair I resorted to patent medicines, and tried one after another—to be disappointed by each.

"My wife persuaded me, much against my will, to try Dr. Arnold's Toxin Pills. I thank God, now, that she did so, for this wonderful, heaven-sent medicine has cured me completely. I am to-day enjoying perfect health, and every organ does its duty thoroughly, as the result of my use of Dr. Arnold's Toxin Pills."

JAMES PETHICK, (Barber.)

Dr. Arnold's Toxin Pills are sold by all druggists; large box 75c., small 25c., or sent postpaid on receipt of price by the Arnold Chemical Co., Limited, Canada Life Bldg., 44 King St. W., Toronto. Booklet sent free.

STOCKINGS.

The Port Hope Knitting Works have the largest stock and assortment of stockings of all kinds, qualities and sizes. Ladies' Cotton Hose begin at 5c per pair and go on right up. Boys' Ribbed Hose in the largest sizes begin at 10c, with a splendid quality at 15c and 20c. Come and see them, it will pay you.

About New Shoes.

If experience did not prove the truth of the statement, one would hardly believe that there are special times and seasons for the trying on of shoes, but such is the case. In the spring of the year one's feet are more delicate and tender, perhaps caused from the rising of the temperature. Like other parts of the body, these members are somewhat shrunken during cold weather, and as the warm season approaches the flesh gradually begins to stretch itself—all on the principle of cold contracting and heat expanding. Consequently one needs a larger pair of shoes in summer than in winter, and it is always best to try them on the latter part of the day. The feet are then at the maximum also. Activity naturally makes them swell. Much standing has a tendency to enlarge the feet and also causes them to be tender.

New shoes should be tried on over moderately thick stockings, then a thinner pair may be put on to ease the feet if the shoes seem tight. It is remarkable what difference stockings will make in the comfort of a shoe, and if you doubt the truth of this remark try for yourself.

Bright Mary.

At a club meeting the charming speaker of the day told a story that is funny enough to go farther than the hundred or two women who laughed at it then. She was in conversation with a worthy dame of poor but honest mind, the kind who indiscriminately admires any person who gets into print as a genius, just as another kind bows before every richly dressed woman as a "society lady," and she asked, "What is your daughter doing these days?"

"Mary has gone to Paris," answered the other, with an important air, "to learn to be an author."

"Oh," murmured the questioner, and presently rallied enough to inquire, "And—and how long will it take Mary to learn?"

"We expect her to take two years," answered the proud and confident mother.—Chicago Post.

The American Girl's Attractions.

The Duke of Manchester, who practices what he preaches, says that foreign noblemen marry American girls because they are beautiful, witty, graceful, high bred, original, innocent, audacious, intellectual and practical—that is to say, because they are the sum of all the virtues. But isn't it odd, asks the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, that practically all of the girls sought by these foreign gentry are rich? There are dead loads of American girls who have all the qualities enumerated by the big duke and yet do not contract foreign alliances. With few exceptions foreign noblemen are attracted only to rich American girls. Of course it may be only a coincidence, but it suggests all sorts of idle speculations.

To Make Patent Leather Shoes Easy.

Those with tender feet may be glad to know that a hole punched on either side of patent leather boots or shoes just at the instep about one inch from the sole will in walking pump in the air and tend to keep the feet cool. This has been tried with the most beneficial results, and long walks have been enjoyed in shoes thus punctured which have hitherto been impossible to wear for exercise.

Loss of Appetite.

A person that has lost appetite has lost something besides—vitality, vigour, tone.

The way to recover appetite and all that goes with it is to take Hood's Sarsaparilla—that strengthens the stomach, perfects digestion and makes eating a pleasure.

Thousands take it for spring loss of appetite and everybody says there's nothing else so good as Hood's.

What Comfort Means.

Comfort ought to be the first consideration of home.

If a rocking chair brings that to the wife, then a rocking chair let it be, despite changing fashions. The big armchair may not be beautiful to look upon, but keep it if the masculine head of the house feels a fondness for it. He might never find another to fit him so perfectly.

If carpets are more comfortable than wood floors and rugs, stick to them, even though you admire your neighbor's rooms more than your own.

It is difficult to locate comfort. We feel it, but cannot describe it. To one woman it means a wrapper and loosely flowing hair, to another a couch and so on through a long list of things.

To one woman it is compressed into this: Hot water, a hot fire and hot coffee. She is a great woman, a famous one, and among the many advantages fame and wealth have brought her are none to equal those three.

The higher we rise the larger become our ideas. It is like the possession of money—the more we have the greater our wants—and only in rare instances are we much better off in a mental way.

Vapo-Cresolene quickly stops colds, coughs, sore throat, whooping cough and croup.

MR. WARDELL'S BILL.

Hon. F. R. Latchford Said It Was an Ill-Considered Measure.

HON. GIBSON: PREPOSTEROUS.

This Alien Labor Law, Applicable Only to Mongolians, Was Given the Six Months' Hoist by a Majority of the Legislature on Motion of Mr. Pettypiece—The Proceedings.

Toronto, March 28.—In the Legislative Assembly yesterday, Hon. G. W. Ross introduced a bill to facilitate the purchase of Toll Roads by municipalities. Mr. Hill introduced a bill to amend the Street Railway Act.

Mr. Harcourt's bill to consolidate and amend the Act respecting Public Schools, and a number of private bills received a third reading.

Mr. Joynt obtained an order for a return showing the amount of railway bonuses voted by the Legislature during the years 1898-1900.

Mr. Wardell secured an order for a return of correspondence with reference to the collection of fines imposed on those found guilty of bribery in the last local election in Halton. The Attorney-General stated that some of the larger fines had been paid.

Hon. Mr. Latchford informed Mr. Brower that 17 gill net licenses were issued by the Fishery Department last year.

Hon. E. J. Davis, replying to Mr. Eilber, stated that the Government was not aware that a number of persons were destroying hemlock timber in Muskoka, Parry Sound and Nipissing for the sake of the bark.

The debate on Mr. Wardell's bill relating to the employment of aliens in Ontario was resumed. Mr. Wardell introduced an amendment to his measure to the effect that it should not apply to skilled laborers or experts.

Mr. Auld opposed the bill on the ground that even as amended it would hamper the operations of American capitalists who desired to establish industries in Canada. He moved the six months' hoist.

Mr. Jessop strongly approved the bill. He was glad to welcome Americans who would settle in Canada and spend their earnings here, but he did not like to see Americans crossing the border to find employment here and taking the money out of the country.

Hon. F. R. Latchford spoke in opposition to the measure, saying that even if passed it would have no effect as it only applied to countries which had a law prohibiting the employment of Canadians. The United States had no such law. They had a law prohibiting the importation of laborers under contract and Canada had a similar law. But the United States had not legislated against Canadians as such. Any Canadian could go into the United States, obtain employment and make a contract after his arrival there. The bill was an ill-considered measure founded upon a fallacy and a misconception.

Mr. Foy urged that even if the United States had no law absolutely prohibiting the employment of Canadians, it might be well to put this Act on the statute book to deter them from enacting such legislation in future.

Mr. Pettypiece said that Canada was spending money to encourage desirable immigration from the United States and it would be very inconsistent to pass such legislation, which would tend to produce a feeling of irritation among the very classes we were endeavoring to secure.

Mr. Wardell urged that Canadians were constantly being deported from the U. S., and when they returned could not get employment here because their places were filled by Americans.

Mr. Whitney said that whatever the law might be De Barry of Buffalo deported whomever he pleased. No one wished to prevent skilled labor or any other labor coming to Canada provided they would become citizens.

Hon. J. M. Gibson urged that the bill would have no effect unless some company incorporated by special act, other than a railway company, were concerned. It was extremely uncommon to have companies incorporated in this way and in case they were special provisions covering the point could be embodied in it. The British Columbia Act of which this measure was a transcript related to the immigration of Chinese and Japanese. The promoter of the bill was trying to apply provisions, suitable, perhaps, to Mongolians, to the white immigration we were receiving in the Province. The Master and Servants Act had been amended so as to render void any contract made for the importation of labor and this legislation had been greatly appreciated by the labor organizations. The bill was preposterous, as it asked the House to go further than either the United States or the Dominion had done.

Mr. Auld's amendment was carried by a strict party vote of 39 yeas to 30 nays and the bill thrown out.

Mr. Hill's bill to amend the Public Schools Act by permitting the inspection of voluntary schools by the Public School Inspector came up for a second reading. Mr. Harcourt and the Premier urged its withdrawal on the ground that it opened the door for the consideration of a very large question which could not be thoroughly gone into at this late stage of the session. Mr. Hill, who was backed up by the Opposition leader, was reluctant to withdraw the bill which was finally declared lost on division.

Mr. Hill's bill to amend the law respecting vaccination by introducing a conscience clause similar to that obtaining in Britain, was opposed by Dr. McKay and Mr. Whitney and withdrawn.

Several bills received second readings.

At the evening sitting the House went into Committee of the Whole and reported the land grant bill to South African volunteers and veterans of '66 and '70.

In consequence of the Speaker's sessional at home the House rose at 9.30.

The Lindsay Post Scorched.

Lindsay, Ont., March 28.—Fire was discovered in the basement of The Lindsay Post printing office about 7 o'clock last night. The machinery, including type setting machines, is all in the cellar, and it is doubtful if much of it will be of service again. The fire was not extinguished until 10.30 o'clock. The large supply of paper stored will be a complete loss.

The Plague in India.

London, March 28.—The Calcutta representative of The Daily Mail says: Eight thousand people died of the plague last week in Bengal alone, including Calcutta. Whole towns are being deserted. There is, however, no panic.

THE DELAREY FIGHT.

Lord Kitchener Tells How Boer Rear Guard Was Driven In.

NEW ZEALANDERS AND BUSHMEN

With the Greys These Colonial Troops Pushed On and Rode Down the Enemy, Giving Them No Chance to Take Up a Position —Small Affairs in Cape Colony.

London, March 28.—A despatch from Lord Kitchener to the War Office, dated Pretoria, March 27, says: "Our casualties in Gen. Babington's action were two killed and seven wounded. The Boers left twenty-two dead and thirty wounded. As their pursuit was rapid many more Boer casualties are likely.

"The operations of March 23 drove the enemy north from their positions at Kaffir's Kraal. On March 27 the pursuit was continued by mounted men only. The enemy's rear guard were driven in by a combined movement on both flanks. Their convoy was then sighted at Leeuwfontein. The Greys, New Zealanders and Bushmen pushed on. The enemy attempted to take up a position, but the Greys and other troops rode down all opposition and gave them no chance. The convoy was ridden into, and the enemy's retirement became a rout. The pursuit was continued until the horses were exhausted."

Little Fights Occurring.

Cape Town, March 27.—Indecisive encounters at widely separated points are reported daily. Fighting took place yesterday at Tarkastad and Henningfontein, both in Cape Colony. The casualties were few.

A commando numbering 200, under Commandant Fourie, has been dispersed at Thabanchu.

According to reports received here the hills above Dewetsdorp just reoccupied by General Bruce Hamilton, were the scene of a fight lasting several hours yesterday.

Bubonic Plague Increasing.

Cape Town, March 27.—The bubonic plague situation is assuming a graver aspect. The proportion of European victims of the disease is increasing. Among those attacked yesterday were three soldiers belonging to different corps. A native employed in the navy died at Simonstown. Eight other colored cases and two of Europeans are reported from there and one native has died.

Twelve Fresh Cases.

Cape Town, March 27.—Twelve fresh cases of bubonic plague were officially reported to-day. Eight of the victims are Europeans and four are colored persons. Two colored victims died to-day.

An Official Record.

Ottawa, March 28.—The Militia Department has received a letter from Lord Strathcona enclosing a commission from Lieut.-Col. Anderson, assistant adjutant-general, who says he has been commissioned by the War Office to make an official record of the South African campaign, and asking for information bearing on the Canadian contingents.

Applications For Pensions.

Ottawa, March 28.—The Militia Department yesterday morning announced the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for War having approved of Medical Boards, composed of medical officers of the Canadian militia being assembled to report upon cases of Canadian militiamen, they are authorized to investigate and report upon the cases of Canadian applicants for pensions.

The Baden-Powell Recruits.

Halifax, March 28.—The men of Baden-Powell's Police, now in this city, are under orders to embark on the trooper Montfort at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The men were notified to that effect late last evening, but the order is subject to change.

WAR EXPECTED.

Japanese Officers of the New Cruiser, Iwate, Think Russia and Britain Will Fight Soon.

London, March 28.—The Japanese cruiser Iwate, recently constructed at the Elswick Works, left Devonport for the far east early Thursday morning, instead of departing next Saturday, as was originally intended. She shipped her ammunition while she was coaling, and so hastily that portions were left behind.

Judging from remarks made by her officers, they seemed to anticipate a conflict between Great Britain and Russia, in which event they said, the Japanese and British fleets would cooperate.

Britain Made a Protest.

Washington, March 28.—A despatch was received yesterday from one of the Foreign Offices to its representatives stating that the British Government had made a protest against China's negotiating a convention with any power touching territorial or financial affairs until the present troubles in China are settled.

London (England) office—148 Fleet street, E. C., Central Press Agency, Limited, Special Agents.

THURSDAY, MARCH 28, 1901.

LAKEFIELD.

Mr. F. M. Dala Fosse is visiting friends in Toronto.

Miss Rebecca Watson has returned from visiting friends in Campbellford.

Mr. John Cooper has again been successful in getting the contract for the carrying of the local mails.

Miss Alice Isbister, who has been visiting friends here during the past week, returned to her home in Peterborough on Monday.

Mr. E. R. Tate is visiting friends in Iowa.

Rev. Mr. Field of Gore's Landing, will deliver an address in the old English church on Friday afternoon at 4.30.

It is with pleasure we record the fact that Mr. George Hendren is about to become a permanent resident of Lakefield. He is giving up his career as a soldier, and has bought out the furniture and undertaking establishment of his father, Mr. T. Hendren. He is now in Toronto attending the School of Embalming and will also visit Hamilton to obtain the latest pointers in his line of business before returning. Mr. Hendren will shortly open out with a fine new stock, his father in the meantime offering his present stock at greatly reduced prices.

Miss Maud Kindred of Peterborough, has been visiting friends in the village.

Don't forget the annual social in the Baptist church on Good Friday evening.

We regret to record a distressing and serious accident which happened last week to Mr. John Balsdon, an employee of the Strickland Canoe Co. While engaged in fitting in the circle band of the deck of a canoe, Mr. Balsdon's knife slipped and the blade entered the abdomen, inflicting a deep and very severe wound. We are glad to know that no serious consequences are feared, and that Mr. Balsdon is progressing favourably towards recovery.

Mrs. Guy Allan has returned from visiting friends in Peterborough.

Messrs. Wesley Sherin and Wm. M. Graham have been appointed enumerators for the census and will commence their duties on Monday next.

Messrs. White and Grylls are now building a new steamer for the Stony Lake waters to run in connection with their steamer Sunbeam. She will have a keel of 65 feet with 14 foot beam, and have an engine put in capable of driving her at 15 miles an hour. She will be lighted by electricity and carry a powerful searchlight.

The council met in the town hall on Tuesday evening; all the members present: Reeve Fitzgerald in the chair.

On motion of Councillors Graham and Fitzgerald, the reading of the minutes was dispensed with.

Applications for the position of clerk was read from Dr. Duncan Fraser, Dr. John A. Burgess and Mr. Wesley Sherin.

Moved by Mr. William M. Graham, seconded by Mr. H. G. Fitzgerald, that it is with very great regret that we accept the resignation of Dr. Alex. Bell, as village clerk, he having so ably filled the office for the past seventeen years. We feel sorry to lose him, as he has always proved himself a faithful and efficient officer, handling the several details of his office to such perfection as to be classed as a model clerk.

We wish him every success in his new home, and congratulate the people of Apsley and vicinity on securing a medical man so well up in his profession, and we feel assured they will find him as we have done, a valued friend and adviser.

A by-law, No. 351, appointing a clerk in place of Dr. Alex. Bell, resigned, received its several readings, was signed and sealed by the reeve and clerk, appointing Mr. Wesley Sherin, as clerk of the municipality.

Mr. R. Graham presented the village with a moose's head, mounted.

Moved by Coun. Kelly, seconded by Coun. W. Harper, that it is with pleasure that this council accept the handsome moose head presented by Mr. R. Graham, and that the caretaker be instructed to place it in a suitable position in the town hall.—Carried.

On Saturday evening a number of friends of Mr. Hugh M. Davidson and family, drove out to his residence and presented them with the following address, accompanied by two handsome chairs, on the eve of their departure to Winnipeg;—

Lakefield, March 23, 1901.

To Mr. and Mrs. Davidson and family:

Dear Friends,—We are here to-night representing your many friends who, aware of your early departure from their midst, could not let you go without in some way letting you know the high esteem in which you are held and how much and sincerely your departure is regretted.

Epitaphs are all very well. They form a fitting decoration for a time, but are little comfort or cheer to those whose journey is ended and who may not have received much encouragement when patience and strength were sorely tried. How much better to tell the living that they are appreciated, that their presence is like a gleam of sunshine, that their bright smile has cheered, that their kindly words has strengthened and their ready, generous help has sustained those ready to fall.

This is our mission to-night to let you know that you have filled a place in the life of the community and filled it well, that you have been good neighbours and friends, staunch and true. To tell you that your going leaves a blank that cannot readily be filled; that you will be greatly missed in every sphere of social life and to assure you that in going you carry with you the best wishes of all for your success and happiness. Our sentiments are not unmixed with selfishness; our sorrow is altogether for ourselves; our pity is for those who stay. You are going where life is more buoyant full and free, where there is a larger outlook and a brighter hope. To a country whose youth gives new vigour and energy to being. Canada's future, Canada's hope, Canada's glory is yonder, not here. You go to help make that glory. We stay behind.

We would no have you go without some tangible evidence of our affection, a memento of those left behind. Accept these chairs as evidence of our appreciation and out yonder, while restfully seated by the fireside in these and others, think of those left so far behind with little hope of catching up. We bid you adieu for the present cherishing the hope of meeting again in the future so full of possibilities, if not here, then in a land where separating space and time are unknown.

Signed,
J. N. JOHNSTON, V.S,
JAS. ANDERSON,
W. H. CASEMENT.
REV. C. A. CAMPBELL,
MADILL BROS.

They left on Monday on the afternoon train, a great many of their friends being at the station to bid them adieu.

CURLING.

The playing of the Pin Competition among the members of the curling club was finished this week. On Tuesday afternoon skips J. P. Strickland and L. Payne played off, skip Strickland being defeated by 17 shots, the score being 20-12. On Wednesday afternoon the final game was played between skip Payne and skip Ridpath, and resulted in favour of skip Payne by a score 18-9. Skip Payne and his players are to be congratulated on winning the trophies. His rink was as follows: G. Gorden, J. L. Madill, F. X. Fortier, L. Payne. A supper will be held in a short time when the Bendenis Trophies and the pins will be presented to the winners in the two competitions.

HOCKEY.

On Tuesday evening of last week the Pig Iron Hockey Team, composed of the hardware clerks of Peterborough, drove up and played a friendly game with a local seven. The match was a very exciting one to the spectators, who were very impartial in their applause. The playing of Dagger McAulliffe and goal keeper Brown, of the visitors was something to behold. The game ended in favour of Lakefield by 13-8. Following are the players:

Pig Irons — Goal, R. Brown; point, Dagger McAulliffe; cover point, Peewee Hutchinson; forwards, W. Bullen, G. Burnham, T. Burnham, and D. Thornton.

Lakefield—Goal, G. Newberry; point, C. Blomfield; cover point, J. W. Ridpath; forwards, R. Blomfield, W. Stabler, F. Gray and W. Watson.

Referee—R. Murduff.

After the match the players proceeded to the Midland Hotel, where they sat down to a splendid supper, which had been prepared by Mine Host Leahy in a style that left nothing to be desired. A pleasant hour was spent in a social manner, after which the visitors left for their homes, well pleased with the result of their outing.

A revolution has taken place in the Green Tea trade of Canada since the introduction of "Salada" Ceylon Green Tea. In the back country districts Japan Tea is invariably used, and in the cities and towns Black Tea is the most popular. "Salada," although capturing a very large portion of the Black Tea trade, did not make a very serious impression on the drinkers of Japan Tea, but now with the Ceylon Green Teas which they are introducing, and which are very much more delicious and healthful than Japans, being entirely free from any artificial coloring which no Japan Tea is, they are making rapid inroads on that Trade, and we venture to predict that in a few years Japan will cease shipping any tea to Canada, "Salada" Ceylon Green Tea, in the well-known sealed lead packets of The "Salada" Tea Company, taking its place. 1d

GORE'S LANDING.

Mr. H. J. Dale left for Toronto, last Friday, on a business trip.

Miss Mina Wallace has been confined to the house, with an attack of "grippe."

A case of scarlet fever is reported in the family of Mr. Wm. Russell, Plainville.

Mrs. and Miss Cheyne have been spending the week at Mr. F. Cheyne's.

It is said that numerous air-holes are already showing in the ice, so that if the mild weather continues, the lake will soon be unfit for traffic.

Mr. Fred Harris entertained a number of friends at a progressive euchre party, last Thursday evening.

The Epworth League of the Methodist Church, met on Friday of last week, instead of Thursday as usual.

The prize winners at progressive crokinole at the Library, last Friday evening, were Mrs. Herald and Mrs. W. S. Herald.

Rev. G. A. Field is taking Lenten services this week at Millbrook, Peterborough and Lakefield.

Mr. and Mrs. Hore were guests over night last week of Mrs. (Capt.) Harris.

Dyspepsia

Is difficult digestion, due to a weakened condition of the stomach and its inability to properly churn the food; or to unhealthy condition of the gastric juice, too much or too little acid, too much or too little pepsin.

Hood's Sarsaparilla relieves all the distressing symptoms of dyspepsia because it promotes the muscular action of the stomach and intestines, aids nature in the manufacture of her own digestive secretions, which are far better than any artificial pepsin, unlocks the bowels, stimulates the kidneys and tones up their mucous membranes.

So prompt is its effect in many cases that it seems to have almost a magic touch.

Begin to take it NOW.

Suffered Everything—"I was troubled with dyspepsia, suffered everything but death, could not eat without terrible distress. Since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I eat heartily and I am well." MRS. EUGENE MURPHY, Danbury, Conn.

Eat Three Times a Day—"Hood's Sarsaparilla has cured me of dyspepsia and I never felt better. Can eat three good meals every day." FRED POEHLER, 457 South Penna St., Indianapolis, Ind.

HOOD'S Sarsaparilla

Is sold by all druggists. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

A PLEASANT DISAPPOINTMENT.

A Cheltenham Man is Agreeably Surprised---An Old Grudge Paid.

Mr. Turner After a Successful Effort to Get Rid of One Enemy, Finds That in Doing so he Has Put Away Another.

CHELTENHAM, Ont., Mar. 27. (Special).—A fortunate man, indeed, is Mr. Charles Turner, of this place. For years Mr. Turner has been suffering with kidney disease. It gave him great pain, and for the last two or three years rheumatism has added to his already heavy burden of sickness, and he has seldom known an hour free from pain. Not associating the rheumatism with the old kidney trouble, and despairing of curing the former, Mr. Turner bought and used Dodd's Kidney Pills to try and dispose of the kidney trouble. He used a few boxes, and the pain in his back kept getting less and less, and finally went away. All the unpleasant systems of kidney trouble disappeared, and what was still more strange to Mr. Mr. Turner, he has not since been bothered with rheumatism.

He is so grateful for the miraculous results of the treatment that he has been cheerfully telling his friends and neighbours his experience. He says: "Dodd's Kidney Pills have cured me of a long standing case of kidney disease. I was also a sufferer from rheumatism and although I took the pills for the kidney trouble, I was surprised to find that when this disease was cured the rheumatism also disappeared. This was over a year ago, and I have not been troubled since. I used in all six boxes. The first two boxes did not appear to do me any good, but I persevered, and the result is that I am now a healthy man."

Of course, to those who recognize rheumatism as what it really is, a symptom of kidney disease, there is nothing wonderful about Mr. Turner's experience. Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure Kidney Trouble, and with it Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lame Back, Neuralgia, Heart Trouble, Dropsy, Diabetes, Bright's Disease and any of the other many forms in which it may and often does appear.

MR. COOK ON THE RACK

H.H. Was Dumb as an Oyster at Times on Wednesday.

HIDES BEHIND HIS LAWYER.

Mr. Cook Positively Refused to Answer an Important Question on Advice of Counsel—More Letters Introduced, Which Show That He Pressed His Claims to the Senatorship After the $10,000 Interview.

Ottawa, March 28.—Although subpoenaes had been served upon Messrs. W. T. R. Preston and S. C. Biggs by the Senate Committee's order, and both were in attendance yesterday, they were not called. Mr. Ritchie was supposed to be acting not as a prosecutor in the interest of any particular party but as counsel for the Senate, and therefore supposedly desirous of getting the statements of any persons who could throw light on the matter at issue. He now assumed a rather novel position, and declared that he considered the case closed, and that he did not intend to call Messrs. Preston and Biggs. He was instructed that if these gentlemen would state what actually took place they would corroborate Mr. Cook's story, but that it was not likely they would do so. He had one more witness, he added, who had been summoned and would appear in the morning.

Mr. Blake urged that it was unfair to ask him to begin the case for the defence until all the evidence in Mr. Cook's behalf had been presented. He expressed surprise that Mr. Ritchie did not call Messrs. Preston and Biggs, as they had been subpoenaed by the committee. As for himself, he proposed to examine Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir Richard Cartwright, and to produce such other evidence as might be deemed reasonable.

Hon. Messrs. L. Melvin Jones and Dandurand reminded Mr. Ritchie that he was not there as prosecuting counsel, but to assist in getting at the facts, and in their opinion Messrs. Biggs and Preston should be called. The committee, in deference to Mr. Blake, decided to adjourn until to-day and to hear Mr. Cook's other witness before calling upon the defence. It also determined that Messrs. Preston and Biggs should be examined.

At the opening of the proceedings Mr. A. H. Marsh, K. C., on behalf of Mr. Cook, said he saw that two gentlemen whose names had been mentioned by Mr. Cook as witnesses Tuesday were in the room. He asked that in accordance with the usual practice these gentlemen be asked to retire.

Mr. Blake, K. C., said he did not desire to object, but thought it strange Mr. Marsh desired to exclude his own witnesses.

Mr. W. T. R. Preston and Mr. S. C. Biggs then retired from the room.

Mr. Cook's cross-examination was then proceeded with by Mr. Blake. The first question asked was whether he desired to qualify or modify or add to anything he said the day before, and Mr. Cook replied in the negative. Mr. Blake then questioned Mr. Cook as to the dates of the interviews with the late Mr. M. C. Cameron at the Union Station and at the Rossin House, Toronto. Speaking from the telegraphic message which had been put in, Mr. Cook fixed the interview at the Union Station as having taken place on the second of October, 1898, but would not define the date of the interview at the Rossin House, except as being within a week or ten days afterwards. He knew Mr. Cameron had made an "infamous proposal" to him, and he so characterized it, but he did not break off with him then. Neither did he make public the infamous nature of the proposal of Mr. Cameron during that gentleman's lifetime. He mentioned it to individuals, but could not give the names or places at which he had mentioned it. Up to October, 1900, when he sent a telegram to Mr. Tucker at Goderich, he did not make it public. He had mentioned it before that to Mr. Biggs, his solicitor.

Mr. Blake then asked if the affidavit of exposure was prepared in The Mail and Empire office. Mr. Monk objected.

Mr. Blake asked whether David Blain, Sam Barker, W. F. Maclean, J. W. St. John, Sir Charles Tupper and others knew about the affidavit. Mr. Cook had not seen any one of these gentlemen.

Mr. Cook was ordered by the committee on a vote of 9 to 3 to answer Mr. Blake's question as to who did know, he having dropped an admission. He declined on the advice of Mr. Marsh. He said he did not see the party write the affidavit, would admit nothing further, and said he was responsible for the affidavit.

Letters written by Mr. Cook, with the assistance of Mr. Biggs, to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. David Mills, Sir Richard Cartwright and others, were read. One to Sir Richard Cartwright was written Oct. 15, 1898, in which he said: "You know that hope deferred maketh the heart sick." These letters were put in to show that Mr. Cook continued friendly negotiations for over a year after he was asked for the $10,000.

Counsel endeavored to get from witness a statement as to the exact wording of the letters, which Cameron produced, from Sir Richard Cartwright, but all Mr. Cook would testify to positively were the words: "Surely our friend Cook must do something." "Something meant $10,000 for a Senatorship."

Mr. Blake—"You didn't kick Cameron at once?"

Mr. Cook—No; I'm not in the habit of kicking people down stairs.

His recollection of what took place at Cartwright's office was that, on going out, he said to Sir Richard: "By the way, Cartwright, Cameron demanded from me $10,000 for the late Senatorship." To which Cartwright replied: "Oh, yes, Cameron wanted the money for party purposes, and took this way of getting it."

Mr. Blake—Didn't he say he "supposed" Cameron wanted the money?

Mr. Cook did not think the word "supposed" was used, but could not be sure.
